Written Ministerial Statements

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Planning for Mixed Communities

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): Government policy is to create sustainable communities that contain a well-integrated mix of decent housing of different types and tenures to support a wide range of households of different sizes, ages and incomes. Planning has an important role to play through the provision of an appropriate mix of housing which addresses the needs of households, including in terms of how much they can afford to pay for housing.

In July 2003, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister issued for consultation "Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing" which proposed changes to Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: Housing (PPG3) in relation to its approach to planning for affordable housing and mix of housing.

Part of this consultation document related to rural areas. In a separate statement to the House today, I have announced the publication of the final update to PPG3 entitled "Planning for Sustainable Communities in Rural Areas" which deals with the provision of affordable housing in rural areas.

Following extensive consultation discussions about "Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing", it became clear that there was no consensus among practitioners about how best to plan to achieve an appropriate mix of housing in an area. Some practitioners have advocated an approach by which local planning authorities make provision in their local development documents for a specified mix based on the size and type of housing. Others feel that this approach would be too prescriptive, particularly when applied to specific sites, where they feel account needs to be taken of the particular circumstances of each site and the housing market at the time a planning application is made.

In the light of the consultation and post-consultation discussions, we have developed further the approach to planning for a mix of housing. The revised approach is reflected in the consultation document "Planning for Mixed Communities". This is being published today by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses. The consultation document incorporates draft policy for planning for affordable housing and for a mix of housing.

The proposed approach on mix, in relation to market housing, focuses on household types, and recognises that planning for households requires local planning authorities to take account of market considerations and to provide for a degree of choice. It is proposed that local planning authorities should plan for the range of different households to be provided for over the plan period and not for a range of housing sizes and types based on floorspace or room numbers.

The proposed approach on mix, in relation to affordable housing, is that the approach to planning for an appropriate mix of affordable housing should continue to be based on the size and type of housing. This appears to be generally supported by local planning authorities and housing providers.

The wider approach to planning for affordable housing in this consultation update has been redrafted in the light of the previous consultation exercise. The changes are primarily to improve clarity in the operation and scope of the policy, particularly where there is explicit flexibility, such as in the approach to site-size thresholds above which affordable housing is to be sought. The policy objectives remain the same, namely to increase the amount of affordable housing where it is needed, in the context of delivering agreed housing numbers. The proposals include: a requirement that all local planning authorities should have an affordable housing policy; a stronger regional role, including co-ordinating the preparation of local housing assessments; the lowering of site size thresholds above which affordable housing is to be sought; and the requirement that local planning authorities balance the need for affordable housing against the likely development potential of sites.

A key objective of the policy is to create mixed and inclusive communities that offer a wide range of housing and promote social inclusion. To do this local planning authority policy must be based on a robust evidence base. A key component of the evidence base is the preparation of a local housing assessment. The consultation update emphasises to local planning authorities the importance of keeping the assessment up-to-date and developing the assessment in collaboration with key stakeholders, including housebuilders, who understand and have to take account of housing markets.

The final policy will be accompanied by practice guidance on carrying out local housing assessments and on planning for mixed communities. A key objective of the practice guidance will be to set out clearly the roles and responsibilities of different stakeholders in the planning for housing process. The guidance is currently in preparation. The intention is to involve stakeholder representative bodies in developing and finalising this guidance.

The proposed policy changes would replace paragraphs 9 to 17 of PPG3. Annex C would be updated with new definitions, and Annex D would be updated with the details of new practice guidance and relevant ODPM Circulars. DETR Circular 6/98 (Planning and Affordable Housing) would be cancelled.

This consultation update addresses the demand-side aspects of planning for housing. Later this year, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will consult on proposed changes to the way in which the planning system allocates and releases land for housing in response to market signals. The supply-side update to PPG3 will take forward the Government's response (with respect to PPG3) to the recommendations in the Barker review of housing supply.

Planning for Housing

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): This statement concerns the planning system's role in providing sufficient homes to meet the variety of housing needs in England. The intention is to remove barriers to delivering the housing needed in our communities and ensure the planning system is not a brake on an adequate and continuing supply of sites for housing in sustainable locations.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is publishing today two updates to planning policy guidance note 3: housing (PPG3), entitled "Supporting the Delivery of New Housing" and "Planning for Sustainable Communities in Rural Areas". Both updates will help to increase the supply of housing where it is needed in the most sustainable way possible. They reflect the changes to the planning system made in the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004.

These updates were the subject of consultation in July 2003. The remainder of the PPG3 update "Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing", of which "Planning for Sustainable Communities in Rural Areas" was a component, is being further consulted upon. I am making a separate statement on this today.

Supporting the Delivery of New Housing

PPG3 requires local planning authorities, when preparing their local development frameworks, to review all their non-housing allocations and to consider whether some of this land might be better used for housing or mixed use development. The Government's experience is that nevertheless many local planning authorities continue to reserve an excess supply of land when it would make sense to consider this for housing.

The consultation update proposed an approach to the handling of applications for housing and mixed use development on land allocated or previously used for industrial or commercial use which is no longer needed for that use, and which is both suitable for and needed for housing. The Government have considered the responses to the consultation and are adding today the following new paragraph 42 (a) to PPG3:

> "Local planning authorities should consider favourably planning applications for housing or mixed use developments which concern land allocated for industrial or commercial use in saved policies and development plan documents or redundant land or buildings in industrial or commercial use, but which is no longer needed for such use, unless any of the following apply:
> the proposal fails to reflect the policies in this PPG (including paragraph 31), particularly those relating to a site's suitability for development and the presumption that previously-developed sites (or buildings for re-use or conversion) should be developed before greenfield sites;
> the housing development would undermine the planning for housing strategy set out in the regional spatial strategy or the development plan document where this is up-to-date, in particular if it would lead to over-provision of new housing and this would exacerbate the problems of, or lead to, low demand;
> it can be demonstrated, preferably through an up-to-date review of employment land[1] (refer to annex D for practice guidance), that there is a realistic prospect of the allocation being taken up for its stated use in the plan period or that its development for housing would undermine regional and local strategies for economic development and regeneration."
> [1] 'Employment Land Reviews: Guidance Note' ODPM 2004'

In December 2004, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published practice guidance for local planning authorities on carrying out employment land reviews to assess the demand for and supply of land for employment. The guidance aims to help local planning authorities assess the suitability of sites for employment development, safeguard the best sites for employment and identify those which are no longer suitable for employment development and which should be made available for other uses. A copy of the practice guidance is available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Planning for Sustainable Communities in Rural Areas

The consultation PPG3 update "Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing" proposed to replace the rural exception policy with an allocation policy, which would enable local planning authorities to allocate sites solely for affordable housing. In the light of the consultation responses a revised approach has been developed, aimed at meeting concerns expressed about the practical effects of the proposed approach. The Government are today amending PPG3 policy, adding a new section which will enable local planning authorities to allocate sites in rural areas, but also to take advantage of windfall sites through a continuing rural exception approach. The intention to retain the rural exception policy alongside a new allocation policy was signalled by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she published her Department's five year strategy "Delivering the Essentials of Life" on 8 December 2004.

The replacement paragraph 18 of PPG3 is as follows:

> "It is important that there is adequate housing provision in rural areas to meet the needs of local people and to contribute to the delivery of sustainable communities. Regional spatial strategies should set out how planning at the local level is expected to contribute to meeting identified rural affordable housing needs (including Gypsies and Travellers where relevant). Local planning authorities should make sufficient land available either within or adjoining existing rural communities to enable these local requirements to be met in a manner which contributes to the achievement of sustainable communities. Affordable housing provision in rural areas should be supported by a rural exception site policy (see annex B). Rural exception sites should be small, solely for affordable housing and on land within or adjoining existing small rural communities[1] which would not otherwise be released for general market housing. The affordable housing provided on such sites should meet local needs[2] in perpetuity and count towards the overall level of housing provision. The rural exception site policy applies to both allocated or windfall sites."

An addition to paragraph 36 of PPG3 is highlighted below:

> Authorities should make specific allowances for all the different types of windfalls in their plans. Allowance should be made on the basis of examining past trends in windfalls coming forward for development and on the likely future windfall potential as assessed in a capacity study. No allowance should be made for greenfield windfalls (except for rural exception sites, see annex B and refer to annex D for good practice advice on capacity studies).
> [1] Small rural settlements have been designated for enfranchisement and right to acquire purposes (under section 17 of the Housing Act 1996) by S.I. 1997/620—625 inclusive and 1999/1307.
> [2] Should be set out in the local development document and can include key or essential workers and those with a family connection.

The replacement annex B of PPG3 is as follows:

Annex B: Rural exception sites

1. All local planning authorities that include rural areas should include a rural exception site policy in the relevant development plan document. A rural exception site policy enables the authority to allocate or release small sites within and adjoining existing small rural communities[1], which may be subject to policies of restraint, such as Green Belt, and which would not otherwise be released for housing, but only in order to provide affordable housing to meet local needs[2] in perpetuity.
2. In preparing local development documents, local planning authorities should take account of their local housing assessment and should consider the benefits of preparing village appraisals, which encompass assessments of housing, economic and environmental profiles of rural communities. In doing so, they should work closely with their local communities, landowners and housing providers to prepare strategies for implementing exception schemes, including identifying possible sites. Based on these assessments, the local planning authority should set out:

   what the local planning authority considers to be 'affordable' housing for the purpose of the rural exception site policy in the context of its local housing assessment or other appraisal; and the area within which needs will be considered 'local', for example, in terms of market towns, groups of villages or parishes, or even a single parish. In some areas it may be possible to name particular settlements where there is evidence of need and where opportunities for affordable housing on rural exception sites will be explored.

3. Development plan documents may allocate sites solely for affordable housing andshould set out the criteria against which windfall sites will be considered.
4. Rural exception sites are not appropriate for general market housing or market housing for local needs only. It is unacceptable to include clauses in planning obligations which would enable lenders of private finance to dispose of property on the open market as a last resort if a borrower were to get into financial difficulties. Such clauses should also be unnecessary in the case of loans to registered social landlords, in part, because of the safeguards to private lenders offered by the Housing Act 1996. Planning obligations should be used to set out a cascade mechanism[3] that will ensure that occupiers are always found for affordable housing provided on rural exception sites.

[1] Small rural settlements have been designated for enfranchisement and right to acquire purposes (under Section 17 of the Housing Act 1996) by S.I. 1997/620—625 inclusive and 1999/1307.

[2] Should be set out in the local development document and can include key or essential workers and those with a family connection.

[3] A mechanism which sets out the procedure to be followed to secure an occupant for affordable housing on rural exception sites, when such housing is vacated. This might set out the geographical areas or types of households that would be eligible for such housing.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Tsunami Victims (Death Registration)

The Minister for Trade and Investment (Mr. Douglas Alexander): As we have made clear before, it is a priority for the Government to ensure that effective arrangements are in place to support the families of people missing following the tsunami. We are conscious that, despite the efforts of the local authorities in the countries affected and the on-going work of my officials and the police both here and in the region, many bodies may never be recovered. This would cause unacceptable uncertainty for the families concerned.

We have therefore agreed, as a response to the exceptional circumstances we face, that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will register the death overseas and issue a certified copy of the register entry for missing British nationals where no body has been found. This will be done at the request of the family, and based on advice from the police, and will be provided free of charge.

We have agreed with the police, who are investigating all reports of missing British nationals, that they will provide my officials with advice as their inquiries conclude as to whether the missing person was in fact killed by the tsunami. We will then decide, in the light of the evidence, whether to register the death. In order to arrive at the judgment, we and the police will be applying four criteria, all of which must be met:

(i) That evidence exists beyond reasonable doubt that the missing person had travelled to the affected region (eg that they had booked, paid for and made a journey to the region); and

(ii) that on the balance of probability, the person was in the affected area at the time the tsunami struck; and

(iii) there was no reasonable evidence of life since 26 December (eg contact with relatives or transactions on their bank account); and

(iv) that there was no reason, again on the balance of probability, that the person would want to disappear.

These inquiries will inevitably take time to complete, although the police are confident that they will be able to complete the overwhelming majority of investigations for those people most likely to have been caught up in the tsunami within twelve months—in many cases, much sooner.

Throughout this difficult period the police will continue to make family liaison officers available to support the families of those thought highly likely to have been involved in the tsunami. The family liaison officers will ensure that they are kept fully informed during what we recognise is likely to be a harrowing process. They will also help them gain access to emotional care and other advice and welfare services, including any financial assistance available to them through the state benefit system.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Technical Lifer Status

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): From 2 April 2005, life sentence prisoners who have been transferred to psychiatric hospital for treatment will no longer be considered for technical lifer status. All life sentence prisoners will have their future release determined by the Parole Board and be subject to life licence on release. This decision has been taken in light of the judgment in the case of Benjamin and Wilson v the United Kingdom, which found that technical lifer policy was in breach of article 5(4) of the European convention on human rights. This will not affect those who have already been granted technical lifer status, or the consideration of any pending applications. No new applications, however, will be considered after 2 April 2005.

Criminal Justice Act (Sentencing Provisions)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): On 4 April 2005 the majority of the new sentences introduced in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 will come into force. The key provisions are: public protection sentences for dangerous offenders; the new community order; custody minus; and the new release and recall arrangements for all custodial sentences of 12 months and over.

These new sentences are a key part of the Government's tough and effective sentencing framework which targets resources where they are needed. The Criminal Justice Act 2003 is the most significant piece of legislation in this area for over a decade. It introduces wide changes to sentencing principles and the sentencing powers of the courts.

The public must be protected from dangerous criminals. That is why the Criminal Justice Act created new public protection sentences aimed specifically at sexual and violent offenders. Offenders convicted of specific sexual and violent offences will be assessed by the court as to whether or not they pose a serious risk to the public. Those who are considered to be such a risk will be subject to the provisions for dangerous offenders.

These new sentences will ensure that dangerous sexual and violent offenders are subject to assessment by the Parole Board. They will not be released from prison until and unless their level of risk to the public is assessed by the Parole Board as manageable in the community. If the risk is not reduced to a safe level, they may never be released.

For other sentences of 12 months and over, if prisoners have not been classed as dangerous by the courts, they will be released into the community under licence conditions halfway through their sentence but supervision in the community will continue to the end of the entire sentence, rather than to the three quarters point as now. Recalls to prison following breach of licence conditions will take place under the new scheme outlined in the Act and will no longer need to be authorised by the Parole Board.

The new community order will allow sentencers a much greater degree of flexibility in putting together tough community sentences that will be tailored to the needs of offenders and the seriousness of their offence. The full range of community punishments will be available for all offenders whose offence is serious enough to merit them and not just for imprisonable offences as is the case now. Powers to deal with offenders who breach are also stronger: courts will have the option of making the requirements more onerous, revoking the order and re-sentencing the offender, or if the breach is wilful and persistent, imposing a custodial sentence even if the original offence was not imprisonable.

Custody minus is a new suspended sentence, which allows the court to impose community requirements together with a suspended custodial sentence which is activated if the offender breaches the community period. This new suspended sentence will be much more demanding than current suspended sentences. Not only will an offender be required to refrain from committing another offence during the period of suspension; he or she will have requirements to fulfil in the community, as with a community sentence.

Offenders can be brought back to court during a custody minus sentence, for a review hearing. The new power of review will allow sentencers to play a more active role in determining what is needed, not just at the point of sentence but also during its course. As the review process for the drug treatment and testing order has shown, better information about the outcome of their decisions will improve sentencers' decision making, as well as benefit the offender's rehabilitation

The new sentencing framework will help to cut crime through effective punishment; protection of the public; reparation to communities; and the prevention of re-offending.

Departmental Investment Strategy

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is today publishing its departmental investment strategy, which sets out the proposed capital and resource investment expenditure between 2005–06 and 2007–08. It also summarises the assets the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister holds and the processes by which investment decisions are made.

Copies of the document will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses and are available on the ODPM website.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Government Decontamination Service (GDS)

The Minister for the Environment and Agri-environment (Mr. Elliot Morley): The Government announced on 25 March 2004, Official Report, column 55WS that they were actively considering establishing a UK-wide service to provide advice and assistance in decontamination and clean up after a deliberate chemical, biological, radiological or nuclear (CBRN) incident or a major accidental release of hazardous materials. Work on the potential costs, benefits and modalities of such a service has been going on since that announcement.

As a result of their considerations, the Government now intend to set up a Government decontamination service (GDS), as an executive agency of the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). The decision is part of the cross-Government work to ensure that the UK is prepared for a range of emergencies and has been developed under the CBRN resilience programme led by the Home Office. The service will have three principal functions, aimed at streamlining our ability to decontaminate the built and open environment following any CBRN incident.

First, it will provide advice and guidance to responsible authorities during their contingency planning for CBRN incidents, and regularly help test the arrangements that are in place. This will build on the strategic national guidance for the built and open environment which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and DEFRA (respectively) issued in 2004.

Secondly, it will rigorously assess the ability of companies in the private sector to carry out decontamination operations, and ensure that responsible authorities have access to those services if the need arises. If required, the agency will also help co-ordinate decontamination operations.

Finally, the service will advise central Government on the national capability for the decontamination of buildings and the environment in the event of a major release of chemical, biological or radioactive materials.

The Government have in parallel been taking forward work to build on their existing capability to decontaminate buildings and the open environment. The work has included assessment of and engagement with a range of specialist contractors and the identification of appropriate technologies. This is part of the research and foundation being developed to further enhance capability and build the permanent decontamination service over the coming years.

CBRN resilience is devolved in Scotland. Scottish Ministers decided that the GDS should be invited to provide a service in Scotland and the Scottish Executive has been actively involved in its establishment. A similar statement is therefore to be made in the Scottish Parliament.

The Welsh Assembly Government are not responsible for CBRN resilience under the terms of the devolved settlement in Wales but has been fully consulted on the development of the GDS. The central GDS arrangements now being put into place by the UK Government will also cover Wales and the Welsh Assembly Government fully support these arrangements.

PRIME MINISTER

House of Lords (Appointments)

The Prime Minister (Mr. Tony Blair): The House of Lords Appointments Commission is responsible for recommending non-party-political appointments to the House of Lords. However, I continue to nominate direct to Her Majesty the Queen a limited number of distinguished public servants on retirement. I have decided that the number of appointments covered under this arrangement will not exceed 10 in any one Parliament.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Directors' Remuneration Report Regulations 2002

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): As announced in my written parliamentary statement on 25 February 2004, Official Report, column 51–52WS, my Department commissioned a report on compliance with the Directors' Remuneration Report Regulations 2002 ("the Regulations") during the course of this year's AGM season, including an assessment of changes in remuneration practices. Deloitte and Touche LLP were appointed to carry out the work following a competitive tender process. Their report is today being placed on the DTI website at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/cld/Deloitte_Rep_DRRR_2004.pdf and in the Libraries of both Houses.

The report underlines the positive impact of the regulations and the effectiveness of the Government's action in subjecting directors remuneration to closer scrutiny by shareholders. It reveals high levels of company compliance with the regulations, better clarity of disclosure on remuneration, improved communication between companies and their shareholders, and changes in companies' remuneration policies and practices improving the link between pay and performance. It also suggests that further legislation in this area is neither necessary nor desirable and that further improvements to disclosure and the linkage between pay and performance are best pursued through the development and implementation of best practice guidelines.

In the circumstances, whilst I will continue to keep the position under review, I have concluded that further changes to company law requirements in this area are not needed at this stage.

The report does suggest some minor changes to the regulations in order to clarify what is required and improve transparency and the quality of the information provided. My Department will be considering the need for these changes in the light of views expressed by stakeholders and better regulation principles. If, as a result, we consider that changes are made, these should not involve additional costs or additional regulatory burdens on companies of shareholders.

In my February statement, I welcomed the action taken by the Association of British Insurers and National Association of Pension Funds, and by the Confederation of British Industry, in producing guidance on directors' contracts. The report provides a basis for the further development of this guidance. I now call on these groups to work towards providing a common set of guidelines by the end of the year.

While the report is encouraging, there is no room for complacency. The challenge for remuneration committees and their advisors remains to produce rewards packages which tie pay and performance targets to the creation of long term value for shareholders and are transparent to shareholders. Shareholders, for their part, should satisfy themselves that remuneration arrangements for directors are in the best interests of the company. They must also be vigilant and ensure that situations where directors enjoy rich rewards whilst companies perform poorly and shareholders and employees suffer are challenged.

Regional State Aid Reform

The Minister for Trade and Investment (Mr. Douglas Alexander): On 14 June 2004, Official Report, columns 19–20WS, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and the Regions, announced that the European Commission had published proposals for amending the guidelines that govern regional state aid, which define assisted areas and aid intensities allowed within them, for the period 1 January 2007 to 31 December 2013, and that her Department would shortly be issuing a consultation document seeking the views of all interested parties on the Commission's proposals.

My Department today published the results of that consultation exercise and copies of the summary of responses, and the Government's latest letter to the Commission, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The Commission issued a further paper on its approach before Christmas, and is to hold a first joint meeting with national officials on 1 and 2 February: it then plans to issue detailed proposals in May, for adoption in September this year. The Commission's further paper is available on its website and my Department has written to consultees drawing their attention to it.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pension Service Partnership Fund

The Minister for Pensions (Malcolm Wicks): Today we are announcing a unique scheme to enhance and build on our working relationships with the Government's partners in the voluntary and community sector, including local authorities.

The Pension Service Partnership Fund of £13 million will provide up to two years' funding to partners to undertake mainly local initiatives which will improve the take-up of older people's benefits, particularly by hard to reach groups. The aims of the fund were developed in consultation with members of the DWP Partnerships Against Poverty Group, a joint forum which includes national representatives from organisations such as Help the Aged, Age Concern and the Local Government Association.

It is being administered under our Link-Age Programme which aims to integrate joint working between partners so that older people are provided with a more cohesive front-line service.

There have been around 170 Partnership Fund contracts awarded to organisations throughout England, Wales and Scotland. Many of the schemes are expected to begin their work early this year. The Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs has contributed towards the funding and is sponsoring initiatives that target areas of rural deprivation in England.

A full list of the successful applicants has been placed in the Library.

We will be monitoring the schemes closely in order to evaluate successful methods and identify innovative approaches. Subsequently we will publish details in a best practice guide aimed at the community and welfare rights audience.

Incapacity Benefit

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Alan Johnson): In his pre-Budget report of 2 December, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced our intention to expand the pathways to work service to cover the Jobcentre Plus districts covering all 30 local authority districts with the greatest proportions of working age population on incapacity benefits (IB). I would like to provide an update on work to take this forward.

The seven pathways to work pilots are designed to test the new approach in a variety of labour markets, including where IB recipiency rates are high. This means that we are already offering work-focused support from skilled personal advisers and the range of provision and incentives available in the choices package in five of the 30 local authority districts. These are Bridgend, Burnley, Gateshead, Inverclyde and Rhondda, Cynon, Taff. Early findings are showing very promising results.

The reason the pathways pilots are performing well is due to the hard work and commitment from all the Jobcentre Plus staff and the NHS and private and voluntary sector organisations working with them. The expansion will make full use of their experience, expertise and the lessons learnt to ensure the smooth introduction of pathways in the new Jobcentre Plus districts, many of which are already working innovatively with people on IB. We are therefore putting in place twinning arrangements between current and future districts to ensure this learning and good practice is shared at all levels.

The new condition management programmes are a totally new concept in combining health and employment interventions to help customers to manage their health and consider work. They are a good example of the successful partnership working between Jobcentre Plus and the Department of Health, devolved administrations and local primary care trusts/health boards. We are continuing to work with medical experts and local representatives to develop equally high quality programmes for the new pathways districts.

We will start to roll out the pathways service from the end of October 2005 onwards and when all the new programmes are in place it will mean the pathways approach will be operating in one third of the country and cover around 900,00 IB recipients. I know that there is a lot of work to be done to introduce an effective work focused interview regime and ensure high quality provision is available.

The new pathways areas will be rolled out according to the following schedule:

Phase 1—October 2005	Phase 2—April 2006	Phase 3—October 2006
Cumbria	Barnsley, Rotherham and Doncaster	Eastern Valleys
Glasgow	City of Sunderland	Greater Mersey
Lancashire West	County Durham	Staffordshire
Tees Valley	Lanarkshire and East Dumbarton
	Liverpool and the Wirral
	Manchester and Salford
	Swansea and West Wales

This major expansion of pathways is designed to test a mandatory work focused interview regime and the choices package provision in all those areas with high levels of inactivity and IB recipiency rates. By extending the number of people who receive advice and support from skilled personal advisers we aim to ensure as many people as possible starting a claim for IB are able to fulfil their aspiration for a return to employment and also to reduce the numbers at risk of long term inactivity and benefit dependency, with the damaging social and economic impact that chronic ill health and inactivity has on them and the locality they live in.

Alongside the decision to extend the current pilots to some existing IB customers, expanding the areas in the country operating pathways is the first major step in reforming IB and focusing customers on their remaining capabilities and encouraging them back to work.

CABINET OFFICE

Regulatory Impact Assessment Process

The Minister for the Cabinet Office (Mr. David Miliband): An updated measurement of the level of compliance with the regulatory impact assessment process is today being placed on the website of the Cabinet Office regulatory impact unit. An exercise in November 2004 to establish a snapshot of the level of compliance, based on consultations carried out in the three months to 16 November 2004, showed a compliance rate of 100 per cent. We will continue to keep this under regular review and will report back to Parliament as appropriate.

DEFENCE

Reservists

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): On the 22 July 2004, Official Report, column 62WS, I announced to the House the publication of a consultation document entitled "Safeguards for Reservists and their Employers: Proposed Amendments to the Schemes for Financial Assistance Awards for Reservists and their Employers" setting out our proposals to update the financial assistance arrangements for reservists who are called-out for permanent service. This received a wide circulation and copies were placed in the Library of the House. Altogether 4,156 visits were recorded to the website including the consultation document before the consultation period closed on 15 October 2004. Some 139 responses were recorded to the online survey and a further 66 individuals responded to the consultation by separate e-mail or by post, while 922 people downloaded the consultation document. An analysis of the responses is available on the MOD website at http://www.financialassistance.mod.uk/files/pdf/Consultation_Results_Report.pdf.

It is clear from the responses received that our proposals will meet the aspirations of the overwhelming majority of those who responded to the consultation. I am therefore today publishing the regulatory impact assessment (RIA). This outlines the impact our proposals would have on reservists and employers. The document will receive a similar circulation to the original consultation and copies will be placed in the Library of the House. The RIA will also be available electronically both on the consultations section of the main Ministry of Defence website at: http://www.mod.uk/consultations/consultations.htm and on the SaBRE website accessible from their front-page at: http://www.sabre.mod.uk/.

We are inviting comments on the RIA over the next four weeks, with the consultation period ending on 22 February. Subject to any responses, I anticipate being able to introduce the replacement regulations in March 2005.

Northern Ireland

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): As part of our normal process of keeping force levels under review, the GOC Northern Ireland, in consultation with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland, has concluded that one of his GB-based battalions can be removed from his command as it is not required for routine support to the police in Northern Ireland. Accordingly, the battalion known as Mainland Battalion 1 (MLD 1), the companies of which have not been routinely based in the Province, can be removed from the command of the GOC NI to CinC LAND on 26 January 2005.

This is a prudent measure to provide military support to the police efficiently and does not affect the army's ability to support the PSNI in countering the threat from terrorism and preventing potential public disorder. We will keep force levels in Northern Ireland under regular review to match the support required by the PSNI.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Constitution

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Jack Straw): I am making available today a commentary on the treaty establishing a constitution for Europe. This commentary will be available in the Vote Office and the Library of the House. It will be published as a Command Paper in advance of Second Reading of the EU Bill. Copies of the Command Paper will be distributed to the media and key opinion formers, including academics, think tanks and business organisations. It will be available on the FCO website http://www.europe.gov.uk and will be distributed to central libraries across the UK.

The Government have already published a White Paper on the treaty establishing a constitution for Europe (Cm 6309) and a guide to the EU which, as well as providing general information about the EU, also explains in general terms what the constitutional treaty is about. This commentary has been produced to meet the Government's further commitment to Parliament, originally to the Lords European Scrutiny Committee to produce "an analysis of the draft treaty against existing treaty provisions". This commitment was reiterated by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 4 May 2004 when he agreed that "the Government will publish a range of material to accompany the constitutional treaty including a comprehensive analysis and comparison of the existing treaties and the new constitutional treaty", 4 May 2004, Official Report, column1456W. The commentary, in analysing every article of the draft treaty, explains what each article does where this is not obvious from the text, explains where the treaty provision derives from if it is not new, and sets out where legislative procedures have changed.

The EU constitutional treaty is complex. It has to be, because it is not a law for governing a superstate, but a carefully drafted treaty regulating in detail the relations between European nations in a variety of areas. The treaty is also long. It consists of a preamble, 448 articles arranged in four parts, 36 protocols and two annexes and the 50 declarations, which were included in the official record of the signature ceremony. Much of it is a replication of the existing treaties.

The most important provisions of the treaty are all contained within the 60 short articles of part one. These make it clearer than ever before that the EU is a union of sovereign states, which can only exercise those powers given to it by its members. part two consists of the charter of fundamental rights. Part three explains what the union seeks to achieve in the various policy areas in which powers are conferred on it and what the limits on its powers are. It also sets out the detailed legislative procedures for exercising these powers, much of which is taken verbatim from existing treaties. Part four sets out technical and supplementary provisions. It also sets out how the treaty may be amended, how it is to be ratified and when it will come into force.

If the new treaty is approved by all the member states and comes into force, it will replace all the old EU treaties (apart from the Euratom treaty) thus simplifying the legal framework of the union and the communities.

The commentary on the treaty is designed to guide the reader through the treaty and explain its significance. It is in two parts. Part one acts as a general introduction and part two analyses each article of the treaty.

The introduction explains how the EU treaties have evolved over the last 50 years from the Economic Coal and Steel Community (1951) to the draft constitutional treaty. It sets out what the new constitutional treaty does and what it contains. The introduction also includes:

> a section on the charter of fundamental rights, explaining the origins and significance of the charter; > guidance on how to read the treaty and use the accompanying analysis;
> an appendix setting out the development of the competences of the European Union from the treaty of Rome to the constitutional treaty.

Part two of the commentary provides an article by article analysis of the constitutional treaty, following its structure and layout. Part two contains an annex, which sets out the areas in the new treaty which have moved to either qualified majority voting (QMV) or to co-decision or both. This annex updates and supplements the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Europe on 5 July 2004, Official Report, column 593W, in order, inter alia, to take account of the procedural changes since that date in the existing treaty provisions. A list of abbreviations and a glossary of key terms used throughout the commentary is also provided.

This constitutional treaty can only come into force once it has been ratified in accordance with the constitutional arrangements of each member state. In the UK, this will require primary legislation amending the European Communities Act 1972 and then endorsement in a referendum.

The Government believe that the commentary demonstrates the merit of reorganising the existing treaties into a single coherent document. It also shows clearly how little of the new constitutional treaty is in fact new—the bulk of its provisions are derived directly from and closely follow provisions in the existing treaties.

I hope that this commentary will help inform debate and discussion during the passage of the EU Bill.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Interception of Communications

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): I am announcing today the Government's conclusions on the review on the evidential use of intercept material in criminal proceedings. This accompanies the announcement I intend making on counter-terrorism legislation following the House of Lord's ruling on the use of Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001, Part 4 powers.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister commissioned the review in July 2003. Its remit was to examine the benefits and risks of using intercept as evidence to secure more convictions of organised criminals and terrorists. In doing so, the review was tasked with considering how a legal model, providing for the use of interception for evidential purposes, could be deployed in a way which is compatible with the ECHR, addresses the practical concerns of the intercepting agencies and takes account of developments in communications technology.

The review, which was the most thorough and far-reaching of five reviews on the subject in the last 10 years, reported last summer. It concluded that evidential use of intercept would be likely to help secure a modest increase in convictions of some serious criminals but not terrorists. The preferred legal model for evidential use of intercept would comprise three types of interception warrant—intelligence only, non-evidential and evidential, the latter requiring authorisation by a judge. Intelligence only and non-evidential warrants would continue to be authorised by the Secretary of State and would provide criteria-based protections against disclosure in court of the most sensitive interception capabilities and techniques. Set against the benefits that this approach might deliver, the review identified a number of serious risks that evidential use of intercept would entail for the intercepting agencies and their present capabilities in fighting serious crime and terrorism.

The review did not make agreed recommendations for or against lifting the prohibition on evidential use of intercept but invited Ministers to consider, in the light of the evidence presented on the balance of benefits and risks, whether or not to do so. Further work on what might be done to mitigate the risks identified in the review report was completed shortly before Christmas. This showed that there was no immediate prospect of removing the main risks, partly because of the difficulty of assessing the impact of major changes expected in communications technologies over the next few years.

The Government have from the outset made it clear that we would change the law on evidential use of intercept only if we could be satisfied that the benefits of doing so clearly outweigh the risks. We have therefore concluded that it would not be right to legislate now to remove the existing prohibition. We will continue to keep these issues under review.

The review report is a classified document which cannot be published in the ordinary way. It will however be made available to the Intelligence and Security Committee to which I will give further evidence if requested to do so. A summary of the report's main findings is set out below:

> there is no easy or risk free way of keeping what our "intelligence only" approach—with its uniquely close working relationships between law enforcement and intelligence agencies—delivers now and adding to this the benefits that evidential use of intercept could deliver. Evidential regimes in other countries provide useful pointers on the latter but are of little help on the first point; > the ideal of allowing intercepting agencies unfettered freedom to choose when to go evidential is not an option as it would be open to "cherry picking" and therefore fails to meet the requirements of ensuring fairness in criminal proceedings;
> evidential use of intercept would be likely to help convict some serious criminals;
> intercept evidence would be unlikely to assist in prosecuting terrorist targets and would not have made a critical difference in supporting criminal prosecution of those detained under ATCSA (Part 4) powers;
> a legal model providing for three types of interception warrant—intelligence only, non-evidential, and evidential—appears to offer the best basis for evidential use of intercept. Substantial further work would be needed on the details of the legal model before it could be introduced. Major changes expected in communications technologies over the next few years mean that the model potentially has only a very short shelf-life.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Girls' Education

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I am today placing in the Libraries of both Houses copies of "Girls' Education: Towards a Better Future for All", published today by the Department for International Development (DFID).

At the turn of the millennium, the international community promised that by 2005, there would be as many girls as boys in school. Despite this promise, there are still 58 million girls worldwide who are not in school. The majority of these girls live in sub-Saharan Africa and south and west Asia. A girl growing up in a poor family in sub-Saharan Africa has less than a one-in-four chance of getting a secondary education. The millennium development goal (MDG) to get as many girls as boys into primary and secondary school by 2005 is likely to be missed in over 75 countries. Later this year, when leaders from around the world come together to take stock of the MDGs, there will be no escaping the fact that we have collectively failed to keep our promise.

The paper reminds us of the value of education for lifting people out of poverty and enabling them to build a more promising future for themselves, their families and their nations. Nothing has as much impact on a child's future well being as their mother's level of education. Educating girls helps to make communities and societies healthier, wealthier and safer. It helps to reduce child death, improve maternal health and tackle the spread of HIV and AIDS. Girls' education underpins the ability to achieve all the other MDGs, which is why the timetable was set as 2005.

This strategy is a first step to get us back on track and it acknowledges that we all need to do substantially more to help girls get into school. To this end, we plan to spend at least £1.4 billion on education in the developing world over the next three years. This money will provide additional support to Governments in developing countries to produce plans that prioritise girls' education. This will include providing financial help to those wanting to remove school fees and indirect costs of educating girls. The money will also be used to provide more resources to strengthen international efforts to coordinate action on girls' education. We will also use the UK's 2005 Presidencies of the G8 and EU and our role as co-chair of the fast-track initiative (FTI) to push gender equality in education up the political agenda and make it a priority for the international community.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Office Support Services

The Minister for Work (Jane Kennedy): The Department for Work and Pensions has been reviewing existing support services to ensure that they offer best value for money and continue to meet our changing business needs.

These office support services, which include post opening and despatch, messengerial work, switchboard operations, typing and secretarial services, are currently delivered through a range of external suppliers and in-house teams as well as forming part of the tasks of staff who serve the public directly. These arrangements have served us well in the past, but the review has concluded that current methods of delivery do not now provide best value for money and that, in their current state, would not provide the best service in the future.

The Department's executive team, with my full support, has decided that bids for the future provision of all our office support services should be invited from specialist external suppliers in the private sector. This should bring operational benefits and value for money by moving, as far as possible, to a single organisation to manage these range of activities for us. A specialist supplier would bring the benefits of new technology as well as organisational efficiencies to the provision of these services and will offer the agility to respond to our changing needs as the Department is modernised and transformed.

The appointment of a provider will be determined through a competitive tendering exercise starting shortly, with new arrangements expected to commence in late 2006.

This decision will mean that some jobs currently undertaken by DWP staff are likely to transfer to an external contractor. The number of posts likely to be affected equates to less than 1 per cent. of the DWP workforce. We recognise that some staff may not wish to transfer and for these we will, where possible, offer the opportunity to re-deploy within DWP or other Government Departments although we cannot guarantee this.

Senior managers have already met with trade union representatives to outline our plans for the future delivery of these services and will continue to do so as the work continues.

Disabled People (Equality)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Maria Eagle): The consultation document "Delivering Equality for Disabled People" (Cm 6255) was published on 21 July 2004, and consultation continued until 23 October. The Government have now completed their analysis of the responses, and I am pleased to place draft regulations in the Library today that have been informed by the consultation process. An analysis of the consultation responses will appear on the Department for Work and Pensions website in due course.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Age of Candidacy

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Christopher Leslie): The Government intend to legislate, when parliamentary time allows, to lower the age at which a candidate may stand for election from 21 to 18 years old. Such a change in policy is consistent with the recommendation made by the independent Electoral Commission in its report "The Age of Electoral Majority" published in April 2004.

DEFENCE

Review of Modelling of the Demolitions at Khamisiyah

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): I am publishing today the Ministry of Defence paper "Review of Modelling of the Demolitions at Khamisiyah in March 1991 and Implications for UK Personnel". The purpose of the paper is to evaluate recent work undertaken by the US Department of Defence (DoD) which modelled the distribution of nerve agent released by US demolitions of Iraqi chemical weapons at the end of the 1990–91 Gulf conflict and to discuss its implications for UK personnel.

The MOD has assessed the 2002 DoD model carefully and welcomes the improvements incorporated. The model better estimates the size and nature of the possible area of exposure. However, MOD notes that it utilises wide parameters in order to include the maximum number of personnel who could potentially have been exposed to any level of nerve agent. While it is appropriate to include a margin of this kind, MOD believes that the limits used in the model somewhat overstate the potential risk to UK troops. Nonetheless, MOD has used the model for its own analysis and concludes that:

> The model results in a generally smaller geographic exposure area than that described in earlier models.
> As estimated previously, approximately 9,000 UK Service personnel may have been within the area of possible exposure, with the closest some 130 km from Khamisiyah.
> The level of nerve agent would have been too low to have any biologically detectable effect on UK troops and would have a minimal impact on health; again this is consistent with previous findings.

I am today placing copies of the paper in the Library of the House and it is being placed on the Ministry of Defence website at: www.gulfwar.mod.uk

Iraq

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): Following the expiry of the Dutch mandate in Iraq and the planned withdrawal of its force of 1,400 personnel from Al Muthanna province in Iraq in March, the United Kingdom has, in its role as framework nation, reviewed with allies how security should continue to be provided in this part of multi-national division (South East) (MND(SE)).

We have greatly appreciated the valuable contribution made by the Dutch Battle Group in Iraq. Dutch forces have made good progress in Al Muthanna, both in ensuring the stability of the province and building the capability of the Iraqi Security Forces (ISF). This means that a significantly smaller force package is now able to perform these tasks and the General Officer Commanding (GOC) MND(SE) has concluded that a force of some 600 personnel will be adequate to support and mentor Iraqi Security Forces in providing general security in Al Muthanna, as well as providing protection for the Japanese reconstruction battalion located there.

The majority of the personnel required will come from UK units already deployed in Iraq, principally the Queen's Dragoon Guards and the 2nd Battalion, the Princess of Wales's Royal Regiment. A small number of additional personnel will also need to be deployed to provide logistics and other essential support to the force in Al Muthanna. This will temporarily increase the total number of UK personnel in Iraq by approximately 220, although this will subsequently fall to approximately 150, once the initial deployment to Al Muthanna is completed. Overall, however, the number of UK personnel deployed in Iraq is planned to fall by the end of February as the withdrawal of the extremely high readiness reserve takes place following the Iraqi elections.

In the meantime, we continue to consult with allies on the best way to meet security tasks in the province.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Chairman of English Partnerships (Reappointment)

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I wish to announce that Margaret Ford has been reappointed as Chairman of English Partnerships to serve a further three year term with effect from 1 April 2005. English Partnerships is the national regeneration agency supporting high quality sustainable growth in England.

Local Government Finance Settlement 2005–06

The Minister for Local and Regional Government (Mr. Nick Raynsford): I have today laid before the House, the Local Government Finance Report (England) 2005–06. This report establishes the amounts of revenue support grant (RSG) and non-domestic rates (NDR) to be paid to local authorities in 2005–06, and the basis of their distribution. A draft of this report was issued for consultation on 2 December 2004.

I have also today laid before the House the Local Government Finance Report (England) 2003–04: Amending Report 2005. This report sets out the amended basis for distribution of RSG and NDR for 2003–04 following the incorporation of revised data into the calculations for the local government finance settlement for that year. A draft of this report was issued for consultation on 18 November 2004.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received a total of 299 written representations within the consultation deadlines from the Local Government Association and the Association of London Government, from local authorities, local authority groups and Honourable Members, and Ministers met with delegations from six local authority associations and representative groups to discuss the proposals.

Having considered the views of the local authority associations and others who have commented on the provisional settlement, I have decided to confirm my proposals on the bases of distribution for 2005–06 and the amended bases for distribution for 2003–04.

The final figures published today for the 2005–06 settlement reflect the more accurate data and resource totals that have become available since we published our proposals, and also appropriate data corrections to reflect errors discovered by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister or notified to us by local authorities.

This year's settlement represents a continued real terms increase in investment in local government, which will allow authorities to continue to deliver improving services at an affordable cost. We have provided an extra £408 million in formula grant above the published plans for local government for 2005–06. As a result, total formula grant for 2005–06 will be 5.6 per cent. higher than in 2004–05. This is the eighth successive year in which Government have provided local government overall with an increase in total Government grant above inflation, and combined with specific and special grants brings the total increase in money from Government to local councils to 33 per cent. in real terms since 1997.

I shall be sending copies of these reports to all local authorities, and making available full supporting information on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at http://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/0506/grant.htm

Copies of the reports and related tables showing each authority's formula spending shares and its allocation of RSG and NDR, and other supporting material in the Vote Office and the Library.

Gypsy and Traveller Sites

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): We are publishing today the Government response to the ODPM Select Committee Report on Gypsy and Traveller Sites. We welcome the Committee's report as a very helpful and thorough contribution to the work we already have underway in addressing the demand for Gypsy and Traveller accommodation and issues related to it.

We are already taking forward a number of measures to tackle the problems arising from the shortage of suitable Gypsy and Traveller accommodation experienced over many years and although our approach may differ in some ways from what the Committee suggests it is clear that we share common concerns and a determination to see effective remedies put in place.

We believe our decision to mainstream the funding and provision of Gypsy and Traveller accommodation needs within the housing and planning systems is the key not only to providing the Gypsy and Traveller accommodation which is so sorely needed but a means to foster greater social inclusion between the Gypsy and Traveller community and the settled community generally.

HEALTH

Shipman Inquiry

The Secretary of State for Health (Dr. John Reid): Dame Janet Smith, Chairman of the Shipman Inquiry, published her sixth report "Shipman: The Final Report" today. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Once again the Government express their profound thanks to Dame Janet Smith and her team for their work throughout the lifetime of the inquiry. We also reiterate our sympathy to all the relatives and friends of Shipman's victims and express our thanks to them for their valuable contribution to the inquiry's work.

Shipman Inquiry (Fifth Report)

The Secretary of State for Health (Dr. John Reid): In December, my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Lord Warner) announced that the launch of the General Medical Council's revalidation scheme should not start until doubts raised by Dame Janet Smith had been resolved. He said that it would be unfair to doctors and confusing for patients to start the new revalidation scheme until the question marks raised by Dame Janet on the evidence doctors would be required to submit had been answered.

His announcement followed the publication of the fifth Shipman Report, "Safeguarding Patients: Lessons from the past—Proposals for the Future". In her report, Dame Janet Smith made it clear that she had concerns that the GMC's revised fitness to practise and revalidation procedures would not help to improve patient protection or safety sufficiently.

I take what Dame Janet has said very seriously. I am determined to respond carefully and robustly to her recommendations to ensure that we develop a very strong patient protection plan. We want to put an end to the idea that the General Medical Council is a representative body for doctors. It is not. Its primary role must be to protect patients.

In order to ensure that it does this effectively I have asked the chief medical officer for England, Sir Liam Donaldson to undertake a review and report his advice to me on what further measures are necessary to:

> Strengthen procedures for assuring the safety of patients in situations where a doctor's performance or conduct pose a risk to patient safety or the effective functioning of services.

Ensure the operation of an effective system of revalidation.

Reconfigure the role, structure and functions of the General Medical Council.

I have asked the chief medical officer to report to me later this year. This will minimise any delay to the introduction of measures that will both improve patient safety and ensure that doctors are fit to practise. The chief medical officer will put an emphasis on patient safety. He will draw on the findings and recommendations made by Dame Janet and other inquiries on poor clinical performance and misconduct. An advisory group that includes experts from organisations representing consumer, healthcare quality and professional interests will support him.

Dame Janet made a number of recommendations not directly covered by the terms of reference of the chief medical officer's review. Our consideration of these recommendations will continue in parallel to the work of the review, focusing particularly on improving measures designed to safeguard patients and improve the quality of the services provided to them.

The Minister for Crime Reduction, Policing and Community Safety (Ms Hazel Blears): I have today placed in the Library a copy of the Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 2005–06 (HC 246). The report sets out my determination for 2005–06 of the aggregate amount of grants that I propose to pay under section 46(2) of the Police Act 1996, and the amount to be paid to each police authority and to the Greater London Authority for the Metropolitan Police Authority.

I have also placed in the Library a copy of the Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 2003–04 (Amending Report 2004–05) (HC 247) to take account of changes to Office of National Statistics population data.

General police grant allocations for each police authority for financial years 2004–05 and 2005–06 are set out in Table 1. Amended allocations for 2003–04 are set out in Table 2.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Domestic Dog and Cat Fur (Alleged Imports)

The Minister for Trade and Investment (Mr. Douglas Alexander): The Government promised to report back to both Houses 12 months from my predecessor's statement to the House on 28 January 2004, Official Report, columns 11–12WS on the alleged import of domestic cat and dog fur into the UK.

The Government understand the ethical abhorrence felt about this issue. Our priority remains to establish the facts about the extent of this alleged trade and to act in a measured way. To this end, we encouraged interested parties to come forward with hard evidence of such fur being on sale in the UK and we undertook work to establish a reliable scientific test to identify between different species of fur.

In July 2003 the Government invited interested parties to produce hard evidence of a problem in the UK, but to date there is no substantive evidence that such fur is entering the UK in significant and commercial quantities, if at all.

The Government have been working in parallel to establish a scientific test to make it possible to reliably ascertain what species of animal any given fur sample has come from. Such a test is essential to enable trading standards officers to address allegations of mislabelling arising under the existing Trade Descriptions Act and to help establish whether domestic cat and dog fur is on sale in the UK.

Last January we reported back on work commissioned on the mass spectrometry means of distinguishing the furs of domestic cat and dogs from that of other animal species. Scientific experts at the former Laboratory of the Government Chemist (LGC Ltd.) concluded that mass spectrometry was not yet sufficiently reliable.

The database of fur samples on which the mass spectrometry method relies, together with the search algorithms used in testing were improved in the year since the last tests were commissioned. On the basis of new tests commissioned in autumn 2004, LGC Ltd. has concluded that from this limited trial, the use MALDI TOF Mass Spectrometry to identify domestic dog and cat hair from other species is a viable option, although a question mark remains on identifying fur which has been chemically treated.

The UK keeps in touch with officials in several countries where the possible trade in domestic cat and dog fur is a concern, including the USA, Australia, France, Belgium and Sweden. We will be sharing our findings from the "mass spectrometry" trials with these governments and with all our European partners.

The Government position remains that without hard evidence of such imports at commercial levels to the UK, we will not consider legislation and that any action would be most effective if taken at EU level. The Government continue to welcome input and evidence from interested stakeholders and will continue to share information with other Governments, particularly those in Europe.

TRANSPORT

Railways Bill (Scotland)

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Mr. Tony McNulty): The provisions in the Railways Bill, which is due to complete its Commons consideration today, would devolve to the Scottish Ministers additional powers and functions to determine Scottish railway strategies; to let, monitor and manage the Scotrail franchise; and to specify rail infrastructure needs in Scotland. They will also be able to set fares and fund improvements to the railway. Only some functions—principally safety and the licensing of railway operators—will remain reserved to UK Ministers.

The changes in the Railways Bill affect the executive powers of the Scottish Ministers. Responsibility for primary legislation dealing with the management and operation of railways remains reserved to the Westminster Parliament.

Under the Sewel Convention the Government have committed not to vary the executive competence of the Scottish Ministers without the consent of the Scottish Parliament. Therefore, in order to legislate in the Railways Bill the Parliament must give its consent to the Sewel motion for those aspects of the Bill which relate to devolving additional executive powers and functions to the Scottish Ministers. The motion put to the Scottish Parliament was:

Railways Bill:

> "That the Parliament agrees that those provisions that confer executive powers and functions on the Scottish Ministers in the Railways Bill and those that relate to devolved matters should be considered by the UK Parliament".

The Scottish Parliament considered and agreed this motion on 26 January.

To support these devolved responsibilities, the Secretary of State has announced that agreement has been reached with Scottish Ministers to transfer approximately £325 million to the Scottish Executive which would provide sufficient funding to cover all the responsibilities being transferred by virtue of the Railways Bill.

As part of this settlement the following funding transfers have been agreed:

> The Scottish Executive will receive a Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) transfer from the Department for Transport (DfT) of £7.5 million to accompany the transfer of the majority of the Strategic Rail Authority's (SRA's) functions to the Scottish Executive. This sum represents the application of the Barnett formula (0.1023) to 75 per cent. of the relevant SRA budgets for 2004–05.
> The Scottish Executive will receive a DEL transfer from DfT of £302 million to fund Network Rail's Operation, Maintenance and Renewals activities in Scotland to deliver the network outputs in Scotland. This will take effect from 1 April 2006.
> A significant proportion of the £302 million total relates to a new Scotland element of Network Rail's regulatory asset base (RAB). The disagregation of the current GB RAB into elements for Scotland and for England and Wales will be determined by the Office of Rail Regulation (ORR) before the end of 2005, following joint representations by DfT and the Scottish Executive. The DfT and Scottish Executive will each receive funding precisely sufficient to remunerate their respective RABs. The Scottish Executive and DfT agree that the best estimate that can be made of the RAB for Scotland in advance of the ORR's determination is that it will be very close to 10 per cent. of the RAB for Great Britain, which is the basis on which the RAB spend above is calculated.

In addition, in order to fund rail enhancements the Scottish Executive will receive the following:

> a DEL transfer of £17 million from 1 April 2006;
> a proportionate increase, via the application of the Barnett Formula, of future increases in DfT's spending on enhancements in England and Wales as an outcome from future Spending Reviews.

Scotland will also benefit from a proportionate share of the following funding sources:

> A 10 per cent. share of the planned "small schemes pot" funding for Network Rail to take forward small enhancement schemes, as was announced in the White Paper.
> The undertaking of enhancement works in Scotland to enable compliance with the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995.

Finally, the ORR will have the same range of responsibilities in Scotland as in England and Wales. Like the Secretary of State for Transport, Scottish Ministers will be required to provide guidance to the ORR on desired outputs, and ORR will determine the cost of delivering these outputs. To reflect the fact that in future Network Rail will be funded by two Governments, a separate binding arrangement between Scottish Ministers and Network Rail will be established, similar to the parallel binding arrangement between UK Ministers and Network Rail. No transfer of resources is required to reflect these arrangements.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Southampton City Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (BFI) report on Southampton City Council's processing of claims for housing benefits was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library. In 2003–04 Southampton City Council administered approximately £67.5 million in housing benefits. This is approximately 13 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

Southampton City Council was selected for inspection because it was taking 99 days on average to process new Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit claims compared to the Department for Work and Pensions standard of 36 days.

BFI found that the council had made improvements since the first BFI inspection report, published in 2002 and that in the first quarter of 2004–05 new claims performance had improved to 57 days. The Verification Framework was introduced in October 2002 and claims are now being verified to a high standard. A comprehensive set of management checking procedures is now in place and claims are monitored to identify if a payment on account is required. Although these factors have improved the quality of new claims processing, there needs to be more proactive management at all stages of the new claims process if Southampton City Council is to reach the standard of 36 days.

The report makes recommendations to help the council improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit. It also contains the council's action plan for implementation of the recommendations.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to BFI's findings and recommendations.

Chelmsford Borough Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the benefit fraud inspectorate (BFI) report on Chelmsford borough council's processing of claims for housing benefits was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library. In 2003–04 Chelmsford borough council administered some £27 million in housing benefits. This is approximately 36 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

Chelmsford borough council was selected for inspection because it was reporting that it was taking 101 days on average to process new housing benefit and council tax benefit claims, compared to the Department for Work and Pensions standard of 36 days.

At the time of inspection only 33 per cent. of new claims were decided within 14 days of all information being available and claims were taking an average of 93 days from date of receipt to date of decision. The council attributed poor clearance times over the last two years to the effects of introducing new IT and document management systems and the verification framework over a short period in late 2003. There were delays at most stages of the new claims process and staff lacked confidence in the new benefits IT and document management systems.

Also, although Chelmsford borough council had good policies and procedures for verifying claims, these were not always followed. There were clear strengths in verification of identity, confirming residency and verifying national insurance numbers, but weaknesses in other areas.

Chelmsford borough council is aware of its problems and has already sought assistance from the Department for Work and Pensions Performance development team.

The report makes recommendations to help the council improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to BFI's findings and recommendations.

Wyre Borough Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the benefit fraud inspectorate (BFI) report on Wyre borough council's processing of claims for housing benefits was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library. In 2002–03 Wyre borough council administered approximately £19 million in housing benefits. This is approximately 45 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

Wyre borough council was selected for inspection as it was taking on average just 23 days to process new housing benefit and council tax benefit claims, compared to the Department for Work and Pensions standard of 36 days. This suggested scope for BFI to identify and disseminate good practices.

Over a two year period Wyre borough council has achieved significant improvements in both the speed and accuracy of processing claims. Its performance on the average time for processing new claims improved from 71 days in 2001–02 to 33 days in 2003–04. Its reported performance of cases processed accurately was 93 per cent. in 2001–02 rising to 98 per cent. in 2003–04.

Wyre borough council achieved this very good performance through a change programme that made significant changes to work processes and how work and staff were managed and monitored.

By taking an informed and incremental approach Wyre borough council has developed its benefits service so that it now delivers a better service to customers, gives a high level of assurance to senior managers and elected members and provides development opportunities for staff.

BFI believes that improvements in Wyre borough council's strategic management, by, for example, developing procedural guidance would further enhance performance.

The report makes recommendations to help the council improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to BFI's findings and recommendations.

Renfrewshire Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the benefit fraud inspectorate (BFI) report on Renfrewshire council's processing of claims for housing benefits was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library. In 2003–04 Renfrewshire council administered some £51 million in housing benefits. This is approximately 11 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

Renfrewshire council was selected for inspection because it was reporting that it was taking 87 days on average to process new housing benefit and council tax benefit claims, compared to the Department for Work and Pensions standard of 36 days. BFI found that errors in the council's use of its IT system led to incorrect calculations of the performance against the best value performance indicator. The council was actually taking an average of 43 days to process new claims for housing benefits.

Even within the actual times taken BFI found several process weaknesses that caused unnecessary delays in handling new claims and a weak management case-checking process that allowed errors to be repeated.

The report makes recommendations to help the council improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit. It also contains the council's action plan for implementation of the recommendations immediately.

The council has made organisational changes designed to address weaknesses in the management of the benefits service and responded positively to the findings from the inspection by implementing a number of the recommendations.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and may ask the council for its proposals in response to BFI's findings and recommendations.

Written Ministerial Statements

Monday 31 January 2005

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Five-year Plan (People, Places and Prosperity)

The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. John Prescott): In the sustainable communities plan which I published in February 2003, I set out how the Government would work to create successful, thriving and inclusive communities across England.

Sustainable communities are welcoming, prosperous places to live. They have the jobs, homes, schools, healthcare, transport and other services people need. A sustainable community meets the needs of all its citizens so that the most disadvantaged are not left behind. Our aim is to create communities that will stand the test of time, and places where people want to live.

My recent plan for housing, "Sustainable Communities: Homes for All", published last week, set out what we will do to give many more people more choice and fairness in housing—especially those who want a home of their own but cannot afford it.

But people live in neighbourhoods, not just in houses. So today, I am publishing a second five-year plan, "Sustainable Communities: People, Places and Prosperity", and copies have been laid in the Library. It is a partner to the first plan, and it sets out how we will work at every level to improve the communities that people live in. With it, I am publishing a number of other documents that give more details of its major themes.

"People, Places and Prosperity" sets out a strategy to:

Give people more of a say in the way places (both urban and rural) are run

Work through the town, city or county hall so that local authorities deliver excellent services, provide leadership for their areas, and empower their communities

Tackle disadvantage, so that people are not condemned to lives of poverty, poor services and disempowerment by accidents of birth or geography

Work through the regions to increase prosperity, and bring together the funding and plans which can best be co-ordinated at regional level.

The strategy is built on two main principles—the need to give communities more power and say in the decisions that affect them, and the importance of working with the right partners at the right level to get things done.

More power and say for communities in the decisions that affect them

In the past, many people thought that local decision making was not for them. They often felt distant and unheard by the people in power. But now, many more people are helping to shape the places where they live. Over a million more people have become engaged in their communities since 2001.

The policies and schemes that help people get involved in their communities—like community strategies, Sure Start, and the new deal for communities—act as nurseries for democracy, getting people involved who do not necessarily want to become local councillors. They have unlocked huge untapped energy and experience—giving people more influence over the decisions which matter to their community.

But we know that, despite this increase in voluntary activity, many people still feel they cannot make any real difference to the things that really matter to them. We need to reconnect politics with the things that people care about in their local communities—their public services, the state of their streets and towns, their sense of safety—by giving them more power and a bigger stake in the way their areas are run, and making sure their voices are heard in local, regional and national government.

So, I am announcing today that we will offer more opportunities for all communities to have more control over their own neighbourhoods. The aim is to have arrangements that give all neighbourhoods real power, but which are flexible enough to apply to a wide range of different circumstances; and have local councillors at their heart, rather than being set up in parallel to existing democratic structures.

As part of this, we propose a 'neighbourhoods charter', setting out what local people should expect, both in terms of outcomes—for example, safe, clean streets—and in terms of control or influence over their neighbourhoods. Some parts of the charter might be for every neighbourhood; others would be agreed between particular neighbourhoods, their local authorities, and other local partners, with more accountability needed where more power and influence was being transferred.

The kinds of powers agreed between local authorities and neighbourhoods would range widely, and might include:

Giving communities the ability to require action where local people are dissatisfied with the level of performance of a particular service, including triggers which require the local authority to take action

Model byelaws and new powers to levy penalty notices, to make it easier for communities to deal with issues that are causing problems, such as antisocial behaviour

Devolving budgets and giving communities the power to manage particular services directly

Giving communities ownership of some local assets like playgrounds and community centres and the chance to manage them themselves

A proposal for neighbourhood improvement districts, which, if agreed locally, could allow areas to vote to raise additional money to spend on local priorities.

In some places, local authorities have devolved funds from existing budgets for councillors to spend in consultation with their local neighbourhoods. This has been highly effective in galvanising action on some local issues, such as vandalism or rubbish, which are relatively inexpensive to sort out but which can be a source of major annoyance. It has also helped to create a positive spirit and energy within those bodies. We will encourage all local authorities to take up this idea.

As well as proposals for the neighbourhoods charter, the plan sets out ideas for ensuring more responsive local services, with better links to local people, including schools, health services, and the police; and our proposals for a more community-focused role for local councillors.

And it sets out a wide-ranging strategy to make places cleaner, safer and greener; with clean, safe streets free of anti-social behaviour, good quality, well-maintained parks and open spaces, and well-run, attractive and inclusive town centres.

Working at the right level

We want more chances for communities to get involved and make decisions, but we also know there are things that must be delivered by good, strong local authorities, and others that need a wider view, across a bigger region.

We need to ensure the right kind of involvement at each level—with people able to have their say, and decisions taken at the level that makes most sense. This also means that we need good decision-making at every level—with good leaders at every level who have a clear strategic vision, who are not defensive about giving more power to local communities, and who have the ability to deliver on their aspirations.

Alongside the "People, Places and Prosperity" plan, I am also publishing two discussion papers—"Citizen Engagement and Public Services: Why Neighbourhoods Matter" and "Vibrant Local Leadership". These are part of the development of a new strategy for local government—local vision—which we are taking forward through a series of discussion documents and a wide ranging debate with all stakeholders. Many of the things we set out in the main plan have been developed and will be delivered through the strategy, and are set out in more detail in these discussion papers.

The plan sets out how we will work through the town, city or county hall to develop councils' role in leading the locality—pulling together public agencies and key stakeholders to act together to secure excellent services and solve local problems, and enabling community empowerment. There will be:

Clearer roles for councillors—with a strong, visible executive and a distinctive role forcouncillors as advocates and leaders of their local community.

More opportunities for mayors for those that want them, particularly in our major cities, with greater power to make a real difference, backed up by strong roles for councillors in wards. We are consulting on proposals to offer more options on how councils are run

More local area agreements, to deliver better services based on shared priorities, and reduce the number of targets and funding streams for local authorities. There are 21 pilots under way, and I am today announcing a further phase of 40 pilots to be in place by April 2006.

We are also inviting views on a move to whole council elections every four years for all councils in England—providing greater clarity to voters and greater stability for councils.

We need to act at every level—neighbourhood, local, regional and national—if we are to give everyone the chance to live in a desirable, sustainable community. It is not enough to have a strong neighbourhood body if the local authority is not up to scratch; and even an excellent local authority cannot deliver the bigger economic growth and drive that a strong region might.

Our plan sets out how we will work through the regions to increase prosperity, and bring together funding and plans. There will be:

Action through all our regional institutions—the regional development agencies, regional assemblies and Government offices—to support strong economies in all regions, offering opportunities for everyone to share in increased prosperity

Action at the right level—whether it's work in core cities, at regional level, or across more than one region, like our successful northern way programme—to make a difference

A planning system which meets the needs of businesses and householders, while protecting the environment. Regional housing boards and regional planning bodies will be merged under the leadership of the regional assembly, to make sure that the right homes are built where they are needed and also that these are planned alongside other vital services. Our new legislation and guidance on planning puts sustainable development at the heart of the planning system, so that as we use planning to respond to business and housing need, we also protect the environment.

A strategic approach to skills, transport, planning and infrastructure, aspiring to increase the employment rate to 80 per cent., including 900,000 more people in work in areas outside the greater south-east.

Alongside "People, Places and Prosperity", we are publishing a series of nine regional documents, explaining the action being taken in each region to support prosperous, sustainable communities. Later this week, we will also be publishing more details of our work in the regions in "Realising the Potential of All Our Regions"; and the northern way steering group will publish its progress report, showing how the Government are working to make the northern way a success.

Tackling Disadvantage

As we seek to improve services and places for everyone, we need to keep a clear focus on those who are worst-off. A truly sustainable community must be a fair community, where everyone has the chance of a good education, a decent home, support for good health, and the opportunity to get a job. We need targeted action for the worst-off places and people; and we need to make sure that mainstream services do at least as well for the worst-off as they do for others.

Today's strategy sets out how we will tackle disadvantage, so that people are not condemned to lives of poverty, poor services and disempowerment by accidents of birth or geography. There will be:

Over £2.5 billion invested each year in practical work to tackle disadvantage in England, better targeted on those that need it most

Faster progress in education, health, work and cutting crime in the most deprived areas, and for the worst-off people—narrowing the gap

Housing-related support for over one million vulnerable people, to help them live independently and successfully

Better personalised public services which can meet individual needs better—not just for the well-off, but for everyone

Effective action to attract private sector investment into deprived areas.

I am also publishing today the joint report by the Prime Minister's strategy unit and the neighbourhood renewal unit, "Improving the prospects of people living in areas of multiple deprivation in England", and our progress report against the aims set out in the neighbourhood renewal strategy, "Making it Happen in Neighbourhoods. Copies of all the documents published today will be available in the Library as well as on the ODPM website.

Conclusion

By putting local people in the driving seat, making sure that local democracy and regions are flourishing, and tackling disadvantage wherever it occurs, we will create thriving, sustainable communities across the country that people are proud to be part of. "People, Places and Prosperity", together with the housing strategy, "Homes for All", which I published last week, sets out how we will do it.

New Code of Audit Practice

The Minister for Local and Regional Government (Mr. Nick Raynsford): I have laid the Audit Commission's revised code of audit practice for consideration by the House. If approved, the code will prescribe the way in which auditors, appointed by the commission, are to carry out their functions to audit local government and NHS bodies under the Audit Commission Act 1998.

The Act requires the code to be approved by both Houses at least every five years. The current version of the code was approved in March 2000. The legislation also provides for the preparation of a "different code" with respect to the audit of accounts of health services bodies. The Audit Commission has decided to prepare separate codes for local government and the NHS, primarily to reflect the increasingly divergent accounting, corporate governance and performance management frameworks in the two sectors, but also to facilitate the process of agreeing with the Healthcare Commission those elements of the draft NHS code which relate to auditors' local value-for-money work.

The new codes reflect the significant changes both in the operating environment of local government and NHS bodies and in auditing standards and practice since the current code was prepared.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (Bedford Borough Council)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection report on Bedford Borough Council was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Following the housing Green Paper "Quality and Choice: A Decent Home for All", published in April 2000, the Department for Work and Pensions developed a performance framework for housing benefits. The performance standards allow local authorities to make a comprehensive self-assessment of whether they deliver benefit effectively and securely. They are the standards that the Department for Work and Pensions expects local authorities to aspire to and achieve in time.

In 2003–04, Bedford Borough Council administered some £37 million in housing benefits, about 52 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

Following an invitation from Bedford Borough Council, BFI carried out an inspection in September 2004. The council's self-assessment against performance standards identified that it had reached standard in five functional areas and was above standard in two functional areas in August 2004.

The inspection found that Bedford Borough Council was indeed providing an excellent benefit service.

A new performance management system and clear strategic and operational planning and staff involvement at all levels resulted in strong performance and at the time of the inspection new claims and changes of circumstances were being processed in 25 days and six days respectively, against standards of 36 days and nine days.

The report notes a great deal of commitment and professionalism in Bedford Borough Council and a determination throughout the organisation to maintain the high level of performance achieved.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report, which I commend to other councils and hope they can use it to help bring about improvement in their own benefits services.

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (London Borough of Harrow)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection report on London Borough of Harrow was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Following the housing Green Paper "Quality and Choice: A Decent Home for All", published in April 2000, the Department for Work and Pensions developed a performance framework for housing benefits. The performance standards allow local authorities to make a comprehensive self-assessment of whether they deliver benefit effectively and securely. They are the standards that the Department for Work and Pensions expects local authorities to aspire to and achieve in time.

In 2003–04, London Borough of Harrow administered some £73 million in housing benefits, about 13 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

The inspection focused on the speed of processing new claims for benefit and changes of circumstances—areas of weakness in the past. The report identifies significant progress made by the council. Since the last inspection the council has introduced a number of changes, including a performance management system and implementing all recommendations relating to the processing of new claims and changes of circumstances made in the August 2003 BFI inspection report.

The report concludes the council's performance against the majority of the best value performance indicators has improved and the council has delivered significant improvements in the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the BFI's findings.

South Gloucestershire Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI focused inspection report on South Gloucestershire Council was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

I announced on 29 January 2004, Official Report, column 18WS, that BFI would undertake some shorter more focused inspections, designed to provide for quick improvements in performance in specific areas of benefits administration. The first of these inspections focus on the processing of claims for housing benefit and council tax benefit.

In 2003–04 South Gloucestershire Council administered some £34 million in housing benefits, about 10 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

South Gloucestershire council was selected for inspection because it had reported that it was taking 86 days on average to process new claims for housing benefit and council tax benefit in 2003–04. This level of performance was in the bottom quartile of all reported performance and 50 days outside the standard of 36 days.

BFI found weaknesses in the council's benefits administration processes that contributed to this poor performance. These included: user errors, inaccurate management information, delays in transferring claims and further information from one-stop shops and housing offices to the main benefits processing office, delays in setting up council tax accounts and management checking processes that were not fully effective.

The report notes that the council had problems with the interfaces between itself and Jobcentre Plus and the Pension Service. Benefits service staff told inspectors that delays in sharing information and issues around the consistency and accuracy of that information had led to delays in the processing of benefit claims. BFI made recommendations to ensure that problems in the exchange of information were quickly addressed and a national initiative by Jobcentre Plus to improve joint working will also help resolve this.

The report makes recommendations to help the council improve and since the inspection the council has informed BFI that the average time taken to process new claims for housing benefit and council tax benefit has fallen to 46 days.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the BFI's findings and recommendations.

Breckland District Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI focused inspection report on Breckland District Council was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

I announced on 29 January 2004, Official Report, column 18WS, that BFI would undertake shorter more focused inspections, designed to provide for quick improvements in performance in specific areas of benefits administration. The first of these inspections focus on the processing of claims for housing benefit and council tax benefit.

In 2003–04, Breckland District Council administered some £21 million in housing benefits, about 48 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

Breckland District Council was selected for inspection as it had demonstrated the capacity steadily to improve its performance for processing new claims. New claims were being processed within an impressive 25 days at the time of BFI's inspection in September 2004. The inspection sought to identify the good practices behind this dramatic improvement.

In August 2003, Breckland District Council had formed the Anglia revenues and benefits partnership with Forest Heath District Council to deliver a revenues and benefits service to customers of both councils.

The partnership incorporated the co-location of Forest Heath and Breckland benefits staff, and a clear corporate vision and objectives that had been translated successfully into paying claims quickly and accurately. The report identified a number of good practices in the areas of management checking, target setting and monitoring.

BFI found that the quality of claims processing was consistently of a very high standard, particularly in verifying claims.

The report makes recommendations to improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit further.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the BFI's findings and recommendations.

Glasgow City Council (Benefit Fraud Inspectorate)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Mr. Chris Pond): On behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, the BFI inspection report on Glasgow City Council was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Following the housing Green Paper "Quality and Choice: A Decent Home for All", published in April 2000, the Department for Work and Pensions developed a performance framework for housing benefits. The performance standards allow local authorities to make a comprehensive self-assessment of whether they deliver benefit effectively and securely. They are the standards that the Department for Work and Pensions expects local authorities to aspire to and achieve in time.

In 2003–04, Glasgow City Council administered some £350 million in housing benefits, about 17 per cent. of its gross revenue expenditure.

BFI's first inspection of Glasgow City Council, in March 2001, reported that it needed to develop a more effective, efficient and secure benefits administration system.

This follow-up inspection assessed the council against the performance standards. While the council did not meet standard in any of the seven functional areas, the report concludes that it has made significant progress since the first inspection. Its overall level of performance was assessed as fair.

Customers received a good service in terms of caller facilities and the council had made significant improvements in the speed of processing claims. However it was failing to protect the gateway to benefits effectively due to inadequate verification of new claims and a lack of interventions after a benefit had been awarded.

The council had taken a number of positive steps to improve the overpayment recovery process and while it had made a significant investment in resources for its benefit counter-fraud unit, there continued to be insufficient controls around the number and quality of investigations.

BFI found a clear commitment to improve performance including plans to implement new benefits IT systems and the implementation of the Department's verification framework.

The report makes recommendations further to improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit, as well as counter-fraud activities.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the BFI's findings and recommendations.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Planning Policy Statement 1—Delivering Sustainable Development

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is today publishing the Government's new planning policy statement 1 (PPS1), "Delivering Sustainable Development". Copies of the document will be made available in the Libraries of both Houses. This new statement which applies in England, replaces planning policy guidance note 1 (PPG1), "General Policy and Principles", published February 1997.

PPS1 is one of the new series of shorter, sharper planning policy statements that are an important component of the Government's package of reforms for the planning system. PPS1 itself sets the context for the planning system and for other topic-specific policy statements. The policies set out in PPS1 will need to be taken into account by regional planning bodies in the preparation of regional spatial strategies, by the Mayor of London in relation to the spatial development strategy in London, and by local planning authorities in the preparation of local development documents. They may also be material to decisions on individual planning applications.

The consultation draft of PPS1, entitled "Creating Sustainable Communities", was published in February 2004. Over 300 responses to the consultation draft were received. The Government have carefully considered the views expressed in preparing the final version of the document.

With its new title of "Delivering Sustainable Development", PPS1 reflects the duty on regional and local planning bodies to contribute towards sustainable development when preparing development plans, as required by the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004. The policies seek to ensure balance in the integrated consideration of environmental issues alongside the need for sustainable economic development and the aim of creating genuinely sustainable communities.

There is also stronger emphasis on good design, reflecting the importance that the Government attach to ensuring high quality design is delivered through the planning system. PPS1 makes clear that good design is indivisible from good planning in delivering safe, inclusive and successful communities. Spatial planning and the importance of ensuring community involvement in the planning system are other important issues covered by PPS1, within the context of the overall theme of the document.

The original PPG1 also contained a broad range of material covering the general operation of the planning system. This was reproduced in a slightly updated form as Annex B in the consultation draft of PPS1. Given the new emphasis of PPS1 on sustainable development, we do not consider that this material suitable for inclusion in the PPS. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is, however, publishing this material in the interim as a separate document entitled, "The Planning System: General Principles", alongside PPS1. We are also considering the scope and content of future "good practice" guidance to support PPS1.

PPS1 demonstrates the Government's commitment to achieving more sustainable development through the reformed planning system. It provides an important, over-arching policy framework which should help improve people's lives and the places where they live, work and enjoy, whilst protecting our environment and natural resources—now and in the future. The Government believe this document should be broadly welcomed by planning authorities, developers and other business, community and environmental interests.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Educational Psychologists

The Minister for Children, Young People and Families (Margaret Hodge): The Department has facilitated discussions involving a range of partners, including the Local Government Association, on possible ways of streamlining the entry training route for educational psychologists (EPs). We have also commissioned two consultancy reports. The discussions to date have been positive but the expensive changes to the training route for EPs proposed do not provide a viable solution in present circumstances. The wider context for the work of EPs has also changed considerably over the last year.

We need to work with stakeholders to clarify future demand, and to assess how that demand can best be met. We therefore propose to commission a fundamental review of the functions of EPs in the context of wider discussions on children's workforce issues.

Building on the report of the educational psychology working group published in 2000, we envisage the review will consider the key functions of EPs in the changing landscape of children's services, identifying the value they add through their particular, distinctive contribution; advise on linkages with other groups; and consider implications for training and development within existing resources.

Precise terms of reference for the review will be agreed with the local authority employers' side and we expect the bulk of the work to be completed in 2005.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Self-Defence

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): Following my statement on 12 January, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) and Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) have today published a joint statement entitled "Householders and the use of force against intruders". This contains a clear explanation of the law and also explains how the police and CPS would handle the investigation and how they would treat the householder. I am placing a copy in the Library of the House.

The CPS and ACPO will be ensuring this guidance is widely available and the Home Office are wording with them in promulgating it.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Economic Damage (Animal Research)

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): In July 2004, in the paper "Animal Welfare, Human Rights—Protecting People from Animal Rights Extremists", the Government announced that they were considering the possibility of making it an offence to cause economic damage to the suppliers of firms or research groups engaged in the legitimate and licensed use of animals for research purposes. Since then the Government have consulted industry and other groups in developing proposals.

The Government intend to table amendments to the Serious Organised Crime and Police Bill, before the report stage of the Bill, scheduled for 7 February. These will create two new offences, interference with contractual relationships so as to harm an animal research organisation, and intimidation of persons connected with animal research organisations.

TRANSPORT

Sustainable Distribution Fund

The Minister of State, Department for Transport (Mr Tony McNulty): The Government set out last July, in its White Paper "The Future of Transport", our intention to move towards a mode-neutral basis for distributing funding in support of sustainable distribution.

I am today announcing details of the arrangements we will be putting into place over the next three years to move towards this new approach.

In recent years the Government have funded programmes whose objective is to minimise the impact of freight on the environment, safety and other transport users. The two main programmes are rail and water freight grants, which aim to transfer freight traffic from the roads to these modes. In the last few years we have also funded some programmes to promote more efficient road haulage.

These programmes currently have separate budgets and are administered separately. But they all have the same objective, to secure the benefits of reduced pollution and congestion and better safety. It is not the principal objective of these schemes to promote certain modes of transport for their own sake.

The Government believe it is right to assess its investments according to the outcomes, so that funding can be directed where it offers the best value for money. This is why we will be bringing together the different budgets mentioned above into a single pot and prioritising expenditure on a value for money basis. The new merged budget will be known as the sustainable distribution fund.

In summary, under the arrangements we will;

Merge the water freight grants and road haulage budget into a single pot from April 2005.

From April 2007 extend the single pot to include rail freight grants. Subject to the passage of the Railways Bill, the administration of rail and water freight grants will be brought together in a single unit as soon as possible.

Prioritise schemes that offer the best value for money in terms of their impact on the environment, safety and congestion.

Set a minimum value for money threshold whereby every pound spent on grants will buy benefits valued at £1.50 or more.

In parallel, use funding from the aggregate levy sustainability fund (ALSF) to minimise the transport impacts of aggregates movements.

Taking 2005–06 and 2006–07 together, a total of £50.4 million will be available for rail freight grants and £19.2 million for water and road freight schemes. The rail figures include an additional £2 million available to support new applications. In 2007–08, when rail freight grants are incorporated into the new arrangements, the total budget for all modes has been provisionally set at £22.6 million. In addition to these figures, there will be some £3 million to £4 million from the ALSF available for sustainable distribution support in each of the next two years.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Draft Children (Contact) and Adoption Bill

The Secretary of State for Education and Skills (Ruth Kelly): Following the publication of our consultation response "Parental Separation: Children's Needs and Parents' Responsibilities: Next Steps" on 18 January, I am pleased to say that the draft Children (Contact) and Adoption Bill is today being presented to Parliament.

This Bill takes forward the commitment we made in the Green Paper "Parental Separation: Children's Needs and Parents' Responsibilities" to provide the courts with more flexible powers to facilitate contact and enforce contact orders.

At present, contact orders can be enforced only through contempt of court proceedings leading to fine or imprisonment. Courts have quite rightly been reluctant to use these measures because of the potential negative impact on the children involved. That is why they need more flexible, more realistic powers, of the sort that this Bill will provide. It will allow the courts, at any stage, to:

> Refer parents to resources including information meetings, meetings with a counsellor, orparenting programmes/classes designed to deal with contact disputes;
> Attach conditions to orders which may require attendance at a given class or programme;

And where an order has been breached, the courts will also be able to:

> Impose community-based orders for unpaid work or curfew;
> Award financial compensation from one parent to another where the actions of one inbreaching a contact order have caused real financial loss to the other.

In addition, the Bill will provide more clarity in the law about the mechanism by which inter-country adoptions from individual countries may be suspended where there are concerns about child welfare.

I believe that this draft Bill, alongside the wider programme of reform set out in our Green Paper and the response document published on 18 January, will make a real difference to the family justice system in this country, and help provide better outcomes for children and families faced with the difficulties of parental separation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

British Embassy (Kinshasa)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Chris Mullin): In light of continuing instability in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) and the fragile security situation in Kinshasa, the Government have authorised the deployment of armed guards to our British Embassy in Kinshasa in order to safeguard embassy staff and ensure the mission can continue to operate.

The Government take seriously their obligations to contribute to peace and security in the DRC. We have a development programme for the DRC worth £34 million for the financial year 2004–05. Upgrading the security of our embassy will enable staff to continue to contribute to the peace process in the DRC. The DRC Government have been informed of our intention and is content with the arrangements we propose to protect our staff.

A UN arms embargo, targeting rebel groups operating in the east of the country, has been in place on the DRC since 28 July 2003. An EU embargo has been in place on the country since 7 April 1993. We fully support these measures and have informed the UN DRC Sanctions Committee and EU partners of the deployment.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Records Bureau

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Paul Goggins): The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) proposes to introduce measures to reduce the number of organisations currently registered with the CRB, through the setting of an annual threshold for the submission of disclosure applications by registered bodies. At present there are some 13,000 organisations registered with the CRB of which just 20 per cent. process 80 per cent. of all disclosure applications.

Setting an annual threshold will be a key part of the CRB's strategy to enhance the efficiency of, and improve standards within, the registered body network. Those organisations that remain registered will be better equipped to carry out their responsibilities under the CRB code of practice, receiving enhanced support and assistance from the CRB in carrying out their obligations. We shall consult widely with registered bodies and other stakeholders prior to the change.

The CRB and its major stakeholders recognise that public safety and the integrity of the disclosure service relies upon the widespread adoption of robust internal processes by registered bodies, particularly in terms of properly verifying the identity of disclosure applicants, ensuring that eligibility criterion are met, and forms are completed correctly.

The current assurance and compliance regime has highlighted that a significant number of registered bodies do not, for one reason or another, comply with all of the CRB's key guidelines or the CRB code of practice. A more compact registered body network, working in greater partnership with the CRB and composed of high-volume users would allow the CRB to focus its resources more effectively to improve compliance and support the evolving role of registered bodies.

The CRB remains committed to providing appropriate means of access for those organisations that wish to continue to use the disclosure service, and will work with in partnership with low-volume users to find alternative arrangements that best suits their requirements; keeping cost and bureaucracy to a minimum.

The introduction of such a threshold will be subject to a formal consultation process followed by the laying of regulations under sections 120AA and 120ZA Police Act 1997.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

National Grid Transco's Gas Distribution Networks

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): I am taking the earliest opportunity to inform the House of my decision on 27 January to give regulatory consent to National Grid Transco's (NGT) proposed sale of four distribution networks (DN).

NGT announced in 2003 that it was considering the sale of between one and four of its gas distribution networks. In August 2004, it announced that it had reached provisional agreement, subject to regulatory consent, on the sale of four of its DNs.

The DNs are:

North of England;
Wales and the West;
South of England; and Scotland.

NGT required regulatory consents to proceed with the sale from GEMA (Gas and Electricity Markets Authority, which heads Ofgem, the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets) and myself. In considering whether to give consent, we share the same duties under the Gas Act 1986 (as amended). The central duty is to protect the interests of consumers in relation to gas conveyed through pipes, wherever appropriate by promoting effective competition. The legislation confers no powers for GEMA or the Secretary of State to require that consumer benefits should be maximised. GEMA, but not the Secretary of State, has the power to attach conditions to the sale.

Over the last 18 months or so Ofgem has been leading a major exercise within the gas supply industry to design new industry arrangements for managing separate DNs and allocating responsibilities between the players; to identify and manage risks to consumers; and to assess consumer benefits, in order to inform GEMA's decision whether to consent to DN sales. My Department has liaised closely with Ofgem during this exercise.

Ofgem's final impact assessment (IA), published in November 2004, estimates that DN sales would generate a net benefit of £225 million, net present value (NPV) over 18 years (starting from the beginning of the next gas distribution price control in 2008–09) for GB gas consumers connected to the DNs. This includes domestic, commercial and industrial consumers. This is Ofgem's central estimate within a range of £80 million–£500 million. I am informed that, against the experience of comparative regulation in the electricity sector, this reflects a cautious judgement. Ofgem has assessed the benefits of independently owned networks. A greater flow of information about networks will allow Ofgem to compare their performance and thereby to identify the level of costs associated with the most efficient network. Ofgem will then be able to use this information to set more appropriate price controls for each DN.

I have carefully considered the potential impact of DN sales, including the risk of fragmentation on prices and standards of service; on security of supply; and on safety.

Ofgem and NGT have agreed to create an "agency" as a single point of interface between the gas transporters and the shipper/suppliers (wholesale traders) using the gas pipelines. The agency is expected to discharge many of the functions and services which are currently provided by NGT for example, information processing and handling. This would reduce duplication, and hence costs, that would otherwise be faced by shippers.

GEMA has determined the scope of this agency. If changes in the scope are thought necessary by stakeholders, these would be considered by the whole industry and subject to the approval of GEMA. The agency proposals are a key element of the proposed industry framework, and the basis on which the costs to the industry of the DN sales were assessed by Ofgem in its IA.

The main impact on prices would arise from the new opportunity for Ofgem to apply comparative regulation as assessed in their IA. I have already mentioned the savings to consumers from 2008. There are also likely to be one-off costs of £18 million for 2005, substantially less than £1 per consumer and £8 million per annum on-going.

The ability of consumers to change supplier will not be affected. NGT's role in the consumer "switching" process will be placed within the "agency" arrangements. Other standards of service by licensed gas transporters will continue to be regulated by Ofgem.

In the event that NGT do not sell all four of their distribution networks, and there is only one comparator, thereby reducing the opportunity for comparative regulation, Ofgem have required NGT to agree a "safety net", by which NGT (not consumers) would take the risk of a net detriment to consumers.

Security of supply would be maintained. There would be clear responsibilities for operating and investing in the National Transmission System (NTS) and DNs. The new industry arrangements would ensure efficient investment and operation at the interface. This includes market-based signals for pipeline investment at the NTS offtake points and in the DN pipelines, and incentives on Transco and DN operators to respond to these signals.

Safety of the public is paramount. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) are working to ensure that safety will not be jeopardised. The freephone 24-hour national gas emergency service (0800–111–999) operated by Transco will remain unchanged, and will remain seamless to the public who use it. Transco will remain the Network Emergency Co-ordinator for the GB gas network, accountable to the HSE. HSE will ensure that the revisions to Transco's safety case, and the safety cases from the new DN operators, are robust, and that resources are properly prioritised and allocated to safety case verification and inspection. The HSE will also continue to approve and monitor replacement programmes for the population of iron gas mains.

Following the work on the proposed sales, I am satisfied that the longer-term potential savings outweigh any short-term costs. On this basis, on 27 January 2005, I granted regulatory consent for NGT to proceed with the proposed sales. GEMA has also granted consent, subject to a number of conditions, under the same duties.

If the sales proceed, Transco would retain responsibility for the operation of the NTS, and would transfer its four retained DNs into other Group companies.

The sales are expected to take effect on 1 June 2005 and new industry structure is expected to take effect 1 May 2005, subject to processes to modify and transfer appropriate licences, and acceptance of the safety cases by the HSE. GEMA's consent to the sale included relevant conditions.

Ofgem, HSE and DTI will work together in the coming months to ensure a smooth transition to the new industry arrangements.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Courts Boards

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Christopher Leslie): Section 5(5) of the Courts Act 2003 requires the Lord Chancellor to prepare and issue the courts boards with guidance about their functions. In accordance with this provision the courts boards guidance has been prepared and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, for Constitutional Affairs and Lord Chancellor has today placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses.

HEALTH

National Service Framework for Renal Services

The Secretary of State for Health (Dr. John Reid): I am publishing today "The National Service Framework for Renal Services, Part Two: Chronic Kidney Disease, Acute Renal Failure and End of Life Care".

The national service framework (NSF) programme is a major part of our agenda to tackle health inequalities and to drive up the quality of care across the national health service. Part two of this NSF sets out a programme for the prevention and early treatment of chronic kidney disease, the management of acute renal failure and the extension of palliative care to people with established renal failure who are near the end of their lives. Together with part one, which was published in January 2004, it completes a 10-year framework for the improvement of services for people with kidney problems.

This is an important part of our modernisation programme to improve renal services over the next 10 years. Part two sets out four quality requirements to provide a more responsive service for people with kidney problems, delivered when and where they are needed. It identifies 23 markers of good practice drawn from national and international evidence and National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) guidance. It builds on the programme of modernisation set out in the NHS Improvement Plan and is in keeping with our public health White Paper's aspirations to promote healthier lifestyles and reflects the policies of "Shifting the Balance of Power, Building on the Best and National Standards Local Action". Furthermore, it supports previously published national service frameworks for diabetes, for coronary heart disease, for older people and for children.

NHS organisations need to aim to deliver these quality requirements over the next 10 years, at a pace they determine. The four quality requirements in part two of the NSF support self-care, better diagnostics and treatment, as well as choice, and are closely correlated with the public service agreement (PSA) targets for long term conditions, specifically care planning and reducing emergency admissions and for reducing cardiovascular deaths.

The NSF identifies six steps that local health communities can take to support the delivery of local service improvements:

> integrate care pathways by closer links between renal, coronary heart disease and diabetes networks;
> identify people at risk of chronic kidney disease and testing their kidney function;
> developing protocols for the effective measurement of kidney function, calculating and reporting results automatically by clinical biochemistry laboratories;
> take the NSF into account when developing local plans and targets to deliver the PSA targets;
> tackle acute renal failure by following NICE guidance on pre-operative testing and closer working between critical care and renal networks;
> improve end of life care for people with established renal failure by establishing links between renal and palliative care services.

In addition, five modernisation programmes are being established to support the implementation and delivery of the NSF. Two action-learning sets will tackle issues linked to patient information and the prevention of chronic kidney disease and two others will address problems associated with the extension of palliative care to people with established renal failure who are near the end of their lives. A fifth programme aims to support primary care staff in measuring kidney function.

Copies of "The National Service Framework for Renal Services, Part Two: Chronic Kidney Disease, Acute Renal Failure and End of Life Care" have been placed in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Road Traffic Offences Review

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Charles Clarke): I am today publishing a consultation paper setting out the Government's proposals for reform of the framework of offences dealing with bad driving, particularly where death or injury occurs.

Following a comprehensive review, announced by my predecessor, across the whole range of offences the paper puts forward for public consultation a set of proposals, some of them radical. Our aim is to put in place a sensible and effective framework to deal with this area of offending, which causes so much misery to individual victims and their families and which damages our communities at large.

We have made great advances in recent years in reducing deaths and injuries but if we are to continue to improve the safety of our roads we need to ensure that the criminal law plays an effective role. To neglect our duties to other road users by driving dangerously or carelessly so as to cause suffering to others is a serious crime and rightly perceived by the public as such. Too many people are seriously injured as a result and the consequences are all too often fatal. We have already increased the maximum penalty for the causing death offences to 14 years. We now propose a new offence of causing death by careless driving carrying a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment. We also propose an obligation on the courts to take injuries into account when sentencing for bad driving. In order to provide the courts with sufficient powers we also intend to implement the previously recommended increase in the maximum penalty for dangerous driving and aggravated vehicle taking from two to five years imprisonment.

Too many of those who have been disqualified from driving by a court or who drive without an appropriate licence put other road users at risk by taking a vehicle out on the road in clear breach of both the law and their responsibilities to other road users. It is right that a person who takes to the roads unlawfully in this manner should be held accountable for any untoward consequences that may result irrespective of the standard of the driving involved. Accordingly, we are proposing a new offence dealing with the fatal consequences of illegal driving of this kind with a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment.

The full proposals are set out in the consultation paper. We believe these should provide a solid and practicable basis for the courts more effectively to address offending of this kind and thereby help make our roads safer for all.

Copies of the consultation paper have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

Beagle 2

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): An inquiry was launched on 11 February 2004 by my noble Friend the Minister for Science and Technology and Jean-Jacques Dordain, director general of the European Space Agency (ESA), to investigate the circumstances and possible reasons that prevented completion of the Beagle 2 mission.

The report was always seen by BNSC and ESA as an internal inquiry. Its purpose was to learn lessons for the future. There were also concerns about the confidentiality of commercial information. The organisations involved were given a strong indication that the information they supplied was only for the use of the inquiry.

For these reasons the report was not published. ESA and the UK did however think it right that the recommendations of the report should be published as these covered the most important issues. The Science and Technology Select Committee was also confidentially given a copy of the full report.

Subsequently, in view of the Committee's strongly held view that the report should be published in full, we have discussed the issue again with ESA and have persuaded them that the report should be published. We have also had further discussions with the other organisations involved about now publishing the report and they are aware that the report is being published today. The contents of the report have not been agreed with the parties.

The report of the inquiry is today being placed on the BNSC website at http://www.bnsc.gov.uk/assets/channels/resources/press/report.pdf

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pension Credit

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Alan Johnson): I have today placed in the Library the quarterly progress report on the pension credit campaign, giving the numbers of households receiving pension credit overall, and broken down by guarantee and savings credit by Government office region and parliamentary constituency.

The figures show that there were 2.08 million households or 2.46 million individuals getting pension credit guarantee awards as at 31 December 2004. Definitive national statistics figures on pension credit take up will not be available for some time, but we estimate that that represents take-up in excess of 80 per cent.

As the Pensions Commission have noted, single women pensioners are poorer than single men of the same age, and I am particularly pleased therefore that the figures indicate as many as 90 per cent. of single women pensioners entitled to the guarantee credit are already receiving it.

Mainly as a result of higher than expected numbers taking up their guarantee credit entitlement, pension credit spending is projected to exceed £6 billion in 2004–05—higher than forecast in the last Budget.

The total number of households receiving pension credit at 31 December was 2.65 million, 3.22 million individuals. Between 1 October and 31 December around 30,000 additional households, 40,000 individuals, started to receive pension credit.

The average weekly award is £41.67 and 1.99 million households, 2.41 million individuals, are getting more money than was the case under the minimum income guarantee.

DEFENCE

Reserve Forces (Future Use)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): Building on the Defence White Paper "Delivering Security in a Changing World" (Cm 6041-I) and our experience in the use of reserves on operations, the Government are today announcing their vision for the future use of the reserve forces.

In recent years there has been a major strategic evolution in the way we use the reserves. We have moved from a large but little used reserve to a smaller, more effective one. Since 1995, the reserves have consistently provided 10 to 15 per cent. of the UK's manpower in the former Yugoslavia, they have been deployed to Afghanistan and, since January 2003, some 11,000 reservists have been mobilised to support Operation Telic. Our experience of these operations has shown that we need to define clearly the role of the reserve forces against the background of a changing modern world. The "Future Use of the UK's Reserve Forces" clearly spells out, therefore, the roles of the volunteer reserve forces, the regular reserve forces and the sponsored reserves.

In addition we recognise that without an effective three-way partnership between the MOD, reservists and employers, the reserve forces could not function to the best of their capability. The MOD is committed to supporting the development of these relationships and, building upon work already undertaken in this area, is introducing a number of aspirations as a means to strengthen them further. The document outlines our intent with regards to the way in which the reserve forces will be used, including greater voluntary constraints on use than exist within the relevant legislation. While these aspirations will always have to be balanced against operational need, they reflect our acute awareness of the disruption that mobilisation can cause and should reassure reservists and employers alike of our sensitivity to their circumstances. In so doing they also demonstrate our commitment to provide sustainable reserve forces capable of supporting operations into the future.

Copies of the document are being placed in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Working Holidaymaker Scheme

The Minister for Citizenship and Immigration (Mr. Desmond Browne): I am making changes to the working holidaymaker scheme in the context of the five-year plan announced to the House today. The main change for applicants is that we are strengthening the requirement that the work be done in support of holiday and travel intentions. It is anomalous that as a holiday and cultural exchange route it should not have attached to it any conditions that prevent migration based on long-term employment and other economic motives.

To this end we are restricting the total length of time that can be spent in employment under the scheme to 12 months out of a two-year stay. This 12 months in employment can, however, be aggregated in any combination of periods throughout the two years. It will be possible for highly skilled applicants to apply for work permits after 12 months. The ability of the UK to benefit from the skills and qualifications available within this group is therefore maintained. We are also prohibiting the use of this route as a means of bringing professional sports persons to the UK in order not to undermine the work being done to develop our own talented young people.

We are also changing the way in which the scheme itself is administered. In future it will operate on the basis of country-by-country bilateral arrangements. This means that we will be able to vary the arrangements with individual countries in the light of such things as degree of co-operation with our own immigration control and the capacity of our posts overseas to handle large numbers of applications. It therefore becomes a migration scheme to which access can be denied if a country fails to co-operate with our efforts to return their own nationals who have no basis of stay in the UK. However, the new scheme begins with no country being denied such access.

Immigration Rules and administration changes: New Charges

I am also making changes to the arrangements for processing immigration applications. Following on from the Home Office consultation document "Review of Charges for Immigration Applications", I am introducing new fees for a range of immigration applications. I am publishing a summary and analysis of the consultation responses, the supporting regulatory impact assessments and an analysis of the likely impact of the new charges on international student numbers. These documents are available on the Home Office website at: www.homeoffice.gov.uk.

The fees are part of a wider programme of reform—reflected in the five year strategy—to deliver a self-financing managed migration programme by 2008, which reduces reliance on the public purse, and which supports the modernisation of immigration services.

The fees being announced today will save the UK taxpayer in the region of £170 million in 2005–06. The income raised through the charges will benefit customers and the wider public. It will support ongoing investment in the managed migration system in which the public can have confidence; a system that delivers high quality decisions for applicants and tackles abuses quickly and robustly. Moreover, our customers will continue to see improvements in the service they receive. This will build on the modernisation programme already in train and which has seen the introduction of a premium, appointments-based service for people seeking a same-day decision; advertised service standards and performance monitoring; bespoke services for international students; and new methods of making payment for customers' convenience.

The Home Office consultation sought views on a number of proposals for ensuring the provision of managed migration services is fully funded in 2005. The Government are grateful to all those who responded. The proposals included an option requiring those who seek permission to remain in the UK to contribute towards the cost of providing an appeals system for unsuccessful applicants. The Government also sought the public's views on a proposal to require migrants to contribute towards the cost of enforcing the immigration system as part of the application fee.

The consultation responses demonstrated widespread opposition to the proposal to include the costs of enforcement activity in the application fee. The Government were persuaded by the argument that the general public benefit from the effective policing of the immigration service, as well as users of the service. As a result, the costs of enforcing the system have not been included in the application charges. This activity will continue to be funded through general taxation.

In 2005–06, the Government are proposing to recover the costs of running the appeals function for people seeking further leave to remain whilst in the UK through the application fee. Arrangements for family visitor appeals, announced in the five-year strategy, are not affected by this proposal. However, to support implementation of the five-year strategy, the Government are setting up a joint taskforce, with representatives from the education sector and other stakeholders, to review and consider restructuring the charging arrangements for leave to remain, including the funding of the appeals function, in line with cost recovery principles.

International students bring significant economic and social benefits to the UK. In recognition of this, students seeking to vary or extend their conditions of stay in the UK will be charged a reduced fee for postal applications. Our analysis, which is set out in the regulatory impact assessment published today, indicates that at the level proposed, the postal charges were unlikely to have a significant impact on the UK's ability to attract and retain international students. However, in order to ensure that remaining to study in the UK remains a competitive option, we have decided that charges should be at a lower rate of £250 for the standard postal service. The higher, premium fee is an optional service which students can take advantage of if they so choose.

Subject to Parliamentary approval, the following new charges will come into force from April 2005:

Application Type	Postal Service (£)	Premium Service (£)
Leave to Remain	335	500
Leave to Remain (Immigration Employment Document holders)	335	500

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

British Soldiers (Prosecutions)

The Solicitor-General (Ms Harriet Harman): My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has made the following ministerial statements, Official Report, Lords, 3 February 2005, column WS17, and Official Report, Lords, 4 February 2005, column WS 21:

"I undertook in my statement of 14 June 2004, Official Report, columns WS22–23 to inform the House by way of written statement when any further charges are laid against soldiers arising from incidents in Iraq.

The Army prosecuting authority has directed that seven individuals should stand trial by court martial for a joint offence of murder and a second joint charge contrary to section 70 of the Army Act of violent disorder contrary to section 2 of the Public Order Act 1986. The matter relates to the death of Mr. Nadhem Abdullah on 11 May 2003 in Al U'Zayra in southern Iraq, following an incident at the roadside. The seven charged with the offence were all members of the 3rd Battalion the Parachute Regiment at the time. The three men who have been directed to stand trial and who can be named are:

Corporal Scott Evans

Private William Nerney

Daniel Harding (now a civilian)

I will give the names of the remaining soldiers by written statement once they have been informed of the charges against them.

No date has yet been set for trial nor a preliminary hearing in this matter."

And;

"Further to my statement of 3 February 2005, Official Report, column WS17, two additional individuals have now been told of the charges they face. They are:

Private Samuel May

of the 3rd Battalion the Parachute Regiment, and former member of the same regiment:

Roberto Di-Gregorio (now a civilian)

The charges relate to an incident which allegedly took place on 11 May 2003 in Al U'Zayra in southern Iraq."

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Greater London Authority (General Grant)

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): Further to my previous statement on 2 December 2004, Official Report, column 50WS, I announce today that the Greater London authority general grant for 2005–06 has been determined at £37,493,000, after consultation with the Mayor of London.

GLA general grant is a block grant paid for the purposes of the authority and its functional bodies.

I would also like to draw the House's attention to a printing error that occurred in the Official Report in my previous statement. The correct figures for the GLA general grant for the following periods are as follows: £37,493,000—2005–06, £37,868,000—2006–07, and £38,243,000—2007–08. I am sorry for any confusion caused.

Firefighter Pensions

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Phil Hope): The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has today published a consultation document setting out proposals for new financial arrangements for firefighter pensions.

The firefighters pension scheme is currently financed on a "pay-as-you-go" system. This means that employees' contributions are paid into fire and rescue authorities' operating accounts from which pensions awards are made. Authorities receive funding from central Government to support pension payments as part of formula grant.

The current system for financing firefighter pensions can cause volatility in pension expenditure as a result of lump-sum retirement payments. It can also be difficult to establish what proportion of budget and council tax increases is the result of rising pension costs as opposed to the cost of running the service. Further, over time the forecast growth in pension costs would see pension expenditure rise as a proportion of authorities' budgets.

The new financial arrangements we are proposing are based on employer contributions and are similar to those used for other unfunded public service pension schemes such as those for teachers, civil servants, NHS staff and the armed forces.

The new arrangements would mean that employee contributions and a new employer's contribution would be paid into a new local pension account, from which pensions payments would be made. Government would make up the shortfall as necessary. At the outset, appropriate adjustments would be made in the level of grant so that neither local nor national taxpayers would be disadvantaged.

The new arrangements would be for both the existing and new firefighter pension schemes, but would have no impact on the terms and conditions of either scheme.

Consulting on these proposals is part of the Government's commitment to review the financial arrangements for firefighter pensions which was made in the 2003 White Paper "Our Fire and Rescue Service" and reiterated in 2004–05 and 2005–06 "Fire and Rescue National Frameworks".

Copies of the consultation document have been sent to fire and rescue service stakeholders, including chief fire officers, chairs of fire and rescue authorities, the LGA and the Fire Pensions Committee. The consultation period will be for twelve weeks and will close on 3 May 2005.

Copies of the 2005–06 "National Framework" are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

DEFENCE

Future Aircraft Carrier

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Geoffrey Hoon): I announced yesterday the selection of Kellogg Brown and Root (UK) Ltd. (KBR) as the preferred physical integrator for the future aircraft carrier (CVF) project. I am now able to provide further details.

The CVF alliance is based on best practice for the delivery of complex and major programmes in the commercial sector, including construction, oil and gas. Construction of the two biggest warships ever built in the UK is a massively complex project and a formidable challenge for British industry in both technical and managerial terms. Previous investigations have shown that no single company or shipbuilding facility in the UK has the skills or capacity to build the two ships on its own. The carriers will therefore need to be constructed at a number of different sites before transportation to a final integration facility; building and integrating them represents a major challenge which requires special project management skills. In discussion with our current alliance participants, BAE Systems and Thales UK, it was agreed that there was a need to appoint a company—as a risk-bearing member of the alliance—to strengthen our approach and introduce innovation to the manufacturing phase. This role has been termed the physical integrator (PI).

We will develop the precise role and responsibility of the PI in consultation with all alliance participants over the coming months—an approach that is consistent with alliancing best practice where each participant's work scope is agreed by the alliance to ensure that work is allocated to the company best able to deliver it in the most cost-effective manner. In broad terms, however, we anticipate that the preferred PI will be involved in developing the build strategy for the carriers.

We put in place a robust competitive exercise to select the preferred PI. A shortlist was produced of candidate companies likely to have the necessary skills and experience to undertake the PI role—Alstom Marine, AMEC, BAE Systems Naval Ships, Bechtel (UK), Kellogg Brown and Root Ltd. and Vosper Thornycroft. The requests for proposals issued to the companies in September 2004 set out our general requirements, the submission process and the evaluation criteria. A robust process was used to evaluate the proposals submitted. Each company was required to demonstrate its competence in a wide variety of areas including: successful delivery of projects that had demanding time, cost and performance targets; an ability to innovate to ensure that all opportunities for greater value for money could be addressed; and to demonstrate a breadth and depth of capability and capacity to manage complex programmes.

The result of the evaluation determined that Kellogg Brown and Root Ltd. was the strongest candidate. Kellogg Brown and Root is an established UK-based company which has demonstrated a proven track record of delivering bespoke, geographically spread and logistically complex construction projects; it also has experience of delivering UK MOD projects such as CONLOG, the heavy equipment transporters and temporarily deployable accommodation that were successfully used during Operation Telic. Kellogg Brown and Root Ltd. will also bring extensive experience of alliances from other sectors including oil and gas and infrastructure.

CVF represents a vast programme of work and overall should create or sustain up to 10,000 jobs in the UK. Kellogg Brown and Root Ltd. is likely to build up to a 50–60 strong team during the assessment phase, largely comprising existing members of that company who have off-shore experience. No final decision has been taken on build strategy but we still anticipate that, subject to value for money, the carriers will potentially be built by a combination of the four shipyards named in January 2003— BAE Systems naval ships at Govan, VT at Portsmouth, Swan Hunter on Tyneside and Babcock BBS at Rosyth. We would stress that decisions relating to the build strategy will be taken by the PI and the alliance as a whole—including BAE and Thales UK—with the customer i.e. the Ministry of Defence retaining a final veto.

Bringing the preferred PI into the CVF alliance before the main investment decision is a sensible de-risking measure that will facilitate the formulation of the optimum approach to the ship build of the carriers. Kellogg Brown and Root Ltd. will liaise with other alliance participants and work with all potential shipyards and other manufacturing facilities to propose a cost-effective approach to the manufacture of the vessels. This strategy will need to be agreed by all alliance participants including, ultimately, the Ministry of Defence. The MOD, as client, will retain the right to have the final say on all work allocation and selection decisions. Like all other alliance participants, Kellogg Brown and Root Ltd. will need to demonstrate satisfactory performance and appropriate alliancing behaviour throughout its appointment. We will now discuss the scope and value with the company before awarding an initial contract to KBR for assessment phase work, which is expected to be of a value of around £5 million. This represents a firm commitment to the alliance approach for delivering the carriers and is an important step forward both for the programme and the CVF alliance.

We will continue to engage with our industrial participants over the coming months as we meld the PI role into the alliance, and the detailed role and responsibilities of all parties are agreed. We are confident that this is the correct decision and remain committed to the alliance approach, which represents the best route for providing our armed forces with the equipment promised to them by our target in-service dates of 2012 and 2015. We also remain fully committed to an approach which delivers maximum benefits for UK industry.

HEALTH

Food Standards Agency (Annual Report 2003–04)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Miss Melanie Johnson): The Food Standard Agency's annual report and accounts 2003–04 was laid before Parliament today.

Copies will be placed in the Library.

Care Services (Regulatory Fees)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Dr. Stephen Ladyman): Increased fees for registration and inspection will be charged by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) and the Healthcare Commission from April 2005. These are set out in the table. The fees for CSCI are subject to an across-the-board increase of 20 per cent. over 2004–05 levels. The fees for the Healthcare Commission are subject to variable increases for different services: registration fees are subject to an across-the- board increase of 50 per cent. increases in inspection fees range from 20 per cent. to 55 per cent. over 2004–05 levels.

It is the Government's firm policy that we should move to a position where the recurrent costs of providing regulation are fully recovered from service providers. The fee increases for 2005–06 are part of this process.

The Government are tackling the issue of how much regulation costs overall, and this will ultimately limit what providers will pay in future. We are also working with the inspectorates to ensure regulatory services are provided as cost effectively as possible and working with public commissioners of care to ensure they understand regulatory costs are a legitimate part of the cost of providing care and need to be reflected in fees.

Individual letters are being sent to all providers of care services regulated by CSCI and the Healthcare Commission to notify them about the increases.

DEFENCE

Project ISOLUS

The Minister of State, Ministry of Defence (Mr. Adam Ingram): The Ministry of Defence has today responded to the recommendations that arose from the public consultation to consider the outline proposals from industry for the interim storage of radioactive material from decommissioned and defuelled nuclear powered submarines under Project ISOLUS. The response, which reflects the thoughts of other Government Departments and devolved administrations, considers each of the 50 consultation recommendations and provides a broad, common theme overview. It is available on the Department's ISOLUS website and the Lancaster university website, and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

The consultation that gave rise to the recommendations was carried out between September and December 2003 by the Centre for the Study of Environmental Change at Lancaster University on behalf of the Ministry of Defence. I am very grateful for the work that the University carried out on our behalf, and I would particularly like to thank those members of the public and stakeholders for their contribution.

We undertook to listen to what they said and our response reflects this. In particular, we recognise that future ISOLUS considerations of potential interim storage sites should closely align with the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management (CoRWM) deliberations on options for a long-term radioactive waste management solution for the UK, which are expected to be available to Government in 2006. Accordingly, no further work will be carried out under Project ISOLUS on the potential interim storage sites already named or to identify other potential interim storage sites, until CoRWM has made its recommendations to Government.

In the meantime, work under ISOLUS will concentrate on technical studies aimed at identifying and assessing the various options for dismantling submarine hulls and isolating the irradiated metal.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Tsunami

The Secretary of State for International Development (Hilary Benn): I would like to update the House on the United Kingdom's response to the Indian Ocean earthquake and tsunami that has taken some 290,000 lives. All Members of the House will wish to express once more their sincere condolences to the families of those who have lost their lives, and to all those who have suffered injury and continue to suffer in the aftermath of this disaster, both here in the UK and in the region.

On 6 and 7 January, I was in Indonesia and saw the devastation first hand. Homes, agricultural land, fishing fleets, businesses and jobs were destroyed along the coast for some 300 to 400 kilometres. Basic public services had largely collapsed. The population was deeply traumatized. The following day, I visited Batticaloa on the east coast of Sri Lanka, where I visited a school building housing over 1,000 people. Most had lost some or all of their family. Along the coastline brick buildings, two layers thick, had been flattened. I met crews from the Royal Navy ships Chatham and Diligence, who had been pumping out wells polluted by seawater, putting up tents and clearing rubble. Despite the enormity of the tragedy and the immense challenge before them, the determination shown by Government, local officials and relief organizations in both Indonesia and Sri Lanka, and the region more widely, was exceptional.

In Indonesia, the reported number of deaths, including missing, is 237,071. 617,000 people have been displaced, of whom 416,438 are located in 66 camps in Aceh province. 127,300 houses have been completely destroyed and a further 151,000 suffered over 50 per cent. damage.

Immediate relief needs are being met; but we must continue to guard against the outbreak of disease, provide shelter and ensure continued access to affected areas. The coordination and distribution of aid have steadily improved and the emphasis is now moving from the use of military to civilian capacity. Planning for recovery and reconstruction programmes has already begun.

The United Nations is assessing needs in terms of shelter and restoring people's means of earning a living. A measles vaccination campaign covering 78,000 children is under way; and an early warning health surveillance system has been established for Aceh Province, in the north-west of Sumatra. The World Health Organisation reports no serious outbreaks of disease. The United Nations are also setting up nutrition surveillance for 790,000 people requiring continuing food assistance.

In Sri Lanka, there were 30,974 reported deaths and 5,637 people are missing. 23,176 people suffered injury. 553,287 people have been displaced of whom 141,985 are in 315 camps. The relief effort is phasing down as the focus moves to recovery programmes, although some pockets of need persist. The number of displaced camps in schools has decreased from 169 to 153.

We welcome the continuing ceasefire in Sri Lanka and hope that all parties will work together following the disaster. It would be a tribute to those who died or suffered loss if some lasting good came of this tragedy. We welcome the Sri Lankan President's commitment to ensure that all affected areas of the country will be treated equally in the relief effort. During my visit to Sri Lanka, I met local government officials and Members of Parliament and stressed the importance of ensuring assistance gets to all those in need. DFID officials have met regularly with Sri Lankan Government officials about the needs and priorities for the delivery of humanitarian assistance, and continue to monitor the situation. DFID's assistance has been reaching both Tamil and Singhalese areas in proportion to their needs. The United Nations has commented that the relief effort in Tamil areas has been impressive.

The number of dead in India is reported as 16,389. 647,599 people were displaced. On the Indian mainland, the relief effort is now complete and support to affected populations is in the recovery stage. We are assisting a number of non-governmental organisations to provide shelter and help restore people's means of earning a living.

In the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, temporary shelter is being provided while permanent housing plans are worked out. There are 10,842 people in camps. Little Andaman suffered extensive damage. A non-governmental organisation Coordinating Committee has been established and aid groups are preparing support.

There were 82 deaths and 26 missing reported in the Maldives. 21,663 people were displaced. In the Maldives, recovery programmes are under way. Following an assessment, we are helping displaced people by providing equipment to help build shelter and two landing craft to speed up access to the many islands in the Archipelago. International volunteer doctors are supporting the country's health services. Vaccines have been delivered for the first round of 2005 Expanded Programme of Immunisation campaigns for all children up to two years old. The World Food Programme indicates that 29,000 people would benefit from food assistance until employment schemes begin.

Of the other affected countries in the region, Thailand suffered 5,393 deaths and a further 3,071 are missing; Burma 61 deaths and 10 missing; and Malaysia 68 deaths and 12 missing. Burma also has 3,200 displaced people. These nations did not seek international assistance. Seychelles and Somalia were also affected. The Seychelles did not suffer many casualties but has experienced substantial damage to infrastructure and to private housing. The Government and other national agencies have taken steps to assist those who were affected and support is also being provided through the United Nations Flash Appeal. In Somalia, reports suggest that around 150 people died and 18,000 households were directly affected. Humanitarian agencies already in the country responded quickly to provide immediate assistance. The United Nations and the Somali Emergency Disaster Response Group are leading the relief effort.

Since first news of the disaster on 26 December 2004, a massive international relief effort has been under way. I would like to pay tribute to the extraordinary generosity of the British people. The response to the Disasters Emergency Committee (DEC) appeal has been magnificent. The sums raised will benefit many thousands of those affected for years to come. DFID has maintained close contact with the DEC and other non-governmental organizations throughout the past six weeks and we will work with them so that the funds available are used effectively.

DFID has already allocated some £50 million of the £75 million to specific activities in support of the relief effort. On the first day, we dispatched our own assessment team to the affected area as well as providing experts for the United Nations assessment and coordination teams. The following day, we sent the first of a series of relief flights, taking tents and tarpaulins to Sri Lanka. Every day since has brought more money and help. Worldwide, the United Nations reports that up to £2.14 billion has been pledged to help those in need. Its Flash appeal for $977 million is already 93 per cent. covered. We have pledged £40 million to this appeal.

The UK's immediate assistance helped to provide food, shelter, medical care, water and proper sanitation, and we are now helping to establish recovery programmes. The relief phase in most places is well resourced and under control. We have supported United Nations agencies, the Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, international and local non-governmental organisations, and we have given direct help to address urgent needs identified by the affected governments or the United Nations. We have provided a range of logistical assets, including equipment, vehicles, airlift capacity and helicopters to help deliver assistance. This included crucial support to Indonesia, the Maldives and Sri Lanka by the British military, using naval ships and RAF aeroplanes. Full details of the support we are providing are reported on the DFID website at www.dfid.gov.uk.

The European Commission responded promptly to the Indian Ocean disaster, immediately releasing £2 million. They have now allocated over £84 million to support the relief effort. The United Kingdom's share of this commitment is over £14 million.

It is clear there has to be an Indian Ocean early warning system. On 19 January, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development attended the World Disaster Reduction Conference in Kobe, Japan, which discussed the setting up of a global warning system covering all natural hazards, and all countries by June 2007. The Association of South East Asian Nations agreed at a ministerial meeting on 28–29 January in Thailand that the countries in the region should lead on establishing an early warning system and that the system should warn against tropical storms as well as tsunamis. The United Nations will lead on coordination and UNESCO International Oceanographic Commission on the early warning mechanism. The European Commission has committed £1.4 million to this project.

In addition to the immediate relief, the Government will also make a significant contribution to the longer-term reconstruction and rehabilitation of the regions devastated by the tsunami. We will follow the lead of the governments concerned in order to ensure that our contribution is part of a properly coordinated and effective reconstruction plan. We are therefore waiting until the governments have finalised their assessments of what will be required, which they are putting together with the support of the World Bank. Our main concern will be to ensure that assistance meets the basic needs of poor people and restores their means of earning a living. We will use our position as G8 and later European Union President to ensure that the governments concerned have the support and funding that they need in building a better future for all those who were affected by this terrible disaster.

Finally, I wish to pay tribute to all those individuals in DFID and in other Government Departments, and in the large number of UK relief agencies, for their dedication, professionalism and commitment in responding to this terrible tragedy.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

BNFL (US Nuclear Clean-up Contracts)

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (Ms Patricia Hewitt): Yesterday the DTI and BNFL reached an agreement with the US Department of Energy (DoE) on BNFL Inc.'s loss-making contracts at the East Tennessee technology park and the advanced mixed waste treatment plant in Idaho.

Under the terms of the deal the Idaho facility will transfer from BNFL Inc. to US DoE ownership in May and is subject to BNFL Inc. meeting a number of preconditions, which the board are confident of achieving. Agreement has also been reached on a defined date for the completion of the East Tennessee contract and the expedited settlement of numerous outstanding claims on both contracts. As a result BNFL Inc. will receive between $500 million and $550 million from DoE once the Idaho facility transfers.

The deal provides real benefits to both BNFL and DoE. In addition to the immediate cash receipts, BNFL will eliminate its considerable exposure to further losses on these contracts while DoE will be able to pursue its overall clean-up programme more effectively. Both sides have avoided a protracted, costly and uncertain legal dispute over the outstanding claims.

The agreement also enables the fulfilment of one of the main recommendations of the 2003 joint strategy review of BNFL (the results of which I announced to the House on 11 December 2003, Official Report, columns 92–93WS). The elimination of the ongoing risk will enable BNFL Inc. to refocus on pursuing lower-risk opportunities in line with that strategy. BNFL Inc. is a wholly owned US subsidiary of BNFL.

CABINET OFFICE

Public Bodies' Database

The Minister for the Cabinet Office (Mr. David Miliband): I am pleased to announce that today the Cabinet Office is launching its new "Public Bodies' Database", to replace the previous annual publication. It can be found on the Civil Service website at:

http://www.knowledgenetwork.gov.uk/ndpb/ndpb.nsf

The database lists the public bodies sponsored by central government, with contact details, information about their remit and about the membership of their boards. The figures are broken down between male and female members for individual bodies, and summaries are provided at departmental level for the proportions of board members who have declared they have a disability or come from a minority ethnic background.

The database also includes information about the government's taskforces, ad-hoc advisory groups and reviews, giving a more complete picture of the bodies and groups working to deliver the Government's objectives.

Initially it contains data as at 31 March 2004, consistent with previous years' publications. A selection of statistical reports is available now, and enhanced reports will become available in due course. Users who wish to print out an individual record will be able to do so using standard internet print facilities. We will place a complete printout of the database contents in the parliamentary Libraries as soon as the full range of data is available and validated; and make a portable document format (.pdf) file of that available for public download from the website.

TREASURY

Finance Bill Measures

The Paymaster General (Dawn Primarolo): The Government are taking action which will be effective from today to prevent tax avoidance by companies in three areas:

claims to excessive double taxation relief;

use by companies of capital redemption bonds to generate artificial losses; exploitation of the loss buying rules.

Double Taxation Relief

A recent decision by the special commissioners on the detailed application of the double taxation rules has the effect of putting a significant amount of tax at risk. The Government are taking action from today to ensure that tax is not lost through avoidance schemes that would seek to exploit the decision. Today's announcement will only apply to those who take part in deliberate tax avoidance. This action will not affect those who conduct their affairs on normal commercial principles.

From today, tax avoidance schemes that are put in place deliberately to create foreign tax credits to reduce total tax liabilities will be blocked. The amount of credit for any foreign tax paid on or after today's date will be limited to the amount of UK tax on the profits (if any) arising from the transactions making up the avoidance scheme.

Corporate Capital Redemption bonds

A number of avoidance schemes have been disclosed to the Inland Revenue which aim to generate capital losses using corporate capital redemption bonds. From today, where one of these bonds is disposed of by a company, no capital loss can arise.

Loss Buying

Further disclosures under the new disclosure rules introduced in the Finance Act 2004 mean that the Government will close a loophole which allows certain losses to be carried forward despite the obvious intention of Parliament that they should not be. From today, where there is a change in ownership of a company that would otherwise cause the loss buying rules to operate, any non-trading loss on debt allocated to the period ending before the change will not be carried forward to a post-change period.

Legislation will be included in the Finance Bill to stop these avoidance schemes. Further details about each of the proposals and draft clauses which cover corporate capital redemption bonds and the loss buying changes are available on the Inland Revenue website.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Election Expenses

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Christopher Leslie): The Government have laid before Parliament the following instrument:

The Representation of the People (Variation of Limits of Candidates' Elections Expenses) Order 2005

This order reflects The Electoral Commission's recommendations of 12 January 2005 on the maximum amounts of candidates' election expenses at a parliamentary general election in the United Kingdom and at local government elections in England and Wales, as detailed in their report: "Variation of election expenses limits for candidates at UK parliamentary and local government elections".

The recommendations have been agreed by both the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs and the First Secretary of State in respect of their separate and distinct responsibilities for electoral matters. The Department for Constitutional Affairs broadly takes responsibility for national issues, in particular parliamentary and European parliamentary elections. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister broadly takes responsibility for local election matters.

DEFENCE

War Pensions (Gulf Veterans)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): At Defence Questions on 29 November 2004, Official Report, column 354, I announced that the Ministry of Defence would investigate the rejections of war pension cases referred to by Lord Lloyd of Berwick in his report into Gulf veterans' illnesses which was published on 17 November 2004.

One of the recommendations referred to: "Some 272 claimants who have had their claims rejected [and] should have those claims reviewed in the light of this report". Of these cases, more than half related to diagnosed disorders such as traumatic physical injuries, low back pain, or coronary disease which we would expect to find in any group of service personnel and which certainly do not relate to anything that might be construed as a "Gulf war illness". This investigation therefore concentrated on the remaining 100 or so cases that may or do relate to Gulf veterans' illnesses.

This work is now complete and revealed some form of irregularity in six of the 110 cases. Otherwise, procedures on claims, reviews and appeals have been properly followed, and the outcomes reflect the evidence and contemporary understanding, and would not have been affected by subsequent developments in the understanding of symptoms and illnesses occurring amongst Gulf veterans. In considering the rate of irregularities, account needs to be taken of the complexity of many claims from Gulf veterans, often involving multiple conditions or symptoms and repeated requests for the addition of further conditions.

One involved a procedural error, involving failure to implement a decision that the individual was suffering from an illness attributable to service in the Gulf. Arrangements are being made to pay the arrears as soon as is practicable.

One claim was wrongly rejected.

In the other four cases the claim was only partly answered—the decisions made did not cover the full range of conditions and symptoms claimed, all of which related to service in the Gulf.

In all these cases, the relevant decisions are being formally reviewed and will be notified to the claimant, with an appropriate notice of award or rejection. Any decision taken on review will carry a full right of appeal.

I am today placing copies of this report in the Library of the House. It is also being placed on Ministry of Defence websites at:

www.veteransagency.mod.uk and www.gulfwar.mod.uk

National Employer Advisory Board

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr. Ivor Caplin): Following an open competition which attracted a strong field of applicants, I am pleased to advise the House of the appointment of eight new members and the reappointment of two members to the National Employer Advisory Board (NEAB).

The new members are:

Mr. David Amos
Viscount Brookeborough
Mr. David Frost
Mr. John Hazelwood
Miss Delva Patman
Mr. Gordon Scott
Dr. Bill Speirs
Mr. David Yeandle

The reappointments are:

Mrs. Susan Anderson
Mr. Hew Balfour

They join the other five members of the board, which is chaired by the noble Lord Glenarthur, and which continues to provide appropriate support in conjunction with the SaBRE campaign to reservists and their employers. I take this opportunity to thank NEAB for its work which is very much appreciated by the Ministry of Defence.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Rateable Value Limit (Small Businesses)

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): One of the consequences of the 2005 non-domestic rate revaluation, which comes into effect on 1 April, is that certain thresholds linked to rateable value limits also have to be raised so that small businesses are not disadvantaged.

I am therefore announcing today that we intend to raise the annual rateable value limit below which the owners of small businesses can serve blight notices and claim other types of compulsory purchase compensation. The limit was previously raised to £24,600 at the time of the 2000 revaluation, and it will now be raised to £29,200 from 1 April 2005. This reflects the changes in rateable values between 2000 and 2005, so that businesses that are currently eligible to serve a blight notice will continue to be able to do so when the new rating lists come into effect.

The same threshold also applies for businesses claiming compensation for loss of value under part I of the Land Compensation Act 1973 when their premises are affected by physical factors such as noise, vibration, fumes and artificial lighting from new public works such as highways and aerodromes.

This threshold also applies under the 1973 Act to enable proprietors aged at least 60 to claim disturbance compensation on the basis of the total extinguishment of their business when they are subject to a compulsory purchase order. This allows claimants of that age to retire if they do not want to re-establish their business elsewhere.

The statutory instrument necessary to achieve the change to the rateable value limit will be laid before Parliament shortly, in order for it to come into force on 1 April.

Decisions and Fees Timetable

The Minister for Housing and Planning (Keith Hill): I have made the 4th commencement order to commence powers in the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 and today laid the Town and Country Planning (Timetable for Decisions) (England) Order 2005. Yesterday I laid amendments to the Town and Country Planning (Fees for Applications and Deemed Applications) Regulations 1989.

The commencement order commences the timetabling provisions contained in section 55 of the Act. Schedule 2 of the Act requires the Secretary of State to make timetables for called-in planning applications and planning appeals recovered for his decision, and enables him to specify decisions, or descriptions of decisions, to which a timetable is not to apply.

The order clarifies the range of cases which will require the Secretary of State to set a timetable for issuing a decision. This will provide a greater degree of certainty for developers, local authorities and all those involved in planning decisions, as to when the Secretary of State will make a decision. The order will come into force on 1 April 2005, and will apply to cases where an inquiry or hearing closed on or after that date, or where a site visit was held after that date.

I am also introducing a draft instrument to implement increases to planning fees. This instrument makes amendments to the Town and Country Planning (Fees for Applications and Deemed Applications) Regulations 1989, which are themselves made under section 303 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990. The instrument has been laid under the affirmative resolution and will be debated in both Houses, subject to approval the changes will take effect from 1 April 2005.

The Government's purpose in bringing forward this instrument is that fees should rise to provide sufficient financial resources for the planning service and to meet more fully the costs of handling planning applications. The increases will be across the board, but will be higher for the largest applications. A fee for a householder extension will rise from £110 to £135, while the maximum fee for a major development of houses will increase from £11,000 to £50,000. These increases are based on independent research carried out by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, which established that the costs of determining planning applications were considerably higher than existing fees.

Temporary Stop Notice

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (Yvette Cooper): My right hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning has made the 4th Commencement Order to bring into force provisions in the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004, and the Town and Country Planning (Temporary Stop Notice) (England) Regulations 2005 which have been laid before Parliament today.

The commencement order includes the temporary stop notice (TSN) provisions contained in section 52 of the Act. The TSN regulations have been subject to consultation.

The Act gives local planning authorities a new power to issue a TSN when unauthorised development commences to require the immediate cessation of a breach of planning control for a limited period of 28 days. TSNs can be used to impose a freeze on further unauthorised development. This will help to speed up the process of enforcement. TSNs provide local planning authorities with an additional enforcement tool to deal with a range of planning breaches.

The effect of the TSN regulations is to provide that those in caravans should be treated in the same way as those in buildings under normal circumstances. They can also be used exceptionally, where the risk of harm is so great as to require the immediate removal of caravans from the land.

The TSN Regulations will come into force on 7 March the same day as section 52 of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004. We shall also publish a circular setting out more detailed guidance on the use of the temporary stop notice provisions, and the circumstances in which they can be used.

Natural Environment and Rural Communities Draft Bill

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Margaret Beckett): As the next major step in delivering the radical reforms set out in the Government's rural strategy 2004, a draft Natural Environment and Rural Communities Bill has been published today. Copies are available in the Vote Office and the Libraries of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Assets Recovery Agency

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Caroline Flint): I am announcing today amended guidance to the director of the Assets Recovery Agency which came into being as a result of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002.

Under the Proceeds of Crime Act the director must exercise her functions in the way which she considers is best calculated to contribute to the reduction of crime. In considering this, she must have regards to guidance given to her by me. The guidance to the director broadly sets out the way in which the agency must operate. This includes a set "hierarchy" in the way the different schemes for recovering the proceeds of crime interrelate; pursuing criminal conviction first with a consequential confiscation order, if that is not possible considering civil recovery, and if that is not viable, pursuing taxation proceedings. This refers equally to both investigations and proceedings.

The guidance guarantees that civil recovery and taxation will not become an easy option for the Assets Recovery Agency to pursue at the expense of criminal prosecution. Criminal investigations and proceedings remain the prime focus and objective.

However, the fact that the agency cannot commence any investigation into civil recovery until prosecution is ruled out has a detrimental effect on their operational capability and hinders their effectiveness in reducing crime. This is because the period of time between being able to apply the different schemes is one in which assets can be can be dissipated before the scheme is able to be enforced. This defeats the purpose of the Act and Government to recover the proceeds of crime. An example of the benefit would be in high risk prosecutions, where ARA are presently precluded any civil recovery action until the prosecution has failed, with the consequent risk of assets coming out of criminal restraint and being dissipated before they can begin civil recovery action.

The guidance is therefore amended to allow the Assets Recovery Agency to pursue civil recovery or taxation investigations in parallel with criminal investigations and proceedings. This will ensure that, where necessary, civil recovery or taxation proceedings can commence immediately after a criminal matter has concluded. The priority will remain criminal prosecution and investigation in the first instance. However the Assets Recovery Agency would become more effective at reducing crime and removing the proceeds of criminality if they were able to operate under the proposed guidance. I would add that my hon. and learned friend the Attorney-General, has been consulted, through the legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, and is content with the proposed amendments to the guidance.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Guyana Floods

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for International Development (Mr. Gareth Thomas): Unprecedented rainfall in the last two months has caused serious flooding in large areas of Guyana's coastal regions. Rainfall for the first two weeks of January was five times the normal monthly average. Some 39 per cent. of the population of Guyana are estimated to have been affected. The worst affected area is along the East Coast from Mahaica to Georgetown, where 172,020 people have been severely affected. Reports indicate 27 deaths associated with the flooding to date, but there are no fully reliable figures at this time. It would be surprising if the figure remained this low— aside from the risk of more flooding we must be prepared for very serious health challenges as the waters recede.

The Government's civil defence/emergency stocks had been exhausted through Guyana's assistance to Grenada (following Hurricane Ivan) and not replenished. Given the scale of the disaster, the Government have responded as well as could be expected in the circumstances. Systematic assessments of the population's needs are underway by the UN and civil society. These should establish prioritised needs and a division of responsibility around who can fund and deliver relief against these needs. This process should also improve quality of information on the extent and impact of the disaster.

The Government have responded to the emergency by setting up temporary shelter in schools and other public buildings, as well as providing food and potable water. Currently, there are about 1,695 people living in 17 shelters. The World Food Programme (WFP) estimates that 3,200 families are in need of food. WFP's food supplies can provide food to 2,000 families for one month. The remaining 1,200 families are being covered from other sources, but supplies to these families are not as secure over the longer term. Evacuation points have been identified, and at least three, which are already established military camps, will not need much to get them operational. However, it is not clear how many people these camps could take.

DFID's immediate bilateral support was to provide £20,000 directly to the Government's relief effort. We also provided £80,000 to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) for their delivery of emergency supplies, including water and environmental sanitation (WES) kits, and survival items such as blankets and treated mosquito nets.

I spoke to President Jagdeo on the 27 January 2005, and expressed our support for the Government and people of Guyana at this trying time. On 31 January, I approved an increase of our bilateral contribution from this initial £100,000 by a further £180,000. This provided £120,000 for the deployment of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution's (RNLI) rapid response team of six boats and 20 crew and personnel. They arrived in Guyana on Wednesday 2 February and will help ease the problems in distribution highlighted in the available assessment reports. We will also supply £57,000 to support the Pan American Health Organisation's (PAHO) water and sanitation action plans, which will achieve security of water quality for up to 195,000 people (35,000 households). The Pan American Health Organisation will also be tackling the problem of the disposal of human waste. On 8 February 2005, the United Nations launched a flash appeal for Guyana of approximately £1.6 million. DFID will continue to assess whether there is a case for further support to the relief effort, specifically in the areas of water and sanitation, and public health. We have budgeted a small amount—£10,000—for strengthening relief co-ordination.

The EU Delegation has announced the release of a total of €1.7million to the relief effort. €700,000 from European Development Fund resources; €500,000 to Oxfam for water and sanitation work and €200,000 to the Pan American Health Organisation for medical supplies and emergency health assistance (the UK's share of EDF is calculated at 12.7 per cent. giving a total here of £61,163). €1 million has been provided from the General Budget.: €650,000 for the International Federation of the Red Cross for food including the cost of transport; €350,000 yet to be allocated, (the UK's share of the EU's budget funds is calculated at 18 per cent. giving a total here of £123,839). In all, the UK has provided 185,002 to the emergency in Guyana through the EU.

In addition to our humanitarian relief, the President asked for DFID's help in reorienting the Government's programmes with the international financial institutions to deal with long term needs for infrastructure rehabilitation and livelihood recovery schemes. Once the immediate emergency has passed, DFID will liaise with the Government of Guyana and its international partners on these matters. Flood-impact on rice and sugar crops will have implications for growth, debt and poverty reduction in Guyana. A team from the World Bank has just completed its initial assessment and expects to circulate a report on 15 February 2005. The UN Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), will provide a more detailed assessment of the socio-economic impact of the floods by early March.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Paramilitary Activity (IMC Report)

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Paul Murphy): On 3 February 2004 I received a report from the independent monitoring commission (IMC), made under articles 4 and 7 of the international agreement that established the commission.

The report covers the robbery at the headquarters of the Northern Bank in Belfast on 20 December 2004 and puts it into the context of what the commission believes are related incidents. It was submitted to the British and Irish Governments under article 4c of the agreement, which enables the commission to report on an ad hoc basis. Having considered the contents of the report, I am today putting it before Parliament and I have placed copies in the Libraries of both Houses.

The IMC report concludes that the Northern Bank robbery was planned and undertaken by the Provisional IRA. The commission also concludes that PIRA was responsible for a number of other robberies which are listed in the report.

The IMC concludes that Sinn Fein must bear its share of responsibility for the incidents mentioned in the report.

The commission has said that if the Northern Ireland Assembly was now sitting, they would be recommending the implementation of the full range of measures referred to in the relevant legislation including the exclusion of members of Sinn Fein from holding political office. In the context of suspension they recommend that I should consider exercising the powers I have to apply financial penalties to Sinn Fein.

I am grateful to the commission for their timely submission of this report and for its careful analysis. I shall now consider carefully the commission's recommendations. I plan to make a further statement to the House in the week of 21 February.

TRANSPORT

Rail Spending

The Secretary of State for Transport (Mr. Alistair Darling): In the "Future of Transport" White Paper published in July, (Cm 6233, available from the House of Commons Library), we set out how the Government will respond to the factors that shape travel over the long-term, and the resources being made available to support its strategy.

The 2004 spending review settlement has provided the Department with almost £15 billion to spend on the railways over its three year period. This is an increase of £1.9 billion over previously published plans, averaging at 15 per cent. per year.

This statement sets out how the Department for Transport intends to allocate this money on the railways until April 2009, which is the end of the current control period for rail.

Department for Transport (all figures £m at cash prices)

	2005–06	2006–07	2007–08	2008–09

CTRL	1,387	1,181	180	93
Total Rail	4,557	5,810	4,588	4,392

[1] This reflects the enhancements that are directly funded on a 'pay-as-you-go' basis by DfT/SRA, as opposed to those enhancements that are funded through Network Rail.

[2] Expenditure on Other includes, inter alia, support for Merseyrail, rail pensions, the British Transport Police, research and project development, as well as running costs currently incurred by the SRA.

The above figures include funds which will be transferred to the Scottish Executive for rail spending in Scotland, details of which were provided by the Minister for Transport in his written Statement to the House on 27 January 2005.

The balance between Network Grant and Government Support to Franchises is not precisely fixed and will be subject to ORR approval. The result of any ORR approval to any increased enhancement expenditure by Network Rail will be to increase their level of borrowing.

As can be seen, Government commitments to the passenger railway are significantly higher after 2005–06, owing to increases in Network Grant and support to franchises. This largely reflects trends in Network Rail income and the increased investment now going into the railway coupled with the significant decreases in the amount of new borrowing by Network Rail.

Funding for CTRL reflects the profile of our payments under the contracts with the CTRL promoter.

Our spend will enable the Government to deliver their commitments to complete a broad range of plans. These include the completion of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link, and through Network Rail, the modernisation of the West Coast Main Line. We will also complete the Mark I rolling stock replacement programme which is bringing some 2,000 new vehicles on to the network.

The spending review outcome allows the Department to support the regulator's interim review funding for Network Rail, (published in December 2003 and March 2004, available from the House of Commons Library), as shown in the following table:

Network Rail (all figures £m at cash prices)[2]

Total application of funds	6,905	6,285	6,252	5,985

[2] DfT analysis based on ORR Interim Review.

The balance between Network Grant and Access Charges is not precisely fixed and will be subject to ORR approval. The result of any ORR approval to any increased enhancement expenditure by Network Rail will be to increase their level of borrowing.

These figures show Network Rail progressing towards much greater financial stability. In particular, its need for additional borrowing will decline dramatically in 2006–07 and continue to reduce until the end of the current control period.

Network Rail is funded through Network Grant, paid direct by Government; access charges paid for use of the network by private train and freight operating companies; and other income from activities such as property and retail. In the current year it is forecast that 47 per cent. of Network Rail funding will be from the Public Sector, and 53 per cent. from the Private Sector (44 per cent. from train operating companies and 9 per cent. other income, including freight access charges).

Network Rail also has the capacity to borrow. As at September 2004 Network Rail reported a net debt of £14.3 billion.

The interim review by the rail regulator, and supported by the Government's spending plans, ties Network Rail into achieving efficiency savings of some 30 per cent. by 2009. Nevertheless, its plans for the four year period in the above table include the replacement of 3,360 km of rail, the renewal of 2,900 km of sleepers and the reduction of train delay minutes by 26 per cent.

The Government's plans provide the best opportunity in a generation to achieve a stable and sustainable funding position for the national railway. In particular, they see rapid investment by Network Rail on infrastructure renewal and investment, delivering on a range of planned projects, improving reliability, and putting right decades of neglect on the basis of properly funded proposals.

Realising this stability in the medium term will require careful control of costs, particularly over the coming spending review period. In addition to the 30 per cent. efficiency savings, Network Rail will need to retain a focus first and foremost on the renewal and modernisation of the existing network and demonstrate its improved efficiency before looking at any wide-ranging enhancement programmes. Efficiencies will be required as much on the franchising side as from Network Rail—and the costs of rolling stock remain an important part of the equation.

But, the provisions of the Railways Bill currently passing through Parliament will enable the Government to fulfil its White Paper commitments, delivering better cost control and greater efficiency. The spending review settlement will enable the Government to tackle the decades of underinvestment and put the railways on a secure footing for the future.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 21 and 22 December 2004; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [209495]

Margaret Beckett: My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary and I represented the UK at a meeting of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council in Brussels on 21–22 December 2004. Fisheries Ministers from Scotland and Northern Ireland were also present.

The main items for decision were on fisheries. The Council agreed on Total Allowable Catches and quotas for 2005 and on related measures. Much of the discussion at Council centred on the need for further measures to protect depleted cod stocks.

The Commission had proposed a series of closed areas in the North Sea. Ministers, however, were not convinced of the case for the Commission's proposal which would have significant impact on the fishing industry but without clear benefit for the North Sea cod stock. The UK believes that closed areas have a part to play in fisheries management and we indicated at the Council that we would be willing to consider more radical measures, including closed areas, if the scientific advice on the state of stocks justified such an approach.

The Council agreed a general reduction in fishing days within the North Sea, west of Scotland, and Eastern Channel to protect cod stocks. However, in recognition of the role that large mesh gear plays in reducing catches of juvenile fish, the Council agreed that fishermen using mesh of 120 mm mesh should receive an extra day, subject to administrative sanctions for infringements. The UK's mixed cod/haddock/whiting fleet already uses 120 mm and will, therefore continue to be able to fish for 15 days per month as soon as the new arrangements are in place.

The Council also agreed to implement UK proposals for improved controls to ensure that illegal landings do not undermine cod recovery and for scientific monitoring of discarding. The European Commission will present detailed proposals to improve control and enforcement in early 2005.

The Council agreed to apply days at sea limits to the western Channel to protect the sole stock. Fishermen fishing with beam trawls or fixed nets will be restricted to 20 days fishing in the area per month.

Ministers agreed that the closure to demersal fishing of an area to the West of Scotland (the 'windsock' closure) should continue in the same form as in 2004. For the sixth successive year, there will be a closure on the western Irish Sea in the spring to protect the spawning stock. The UK reached a bilateral agreement with Ireland to take forward a review of the Irish Sea closure with industry participation. Fishermen who spend most of their time in the Irish Sea will receive one additional fishing day (instead of two in 2004) in recognition of the reduction in effort as a result of the closure. The Council also agreed to implement a proposal from the UK, French and Irish industries for a cod spawning closure in the area between south west England and Ireland from January to March. However at the request of Belgium, there will be a derogation for beam trawlers in January.

The UK secured at the Council a number of increases in Total Allowable Catches in commercially important stocks where there was scientific evidence that previous TACs were out of line with the real abundance of the stocks. This meant that fishermen were having to unnecessarily discard catches with no conservation benefit. The stocks concerned were:

	2005 TAC (tonnes)	Percentage increase
Western Channel sole	865	188
Western monkfish	25,082	20
Monkfish (North Sea/west of Scotland)	[1]15,000	—
West of Scotland nephrops	12,700	12
Irish Sea nephrops	19,544	12

[1] With the prospect of a further increase with agreement on management measures early in 2005.

The Council also reached agreement on cuts in fishing effort and quotas on deep sea stocks. A closed area will be introduced to protect orange roughy which is thought to be particularly at risk. There will be a review of management arrangements for deep sea stocks in 2005.

The European Commission presented a Communication on simplification of the Common Fisheries Policy and this will be followed by an action plan next year.

On agriculture, the Presidency reported on two conferences that had considered the handling of animal disease outbreaks, including zoonoses (animal diseases transmissible to humans), from both the financial and disease control angles. The Commission indicated that it would be taking forward work in this area with a view to developing a more strategic approach to animal health. I strongly supported this initiative.

The Council held an orientation debate on measures to deal with illegally logged timber imports. I joined a number of delegations in welcoming progress in this area while noting that further work to counter attempts at circumvention of EU controls was needed. I also welcomed the Commission's intention to work closely with interested NGOs on this subject.

The Council endorsed conclusions on the application of cross compliance conditions in the reformed CAP. Member states agreed to review the working of these provisions in the light of further experience.

The Agriculture Commissioner informed the Council of her intention to prepare a paper reflecting on the possibilities for further simplification of the CAP; it will come to the Council towards the end of 2005.

Under other business, Hungary, supported by several producing member states, expressed concern about the protection of geographical indications for wine in the EU/Australia wine agreement.

Sweden sought views from the Commission on its plans for proposals to improve the welfare of farmed livestock and the Commission indicated that further work on pig welfare would be undertaken in 2005 and proposals on broiler and laying hen welfare were also likely.

Over lunch, Ministers discussed the current state of play in the Doha Development Agenda negotiations and Commissioner Fischer Boel reported on her recent contacts with other parties in Geneva.

Air Pollution

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received suggesting a relationship between cancer in under-16s and air pollution. [210203]

Alun Michael: The Department has not received any representations on this subject in the recent past.

However, we are aware that a report has recently been published in the Journal of Epidemiology and Community Health suggesting such a relationship. The report evaluated childhood cancer by linking residence and migration of children who had fatal tumours (who died 1966–80) with emission data from the UK National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory (NAEI) data for 2001.

The Department of Health has advised as follows:

> "The Committee on Carcinogenicity (COC) set up a review of cancer in children at its November 2004 meeting. The Committee has recommended a number of follow-up pieces of work which includes a review of published papers on environmental exposures and childhood leukaemia. The new paper from Professor Knox on childhood leukaemia and air pollutants will be considered as part of this review."

One of the issues the COC will need to consider is the validity of the assessment of exposure for children who died in 1966–80 based on emission maps for the year 2001. The magnitude and location of pollution sources is likely to have changed dramatically between these two periods. For instance, emissions of the two pollutants suggested as posing the greatest risk, 1,3-butadiene and carbon monoxide, declined by 64 per cent. and 50 per cent. respectively between 1990 and 2001.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's strategy is for reducing (a) air pollution and (b) the impact of air pollution on (i) the environment and (ii) human health. [210204]

Alun Michael: The Government's policies on improving air quality are set out in detail in the "Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland", published in January 2000 and Addendum, published in February 2003. The Strategy includes objectives for the main pollutants of concern to protect people's health and ecosystems and explains the measures that are in place to reduce emissions of harmful pollutants from all sectors, including road transport and industry. Copies are available via the Department's website at www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality.

Animal Welfare Bill

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to introduce legislation to (a) stop animal abuse and (b) improve the conditions in which animals are transported. [209349]

Mr. Bradshaw: The intention to include an Animal Welfare Bill in the Government's legislative programme was announced in the Queen's Speech. The Bill will provide new protection for captive and domestic animals in England and Wales, and will replace the current legislation—the Protection of Animals Act 1911—which already provides substantial protection against animal abuse.

New EU rules on welfare in transport have recently been published—Council Regulation (EC) No 1/2005 of 22 December on the protection of animals during transport and related operations and amending Directives 64/432/EEC and 93/119/EC and Regulation (EC) No 1255/97, Official Journal L 3/1–44 of 5 January 2005.

The UK supported this new Regulation as it contains much to help improve animal welfare in transport, such as improved enforcement of the rules, better protection for horses and new training and authorisation procedures for drivers. The EU Regulation applies from January 2007; with competence certification for drivers and attendants taking effect from January 2008. Until then, we will continue to ensure that animals are transported strictly in accordance with the current rules.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish the Animal Welfare Bill. [208369]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 17 January 2005]: The Animal Welfare Bill was included in the Queen's Speech and will be introduced and published when the legislative timetable permits.

Beef Exports

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the value of exports of British beef to (a) France, (b) Italy and (c) Germany was in each of the last two years. [209258]

Alun Michael: The following table shows the value of total exports from the UK of beef to France, Italy and Germany for the years 2002 and 2003. This will include re-exports of imported beef. The Overseas Trade Statistics do not separately identify exports of British beef.

UK exports of beef to France, Italy and Germany 2002–03

Bogs

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to complete the UK network of Natura 2000 sites for the habitat type Degraded Raised Bogs Still Capable of Natural Regeneration. [206774]

Mr. Bradshaw: In August 2000 Defra and its Country Agencies initiated a public consultation on 5 sites, chosen for their representation of

to be considered as UK contributions to the Natura 2000 network. Three of these sites have now been adopted by the European Commission as Sites of Community Importance.

Consultations on two remaining sites, Bolton Fell Moss and Solway Moss, are still ongoing in light of scientific objections raised about their candidature. A decision will be made regarding the designation of these sites following the outcome of these consultations and bilateral biogeographic discussions with the European Commission regarding the sufficiency of site lists for this habitat and others.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letter dated 10 November 2004 from the right hon., Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Carol Denis. [209857]

Alun Michael: The Department has no record of the correspondence referred to by the right hon. Member. If he would like to supply me with a copy I shall ensure he receives a response.

Country Shows

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what rural proofing was made of Home Office Circular No. 13/2000 and its effect upon country shows. [208697]

Alun Michael: Home Office Circular No. 13/2000 was published before November 2000 when the Government published the Rural White Paper 2000 which announced our commitment to rural proof all future policy programmes and initiatives.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with (a) the Country Landowners Association, (b) the Historic Houses Association and (c) the National Farmers' Union about the effects of Home Office Circular 13/2000 on country shows. [208698]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and members of the ministerial team meet these organisations and many other on a variety of issues but this issue has not been raised with us formally. Comments made by the CLA have been brought to my attention by one Government MP and one correspondent from the West Midlands. I have informed them both that my right hon. Friend, the Minister for Sport and Tourism and his officials have met representatives from the CLA, the Historic Houses Association and the Association of Show and Agricultural Organisations and have concluded that the proposed fees for large events should not cause a problem for country shows. I understand that the CLA has now made a statement to that effect.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by her Department in the (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 Session, broken down by Act. [206876]

Alun Michael: The following Acts created criminal offences in the 2002–03 Session:

> The Animal Health Act 2002 (c.42) created the offence of deliberately infecting an animal with any one of 15 diseases specified in the Act, including foot and mouth. The schedule created an offence of failing to comply with a restriction notice preventing the use for breeding of sheep that are of a genotype that is susceptible to transmissible spongiform encephalopathies (TSE). The Act also created a number of offences of obstructing or failing to assist inspectors carrying out duties under the Act.
> The Waste and Emissions Trading Act 2003 (c.33) provided powers under part 1 to make offences by regulation for breach of the scheme relating to the borrowing, banking, trading or transfer of landfill allowances.
> The Water Act 2003 (c.37) made it an offence under part 1 to fail to comply with a notice served by the Environment Agency requiring work to be carried out on facilities for impounding water or a licence application to be made for unlicensed impounding works.
> In addition, where abstraction or impounding takes place without a licence or does not comply with the terms of a licence, the Act made it an offence to fail to comply with an enforcement notice issued by the Environment Agency.
> Part 2 created the offence of introducing water to or supplying water from a water undertaker's supply system without being a water undertaker or a licensed supply person.
> Under part 3 it is an offence for an owner or manager of a large raised reservoir to fail to prepare a flood plan when required to do so. Part 3 also extended the application of the offence of supplying water unfit for human consumption to apply to persons including employees of the water undertaker and to self-employed people involved with the supply of that water.

During the 2003–04 Session the following Acts created criminal offences:

> The Highways (Obstruction by Body Corporate) Act 2004 (c.29) extended the offence of obstructing a highway under the Highways Act 1980 so that the directors, managers and other officers of a guilty company may also be found guilty of the obstruction.

> The Hunting Act 2004 (c.37) made it an offence under part 1 to hunt a wild mammal with a dog, except in some circumstances such as where the dog is only being used for stalking and flushing out, or to participate in, attend or knowingly facilitate a hare coursing event.
> Part 1 also makes it an offence for the owner of a dog to permit it to be used for hunting or hare coursing. Additionally, it made it an offence for the owner of land to allow the land to be entered or used for hunting or hare coursing.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria are used by her Department to determine (a) on which satellite television stations advertisements on behalf of her Department or its agencies are screened and (b) the frequency of screenings of advertisements. [201308]

Alun Michael: The criteria used for all campaigns are individually assessed to take into account the campaign objectives, the target audience and any specific regional factors.

The media buyers secure the most effective advertising slots to match the brief at the most competitive prices within the budget allocated.

Frequency of screening will depend on a consideration of how many times an audience needs to see the message before it will achieve the desired effect and the size of the audience for any particular television spot.

Travel Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Department spent on first-class travel in each year since 1997. [206566]

Alun Michael: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All travel complied with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, travel by Ministers and the Civil Service Management Code.

Departmental Staff

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of her Department's staff are based in London. [207962]

Alun Michael: Information on regional distribution of staff as at 1 April 2003 is available in the Libraries of both Houses, and also at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_information/statistical_information/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2003_report/index.asp

Figures relating to 1 April 2004 are due to be published during February 2005.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the accuracy of the seasonal efficiency of domestic boilers in the UK system for measuring the energy efficiency of domestic heating boilers. [209498]

Mr. Morley: The Seasonal Efficiency of Boilers in the UK (SEDBUK) methodology was developed in close partnership with the heating industry. Its accuracy is principally determined by the laboratory tests defined in European Standards necessary to show compliance with the EU Boiler Efficiency Directive (42/92/EEC). As with any assessment there are uncertainties of measurement and these are estimated to be within ±2½ per cent. The accuracy of the laboratory tests is propagated directly to the SEDBUK figure.

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions her Department has had with the Treasury on (a) the case for a windfall tax on excessive profits made by oil and gas producers and (b) the use of revenues from such a tax to fund a domestic energy efficiency programme; and if she will make a statement. [209653]

Mr. Morley: My officials, ministerial colleagues and I are in regular contact with our HM Treasury counterparts about a range of subjects. Decisions on taxation are of course a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Environmental Schemes

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the costs to UK companies of parallel participation in the EU Emissions Trading Scheme and the Climate Change Agreement. [209847]

Mr. Morley: The costs of participation in both EU ETS and CCAs have not been estimated. However, the current proposals involving a certain degree of overlap in reporting were a response to industry's concerns that separating the targets between the two schemes would be too difficult. The data required for reporting are essentially the same for the two schemes.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made towards ensuring compatibility of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme and the Climate Change Agreement. [209849]

Mr. Morley: My officials work closely with the industry led Emissions Trading Group to ensure the two schemes can work alongside each other. We have made several changes to the structure of the schemes to reflect their concerns while continuing to ensure that the environmental benefits of the schemes are maintained.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when a decision will be made on the possible exclusion from the first phase of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme for companies participating in a Climate Change Agreement. [209862]

Mr. Morley: We are discussing some outstanding issues with the Commission in relation to the UK NAP. Once these are resolved we will be able to issue installation level allocations and make a formal application to the Commission for temporary exclusion for CCA installations. Our revised timetable for the announcement of installation level allocations was published on 23 December, and under this we aim to make an application for temporary exclusion by the end of February. We must then wait for a decision by the Commission.

Fareshare

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) representations she has received from and (b) discussions she has had with Fareshare on the (i) Landfill Tax Credit Scheme and (ii) financing of Fareshare's work to distribute supermarket food to the homeless. [209651]

Mr. Morley: The Landfill Tax Credit Scheme (LTCS) was reformed in 2003, as a result of which waste projects are no longer eligible for funding. My Department has been contacted directly by Fareshare, and by others on its behalf, on a number of occasions over the last six months. In response to these representations, we have explained the reasons for the reform of the LTCS and suggested possible alternative sources of Government funding.

Farm Payments

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) farmers and (b) contractors are waiting to receive the full amount of compensation due to them following the outbreak of foot and mouth in 2001; and what sum of money that represents. [208075]

Alun Michael: All compensation payable for animals that were compulsorily slaughtered during the FMD epidemic in 2001 has been paid. There are 15 outstanding claims for increased compensation still being considered. The quantum involved will be the subject of arbitration or negotiation in those cases.

Contractors who provided goods, works or services during FMD were paid for doing so. They were not paid 'compensation'.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of the money granted to the UK by the EU following the 2001 foot and mouth outbreak has been paid to farmers. [208255]

Mr. Bradshaw: The co-financing payment received from the EU Commission was a contribution towards the costs of compensation for compulsorily slaughtered animals that had already been paid to farmers and the costs of disease control operations, e.g. cleansing and disinfection, that had already been met by the UK Government.

Flooding

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether City of York local authority representatives will be allocated a full position on the Regional Flood Defence Committee. [208860]

Mr. Morley: Local authority representation on the Yorkshire Regional Flood Defence Committee (RFDC), as with all other RFDCs, is based upon council tax data for the constituent councils, with seats or part seats allocated accordingly.

Due to the increase in size of the Yorkshire RFDC from 13 to 15 members as a result of a recent review, it was decided that the most equitable distribution of local authority seats on the Yorkshire RFDC was for the City of York to share a seat with North Yorkshire. In addition, North Yorkshire have an individually allocated seat. The sharing of seats is commonplace among RFDCs.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the allocation of funding for flood defence in York. [208861]

Mr. Morley: I understand the Environment Agency is currently undertaking a major strategic study (the River Ouse 'Project Appraisal Guidance (PAG) 2' Study) which will examine the need to provide improved flood protection including to properties in York. The outcome of the draft report is due for public consultation in spring 2005.

The Yorkshire Regional Flood Defence Committee long-term plan (up to 2013–14) has allocated an initial sum of £30 million to implement improvements identified in the strategy. Some of these improvements will benefit York city. A more accurate estimate will only be possible when the results of the final strategy report are released later this year.

Approximately £270,000 will be spent in 2004–05 and in future years, on maintaining and improving the condition of flood defences for the benefit of York. (This work includes grass cutting on banks, controlling vermin and routine maintenance and improvement of the extensive mechanical and electrical equipment which forms part of the flood defences, as well as more extensive repairs to the flood defences as identified in the regular, programmed inspections.)

Extensive improvements have recently been carried out to refurbish the pumps at the Foss Barrier, to repair the flood defences at North Street and to the Clifton Ings barrier bank. The total cost of the works carried out since the floods of autumn 2000 is over £500,000.

Maintenance of and improvements to the flood warning system for York, flood mapping, development control activity, strategic planning and other costs amount to approximately £400,000 to £500,000 per annum, including in 2004–05.

The flood warning service for York is comprehensive and staged. Depending on the projected levels in the River Ouse, different warnings are issued to serve different parts of the city. The Environment Agency's knowledge of the catchment area enables warnings to be provided well in excess of two hours before the actual flooding occurs, thereby allowing recipients to take action to protect their property and possessions.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 14 December 2004, Official Report, column 1001W, on Sellafield flooding, if she will make a statement on the impact on Sellafield of the heavy rain of 9 to 11 January. [209261]

Mr. Morley: I understand from the Environment Agency that Sellafield suffered no flooding from the rivers Calder and Ehen or from the sea as a result of the heavy rain of 9–11 January 2005.

There were some localised problems caused by rainwater and high winds, but the safety and security of the site was maintained at all times.

Roger Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she has taken to update the list of areas at risk from flooding to take account of forecasts by climate change experts; and what proposals on this she has received from the Environment Agency. [209523]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is responsible for flood risk mapping in England. Areas at risk of flooding are shown on the Flood Map on the agency's website. This data are also provided to local planning authorities and others enabling them to make decisions about future development and planning. The Flood Map takes account of the current conditions, and does not show the anticipated effects of future climate change.

The Environment Agency is currently undertaking a scoping study to identify the best way to depict the likely increase in the risk of flooding. A number of options are being considered. The agency anticipate that this scoping will be complete by summer 2005.

Freedom of Information

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many staff in her Department were employed to deal with Freedom of Information Act 2000 issues in (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003 and (d) 2004; and how many staff are budgeted to deal with Freedom of Information Act 2000 issues in (i) 2005 and (ii) 2006. [205043]

Alun Michael: Until 2004 Defra had no staff working full-time on Freedom of Information. The full-time equivalents of staff in the Access to Information Unit, including those working on the implementation of the Environmental Information Regulations for Defra, in each of the years you mention is approximately as follows:

	Number
(b) 2002	1
(c) 2003	2

That figure has risen to eight in 2005. The budget for 2006 has yet to be determined.

Beyond those staff directly involved in the ongoing implementation and application of FOI within Defra, it is difficult to identify precisely the number of officials who will be dealing with Freedom of Information requests from January 2005 onwards, since it is potentially part of every civil servant's role to respond to Freedom of Information requests.

Fuel Poverty

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the public sector health bodies with which her Department (a) has worked and (b) is working in order to achieve the Government's statutory fuel poverty targets; what plans her Department has to extend such partnership working; and if she will make a statement. [208194]

Alun Michael: Defra works with the Department of Health to ensure that the issue of fuel poverty is considered in the work of public sector health bodies. Defra has also supported, via National Energy Action, the appointment of a number of primary care trust champions to promote the need to tackle fuel poverty in their local area.

The scheme managers for Defra's Warm Front programme work closely with public health bodies to promote the benefits of the scheme and highlight the role improved energy efficiency plays in tackling fuel poverty.

Landfill

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme. [209741]

Mr. Morley: The 1999 landfill directive sets challenging targets to reduce the amount of biodegradable municipal waste sent to landfill. These significant reductions need to be properly planned and managed and experience suggests that a steady reduction over a period of years is likely to be the most effective way to achieve the reductions needed.

To help local authorities meet their landfill directive targets the Government will introduce a Landfill Allowance Trading Scheme in England on 1 April 2005. The primary aim of the scheme is to give authorities as much flexibility as possible in reducing the amount of biodegradable municipal waste sent to landfill, while reassuring Government that the necessary progress towards achieving the directive's targets is being made.

The scheme is not intended to inflict major new costs on local authorities not provided for in spending reviews, either by imposing unnecessary penalties or forcing them to take part in trading against their will. It is designed as a tool to help local authorities meet the required reductions in the most cost-effective way and it will allow them to share the burden of meeting the reduction targets.

National Bee Unit

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many colonies of bees are within the workload of each bee inspector; and how many beekeepers each inspector is responsible for in the six months of the year when inspections are undertaken. [208003]

Alun Michael: On average, each inspector visits about 70 beekeepers and inspects about 650 colonies in the course of a season. Inspections are targeted in areas where disease risk and colony density are high. About 10 per cent. of the total number of colonies is inspected each year.

Oil Contamination

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures (a) she and (b) the Environment Agency is taking to detect sites of land contaminated by oil leaks and spillages; and what programmes exist to treat such sites. [210354]

Mr. Morley: Under Part IIA of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, introduced in April 2000, responsibility for identifying contaminated land rests with local authorities in accordance with the detailed provisions of the regime. Where contaminated land is designated a "special site", as defined, the Environment Agency becomes the enforcing authority. Remediation is normally undertaken by the "appropriate persons", or at their expense, if necessary through the service of a remediation notice by the enforcing authority.

Rights of Way

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the process for closing alleys or gallies which are designated as rights of way; and how many such closures have been secured since the legislation was last updated. [208838]

Alun Michael: Schedule 6 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 inserted new section 118B into the Highways Act 1980. This enables highway authorities to close rights of way on the grounds of crime prevention in areas designated by the Secretary of State. The first stage of the process is for the relevant highway authority to apply to Defra to have an area designated. If successful, they can then make special extinguishment orders in much the same way as they are currently able to close rights of way for other reasons.

Since the powers came into force in February 2003, 22 applications have been received and considered. As a result 18 extinguishment orders have been made under section 118B. Fifteen of these orders have now been confirmed. Two are awaiting decisions having been referred to the Secretary of State because objections were received and a third is expected shortly following an objection.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish her response to the consultation on the Use of Mechanically Propelled Vehicles on Rights of Way. [210617]

Alun Michael: The response to the consultation, entitled "Use of mechanically propelled vehicles on Rights of Way—The Government's framework for action" was published on 20 January. Copies have been placed in the House Library.

River Itchen

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to facilitate the improvement in the navigability of (a) the River Itchen, north of Southampton and (b) other rivers in Hampshire; and if she will make a statement. [209561]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no direct power to facilitate the improvement of navigability of the River Itchen or any other non-navigable river. Those wishing to improve the navigability of non-navigable rivers are free to apply to the Secretary of State for an order for this purpose under the Transport and Works Act 1992. They will be expected to justify their proposals and any objections will be carefully considered.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received about improving the navigability of the Itchen Navigation. [209562]

Mr. Morley: No representations about this subject have been received.

Telephone Usage

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much revenue her Department has received from the use of non-geographic 0870 telephone numbers for the period 1 October 2003 to 30 September 2004. [205848]

Alun Michael: My Department has only one non-geographic 0870 number. Revenue is not collected for its use.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many non-geographic 0870 telephone numbers are in use by her Department; and what services can be accessed by calling each of them. [205838]

Alun Michael: My Department has only one non-geographic 0870 number which is provided for callers to the Pet Travel Scheme Helpline.

Video Conferencing Units

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many video conferencing units are installed in (a) the Department and (b) each agency of the Department; what percentage of offices have these facilities in each case; and what plans there are to increase the number. [204110]

Alun Michael: The information is as follows:

(a) Defra has 43 video conferencing units installed and this covers approximately 30 per cent. of core Defra sites.

(b) Information on agencies is as follows:

RPA has seven units covering 100 per cent. OF RPA sites

VLA has 16 units covering 100 per cent. of VLA sites

CEFAS has four units covering 100 per cent. of CEFAS sites

CSL has one unit at its only site

VMD has one unit at its only site

PSD is located in one building and uses Defra facilities within the same complex

Defra is actively promoting the use of videoconferencing across the Department and additional units will be installed as demand increases.

Warm Front

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households in Burnley have benefited from Warm Front; how many pensioners have been assisted by the programme; and if she will make a statement. [209050]

Mr. Morley: Since the launch of the Warm Front scheme in June 2000 and the end of December 2004 approximately 4,300 households in Burnley received assistance under Warm Front of which 480 were pensioner households.

Of the total households that have benefited some 1,250 pensioner households received assistance under Warm Front Plus.

Water Infrastructure

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the amount of the (a) water supply and (b) sewerage infrastructure in England which is in unsatisfactory condition; and what estimate she has made of (i) the cost of necessary repair and maintenance of the infrastructure and (ii) the length of time at current levels of investment to clear the backlog. [208885]

Mr. Morley: In 2003, companies reported to Ofwat the profile of their assets across condition grades 1 (best) to 5 (worst). Around 5 per cent. of water mains, 3 per cent. of critical sewers and 5 per cent. of non-critical sewers were reported in condition grade 5.

Each year the Director General of Water Services (the Director) assesses the trend in serviceability of the water mains and sewers in England and Wales. The assessment is that serviceability is currently stable and Ofwat does not consider there to be a 'backlog' of work.

At the 2004 price review the Director has assumed in price limits that water companies in England and Wales will spend around £1.87 billion on water mains and £1.03 billion on sewers to maintain their assets in the period 2005–10.

Waterways

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what obligations there are on British Waterways to ensure that waterways under its jurisdiction remain navigable; and what action she has undertaken during her Department's current statutory review of British Waterways to ensure that waterways remain navigable. [208167]

Alun Michael: In recent years British Waterways has made considerable progress in reducing a maintenance backlog that had built up over many decades. It has also brought to completion a number of projects to restore derelict waterways to navigation.

Section 105 of the Transport Act 1968 sets out British Waterways' statutory duties for maintaining its commercial and cruising waterways. Subject to these obligations, British Waterways is required by its framework document to operate and maintain its waterways to standards that reflect their use and prospects of use. No decisions arising from the current review of British Waterways have yet been taken.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

African Union Summit

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the proposals for (a) humanitarian aid, (b) reconstruction aid and (c) long-term development aid made during the African Union summit in Gabon with regard to (i) Sudan, (ii) Cote d'Ivoire and (iii) Democratic Republic of the Congo; what assessment his Department has made of the availability of the (A) infrastructure and (B) qualified manpower needed to maximise the efficiency of the implementation of such proposals; and if he will make a statement. [209084]

Hilary Benn: The African Union (AU) Summit in Libreville on 10 January was a meeting of the Peace and Security Council (PSC). As far as I am aware, there were no specific proposals for humanitarian or other development assistance made. The subsequent communiqué set out the Council's position on the situation in Sudan, Cote d'Ivoire, and the Democratic Republic of Congo. DFID's assessment of these is set out as follows:

(I) Sudan

DFID shares the AU's concern regarding the humanitarian situation in Sudan.

DFID concurs with the AU's call for an end to violations of the humanitarian ceasefire as well their call to cease attacks on civilians and humanitarian workers.

DFID supports the call for the right of return of all IDP's and refugees affected by the conflicted, but the UK strongly condemns any forced relocations. The UK Ambassador to Sudan has made representations to the Government of Sudan to adhere to its obligations and commitments under the Memorandum of Understanding on Darfur with the International Organisation for Migration, which prohibits involuntary movement of internally displaced persons.

With the signing of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and the Abuja Protocols, the UK has worked hard alongside the AU and UN to ensure that there is the political will among the warring parties to allow humanitarian agencies to do their work. Through its direct support of both the AU monitoring mission and United Nations Security Co-ordinator (UNSECOORD) the UK has sought to provide the effective infrastructure and manpower to achieve this. Since April 2003, the UK has allocated £118.5 million on humanitarian operations in Sudan and its Darfur region, as well as £14 million in support of the AU monitoring mission. It is continuing its support for the next financial year with a commitment of £100 million for Sudan of which £50 million is towards the UN Workplan.

(II) Cote d'Ivoire

The United Kingdom is working closely with the countries of the Africa Union and other members of the international community in support of a durable political settlement in Cote d'Ivoire. DFID welcomes the endorsement of President Mbeki's peace plan at the AU Peace and Security Council meeting on 10 January, and we hope that the AU's commitment to peace will encourage all sides to work together to bring about a sustainable peace in the country.

DFID is continuing to monitor the humanitarian situation. During 2004, we provided £1.55 million in humanitarian assistance through international agencies and non-governmental organizations working there.

(III) the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC)

The focus was on how to deal with the continuing tensions between the DRC and Rwanda, rather than a consideration of humanitarian, reconstruction and long-term development issues. The Department for International Development (DFID) and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) welcome the commitments made by the AU to continue to support the DRC peace process and to work towards improving relations between DRC and Rwanda.

AIDS Aid

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what resources were committed to expenditure on HIV/AIDS in developing countries in 2003–04, broken down by (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral aid. [209865]

Hilary Benn: Recording accurate expenditure on HIV and AIDS is difficult because of the cross-cutting nature of many HIV and AIDS initiatives and of the range of methods used to channel development assistance, including direct budget support to governments and via multilateral organisations. DFID is currently working on ways to better account for expenditure in this area and revised figures may be issued later in the year. The following are estimated figures for bilateral and multilateral independently.

In 2003–04, DFID's bilateral expenditure on projects that targeted HIV and AIDS, was £297 million. This figure reflects all projects that were recorded as having a primary or significant focus on HIV and AIDS or reproductive health. It should be noted that some of these projects will also have had a primary or significant focus on other sectoral areas such as education or health systems development.

In addition, expenditure which focused on AIDS through multilateral organisations was estimated at £48 million. This is based on the share of spending which multilateral organisations, supported by DFID, said they directed towards AIDS.

The overall spend is likely to be in excess of £345 million, as further money has been spent on AIDS directly by partner governments receiving 'Poverty Reduction Budget Support' (PRBS) from the UK. DFID is currently in the process of developing a methodology for estimating the proportion likely to be spent on HIV and AIDS activities, though this exercise is not yet complete.

Bam Earthquake

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding the Government have (a) pledged and (b) spent in relief and reconstruction for Bam, Iran, following the earthquake in 2003. [210307]

Hilary Benn: Following the earthquake in Bam, the Department for International Development committed £1,676,640 to support immediate humanitarian needs and rebuild livelihoods. £1,206,640 was channelled through United Nations agencies and non-governmental organisations as financial support.

From the balance, DFID provided 68 search and rescue specialists and four DFID personnel, 450 family winter tents and other shelter materials for distribution by the Iranian Red Crescent as well as two cargo aircraft put at the disposal of the Iranian Government.

In addition, the European Community Humanitarian Aid Office contributed €8.5 million for emergency relief and rehabilitation of which the UK's share was €1.445 million (£1.01 million).

Bangladesh

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) financial, (b) material, (c) personnel and (d) other aid the UK Government (i) pledged and (ii) delivered to Bangladesh after the floods in 2004. [210199]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government allocated £10 million through DFID to meet immediate flood emergency needs following the floods in July 2004. £5 million of this was channelled through the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and £5 million through the World Food Programme (WFP). Supporting these two organisations ensured that both food and non-food emergency needs of those affected by the flood were met. This initial £10 million provided food packages of rice, pulses, oil, salt and nutritionally fortified high-energy biscuits; and non-food support, including shelter and agricultural support (such as provision of seedlings) to over 900,000 families (4.5 million people) affected by the floods.

In August the United Nations launched its Consolidated Appeal for $210 million (£117 million) to meet relief and recovery needs for the next 6 months. Again, the UK Government acted swiftly to meet the extensive recovery and rehabilitation needs of Bangladesh. On 18 August, DFID's Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State announced an additional £15 million through DFID for Bangladesh to support the repair, replacement and maintenance of roads and bridges; to provide food, shelter, clean water, sanitation, medial supplies; and to provide funds for cash-for-work programmes to give people affected by the floods the opportunity to earn income to help recover from the floods.

From this £15 million, £1 million has been channelled to the World Food Programme to support their provision of food to those affected by the floods. £2 million has been channelled through the UNDP to provide temporary and longer-term shelter to flood affected families, working in partnership with the Local Government and Engineering Department (LGED). Another £4 million has been channelled through the UNDP to support NGO-managed 'cash-for-work' programmes. £2 million has been channelled to the World Health Organisation (WHO) through the UNDP to provide medical supplies to maternal and child welfare centres and urban clinics. £2 million has been channelled through the UNDP to United Nations Children's Fund

(UNCIEF) to work with the Department of Public Health Engineering (DPHE) to restore access to safe water and sanitation facilities. The final £4 million was provided to the Government of Bangladesh's Roads and Highways Department to support their request for emergency financing for roads, bridges and culverts damaged by the recent floods.

A further £4 million was channelled to the World Food Programme's Emergency Response Programme (EMOP) in October 2004. This will enable the poorest flood victims to have continued access to food during the period of scarcity, which has followed the floods.

Staff from the DFID Bangladesh office were extensively involved in responding to the floods in 2004 but no other personnel were involved.

The UK Government expenditure that is channelled through the European Commission and the multilateral development banks has also contributed to the total humanitarian assistance. The European Commission Humanitarian Aid Department (ECHO) provided $5.3 million through the UN Flash Appeal, $230 million is being provided through the World Bank and $180 million through the Asian Development Bank as loans to the Government of Bangladesh for a post-flood recovery and assistance programmes.

Burma

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate he has made of the number of people displaced from Karen and Karenni states in Burma in 2004. [209062]

Hilary Benn: Displaced people are among the poorest and most marginalised people in Burma and are often located in areas where DFID or international agencies have little or no access. Therefore reliable statistics on Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) from the Karen and Karenni States are unavailable. DFID cannot access these areas freely and have not made an independent assessment on the number of people displaced. However in October 2004, the Thailand Burma Border Consortium (TBBC) estimated that the number of people displaced from their homes in Burma was at least 526,000 in total.

Securing increased access to these vulnerable areas is an important objective of DFID. DFID is currently working with international organisations such as the UN to encourage the Burmese authorities to do this. DFID is currently providing £500,000 to support the International Committee of the Red Cross, who have been gradually increasing their access and are now operating in significant areas of the Eastern Burma.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he will reply to the letter dated 22 November 2004 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Anna Galding and Matilda Chime. [209850]

Hilary Benn: I replied to my right. hon. Friend in my letter of 7 December 2004.

Darfur

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate he has made of the incidence of malaria in refugee camps in Darfur. [209069]

Hilary Benn: According to the United Nations (UN) Morbidity and Mortality Bulletin, between 22 May and 31 December 2004, there were a total of 168,584 clinically diagnosed Malaria cases, including 319 deaths reported in Darfur. The greatest distribution of cases was reported in West Darfur. The figures are from two thirds of the internally displaced people (IDP) settlements and hospitals in the region, which covers 1.1 million of the conflicted affected population.

The traditional malaria season in Sudan runs from May through to November, and therefore the numbers of reported cases are expected to ease off early into the 2005. Access to internally displaced people, security, and the poor provision of health care facilities in some areas continue to hamper the diagnosis and treatment of malaria cases.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what the cost of travel within the UK for the Department was in each year since 1997; and how much of this was spent on (a) hire cars, (b) helicopter hire, (c) hotel accommodation and (d) subsistence; [206476]

(2) how many overseas trips, and at what total cost, have been made by his Department in each year since 1997; and what the costs of (a) flights, (b) internal travel, (c) hotel accommodation and (d) subsistence were of each trip. [206661]

Hilary Benn: Information in the format requested is not held centrally and cannot be provided without incurring a disproportionate cost.

The following table gives the costs of official travel and UK hotel accommodation booked through DFID's travel implant. Travel costs incurred by DFID overseas departments and booked through overseas travel agents are not included. All official travel is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code. Travel by Ministers and the Civil Service Management Code. Information relating to overseas travel by Ministers is published on an annual basis. Information for the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2004 is available in the Library of the House. Information for the financial year 2004–05 will be published as soon as possible at the end of the current financial year.

Travel and hotel payments

1998–99	7.5
1999–2000	7.2
2000–01	8.7
2001–02	9.2

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the Department spent on first-class travel in each year since 1997. [206562]

Hilary Benn: The cost of first class travel in 2003–04 was £77,000. Information on first class travel before that date is not held centrally and cannot be provided without incurring a disproportionate cost.

Electronic Devices

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many electronic devices are owned by the Department, broken down by type. [207677]

Hilary Benn: DFID has records of the following electronic devices:

	Number
Desktop personal computers (worldwide)	3,433
Portable personal computers (worldwide)	1,513
Server computers (worldwide)	540
Handheld computers (worldwide)	834
Mobile phones (UK only)	467
Printers (UK only)	682
Plasma screens (UK only)	43
Video conference units (UK only)	76
Fax machines (UK only)	62

The asset registry is currently being expanded to include printers, screens, video conference units and fax machines at overseas locations. At present, records relating to these types of equipment are only held locally and summary figures are not available without incurring a disproportionate cost.

Mobile phones are purchased locally at each office. The figures show the number of mobile phones on the UK contract. The numbers at each overseas office cannot be provided without incurring a disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his Department in the last three years. [207811]

Hilary Benn: The Freedom of Information Act does not make specific categories of information available, but operates on the presumption that all information held by public authorities should be available, subject to the 24 exemptions of the Act.

Whether or not information is exempt under the Act requires the exercise of judgment in each case. The majority of the exemptions also require that the public interest in releasing the information should be weighed against the public interest in withholding it. If the public interest in disclosing the information outweighs the public interest in withholding it the information must be disclosed. The assessment of the public interest has to be made in all the circumstances of the case, on a case by case basis as far as each request is concerned. Therefore it is not possible to provide the information requested.

HIV/AIDS Action Programme

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what discussions he is having with (a) members of the European Parliament and (b) the Council of Ministers to ensure that orphans and vulnerable children are given the necessary priority in the Programme for Action and the new EU Development Policy; [209070]

(2) if he will make representations to EU counterparts that the EU give the same priority to orphans and vulnerable children as the UK in its HIV/AIDS Programme for Action. [209066]

Hilary Benn: Along with other member states, DFID is engaging in the consultation process towards a new Programme for Action on HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis which the EC expects to adopt in 2006. The current Programme for Action does not address orphans and vulnerable children but we will consider how best to address this gap in the forthcoming consultations. Discussions on the new EU Development Policy have only just started. The Commission has produced a "Consultation on the future of EU Development Policy Issues Paper", which includes consideration of the broad themes of "Development of human resources and citizens' rights" and "Combating inequality and promoting social cohesion", both of which are likely to include consideration of orphans and vulnerable children. Consultations with members of the European Parliament and other member states will take place in due course.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent reports he has received on the state of Iraq's health care system; and what action his Department is taking to improve the level of basic health care in Iraq. [208728]

Hilary Benn: Iraqi health care faces enormous and longstanding challenges which pre-date the 2003 conflict. However, the Iraqi Interim Government (IIG) has already taken a number of positive steps to strengthen public health services. For example, funding to the health service has increased significantly since April 2003. In addition, through the multi-donor trust funds managed by the United Nations and the World Bank, about $1 billion is available for Iraqi priorities in health and other sectors. Salaries have improved and charges largely abolished, providing free access to health care for all. The Iraqi Ministry of Health, with support from the United Nations, has also developed a set of Planning Guidelines for 2005 which set out national priorities and the objectives and standards that the Ministry expect to achieve.

DFID support is focussed on primary health care, through the provision of professional advice to the Ministry of Health in Baghdad and Basra, and a £5 million grant through the World Health Organisation (WHO). Additional DFID support for health services in Iraq is channelled through the multi-donor trust funds managed by the United Nations and the World Bank. DFID has made an initial contribution of £70 million to these trust funds.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent reports he has received on levels of acute malnutrition amongst Iraqi children up to the age of five years; and what action his Department is taking to reduce levels of child malnutrition in Iraq. [208729]

Hilary Benn: The most recent national survey of nutritional status conducted in Iraq took place in the second quarter of 2004 by the Iraqi Central Office of Statistics and Information Technology, with technical support from the Fafo Institute for Applied International Studies, Norway. This survey found that 7.5 per cent. of children under five years old were acutely malnourished, defined as low weight for a given height. A UNICEF survey conducted in 2000 found that 6.4 per cent. of children of the same age group were acutely malnourished. Another survey was subsequently conducted in 2002 but it was not nationally representative, and therefore direct comparisons are not valid.

All surveys are subject to a certain amount of imprecision and it is not possible to state whether the apparent increase from 6.4 per cent. to 7.5 per cent. reflects a real trend. General child malnutrition—defined as weight for age—showed a marked improvement over the same period, falling from 17.3 per cent. to 11.7 per cent.

Reducing levels of acute malnutrition means ensuring that adequate supplies of food reach the poorest families whilst also working to tackle poverty and ensure equitable distribution of wealth in the long term. DFID helped to ensure that Iraq's Public Distribution System (PDS) for food was re-established quickly after the conflict in 2003. DFID is now supporting the Iraqi Interim Government (IIG) in the development of economic policies which will protect the poorest in Iraq who are dependent on the PDS, whilst reducing the economic distortions created by distributing food, virtually free, to the entire population. The PDS currently accounts for 12.5 per cent. of Iraqi Government expenditure. DFID is also developing a programme aimed at strengthening Iraqi Government capacity to implement pro-poor employment and social protection policies. In addition, DFID programmes in employment generation and political participation are aimed at reducing poverty and ensuring that the needs of the most vulnerable in Iraq are addressed in Government policies.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate his Department has made of the numbers of children attending schools in Iraq not receiving a nutritional dinner each day; what percentage of the total number attending school this amounts to; and if he will make a statement. [208730]

Hilary Benn: There are no current data sources available of nutritional content of children's dinners in Iraq. DFID is helping the Iraqi Government in the implementation of pro-poor economic policies designed to reduce poverty across Iraq and ensure adequate social safety nets for those most in need.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what research is being conducted on the impact of the war on Iraqi (a) health and (b) mortality. [209458]

Hilary Benn: The most recent research focusing on health and mortality in Iraq has been published by Medact, a non-governmental organisation, and by The Lancet.

The Medact report, published in November 2004, was critical of the Iraqi health system, but recognised that the institutional weaknesses were longstanding and pre-date the 2003 conflict and that the Iraqi Ministry of Health (MoH) was addressing these. Medact also acknowledged that health data on Iraq are patchy, often unreliable and that their consultants were unable to visit Iraq to collect field data due to the security situation. The Iraqi MoH has issued a swift and strong rebuttal of the Medact report.

Improving health services presents major challenges and will take time. Despite security constraints, steady progress is being made, and many more hospitals are now functioning and have better access to medicines. Since the Medact survey was conducted the MoH have produced Planning Guidelines for 2005, with support from donors, to meet these challenges. The UN and World Bank managed multi-donor trust funds provide support to the health sector, focusing on the improvement of emergency and primary health care services, which affect the poorest and most vulnerable. DFID has contributed £70 million to the multi-donor trust funds and has also provided technical assistance to the MoH.

The Lancet article of 29 October 2004, looked at mortality in Iraq. As the Foreign Secretary explained in his written statement to Parliament on 17 November 2004, Official Report, column 93WS, the Government believe that the Iraqi authorities remain in the best position to monitor the casualties of their nationals.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the Answer of 17 January 2005, Official Report, columns 686–87W, on Iraq, how many families from Fallujah have received the $100 welfare payment; how many households have received the $200 payment from US military forces; how much in welfare payments has been distributed by the Iraqi authorities through banks in the areas where they are living; how much the Department has spent on people displaced from Fallujah; and what provision has been made for the health needs of the residents of Fallujah who have been displaced from the city. [209936]

Hilary Benn: The Iraqi Ministry of Finance has reported that it began to distribute welfare payments of $100 to Fallujan families from seven bank branches on 13 January. Information is not available on how many families have received this payment to date.

US military forces began making payments of $200 to Fallujan families on 13 January. By 19 January they had issued 32,546 payments amounting to approximately $6.5 million. Since the estimated number of Fallujan households is around 36,000, the US military anticipate completing payments soon.

DFID's response to the needs of the people of Fallujah has been through the deployment of advisers to the Iraqi Interim Government on humanitarian, health and coordination issues. One consultant was contracted specifically to work on humanitarian coordination in and around Fallujah. Other DFID staff and consultants, either already in Iraq or assigned from headquarters, also contributed to the effort. The cost of this work is being absorbed within existing programmes. Direct financial support for the people of Fallujah, and for the reconstruction of the city, is being provided largely from Iraqi and United States sources.

The Iraqi Ministry of Health assessed the needs of Fallujah's displaced population and provided additional staff and medical supplies to the clinics and hospitals in the areas where most of those people were living. Fallujah General Hospital and two primary care clinics in Fallujah are open to provide care for people returning to the city.

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much has been spent by the UK Government on reconstruction in Iraq, in each month since April 2003. [210601]

Hilary Benn: Monthly DFID expenditure on assistance to Iraq since April 2003 has been:

April	35,098
May	35,937,923
June	11,304,549

Note:

Months with particularly large expenditures were those in which contributions were made to multilateral organisations.

Total DFID expenditure on assistance to Iraq since April 2003 has been £242,590,932.

Spending by other Government Departments over the same period on activities related to reconstruction in Iraq were:

	£ million
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	38
Ministry of Defence	20
Global Conflict Prevention Pool (joint DFID, FCO and MOD	17

Mozambique

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) financial, (b) material, (c) personnel and (d) other aid the UK Government (i) pledged and (ii) delivered to Mozambique after the 2000 floods. [210380]

Hilary Benn: The UK pledged £26 million at the Rome donor conference held in response to the Government of Mozambique's appeal for assistance following the 2000 floods. Our actual expenditure was £37 million. This was composed of £10 million in additional budgetary assistance to the Government of Mozambique to compensate for revenue losses, £7 million for the reconstruction of the north-south highway and a total of £20 million channelled through United Nations agencies and NGOs to meet a range of emergency needs, including food assistance, helicopter operations, provision of water and sanitation and logistical support. Given the number of projects and agencies involved, providing the detailed breakdown requested would incur a disproportionate cost.

Palestinian Police

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what makes of car have been selected for supply to the Palestinian Police force in the programme funded by the UK; in which country those vehicles were manufactured; and what assessment was made of the options for procurement of vehicles produced in the UK. [209515]

Hilary Benn: The police cars for the Palestinian Authority (PA) police force were selected and bought by the PA in line with their procurement procedures. This included an evaluation of all available vehicles in the market and their suitability and price. The cars selected were Volkswagen Passats, manufactured in Germany and procured through a Palestinian car dealership. DFID's development assistance is fully untied. Choice of vehicle would not be restricted to any make or model but based on value for money and operational requirements in the destination country.

Pay Television Subscriptions

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many pay television subscriptions the Department had in each year since 1997; and what the cost was in each year. [207669]

Hilary Benn: DFID subscribes to the parliamentary TV system to allow access to the parliamentary annunciator system, the Division Bell and Commons and Lords TV channels in the UK. Other services and channels are included in the package: these are selected by the Information Committee of the Houses of Parliament. These additional channels include the pay TV channels: CNN; Sky Sports 1; Sky Sports 2; Sky Sports 3. The annual costs of the subscription since 1997 are:

Annual subscription costs

1997	no figures are available
1998	19,770
1999	19,770

Annual subscription costs

	£000
2000	20,500
2002	20,850
2003	[1]20,850
2004	[1]20,850

[1] Estimate figure

DFID has no other pay television subscriptions in the UK and there is no central provision of pay television services to overseas offices. Information about any local purchases overseas could not be obtained without incurring a disproportionate cost.

Press Officers

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many press officers are employed in the Department. [206522]

Hilary Benn: As at 1 April 2004, DFID employed five press officers, including one chief press officer and four press officers or senior press officers.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the contracts signed by his special advisers differ from the Model Contract for Special Adviser. [207228]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right. hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 753W.

Sri Lanka

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with the Sri Lankan Government on equal access of Tamil people to aid. [209589]

Hilary Benn: I visited Sri Lanka on 8 January and met with local government officials and MPs. Officials in the DFID Sri Lanka office are holding regular discussions with government officials concerning the needs, priorities and strategies in relation to the delivery of humanitarian assistance. DFID's humanitarian response has been channelled through United Nations agencies, the Red Cross movement, and non-governmental organisations and in direct in kind interventions aimed at addressing immediate needs. DFID has supported the United Nations in undertaking impact and needs assessments, co-ordination, technical advice and air movements logistics support. The assistance that we have provided, and are supporting, is geographically spread throughout the country. This includes substantial support to Tamil communities in proportion to needs across the country.

Staff Vacancies

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department spent on advertising staff vacancies in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [209575]

Hilary Benn: DFID spent £714,122 on vacancy advertising in the 2002 calendar year, and £691,937 in the 2003 calendar year.

Tsunami

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development at what time, using Greenwich Mean Time (a) he and (b) his Department was first informed of the earthquake off Sumatra on 26 December; and when (i) he and (ii) officials in his Department were informed that the earthquake had caused a tsunami. [208789]

Hilary Benn: DFID first became aware of the earthquake at 02.40 (GMT), and was receiving the first reports of flood damage at 06.50. I first became aware of both the earthquake and the consequent tsunami at about 10.00 am.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the money committed by his Department as a result of the Indian Ocean earthquake and tsunami includes money that will be charged back by the Ministry of Defence for costs related to the use of UK military staff and equipment in relief and support efforts in the area; and if he will make a statement. [209082]

Hilary Benn: In response to the Indian Ocean earthquake and tsunami, the Department for International Development and the Ministry of Defence have an agreement based on marginal costing related to the use of UK military staff and equipment in the relief effort. The costs are agreed in advance and are competitive with commercial rates.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimates his Department have made of the total value of UK Government spending committed following the Indian Ocean earthquake and tsunami that will be paid to (a) other UK Government departments, (b) the UN or its agencies, (c) non-governmental organisations, (d) other national governments and (e) other agencies working in the countries affected; and if he will make a statement. [209083]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development has committed £75 million towards immediate humanitarian needs. This assistance is being channelled through United Nations agencies, the Red Cross Movement, non-governmental organisations and by DFID direct action. Of this, £40 million has been pledged as the UK contribution to the UN Flash Appeal. Requests for support from non-governmental organisations are still being received and we are continuing our direct action in support of priority needs. DFID estimates that the combined value of these will be about £25 million. The balance is being provided through the Red Cross, local initiatives being considered by DFID Country Offices, and the Ministry of Defence to cover the marginal costs of their operation.

On the bilateral front, DFID is continuing with the implementation of its international development programmes in those countries affected, where it has a bilateral programme. The UK is also providing Gift Aid relief on the money donated by the British public so far, which could be worth some £15 million. In addition to this, our share of the proposed package of up to €450 million from the European Community budget for immediate and longer-term relief is €90 million (approx. £63 million).

On debt relief, Sri Lanka has been added to the list of countries eligible for the UK's multilateral debt relief initiative. The UK will pay 10 per cent. of its debt service costs to the International Development Association (IDA) which amounts to approximately US $5.5 million in 2005, $5.8 million in 2006 and $6.2 million in 2007.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the sources are of UK financial assistance from public funds to date for the tsunami disaster; and what percentage of the pledged aid (a) is from the existing departmental budget and (b) he expects will be funded by other Government sources, broken down by source. [209089]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by the Prime Minister to the House of Commons on 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 24. As the Prime Minister explained, the Government has so far committed £75 million towards the immediate humanitarian response to the Indian Ocean disaster. This has been drawn from (a) DFID's humanitarian contingency budget and DFID's central Contingency Reserve (66.7 per cent.) and (b) the Treasury's Reserve (33.3 per cent.).

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what lessons his Department has drawn on the deployment of UK search and rescue teams following experience in the South Asian tsunami disaster area. [209318]

Hilary Benn: DFID did not deploy search and rescue teams following the Tsunami as the affected governments did not request UK search and rescue teams.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with the Indonesian Government about restrictions imposed on aid agencies regarding access to the Aceh region. [209590]

Hilary Benn: The Indonesian Government are concerned for the safety and security of humanitarian aid workers, and has introduced registration procedures. They also offer guidance and police escorts to those wishing to travel to areas where escorts are judged necessary. There have not been any reports of these measures restricting the movement of humanitarian aid, though DFID continues to monitor the situation.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's long-term strategy is for dealing with the aftermath of the tsunami disaster. [209592]

Hilary Benn: In addition to the £75 million already committed for immediate relief and recovery, DFID will make a further contribution to longer-term rehabilitation and reconstruction. DFID's focus will be on support to rebuilding livelihoods and services for poor people in affected countries. The governments concerned are currently completing needs assessments with the support of the World Bank and others. DFID will consider how we can best channel our support once we have the completed assessments of need.

DFID will work to ensure that the views of the poorest and most vulnerable are taken into account throughout the process of rehabilitation. It will be important that the response of donors and international agencies is co-ordinated properly to ensure effective use of funds and minimum burden on recipient countries. We will work to ensure that the UN relief effort is sustained and that there is a smooth transition from the recovery phase to longer-term rehabilitation.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with tsunami-affected countries on providing training for (a) local counsellors for victims suffering from post-traumatic stress and (b) local architects in relation to (i) reconstruction programmes and (ii) the design of safer essential buildings. [209593]

Hilary Benn: DFID recognises that psycho-social help is a key need in those countries affected by the tsunami. DFID has committed £2 million to the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC) for its programme in the region, which includes support to this sector. DFID has also provided £57,933 to the NGO "Basic Needs" for its work in mental health and psycho-social support in Sri Lanka. We are currently considering other funding proposals, which may include further support to psycho-social health.

DFID will work with the governments of the countries affected by the tsunami to ensure that disaster risk reduction measures, including reconstruction programmes and design of safer buildings, are integral to the reconstruction of the devastated areas. These issues are being discussed by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State with representatives of the governments concerned at the World Conference on Disaster Reduction in Kobe, Japan. Reconstruction programmes and design of buildings will naturally involve local architects and they will identify if there is a need for external expertise or training.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with countries affected by the tsunami about the supply of (a) field hospitals and (b) water purification plants. [209594]

Hilary Benn: DFID has provided relief items at the request of affected governments and following assessments of need by humanitarian agencies. DFID did not receive any specific request for field hospitals or water purification plants.

DFID has responded to health needs through support to organisations working in the health sector. Although it is difficult to be precise at this stage, a large proportion of DFID's support has gone to meet health needs, including £3.1 million to the World Health Organisation and additionally to non-governmental organisations including the International Medical Corps (£327,250) and the Mentor Initiative (£897,000). DFID also provided health related relief items, including enough emergency medical supplies to serve two million people for three months.

For water purification, DFID provided 1,000,000 water purification tablets, as well as support to implementing partners working in water and sanitation. This includes £4 million to UNICEF for water and sanitation activities in Indonesia, India the Maldives and Sri Lanka, and £2 million to the International Federation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies.

West African Currency

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the Central Bank of the States of West Africa's recent introduction of new currency into (a) Benin, (b) Burkina Faso, (c) Côte d'Ivoire, (d) Guinea Bissau, (e) Mali, (f) Niger, (g) Senegal and (h) Togo; and if he will make a statement; [209079]

(2) what reports (a) he and (b) his Department has received on shortcomings in the distribution policy of the Central Bank of the States of West Africa in its recent introduction of new currency into its member states; and if he will make a statement; [209080]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the (a) policy and (b) implementation of the policy of the Central Bank of the States of West Africa in its recent introduction of new currency into its member states, with particular reference to access to and distribution of new currency and exchange places in northern Côte d'Ivoire; and if he will make a statement. [209081]

Hilary Benn: DFID is aware of practical difficulties encountered in the currency conversion operation. We understand that these have been recognised, and resulted in an extension of the surrender deadline. DFID has not received any substantive independent reports or assessments of the conversion operation. DFID's bilateral activity and representation in the Franc of the African Financial Community (CFA Franc) zone is modest. DFID contributes to the countries concerned mainly through multilateral donors.

TRANSPORT

Civil Service Property

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many items of civil service property within his Department are unaccounted for, broken down by type; [205580]

(2) if he will list the property belonging to his Department that has (a) been stolen and (b) been reported lost in each year since 1997, broken down by type of article. [206364]

Charlotte Atkins: The answer to the questions includes the Central Department only and covers the period since the Department was formed on the 29 May 2002. To obtain a full answer including the Executive Agencies and NDPBs would involve disproportionate cost.

The following items have been reported lost or stolen:

	Number
Travel Vouchers	51
Laptop Computers	5
Government Procurement Cards	7
Computer Accessory	1
Building Passes	2

Criminal Offences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department in the (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 session, broken down by Act. [206873]

Charlotte Atkins: I have placed in the Libraries of the House a list of the criminal offences created in primary legislation sponsored by the Department for Transport in the sessions in question.

Departmen[illegible] Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much the Department spent on lawyers in each year since 1997; how many there were in each year broken down by (a) actions, (b) settlements and (c) court cases and what the costs were of each settlement. [206452]

Charlotte Atkins: The records available to the Department for Transport disclose the following information in respect of legal actions to which the Department (including its Agencies) and its predecessor Departments (in relation to their transport functions) were a party.

The total number of legal actions during the financial years 1997–98 to 2004–05 is 6,522. On these, the Departments have incurred a total sum in respect of legal costs (excluding internal staff costs) of approximately £37.4 million. This figure breaks down on an annual basis as follows:

1997–98	3.8
1998–99	5.0
1999–2000	5.1
2000–01	4.9
2001–02	3.5
2002–03	3.9
2004–05	5.1

Information as to the number and costs of actions resulting in court hearings and of settlements could be provided only at disproportionate expense.

Eurostar

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with representatives from Eurostar; and if he will make a statement. [209625]

Mr. McNulty: Ministers and officials meet representatives from Eurostar from time to time and discuss various matters.

External Suppliers

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many tenders were let by his Department to external suppliers in the financial year 2003–04; and what the value was. [209094]

Charlotte Atkins: The information for the central department and its agencies is set out in the following table.

2003–04

Organisation	Number of contracts for goods, works and services awarded	Total value (£)	Threshold above which tenders are invited (£)
DfT(C)	188	70,850,958	[1]25,000
Highways Agency	129	963,655,633	15,000
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	89	28,090,488	10,000
Driving Standards Agency	28	3,199,389	20,000
Marine and Coastguard Agency	186	12,816,000	5,000
Vehicle and Operator Services Agency	187	12,467,853	[2]—
Vehicle Certification Agency	1	106,675	15,000
Total	808	1,091,186,996	—

[1] £0 threshold for IT services.

[2] £3,000 for goods, services and consultancy. £15,000 for works.

Flooding

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what flood risk analysis was undertaken prior to approval being given for the Carlisle Northern Development Route; and if he will make a statement. [210292]

Charlotte Atkins: The design of the scheme includes a major crossing over the River Eden and its flood plain. This is a 144 metre long two span structure with one span entirely within the flood plain. At this point, the proposed route is on a 9 metre high embankment to carry the road over the river and its flood plain. I understand that scheme designers worked with the Environment Agency in the development of the scheme and the proposed design reflects a number of constraints required by the Agency.

I also understand that the county council are producing a Flood Risk Assessment in support of a planning application to amend conditions in the existing planning consent.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are for the resurfacing of the M2 between junctions 5 and 6 with noise-reducing material. [210375]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency intends to resurface the M2 between junctions 5 and 6 (Sittingbourne to Faversham) with a quieter surfacing material in the summer/autumn of 2005, subject to funding being available.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the ministerial engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that he has cancelled since 1 January 2004. [209218]

Charlotte Atkins: The Secretary of State and other Ministers carry out frequent engagements both in and outside London and it is occasionally necessary to cancel such engagements for parliamentary or other ministerial business. Details of cancelled engagements could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

New Cars (Emissions)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of new cars sold in 2003 emitted less than 100g of carbon dioxide per kilometre; and what projection he has made for the percentages that will be allowed for each year until 2012. [210265]

Mr. Jamieson: The Powering Future Vehicles (PFV) Strategy, published in 2002, sets a challenging target that by 2012 at least 10 per cent. of new cars sold in the UK will have a fuel efficiency of 100g per kilometre of carbon dioxide (100g/km CO_2) or better. We reported progress towards this target in the second annual report on the delivery of the PFV Strategy, published in October 2004. The percentage of new vehicles sold in 2003 emitting less than 100 g/km CO_2 was less than 0.1 per cent., although 3 per cent. of new cars sold emitted less than 120 g/km CO_2—a significant increase on the previous year.

The rate of progress in future years will depend, among other things, on how quickly new technologies are developed and introduced, and on the nature of any further EU-wide targets on new car fuel efficiency. We will monitor the situation closely and keep the existing package of measures under review to ensure that it is delivering the progress required, working closely with stakeholders including the Low Carbon Vehicle Partnership. The scope for new measures will be considered carefully as part of the Review of the Climate Change Programme which is currently under way.

Newspapers/Periodicals

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) newspapers and (b) periodicals taken by his Department in each year since 1997; and how much the Department spent on each in each year. [207648]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport was established as a separate department on 29 May 2002. Separate expenditure figures for DfT while subsumed within DTLR are not available for previous years. The total expenditure by DfT(C) for the period from formation until 23 December 2004 was £149,000, to the nearest £1,000. This figure can only be split between newspapers and periodicals at disproportionate cost.

With effect from 1 November 2004, ODPM's central publications acquisitions service (which provided a service to DfT) ceased operation and responsibility for purchases transferred to individual Divisions within the Department by ODPM as part of its commitment to greater efficiency. Although expenditure information can still be obtained for the whole Department, information on titles purchased is only available centrally for those titles ordered or on active subscription as at 31 October 2004. The current list has been placed in the Libraries of the House. The list of titles includes those titles taken by ODPM. Extracting listings for individual Departments can be done only at disproportionate cost.

Parking Charges

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether trades vans servicing private houses have been considered for exemption from local authority parking charges; [210148]

(2) what categories of vehicles are exempt from parking fines and charges. [210149]

Charlotte Atkins: Charges and other conditions applying to designated parking spaces will be set out in the relevant traffic authority's parking order for the spaces concerned. Exemptions from charges, for example for permit holders (usually residents) or for emergency services' and statutory undertakers' vehicles when carrying out their duties, may be included, but it is the authority's responsibility to decide what exemptions, if any, are appropriate in each case. We do not hold information centrally on where particular categories of vehicles, including trade vans servicing private houses, have been considered for, or the subject of, such exemptions.

Parking fines or penalty charges are payable where vehicles are parked in contravention of the traffic regulation orders, e.g. yellow lines, or parking order conditions. Again it is for the traffic authority to decide whether exemptions, such as those mentioned above, to any parking restrictions should be provided in the orders. In general, any exceptions would usually be kept to a minimum otherwise they could detract from the purpose for which the restrictions were made and make enforcement more difficult. Vehicles covered by such an exemption in the relevant order would not be liable for a fine or penalty.

Single-hulled Tankers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the risk to the marine environment in (i) the Solent and (ii) other UK coastal waters from single-hulled tankers; and if he will make a statement. [208685]

Mr. Jamieson: I have not commissioned or evaluated any recent research on the risk to the marine environment in UK coastal waters from single hull tankers.

However, the UK has played a key role in both the International Maritime Organisation (IMO) and the EU in negotiating an acceleration of a programme to phase-out single hull tankers from world trade, while ensuring continuity of energy supply. The IMO has recently agreed to an accelerated programme, under which the large majority of single hull tankers will have been phased out by the end of 2010. Single hull tankers which will be under 25 years of age at the end of 2010 will be allowed to continue in service until the end of 2015, or on reaching age 25 if earlier, but only if they first pass a rigorous assessment of their condition. Based on the IMO agreement, there is a EU Regulation, now in force, which prohibits single hull tankers entering or leaving EU ports and anchorages when carrying heavy grades of oil as cargo.

South Hampshire Rapid Transit Project

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his timetable is for reaching a conclusion on the re-evaluation of the South Hampshire Rapid Transit project; and if he will make a statement. [208950]

Charlotte Atkins: A revised proposal was received on 25 November 2004. However, further information is required on the appraisal, financing and procurement before the Department can reach a conclusion. The promoters' advise that this necessary documentation will be supplied during March.

St. Pancras

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will approve the fitting-out of St. Pancras Midland Road Station for use by Thameslink train services to enable this station to be opened with St. Pancras International in mid 2007. [209917]

Mr. McNulty: It is our intention to carry out the fitting-out of St. Pancras Midland Road Station. No decision has yet been taken on the exact timing of this work.

Stourport Relief Road

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the future of the Stourport relief road project; [208823]

(2) what funding his Department will make available to build the Stourport relief road. [208824]

Charlotte Atkins: No proposal for major scheme funding for the Stourport relief road project has been received by the Department. It would be for Worcestershire county council to decide whether or not they wish to prepare a scheme proposal and, if so, to include broad details in their next Local Transport Plan (LTP) due to be submitted to the Department in provisional form by July 2005. Schemes submitted for funding under the LTP programme are considered in the light of their performance against our appraisal criteria and available resources. In addition, under the proposals set out in our consultation document "Devolving decision making: A consultation on regional funding allocations", we propose to seek regional advice on the relative priority of major transport proposals in the region on the basis of long term regional funding guidelines.

Train Timetables

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what response his Department has made to representations received regarding the December timetable changes on routes from Paddington to Maidenhead and Twyford. [209949]

Mr. McNulty: The Department's response to representations related to the December 2004 timetable changes is that they deliver wider benefits through improvements to punctuality across the First Great Western and First Great Western Link franchises.

Trams

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are for further tram networks in cities which have poor public transport systems. [209433]

Charlotte Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State on 20 October 2004, Official Report, column 693W. Local authorities in a number of cities, are developing proposals for tram networks or improvements to existing systems, including extensions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

A3 Hindhead

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures the South East England Development Agency took to press the case for the A3 Hindhead tunnel to remain in the active roads programme. [209512]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

None. The proposed A3 Hindhead improvement scheme remains in our strategic roads programme and has been classified as a scheme of regional importance. This was announced in the Highways Agency's press release of 1 December 2004.

Anti-bribery/Corruption Procedures

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what definition the Export Credits Guarantee Department uses of the phrase, "sufficient evidence", used in the OECD Action Statement on Bribery and Officially Supported Export Credits. [202924]

Mr. Alexander: The reference is to a provision in the OECD Action Statement on Bribery and Corruption and Officially Supported Export Credits which records an agreement that Export Credit Agencies shall not provide cover or support if they discover before doing so sufficient evidence that bribery has been involved in the award of the export contract. The best evidence that such is the case would be an unappealable conviction in a court of law. Short of that, ECGD would have to consider, taking into account all material matters and all the evidence available to it whether it would be reasonable for ECGD to conclude that bribery had been so involved.

Avient

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether she (a) had sight of and (b) approved the recent statement by the UK National Contact Point for the OECD Guidelines on Avient; and if she will make a statement. [200490]

Mr. Alexander: Yes. Ministers saw and approved the statement on Avient.

Broadband

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of Great Britain is broadband enabled, broken down by region. [208942]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: At the end of June 2004, terrestrial broadband services were available to 90 per cent. of households in the UK. The regional breakdown is set out in the table.

Household coverage—July 2004

Region	Percentage
East Midlands	88
East of England	86
London	100
North East	95
North West	95
Northern Ireland	75
Scotland	78
South East	93
South West	82
Wales	81
West Midlands	90
Yorkshire and Humberside	89

Source:
Analysys Consulting Limited, July 2004

Both availability and take-up of terrestrial broadband services are continuing to rise. Latest estimates indicate that availability in the UK has reached 95 per cent. and there are some 6 million broadband subscribers. We aim to reach 99 per cent. this year.

Burma

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the merits of imposing a ban on imports from Burma; and if she will make a statement. [202838]

Mr. Alexander: The Government have a long-standing policy of not encouraging British companies to trade with Burma and we offer no support to companies that wish to do so.

As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said in the House on 25 June 2003, Official Report, column 1042,

> "we do not believe that trade is appropriate when the regime continues to suppress the basic human rights of its people".

Through the EU's Common Position on Burma we have imposed a comprehensive programme of targeted measures on the regime. We regularly review the terms and conditions of the Common Position with our EU partners.

We favour multilateral targeted measures against Burma wherever possible because these have a greater practical impact and send a stronger political signal. We will therefore continue to support multilateral action through the EU's Common Position on Burma.

Canatxx

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the occasions on which (a) Ministers and (b) officials from her Department have communicated with Canatxx Gas Stonage Ltd., Canatxx Energy Ventures Ltd. or a company associated with Canatxx (i) by letter, (ii) by e-mail, (iii) by telephone and (iv) in person; and if she will publish the content of such communication on the departmental website. [209827]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The information requested is not immediately available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Events

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the (a) conferences, (b) seminars, (c) workshops, (d) exhibitions and (e) press conferences which have been sponsored by her Department and which took place on non-departmental premises in each of the last two years giving the (i) title, (ii) purpose, (iii) date and (iv) cost of each. [202387]

Ms Hewitt: The organisation of conferences, seminars, workshops and exhibition is the responsibility of individual policy groups. The information requested is not held centrally and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Employment Tribunals

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government will take steps to ensure that employment tribunal awards and private settlements of employment cases brokered by ACAS can be enforced without recourse to legal action by the aggrieved person. [210469]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department of Constitutional Affairs (DCA) White Paper "Transforming Public Services: Complaints Redress and Tribunals", published in July 2004, recognised the fact that enforcement of tribunal awards can sometimes pose difficulties. It also pointed out that private settlements of cases, even if brokered by ACAS, have no status beyond that of an ordinary contract. It went on to say:

> "This is unsatisfactory. We will reform these processes so that an award of compensation, whether ordered by the tribunal or agreed between the parties, can be enforced with the minimum of bureaucracy as if it were an order of the civil courts."

Officials are working closely with their colleagues at DCA toward delivery of this commitment.

Fur

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to combat the illegal international fur trade. [206547]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are strongly opposed to the illegal trade in fur skins and we fully support efforts being made through the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) to address this. We have recently committed some £15,000 to help fund a meeting of the CITES-Tiger Enforcement Task Force to co-ordinate action to combat the illicit trade in Asian big cat skins. We have also made £20,000 available to assist the Indian Government in establishing a Wildlife Crime Cell to help address the illegal trade in wildlife in that country.

At home the Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime (PAW) supports a network of Police Wildlife Crime Officers and Customs Officers responsible for enforcing CITES. There is also a dedicated Customs enforcement team at Heathrow Airport responsible for enforcing the international controls in CITES species. We also monitor the major internet sites and take enforcement action where possible illegal sales of wildlife items are identified. Internet crime is one of the growth areas that I have asked the National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit to focus particular attention on.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which 25 constituencies have received most money in payments under the Miners' Compensation Scheme. [209178]

Nigel Griffiths: The information requested is as follows:

[1] As at 31 December 2004

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the ratio of deceased to live Miners' Compensation Scheme claims is (a) in each region and (b) overall. [209179]

Nigel Griffiths: As of 31 December 2004 the figures are as follows.

Claims	Wales	Scotland	Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire and Leicestershire	Yorkshire	North East	Midlands	South/ South East	Total

CAB Funding

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much central Government funding was provided to Citizens Advice Bureaux in the last year for which figures are available; and how that funding is allocated. [209327]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This information is not held centrally in the Department and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, some limited information can be found in Citizens Advice's 2004 annual report.

Post Offices

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 11 January 2005, Official Report, column 421W, on the post office (rural subsidy), what the average assigned office payment to sub-postmasters is; and how many (a) rural, (b) urban and (c) urban deprived sub-post offices received assigned office payments. [210138]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Payment to individual sub-postmasters are an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. and I have asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) urban and (b) rural (i) sub-post offices and (ii) directly managed post offices are loss-making; and what the total annual loss was in the last year for which figures are available. [210119]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. and I have asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Premium Telephone Numbers

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will refer the operators of premium telephone number 090 66 33 6929 to the Independent Committee for the Supervision of Standards of Telephone Information Services. [209389]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: ICSTIS is already taking enforcement action against service provider who uses this telephone number as the services on this number are in breach of the ICSTIS Code of Practice. ICSTIS shut down services on this number on 14 January 2005. ICSTIS will adjudicate on this service in the next few weeks. ICSTIS has the powers to fine service providers who are in breach of its Code and bar them from providing services.

WALES

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the contracts signed by his special advisers differ from the Model Contract for Special Advisers. [207231]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 753W.

Welsh Regiments

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the Secretary of State for Defence to discuss the renaming of the Welsh infantry regiment to reflect more prominently the names of the Royal Regiment of Wales and the Royal Welch Fusiliers. [208693]

Mr. Hain: I am aware of the strong feelings on this matter and have discussed these with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. I will write to my hon. Friend if there are any developments.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Archaeology

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much funding her Department has provided for archaeology projects in each of the past seven years. [209894]

Mr. Caborn: Government funding for the historic environment is channelled through English Heritage. Since 1997–98, English Heritage has distributed the following amounts through its grants programme to support a wide range of archaeology related research, external capacity building and outreach projects:

1998–99	4,673,000
1999–00	5,050,000
2000–01	4,557,000
2001–02	5,117,000
2002–03	5,473,000
2003–04	5,594,000

English Heritage also receives additional funding from Defra's Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund. Since 2002–03 it has distributed the following amounts from the Fund to support archaeology projects:

2003–04	5,184,000

Art Exports

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to place a temporary export licence ban on Damien Hirst's "The Physical Impossibility of Death in the Mind of Someone Living" (1991)—the Shark—and what reports she has received of attempts to keep the object in the country. [210110]

Estelle Morris: The export controls on objects of cultural interest apply only to objects manufactured or produced more than 50 years before the date of exportation. This means that Damien Hirst's "The Physical Impossibility of Death in the Mind of Someone Living" will not require an export licence; and I, therefore, do not have the power to intervene in its export.

Clwyd, South Constituency

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Clwyd, South constituency, the effects on Clwyd, South of her Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [210327]

Mr. Caborn: Most of the matters for which the Department is responsible in England have been devolved in Wales to the National Assembly for Wales. However, there are some reserved areas in which the Government has introduced initiatives which affect the Clwyd, South constituency.

The Licensing Act 2003 (Commencement) Order 2003 repealed those parts of the Licensing Act 1964 which allowed the local government electorate in the counties and county boroughs of Wales to requisition polls to decide whether licensed premises should be allowed to open on Sundays. This has removed the uncertainty which businesses in Wales, including those in Clwyd South, faced, allowing them to exercise long-term planning. It also removes a costly administrative burden on local authorities and an artificial difference in licensing controls between Wales and England, which prevented businesses and customers exercising freedom of choice.

The Gambling Bill will, when implemented, transfer responsibility for licensing gambling premises to local authorities. Local people and businesses will be able to make representations about applications for licenses and local authorities will be able to decide not to issue licenses for casino premises. These changes will give local communities, including those in Clwyd South, a greater say in the regulation of gambling in their area.

Information from the National Lottery distributors indicates that since 2 May 1997 Clwyd, South has benefited from over 280 awards totalling over £5.6 million. Of these, 70 awards worth over £1.5 million were made by the New Opportunities Fund which was established by the Government in 1999.

DCMS/EU Co-operation

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with the European Commission on the supporting, co-ordinating and complementary action which may be taken by the EU in the field of (a) culture, (b) tourism and (c) sport under article I-17 of the proposed EU Constitution. [209586]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has not undertaken detailed discussions about the new competences in sport and tourism with the European Commission as such discussions would pre-empt the result of the referendum on the Constitutional Treaty.

(a) Culture: Concerning the future culture programmes of the EU, my officials have regular meetings with other Member States and the European Commission.

(b) Sport: DCMS has not had any bilateral discussions with the Commission. However, UK delegations have attended meetings of EU Sports Directors and meetings of EU Sports Ministers—where the Commission is also represented—at which discussions about future EU action in the field of sport have taken place.

(c) Tourism: DCMS has not had any bilateral discussions with the European Commission on the proposed new competence for tourism in the EU Constitutional Treaty. DCMS officials have been present at EU meetings when the topic of the new competence has been discussed in general terms.

Digital Switch-over

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Government are taking to ensure the revised target date of 2012 for switch off of the analogue signal is met; and if she will make a statement. [210013]

Estelle Morris: The Government will confirm the timetable for switchover once the few remaining issues relating to digital switchover are resolved and we are satisfied that the interests of consumers, especially the most vulnerable, are well protected.

We are working with broadcasters, Ofcom, leading charities, consumer groups and other stakeholders to determine the most appropriate timetable. This has to meet the interests of consumers and the economy as a whole and be achievable by the broadcasters.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress the Government have made towards meeting its targets for digital switchover. [210014]

Estelle Morris: Great progress has been made. We welcome the fact that Ofcom have issued Digital Replacement Licences to the Commercial Public Service Broadcasters.

Following the recommendations of the independent Ofcom Consumer panel and Digital Television Consumer Expert Group reports, we are working with leading charities to consider how to best protect the interest of consumers, particularly the most vulnerable.

Stakeholders are also now working on the structure and remit of a switchover implementation body, which should be in place this year. Digital take-up is well above industry forecasts. Almost 60 per cent. of households are now estimated to have a digital television.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the applicability of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 to the Press Complaints Commission; and if she will designate the Press Complaints Commission as a public body for the purposes of the Act. [210147]

Estelle Morris: The Freedom of Information Act does not apply to the Press Complaints Commission (PCC) as it is not a public authority. The Government strongly believes that a press free from any state intervention is fundamental to democracy. Designating the PCC a public authority would not be compatible with the Government's support for an independent body overseeing Press self-regulation

Liquor Licensing

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received from local authorities concerning the proposed (a) transition fees and (b) annual fees for liquor licensing. [209663]

Mr. Caborn: The draft fee levels payable under the Licensing Act 2003 were subject to a public consultation which concluded on 23 December 2004. Views from everybody with an interest in fee levels have been considered, including from local authorities. Responses were received from 136 individual local authorities. Separate responses were also received from the Local Government Association and Local Authorities Co-ordinators of Regulatory Services (LACORS); and from the Association of London Government; on behalf of local authorities.

Lottery Funding (Sunderland)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support her Department is giving to visitor attractions in Sunderland; and if she will make a statement. [209536]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS supports the tourism industry as a whole. For example, visitor attractions in Sunderland will benefit from my Department's funding for VisitBritain, which for 2004–05 includes £35.5 million for marketing Britain as a tourism destination overseas, and £10.4 million for marketing England to the domestic tourism market.

The Regional Development Agencies have strategic responsibility for tourism in the regions. In 2004–05 my Department is contributing £330,000 to the Government's funding for One North East.

Attractions in Sunderland have also benefited directly from National Lottery funding.

PSA Targets

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost was to (a) her Department, (b) other Government Departments and (c) Government sponsored bodies were of (i) formulating, (ii) implementing and (iii) assessing her Department's public service agreement targets four and five, as set out in the departmental annual report 2004. [210111]

Mr. Caborn: The information is not available in the form requested. The Department attributes expenditure incurred in delivering its objectives in schedule 5 of the resource accounts. Expenditure incurred on the public service agreement (PSA) targets springing from these objectives is included within expenditure allocated to each objective. Such expenditure, however, is not separately identifiable in the expenditure figures in schedule 5, and could be provided in the detail required in the question only at disproportionate cost.

The PSA targets referred to in the 2004 departmental annual report relate to the spending review 2000 period. The expenditure incurred in delivering the objectives for the 2002 sending review period were reported in the 2003–04 resource accounts, which were not available at the time the 2004 annual report was published.

Underwater Heritage

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Government will ratify the Unesco Convention on Underwater Heritage; and if she will make a statement. [210917]

Mr. Caborn: The UK Government has no current plans to sign the Unesco Convention but has adopted the annex of the Convention as best practice for archaeology.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what reason the Government has not yet ratified the Unesco Convention on Underwater Heritage; and if she will make a statement. [210918]

Mr. Caborn: The UK Government did not ratify the Unesco Convention because we would be required to protect all underwater cultural heritage over 100 years old. This is not practical as there are over 10,000 known wreck sites in UK waters.

We believe that it is better to focus our efforts and resources on protecting the most important examples of our underwater cultural heritage.

We have however shown commitment to archaeological best practice by adopting the annex to this Convention and ratifying the Valetta Convention (Treaty of Malta also known as the European Convention on Protection of the Archaeological Heritage 1992).

Video Violence

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment her Department has made of the effectiveness of measures in place to prevent children from gaining access to violent films and video games; [209737]

(2) what legal sanctions may be imposed against retailers who sell or supply 18 films or video games with an 18 classification to children. [209736]

(3) what assessment her Department has undertaken of possible links between violent crime and violent television programmes and video games. [209739]

Estelle Morris: Access by children to films in video/DVD format and computer games is controlled by the Video Recordings Act 1984, under which supplying videos, DVDs or games classified by the British Board of Film Classification (BBFC) to those who do not meet the age requirements is punishable by a fine of up to £5,000, a prison sentence of up to six months, or both. The Cinemas Act 1985, provides for the licensing of cinemas by local authorities, and under these arrangements controls on access by children to cinemas can be stipulated. In 2003, only 32 (or 2 per cent.) of the 1,484 computer games published depicted 'gross violence' and therefore required legal classification by the BBFC. Of these, just seven were considered to be suitable for only those aged over 18.

Local trading standards officers have enforcement powers under the 1984 Act. On 10 December 2004, my officials met members of the Trading Standards Institute and the Local Government Association along with representatives of the retail sector to discuss how the sale of violent computer games could be better regulated. Further discussions on enforcement are to be held.

A great deal of research has been carried out on whether violent films, television or games have an impact on real-life behaviour, but there is much conflicting opinion. The Department has recently commissioned a review of the existing research to determine whether the alleged link between playing violent computer games and real-life violence has any substance.

Welsh Television

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will ensure that ITV Wales continues to produce at least 10 hours of original Welsh programming and programmes for S4C until 2012. [209740]

Estelle Morris: ITV Wales has no obligation to produce Welsh-language programming but is currently required to produce a minimum of 10 hours a week (averaged over a calendar year) of programmes of particular interest to people in Wales for showing on ITV. These programmes are broadcast in English. Ofcom are currently considering the sustainability of this obligation as part of their Public Service Broadcasting review.

DEFENCE

BAE Systems

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what work BAE Systems carried out at (a) RAF Cottismore and (b) RAF Marham in (i) 2003 and (ii) 2004; [209496]

(2) what contracts were entered into with BAE Systems at RAF Cottesmore in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004. [209517]

Mr. Ingram: The Tornado Integrated Project Team provides logistic support to the entire Tornado GR4/F3 departmental fleet. The information requested is not held in a format that would allow identification of work specifically carried out by BAE Systems, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In January 2003, BAE Systems was awarded a contract to form the Joint Repair Management Team (JRMT) at RAF Cottesmore. The contract ended in June 2004. The JRMT was replaced by the Joint Repair Organisation (JRO) and a contract was awarded to BAE Systems in June 2004 to form the new JRO.

In September 2004 a contracted task was raised against the Harrier Post Design Services contract to provide eight BAE Systems personnel to work on the Harrier Pulse Line.

An enabling contract for the Harrier Joint Upgrade and Maintenance Programme (JUMP) was awarded to BAE Systems on 15 November 2004.

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many BAE Systems personnel worked at (a) RAF Cottesmore and (b) RAF Marham in (i) 2003 and (ii) 2004. [209497]

Mr. Ingram: In 2003 seven BAE Systems personnel were working permanently at RAF Cottesmore in support of contracted tasks. In 2004 a total of 34 BAE Systems staff were similarly employed although not all of those individuals were present for the full calendar year.

Information on the number of BAE Systems personnel working at RAF Marham in 2003 and 2004 respectively is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Brunei

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) for what reason the three offshore patrol vessels built by BAE Systems and endorsed by the Royal Navy for the Royal Brunei Navy are subject to arbitration; [208484]

(2) what the total value is of the (a) contract now and (b) through life support for the three offshore patrol vessels built for the Royal Brunei Navy. [208482]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 January 2005]: The current value of the contract and the costs of through-life support for these vessels are a matter for the parties to the contract, BAE Systems and the Government of Brunei. I can confirm that the Royal Navy, with the agreement of both parties, undertook last year an independent study of the progress of the programme, but it would be inappropriate to comment on the continuing discussions between the parties about the acceptance of the vessels.

Camouflage Garment Contract

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what types of camouflage garments and how many of each type had been delivered up to 31 December 2004 under the terms of his Department's camouflage garment contract. [209394]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 20 January 2005]: It is assumed that my hon. Friend refers to the award of a contract for Cut and Sewn Garments. As stated in reply to his earlier question of 9 December 2004, Official Report, column 694W, deliveries of combat clothing under this contract are not due to commence until early 2005.

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the officials who conducted the most recent review of his Department's contract awarded for the manufacture of camouflage garments were the same as those responsible for making the award. [209395]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 20 January 2005]: An independent review was carried out by a senior civil servant outside of the business area associated with the award of the contract.

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the scale of subsidies given to the China people's liberation factory 3533 by the Chinese Government in connection with his Department's contract for camouflage garment manufacture. [209396]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The Ministry of Defence does not hold this information as the Prime Contractor is not required to provide this detail under the terms of the contract.

Damaged Harriers

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated cost was of the damage to Harrier air frames at RAF Cottesmore in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004. [209519]

Mr. Ingram: In 2003 and 2004, no Harrier aircraft was damaged while undergoing repair and maintenance at RAF Cottesmore.

Falcon

Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the early introduction into service of Falcon is required to secure the operational benefits of network enabled capability. [209748]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The capability provided by Falcon will contribute significantly to delivering the operational benefits of network enabled capability (NEC), along with a number of other capabilities. But the exact timing of the introduction into service of any particular capability will not determine the overall success of the long term NEC initiative.

Fire Service

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost incurred by his Department as a result of the strikes by firefighters in 2003 was; and if he will make a statement. [209806]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence provided emergency fire cover during the national firefighters' strikes of 2002 and 2003 in response to a request from ODPM. ODPM agreed in advance to reimburse MOD's marginal costs. This has now been done and the bill amounted to slightly over £75 million excluding VAT.

Additionally, ODPM requested MOD assistance when strike action was projected in the summer of 2004. Although that dispute was resolved without strikes taking place, MOD incurred preparatory costs of £602,000 excluding VAT. These too have been claimed from ODPM.

Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft Programme

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to finalise the endorsement of preferred bidder status for the Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft Programme; and if he will make a statement. [209155]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 17 January 2005]: The Ministry of Defence is currently considering the progress made to date with Air Tanker in single bidder discussions. We expect to make a decision in the coming months on whether Air Tanker should be accorded preferred bidder status for this complex and important PFI competition. We shall of course ensure that the House is kept fully informed of significant developments.

Gibraltar Police

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Department received the views of the solicitor representing the Gibraltar Service Police Association on the intention to deduct moneys from police officers arising from the dispute about the payment of rent allowances and the application of the analogue principle; for what reasons a substantive reply has not been sent; and if he will make a statement. [209694]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 19 January 2005]: Ministry of Defence officials in Gibraltar first received correspondence from Marrache and Company, the solicitors acting for the Gibraltar Services Police Association (GSPSA), in February 2004. MOD officials have been involved in a long exchange of correspondence with the solicitors in which they have consistently set out the Department's intention to recover the over-payment. Marrache and Company have had a copy of the letter from MOD officials to the GSPSA, which sets out the Department's position in detail since February 2004.

Infantry Future Army Structure

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether Sandhurst Officer Cadets will be able to apply for the individual battalions rather than the new regiments when the new Infantry Future Army Structure is in place; [208291]

(2) whether the individual battalions in the new regiments within the Prince of Wales, Kings and Scottish Divisions will be allowed to recruit officers in the new Infantry Future Army Structure. [208292]

Mr. Ingram: Recruitment of officer cadets under the Infantry Future Army Structure will be by regiment, rather than individual battalion. Recruits will remain entitled to state their interests and preferences, and, although every effort will be made to accommodate each recruit, there can be no guarantee that these will be met.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Infantry battalions will have training time free of operational call up when the Infantry Future Army Structure is in place. [208295]

Mr. Ingram: The Army is implementing, under Future Army Structures, a strategy to deliver both training and commitments known as the Force Operations and Readiness Mechanism (FORM); a replacement for the Formation Readiness Cycle. All Army units, including Infantry battalions, will programme their training and operational commitment activities according to the principles of FORM.

FORM enables the Army to meet its outputs (force elements ready for both programmed operations and contingent operations) from within the force structure. The sequence of activity for any one force element, such as an Infantry battalion, is in five separate six month phases: recuperation; unit and battlegroup training; formation training; high readiness; and an operational deployment.

Inglis Barracks

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects British Forces Post Office to vacate their site at Mill Hill, Inglis Barracks; and if he will make a statement. [202972]

Mr. Caplin: A project is in place to provide a new facility at RAF Northolt for the British Forces Post Office. It is planned that this facility will be occupied during 2007, at which time Inglis Barracks will be vacated.

Iran

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Iranian authorities have returned the Royal Marine boats, weapons and equipment that were seized during the recent Gulf hostilities; and if he will make a statement. [209821]

Mr. Ingram: The Iranian authorities have not returned the boats and equipment which they seized on 21 June. We continue to press for their return.

Royal Regiment of Scotland

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the future Royal Regiment of Scotland will be able to maintain the establishment for five battalions under present recruiting levels. [208293]

Mr. Ingram: The ability to man the five battalions of the Royal Regiment of Scotland will depend on a number of factors. It is not possible to predict its establishment until it is clear what roles the battalions of the regiment will be assigned. Recruitment to the Scottish Division has recently been slightly depressed not least by coverage of 'Save the Regiment' campaigns. However, assuming that the establishment of the future battalions remains broadly similar to current levels and a return to the recruiting levels achieved in recent years, levels of enlistment to the Royal Regiment of Scotland should be sufficient to sustain five battalions.

Secondments

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the people working within his Department on secondment from the private sector, broken down by (a) the organisation or industry they came from and (b) the policy responsibilities they have been given. [208630]

Mr. Caplin: The information is as follows:

Staff Vacancies

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on advertising staff vacancies in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [209581]

Mr. Caplin: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tsunami (Military Assistance)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reason flights scheduled to deliver aid to areas affected by the tsunami in Asia have been held up at RAF Lyneham. [209728]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 20 January 2005]: Flights to deliver aid to the areas affected by the tsunami have not been held up. The Ministry of Defence is carrying out operations as tasked by DFID. DFID has agreed to transport appropriate relief items procured by Disasters Emergency Committee (DEC) agencies in response to specific and stated needs on the ground. The MOD originally made available one C17 and five C130 (Hercules) aircraft to assist the relief operation. In fact, C17s and KC1 (Tristar) aircraft have been used more extensively due to the distances and types of cargo involved.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Employment Services

17. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what changes are (a) under way and (b) planned in Greater London in the provision of employment and related services. [209988]

Malcolm Wicks: The rollout of fully integrated Jobcentre Plus offices is continuing, with over 500 new style offices providing a modern, customer focussed service to over a million people every week.

Over 40 new Jobcentre Plus offices are already delivering to customers in London with the remainder to be rolled out in the next two years.

Employment Advisers

18. Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the role that placing employment advisers within GPs' surgeries might have on encouraging people into work. [209989]

Alan Johnson: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Miss Begg).

Customer Services

19. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on progress being made to improve customer service in those offices in his Department which work directly with the general public. [209990]

Malcolm Wicks: In recent years DWP has received massive investment to enable us to deliver an improved, modernised and more efficient service to our customers—particularly those staff dealing directly with the public. For example, we are putting an extra 10,000 staff in to front line roles. Roles like Jobcentre Plus Personal Advisers who offer personal, tailored services to help get individuals back into work and build on our, already, record levels of employment.

Disability Discrimination Act

21. Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what support is provided for people with disabilities taking action under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [209992]

Maria Eagle: Under provisions in the Disability Rights Commission Act 1999, the DRC provides advice and information to disabled people about how they may enforce their rights under the Disability Discrimination Act. The Commission has powers to provide assistance in relation to proceedings in certain circumstances, and it operates a conciliation service for disputes under Parts 3 and 4 of the Act.

Disabled people taking action under the DDA may also obtain advice from sources such as disability organisations, trade unions and Citizens Advice Bureaux.

State Pension

22. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) men and (b) women were in receipt of state retirement pension in the Coventry, South constituency in (i) 1999 and (ii) 2004. [209993]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the following table.

	Men	Women
2004	6,000	10,100

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100.
2. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a high degree of sampling variation.
3. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant Office for National Statistics postcode directory.
4. Figures show all people getting a state pension i.e. a Category A, B, C or D state pension or graduated retirement benefit.

Source:

IAD Information Centre 5 per cent. sample as at 30 September 1999 and 31 March 2004.

Older Workers

23. Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to encourage and help older workers in employment. [209994]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government is committed to tackling age discrimination in employment and extending opportunities for older workers. New Deal 50 plus is part of the campaign to improve the employment prospects of older people and encourage them to return to work.

Budget 2004 announced a new high profile national guidance campaign to raise employers' awareness of, and ability to adopt, flexible employment and retirement opportunities in order to increase the recruitment, retention and training of older workers.

Pension Credit

24. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of how many pensioners are not claiming the pension credit to which they are entitled. [209995]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not currently available. We plan to publish definitive National Statistics on take-up and entitlement for the first six months of pension credit by the end of 2005.

I am pleased to inform my hon. Friend that as at the end of last year 4,072 pensioner households (4,870 individuals) were receiving pension credit, with an average weekly payment of £41.68 per household.

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many old age pensioners within the Harwich constituency are in receipt of pension credit. [210685]

Malcolm Wicks: At 31 October 2004, 7,125 pensioner households in Harwich, comprising 9,010 individuals, were in receipt of pension credit.

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.
3. Pension credit figures are available for 31 October 2004 as the final output of processes that were put in place to deliver special monthly reporting during the first year of the roll-out of pension credit. As Parliament was told in the statement accompanying the last such report, data will in future be available on a quarterly basis, in line with standard departmental practice.

Action for Employment

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) grants he has made to and (b) contracts he has made with Action for Employment (A4e) in each of the last five years; and what conditions apply to the use of such grants for the production of marketing materials. [207771]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 13 January 2005]: Around 200 contracts have been placed with Action for Employment since 2001. A list of these contracts has been placed in the Library.

Information on contracts with Action for Employment prior to the formation of the Department for Work and Pensions is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department has not made any grants to Action for Employment.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of measures his Department has taken to tackle benefit fraud. [209978]

Malcolm Wicks: We have made excellent progress in the fight against fraud. By March 2004 we had reduced fraud in the two main working age benefits by half.

Since 1997 we have saved the equivalent of over £1 billion through the effectiveness of our counter-fraud measures. And that can only be good news for the taxpayer.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what systems are in place (a) to assess the relative urgency of cases referred to the MP's hotline in the South West Business Unit of the Child Support Agency and (b) to prioritise cases accordingly. [209367]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 24 January 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what systems are in place (a) to assess the relative urgency of cases referred to the MP's hotline in the South West Business Unit of the Child Support Agency and (b) to prioritise them accordingly.

All cases referred by Members of Parliament, including those referred to the 'MP Hotline', are regarded as high priority. If a case is drawn to the Agency's attention as one of a critical nature the resolution manager will engage with it immediately and if necessary deploy additional resource to investigate it.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in each business unit of the Child Support Agency have been diverted to deal with complaints about the new system for assessing claims. [209735]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. David Drew, dated 24 January 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many staff in each business unit of the Child Support Agency have been diverted to deal with complaints about the new system for assessing claims.

I do not have the information you seek. I can however say that there are currently around 870 staff within the Agency employed either directly in teams handling complaints and/or teams handling correspondence from members of parliament, stakeholder groups or clients who may have earlier made a complaint. The broad analysis between current business units is:

	Number
Midlands	140
South East	110
Scotland and North East England	120
South West	110
Wales and North West	180
Eastern	210

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects Child Support Agency (CSA) cases in Sittingbourne and Sheppey on the old CSA system to be transferred to the new system. [210117]

Mr. Pond: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave the hon. Member for Ashford (Mr. Green), on 8 December 2004, Official Report, column 568W.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when C. R. Ward, CSA reference 1036830004, will be switched from the old to the new CSA system. [210600]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Derek Wyatt:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when C. R. Ward Child Support Agency reference 1036830004 will be switched from the old to the new Child Support Agency system.

As details about individual cases are confidential I will write to you separately about this case.

EU Presidency

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Government's priorities for the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council will be during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [209554]

Mr. Pond: The main priorities of the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs (ESPHCA) Council are listed in the UK-Luxembourg Annual Operating Programme for 2005 which is available in the Library of the House.

The programme plans to make progress on:

finalising the Joint Council and Commission Employment Report 2004–2005;

the Regulation to implement the Social Security co-ordinating Regulation; seeking an agreement on the proposal to establish a community programme for employment and social strategy (PROGRESS);

seeking an agreement on the directive amending Directive 2003/88/EC on working time.

The programme aims to take forward:

the directive regarding the exposure of workers to optical radiation;

the directive under Article 141 which merges and recasts previous equality directives;

focussing on new Health Strategy.

The specific issues appearing on the Council Agenda during the UK Presidency will depend on progress made by the preceding Luxembourg Presidency.

Homelessness

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to reduce the disincentives to re-enter employment for homeless households placed in expensive temporary accommodation. [209644]

Mr. Pond: We are, together with other agencies, already working hard to ensure that as much as possible is being done to remove the multiple barriers to employment faced by the homeless.

The Department provides a range of services to help homeless people find employment, from support from personal advisers based in Jobcentres to specific initiatives such as Progress2work, Progress2work-LinkUP and Action Teams for Jobs. Additionally, homeless people can have early access to the New Deals and other national programmes.

We recognise that temporary accommodation attracts high management charges that, in turn, lead to high rents. These can act as a barrier to employment. We have no current plans for any significant changes to the housing benefit rules for those in temporary accommodation in the short term. However, we are exploring with colleagues across government all possible options to address this issue.

One of these options involves pilot work to look at the "block grant" approach, whereby tenants pay an affordable rent for their accommodation, assisted through the housing benefit scheme where appropriate, with the extra costs funded by way of a direct central Government grant.

The Government are involved in a project run by the Greater London Authority to test the effects of a lower rent together with increased training opportunities and employment advice for people living in temporary accommodation.

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to encourage people claiming incapacity benefit back into employment. [209991]

Maria Eagle: We estimate that the Pathways pilots have so far helped 8,300 people into work. From October this year we will extend the programme to cover about a third of the country, offering help to nearly 900,000 people on incapacity benefits. My hon. Friend will be pleased to know that her constituency will be included in this extension.

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to reform incapacity benefit. [209981]

Maria Eagle: The majority of people who start claiming incapacity benefits want, and expect, to go back into employment.

That is why we are fully focused on providing better help and support for people on incapacity benefits.

Pathways to Work is helping people to do just that and from October this year we will extend the programme to cover about a third of the country, enabling us to offer this help to nearly 900,000 people on incapacity benefits.

We will publish further details shortly in our 5-Year Plan about our longer-term ambitions for incapacity benefits.

Mr. Tam Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his Oral Answer of 13 December 2004, Official Report, column 1386, on incapacity benefit, what progress he has made with his investigation into the rules on permitted work for claimants of incapacity benefit. [210113]

Maria Eagle: On 14 December, we published the report "A Stepping Stone to Employment" with the findings of the independent research commissioned by my Department into the first two years of operation of the permitted work rules. Copies of the report are available in the Library.

The permitted work rules allow people with health conditions and disabilities to try out paid work while remaining on benefits, as a stepping stone to full-time work. The research showed that people on incapacity benefits participating in permitted work have been helped to return to full-time jobs and many of those surveyed found that their health conditions were not the barriers to work that they originally thought.

The Chancellor announced changes to the rules in the pre-Budget report based on the key findings of the research. Our overall intention is to bring more people into permitted work with the eventual aim of progressing into full-time employment. Therefore, we will be introducing measures to improve permitted work by raising greater awareness of the provision and encouraging more people to take advantage of the scheme; there will be more regular face-to-face contact with personal advisers and staff will get new guidance and training materials. The rules will be simplified by allowing all participants an initial period of 52 weeks.

However, we are also acknowledging the position of those least likely to progress into full-time work. We are exploring ways to allow people with progressive conditions to be able to continue permitted work beyond the initial 52 weeks without being limited to earnings of £20.

Lie Detectors

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what assessment his Department has made of the value of using lie detector technology when assessing benefits claims. [207723]

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, (1) whether his Department plans to use lie detectors on benefit claimants; [207790]

(2) what his policy is on whether the possible use of lie detectors in connection with benefit claims should apply (a) through random sampling and (b) to volunteers only; [207877]

(3) on whom his Department has market-tested lie detectors; and what level of accuracy was shown in the results. [207879]

Mr. Pond: We aim to keep up to date with the latest technology which impacts upon benefit delivery and are therefore aware of voice stress analysis as used by various insurance companies. However, we have made no formal assessment of the value of this technology and have no current plans to introduce such measures.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what advice he has received on the potential use of lie detectors with regard to benefit claimants; and if he will place a copy of such advice in the Library. [207878]

Mr. Pond: No advice on the use of voice stress analysis has been received by DWP. We are in the early stages of conducting preliminary investigations into how voice stress analysis technology is currently used in the private sector.

No formal assessment has been made and we have no plans at present to introduce such measures.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the ministerial engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that he has cancelled since his appointment. [209225]

Alan Johnson: There is no record kept of cancelled engagements in my ministerial diary. When engagements have had to be cancelled, wherever possible we try to re-instate them at a later date. All engagements are subject to ministerial and parliamentary business.

New Deal

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have benefited from the New Deal in the Harwich constituency since 1997. [210682]

Jane Kennedy: The New Deal has been very successful in helping more than 1.2 million people into work including 1,800 in the Harwich constituency.

Information on the number of people who have participated in and the number helped into work by each New Deal programme in Harwich is in the table.

Number of people who have participated in and who have found work through New Deal programmes in the Harwich constituency[1]

Programme	Number of people starting the programme	Number of people gaining a job
New Deal for Lone Parents	990	500
New Deal for Young People	1,340	850
New Deal 25 plus	620	230
New Deal 50 plus[2]	—	220
Total	2,950	1,800

[1] All data are to September 2004, except for New Deal 50 plus which is to March 2003.

[2] Figures for New Deal 50 plus relate to starts to the Employment Credit element of the programme. No information is currently available on the number of individual starts to New Deal 50 plus.

Notes:

1. New Deal for Disabled People and New Deal for Partners is not available at parliamentary constituency level.

2. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10 and therefore components may not necessarily sum to totals.

Poor Pensioners

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of (a) single female pensioners, (b) single male pensioners and (c) pensioner couples are living in poverty. [210349]

Malcolm Wicks: Poverty is about more than low income; is also about other important factors in their lives—their health, housing and the quality of their environment. The sixth annual "Opportunity for all" report (Cm 6239), published in September 2004, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy.

Specific information regarding low income for the United Kingdom is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994–95 to 2002–03".

Information about low income among pensioners in Great Britain in 2002–03 is in the table.

Proportion of pensioners living in households with incomes below 60 per cent. of median, 2002–03

Low-income threshold family type	Before housing costs below 60 per cent. median	After housing costs below 60 per cent. median
(a) Single female pensioner	22	21
(b) Single male pensioner	17	17
(c) Pensioner couple	21	23

Further Information about low income is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994–95 to 2002–03", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the percentage of (a) single female pensioners, (b) single male pensioners and (c) pensioner couples who would be in poverty if the basic state pension was paid at its current level to all pensioners. [210376]

Malcolm Wicks: Information in the format requested is unavailable.

Estimates of the number of pensioners with low income under a different policy, such as that described in the question, are subject to a high degree of uncertainty. However, using the Department's Policy Simulation Model for 2004–05 it has been estimated that the effect of paying the maximum rate of basic state pension to all pensioners is a reduction in the order of five percentage points of the proportion of pensioner couples with incomes below 60 per cent. of median income, on both the "before housing costs" and on the "after housing costs" measures. The proportion of single female pensioners and single male pensioners on low income is estimated to remain broadly unchanged as a result of paying the full amount of basic state pension to all pensioners.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what investigations he has made into the reliability and efficiency of the Post Office Card Account's computer system; and if he will make a statement. [209951]

Mr. Pond: A contract exists between Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) and Post Office Ltd. (POL) for the provision of the Post Office card account service to agreed service standards. Since April 2003 DWP has successfully made over 67 million payments to Post Office card accounts and as at December 2004 over 4 million card accounts have been opened. Throughout the period DWP has been liaising with POL, monitoring the performance of the service against service standards on an on-going basis.

Since April 2003 there have been a small number of service incidents that have briefly affected payment to DWP customers. On these occasions there has been close contact with POL to understand the problem, to ensure action was being taken in line with comprehensive continuity arrangements included in the contract to restore the service quickly, and to ensure that remedial action has been taken and any lessons learned acted upon.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been unable to collect their pensions due to breakdowns of the Post Office card account computer system since its introduction; and if he will make a statement. [209952]

Mr. Pond: The Information is not available in the form requested. Since April 2003, when the Post Office card account system was introduced, there have been a small number of incidents that have briefly affected payments to the Department's customers. These incidents have caused some inconvenience to customers and delay in withdrawing benefit from accounts. It is not possible to say how many customers were temporarily unable to collect their pensions at the Post Office as a result.

Social Fund

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what targets have been set for processing new social fund claims in each year since 2001. [210100]

Mr. Pond: Jobcentre Plus has a number of Key Management Indicators (KMI) with which it measures performance, including that of the Social Fund.

The Social Fund KMI up to April 2004 related to the actual average clearance time (AACT) for Community Care Grants, this was set at nine days.

From April 2004 the Social Fund KMI included additional elements as follows.

Key management indicators
Social Fund Accuracy	75 per cent.
Community Care Grant AACT	9 days
Budgeting loans AACT	8 days
Crisis loans AACT	2 days
Funeral payments AACT	16 days
Sure Start maternity Grants AACT	5 days
Internal Reviews AACT	10 days

Prior to April 2004 there were no nationally set KMIs for elements for the Social Fund other than Community Care Grants, however, many districts monitored performance at a local level.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the most recent figures issued by Eurostat are for youth unemployment in each EU member state. [206387]

Mr. Pond: The annual unemployment, employment and activity rates for populations aged 15–24 most recently released by Eurostat are in the table.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Belfast Agreement

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what amendments he expects will need to be proposed to the Belfast Agreement as a consequence of the adoption of the 'Proposals by the British and Irish Governments for a Comprehensive Agreement.' [206890]

Mr. Paul Murphy: As I said in this House on 9 December, the Agreement was not set in stone when first signed and it was clearly always the intention that certain elements would be open to change; the commitment to review and report on its operation, which was written into the Agreement itself, would have made no sense otherwise. Equally, certain fundamental aspects of the Agreement have always been regarded by the Governments and the other parties who supported it as fundamental, and not open to change.

We do not envisage any textual amendment of the Agreement at all. But, as the hon. Lady will have seen, our proposals would involve a number of changes in the way the Agreement operates.

Children's Fund

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the impact of the Children's Fund on service development in the Province. [202598]

Mr. Pearson: The Children's Fund has provided time-bounded service development funding through both the statutory and the voluntary and community sectors. Two statutory rounds of funding, one in April 2001 and the other in June 2002, provided a total of £20.5 million in support of 26 projects. A further allocation of some £17 million was announced on 5 March 2003 to the voluntary and community sector funding 101 projects over three years commencing 1 April 2003.

While there will be no new funding via the Children's Fund, £15 million has been allocated in the recent Budget for a Capital Modernisation Fund to which children's organisations will be able to apply for support.

Civil Servants

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many employees of the Department of (a) Education, (b) Social Development, (c) Regional Development, (d) Culture Arts and Leisure, (e) Environment, (f) the First and Deputy First Minister, (g) Education and Learning, (h) Health, Personal Social Services and Safety, (i) Enterprise, Trade and Investment, (j) Agriculture and Rural Development and (k) Finance and Personnel have been subject to disciplinary proceedings in the last 12 months; and what the total workforce is of each Department. [208699]

Mr. Pearson: During the last 12 months (January to December 2004), a total of 325 members of staff working in the Departments listed were subject to disciplinary proceedings. The breakdown for each Department, which includes staff working in executive agencies, together with the total workforce for each, is as follows:

	Number of staff subject to disciplinary proceedings (January-December 2004)	Total staff in post at 1 October 2004
(a) Education	1	688
(b) Social Development	224	8,239
(c) Regional Development	24	4,851
(d) Culture, Arts and Leisure	1	454
(e) Environment	4	2,640
(f) Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister	Nil	422
(g) Employment and Learning	11	1,802
(h) Health, Social Services and Public Safety	35	1,049

Londonderry Airport

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will announce his decision on the funding requests from Londonderry city council regarding Londonderry airport. [210343]

Mr. Spellar: I hope that an announcement can be made soon. Issues relating to the economic benefits to the northwest of investment in the airport, options for governance of the airport and state aid are still being considered.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the ministerial engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that he has cancelled since 1 January 2004. [209215]

Mr. Murphy: There is no record kept of cancelled engagements in Northern Ireland Office Minister's diaries. When engagements have had to be cancelled, wherever possible we try to re-instate them at a later date. All engagements are subject to ministerial and parliamentary business.

Parliamentary Questions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what target his Department sets for the maximum acceptable time to respond in full to a parliamentary question; and what percentage of answers given by his Department failed to meet this target in each parliamentary session from 1997–98 to 2003–04. [202558]

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many written questions for his Department were unanswered when Parliament prorogued; and how many of the unanswered questions were tabled in each of the previous months of the 2003–04 session. [201556]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 30 November 2004, Official Report, column 62W.

Information is not held in the format requested. While it is not always possible, the Northern Ireland Office, including the 11 Departments of the Northern Ireland Administration, aims to answer all ordinary written questions within one working week and all named day questions on the day named for answer. An average of 75 per cent. of questions were answered on time in the 2003–04 session. Information is not readily available for the 1997–98 session.

Water Industry

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the condition of Northern Ireland's water infrastructure; and what the main cause was of the failure of that infrastructure to meet EU Directive standards. [208414]

Mr. Spellar: The information is as follows:

Letter from Mrs. Katharine Bryan to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 20 January 2005:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a parliamentary Question about the condition of Northern Ireland's water infrastructure and the main cause of the failure of that infrastructure to meet EU Directive standards (208414). I have been asked to reply as the issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

Water Service's second Asset Management Plan (NIAMP2), which was completed in 2003, identified that £2.9 billion needs to be invested over the next 20 years to modernise the existing water and sewerage infrastructure. NIAMP2 assessed the condition of the Water Service's above ground assets including treatment works, pumping stations, etc. and less than 5 per cent. were considered to be in poor condition or functionally unsound. While the condition of the above ground assets is generally good, many of the current treatment works were not designed to meet the more stringent standards associated with current EU Directives. The upgrading of water and wastewater treatment works accounts for £1 billion of the total investment required. It is much more difficult to define the condition of below ground assets, but use of an industry recognised statistical model identified an investment need for this asset group of almost double that required for above ground assets. Over two-thirds of this below ground investment is attributable to keeping the networks in a serviceable condition over the 20 year period.

The failure of the water and sewerage infrastructure to meet current EU Directives relates mainly to the fact that many of the current treatment works need to be upgraded. New treatment processes associated with new technology are often needed to meet the quality standards associated with current EU Directives. Priority is at present being given to upgrading water and wastewater treatment works and it is planned to accelerate spending on network refurbishment within the next few years as the treatment works upgrading programme nears completion.

Academy Schools

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what mechanisms are used to monitor academy schools; by whom they are inspected; and what sanctions can be applied to them. [208004]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: All Academies receive a monitoring inspection visit from HMI before they are inspected under section 3, deemed 10 arrangements when there is published inspection report. All Academies are inspected within three years of opening, unless there are exceptional circumstances. Academies, like all schools, will be subject to the new national inspection arrangements from September 2005.

The Secretary of State can intervene where an academy is in breach of its funding agreement or where she has concerns about its management or performance. These interventions include appointing additional governors to the governing body, withholding payments to the Academy, appointing auditors or, if necessary by terminating the funding agreement.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which section within her Department is responsible for academy schools; how many staff are involved; and how many are (a) civil servants and (b) external staff. [208010]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Academies Division within the Department is responsible for Academies. There are currently 70 staff in the Academies Division of whom 45 are civil servants and 25 are external staff. Other staff within the Department also work for some of their time on the Academies Programme, including staff dealing with financial and legal issues and architectural advisers.

Child Care

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has further to subsidise child care places in nurseries in (a) deprived areas and (b) areas where parents have low incomes; and if she will make a statement. [207244]

Margaret Hodge: The 10-Year Childcare Strategy, published in December 2004, set out the Government's vision for every child to have the best start in life and for parents to have more choice about how to balance work and family life.

Our long-term aim is for affordable, flexible, high quality child care to be available for all families with children under 14. We are making substantial additional investment in early years and child care over the next three years: the Sure Start budget will more than double from this year to 2007–08. This includes a new Transformation Fund of £125 million a year from 2006–07, which will support investment in high quality, affordable and sustainable child care.

Parents on low and middle incomes will continue to have their child care costs subsidised through tax credits. From April 2005 the maximum child care element of the working tax credit will increase from £135 to £175 for one child and from £200 to £300 for two or more children. Eligible parents will be able to claim up to 70 per cent. of these limits; this will increase to 80 per cent. from April 2006. These changes should benefit 20,000 families straight away and many more over time.

From 2006 the 12.5 hour free entitlement to early education for 33 weeks per year will extended to cover 38 weeks a year for all three and four–year-olds. From 2007 the free entitlement will begin to increase to 15 hours per week with all children receiving 15 hours by 2010, as a step towards a goal of 20 hours per week. Parents will have the flexibility to use the free entitlement across a minimum of three days. In addition, we will pilot an extension of free, part time early education to 12,000 two-year-olds in disadvantaged areas by 2008.

We will establish 2,500 children's centres by 2008, and all young children and their families in the most disadvantaged areas will have access to the high quality integrated services children's centres provide. The 10-Year Strategy sets out a commitment to 3,500 centres by 2010—one in every community.

In London, from next year, my Department will be working with the Greater London Authority to test a range of approaches aimed at improving the accessibility and affordability of good quality child care for parents on lower incomes through supply side subsidy. These pilots should benefit more than 10,000 families.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many free (a) nursery and (b) pre-school places were available for (i) three and (ii) four-years-olds in the North Somerset education authority in each of the last seven years. [207261]

Margaret Hodge: All four-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since September 1998. All three-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since April 2004.

The available information on the numbers of free part-time early education places taken up by three and four-year-olds in North Somerset local education authority area is shown in the tables.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 39/2004 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2004 (final)", which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the proposed level of funding for child care provision in schools is for the next three years. [209182]

Margaret Hodge: The Government are committed to supporting the provision of child care in schools as part of the wider extended schools initiative in England. Decisions about the provision of child care in Northern Ireland are made by the Northern Ireland Assembly. In the financial year 2005–06 my Department will be making available just over £107 million to support the development of extended schools, including school based child care. In later years we will provide further funding to support the development of school based child care. An announcement will be made in due course.

In addition to this £14 million from the Young People's Fund element of the Big Lottery Fund has been made available to 78 local authorities over three years from 2004–05 to support the development of extended schools across their areas.

Schools can also charge parents for child care and in turn, parents, who are eligible, can claim part of the cost through the child care element of the working tax credit.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will include in the forthcoming Education Bill a statutory duty on local authorities to secure sufficient child care provision to meet local needs. [209778]

Margaret Hodge: The 10-year strategy for child care "Choice for parents, the best possible start for children" published on 2 December included the commitment to legislate to place a new duty on local authorities so that over time they will secure sufficient supply of child care places to meet the needs of local families. Local authorities are already key agents for co-ordinating, supporting and delivering child care services and there is a need to confirm the important role they play and clarify their responsibilities in this area. Consultation on the 10 year strategy is due to conclude on 24 February and discussions will be held with local authorities and other stakeholders on the new duty during 2005, with a view to introducing legislation in a future parliamentary session.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) financial and (b) logistical support her Department plans to offer to existing providers of child care (i) to help to ensure their sustainability and (ii) to develop closer links and to align their services with schools. [209779]

Margaret Hodge: For 2004–06 £31 million of sustainability funding is available within the General Sure Start Grant to support child care providers in disadvantaged areas. In addition to this the £170 million Delivery Support Fund element of the Grant can also be used to support all providers experiencing sustainability problems, including pre-school and playgroups.

All existing child care providers can access the support of the dedicated Business Support Officer located within each local authority, for advice and guidance on financial issues and business planning for the future, to ensure long term sustainability.

As announced in our 10-Year Strategy, our long-term aim is for affordable, flexible, high quality child care to be available for all families with children under 14 (under 16 for children with special needs). We are making substantial additional investment in early years and child care over the next three years. This includes a new Transformation Fund of £125 million a year from April 2006, which will support investment in high quality, affordable and sustainable child care.

My Department is providing financial support for the development of extended schools, including the school age child care offer through local authorities. Funding will be used to provide support at school level to enable the delivery of a set of core services including school age child care. We realise that schools cannot deliver the child care offer on their own and we are encouraging them to work in partnership with voluntary and private sector providers and other schools to deliver child care. Local authorities will be able to advise schools of wider groups, agencies and services that are willing to work in partnership to develop extended services.

My Department is also providing logistical support. The Extended Schools Prospectus, which is due to be launched shortly, will set out the vision for extended schools, including child care to schools, local authorities, key stakeholders and the private and voluntary sector. It will draw on the practical experience of schools already delivering services, providing 'how to' advice and case studies on a range of issues, including working with local partners. The prospectus will be available on the teachernet website, so that it can be updated with new issues as they emerge (www.teachernet.gov.uk/extendedschools).

Child Protection

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much was spent on child protection schemes by her Department in each of the last five years, broken down by budget head; and what the forecast budgets are for the next financial year; [207313]

(2) how much was spent by her Department on child protection schemes in each of the last five years, broken down by budget head; and what the forecast budgets are for the next financial year. [207314]

Margaret Hodge: Local authority gross expenditure on children's social services functions is set out in the following tables for the period 1998–99 to 2002–03, the last five years for which expenditure is available.

Expenditure will include those in need of protection. Data on Local Authority Personal Social Services expenditure are available at: http://www.publications.doh.gov.uk/public/pss_stat.htm

For 2005–06 the Government are making available £4,284 million for children's social services through formula spending and grants, an increase of 7.6 per cent. on 2004–05. Councils are free to decide how much of these resources to use on child protection services.

In addition, the DfES is responsible for section 64 grants for children's social services. The Secretary of State for Education and Skills, through the Safeguarding Children and Supporting Families Grants Scheme (section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 as amended), has power to make grants to voluntary organisations in England whose activities support the DfES's policy priorities for children's social care. Grants may be paid for up to three years.

The grants are discretionary and terms and conditions agreed by Ministers and HM Treasury apply. Competition for the available funds is always very strong, and priority is given to applications with innovative proposals of national significance that will complement statutory services and so help secure provision of high quality children's social care.

The DfES values its partnership with the voluntary and community sector across the whole of children's social care. Making effective use of Safeguarding Children and Supporting Families Grants and other powers at national and local level is central to this relationship.

The total budget for the Safeguarding Children and Supporting Families Grants Scheme in 2005–06 is £4.2 million including existing grants. Of this, we expect approximately £1.67 million to be available for new grant awards in 2005–06.

Of the 127 applications received in the 2004–05 Round, Minister awarded 47 grants totalling £2.812 million.

Furthermore, the Local Authority Social Services Letter (2003)7 announced the introduction of the Safeguarding Children Specific Formula Grant of £90 million. It also announced a capital grant of £10 million to support the development of information technology systems for children's social services. The £10 million was the first tranche of a total grant of £30 million payable in 2004–05, 2005–06 and 2006–07.

Child Trafficking

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many trafficked children have disappeared from local authority care between 1999 and 2004. [207018]

Margaret Hodge: This information is not held centrally. Current statistics on those children who are absent from their agreed placement may be found in Table J of the DfES Statistical Volume "Children looked after by Local Authorities Year Ending 31 March 2003". This can be downloaded from the internet at: http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DBA/VOL/v000454/index.shtml and is also available from TSO (the Stationery Office).

This data do not differentiate between the different groups of looked after children.

Civil Service Property

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many items of civil service property within her Department are unaccounted for, broken down by type. [205575]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The following tables detail the items of civil service property unaccounted for (reported as lost or stolen) from the Department for Education and Skills in each year since the Department was established on 11 June 2001.

Connexions

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what representations she has received on changes to funding for the Connexions Service in Birmingham and Solihull; [206924]

(2) what assessment she has made of the change in funding formula to be applied to the Connexions Service and the likely impact that this will have in Birmingham and Solihull. [206941]

Margaret Hodge: Letters about the funding of Connexions in Birmingham and Solihull have been received from:

Richard Burden MP on behalf of Mike Bell, former Chief Executive of Connexions Birmingham and Solihull and Valerie Broom of UNISON;

John Taylor MP on behalf of Mike Bell, Simon Field, the Connexions Voluntary Sector Forum Coordinator for Birmingham and Solihull and Councillor Richards,

Leader of Solihull Metropolitan borough council;

Dr. Lynne Jones MP on behalf of Mike Bell and her constituent Jacqui Francis; and

Dr. Ahmed Hassam on behalf of Mike Bell and the Chairs of the West Midlands Connexions Partnerships.

Ministers considered carefully the impact that the changes made to the funding formula in 2004 would have on the Connexions Service in all areas of the country. In 2004–05 we introduced a no cash loss guarantee to ensure that no Connexions Partnership received less in cash terms than it did in 2003–04, and in 2005–06 we will be ensuring that all Partnerships receive a minimum 2 per cent. increase in their core grant allocation. Connexions Birmingham and Solihull will in fact receive an increase of 4.28 per cent. in 2005–06.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been spent by her Department on (a) indoor bought plants, (b) indoor hired plants, (c) outdoor bought plants and (d) outdoor hired plants in each year since 1997. [205597]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department has spent the following on indoor and outdoor bought plants since 1997:

2003–04	12,453
2002–03	6,235
2001–02	6,952

1998–99	[1]—
1997–98	[1]—

[1] This information can only be provided at disproportionate costs.

The information regarding indoor and outdoor hired plants is not held centrally and would require a Departmental trawl at disproportionate cost.

All expenditure incurred in the purchase and procurement of services and items is made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the constituency, the effects of her Department's policy since 1997 on the Dudley, North constituency. [210745]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Dudley, North constituency lies within Dudley local education authority. The most recent Key Stage 2 and GCSE/GNVQ achievement for pupils attending schools in Dudley, North are given in the following tables:

[2] As standard the results reported relate to pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year i.e. 31 August and therefore reaching the end of compulsory education at the end of the school year.

Further information by constituency, is provided within the Department's 'In Your Area' web site available at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/inyourarea. Where information is not available at the constituency level it has been provided at local education authority level.

This website allows users to access key facts and local information about education and skills based on postcodes. The data available within the site offer comparisons between 1997 and the latest available year and covers five geographies. These are parliamentary constituency, ward, local authority district, local education authority, Government Office region. England figures are also provided.

The information available within the website is grouped in a number of broad categories including literacy and numeracy at age 11, literacy and numeracy at age 14, GCSE/GNVQ results, pupils with special educational needs, school initiatives, school workforce, school funding and resources, children's social services, early years, class sizes, post 16, higher education and adult education.

Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, my Department is investigating ways in which we can disseminate more information about the effects of our policies at a local level. The 'In Your Area' website will be further developed over the coming months to include additional information about adult education, school funding, school initiatives, school performance, school workforce and post 16.

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested on the average GCE/VCE A/AS point score per candidate aged 16 to 18 years in 2003–04 is given as follows:

Extended Schools

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to provide child care in extended schools. [201094]

Margaret Hodge: The Government's 10-year strategy Choice for Parents, the Best Start for Children, published on 2 December, sets out our commitment to give every child the best start in life and to ensure that parents have real choice about how to balance work and family life. Our long term investment includes a guarantee of child care being available from 8 am to 6 pm, all year round, for all parents of children aged five to 11. The guarantee will help the very varied needs of children and families. Obviously we do not expect most children to spend all their time in school when schools are open for longer, but parents will be able to choose hours which meet their needs and the needs of their children. We expect at least half of parents to benefit from this offer by 2008, and all by 2010. By 2008, at least a third of all secondary schools will be open from 8 am to 6 pm, all year round offering a range of activities for 11 to 14 year olds. By 2010, all secondary schools will be part of a network offering this provision. Provision could be available in a local school, in a neighbouring school or on a different site, provided by the school or in partnership with voluntary and private sector providers, including local childminders.

Foreign Language Teachers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) applicants and (b) acceptanees there were for university courses in modern foreign languages, (i) not combined with and (ii) combined with non-language subjects in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [207937]

Dr. Howells: Our national languages strategy emphasises the importance of encouraging students in higher education to take an active part in learning modern foreign languages and we shall continue to pursue this aim.

The available information is taken from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) and covers all applicants and accepted applicants to full-time undergraduate courses in the UK. Figures are in the table.

Applicants and acceptances through UCAS to modern foreign languages

	Not combined with non-language subjects		Combined with non-language subjects[1]

1999	6,586	7,639	6,709	8,133
2000	5,970	7,170	6,614	8,063
2001	5,823	6,885	7,107	8,476

2003[3]	6,004	7,249	10,737	14,275

[1] Includes combinations of languages (including classical languages) with law, social studies, business studies, humanities, art and education. Combinations of languages with science subjects cannot be easily identified separately. Does not include combinations of three subjects.

[2] Acceptances may be larger than applicants as acceptance figures include students who did not achieve their first choice course and it includes those students accepted through clearing.

[3] For entry in 2002 onwards, the subjects are classified using the joint academic coding system (JACS) which differs to the method used in previous years (HESACODE).

Sixth Form and Further Education

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the per capita funding for 16 to 19-year-olds in Milton Keynes was in (a) school sixth forms and (b) further education colleges in each of the last five years. [210748]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Department allocates funds for education and training in the post-16 learning and skills sector to the Learning and Skills Council. The Department does not collect information on the level of per capita funding for 16 to 19- year-olds in school sixth forms and further education colleges at the local level. Mark Haysom, the Learning and Skills Council's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member with details of the level of per capita funding for 16 to 19-year-olds in (a) school sixth forms and (b) further education colleges in each of the last five years in the Milton Keynes area. A copy of his letter will be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average cost is per pupil of education in (a) maintained school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges and (c) other further education colleges; and what projections her Department has made for funding per pupil over the next five years in each of these types of establishment. [210177]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Further Education funding system is different to schools. Funding is paid for learning aims as well as an entitlement per 16 to 18 payment.

Under the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC's) funding formula the basic cost to the public purse of delivering three A-levels in a sixth form college and a further education college to a student in the 2004/05 academic year will be £3,045. This figure comprises £766 for the delivery of each A-level learning aim, and £747 for each student for the entitlement element of their learning programme.

Under the LSC's funding formula the basic cost to the public purse of delivering three A-levels to a student at an English maintained secondary school will be £3,212. This figure comprises £785 for the delivery of each A-level learning aim, £750 for each student for the entitlement element of their learning programme, and £107 for each student to meet additional employers' contributions to teachers' pensions.

These figures do not represent all funding that colleges and school sixth forms receive and are not directly comparable. For example the further education funding rates include consolidated funds for pay and staff training that are not reflected in the school sixth form rates. Also, in each case additional funding may also be available to take account of the higher costs of delivering learning in particular geographical areas, in higher cost subjects, or to students with particular disadvantages or individual needs.

It is expected that base funding rates per qualification will be increased by 4 per cent. for school sixth forms and by 5 per cent. for further education colleges, on a broadly comparable basis, in 2005/06. LSC will decide funding rates for each academic year nearer the time in light of the funding it has available and where priorities lie.

The Department is discussing with the LSC how to take forward the next stage of the Skills Strategy from 2006/07, including the roll out of a National Employer Training Programme, and more broadly how the increases in funding from the 2004 Spending Review are applied, and until those discussions are concluded it will not be possible to set out precise forecasts of FE funding per learner.

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people have entered (a) GCSE and (b) A level examinations in each year since 1997 in (i) Hartlepool and (ii) England and Wales for the following subjects (A) English, (B) mathematics, (C) history and (D) a foreign language. [210647]

Home Carers Scheme

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many nannies have (a) applied for and (b) received Government accreditation via the home carers scheme. [204405]

Margaret Hodge: The Government do not have a breakdown of the occupations of those who have (a) applied for; and (b) received accreditation via the home child carers' scheme.

A new Childcare Approval Scheme was announced on 8 December. This will allow for the approval of child care provided in the child's home or, for children over the age of seven, on other domestic premises. Carers will be able to apply for approval from 4 January 2005. By using an approved carer parents have been able to access financial support through the child care element of the working tax credit or through employer supported child care. Parents who are eligible will be able to claim financial support from 6 April 2005. The new scheme will provide parents with more flexible, affordable, opportunities for home based care.

Homelessness

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will permit homeless children in temporary accommodation to be included in groups of socially excluded children targeted by the Vulnerable Children Grant. [209649]

Margaret Hodge: The Government's aim is that all vulnerable children should be able to access good quality education. The Standards Fund Vulnerable Children Grant was introduced in the 2003–04 financial year to help local education authorities (LEAs) to achieve this aim.

The key groups whose needs the Vulnerable Children Grant is designed to address are: looked after children; children who are unable to attend school because of medical needs; gypsy/traveller children; asylum seekers, young carers, school refusers, teenage parents and young offenders. This list is not prescriptive or exclusive. Many of these children will face multiple challenges, sometimes including homelessness. The grant may be used by LEAs to meet the needs of any vulnerable children identified by them as needing support, including those who are homeless. This discretionary approach allows local needs to be addressed more flexibly and responsively than would be possible using central direction.

In November last year the Department published an evaluation of the Vulnerable Children Grant undertaken by the National Foundation for Educational Research (NFER). One of the key findings of the report was that the grant had enabled LEAs to provide support for a variety of vulnerable groups. The NFER reported that in some LEAs surveyed the grant had been used to support children who are socially vulnerable, for example children living in vulnerable accommodation such as women's refuges, or children who were the subject of family breakdown or changes in home circumstances.

ICT

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of how much time will be required of teachers to fill in the route map for information and communication technology use. [210180]

Derek Twigg: We have recently asked the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency to develop a route-map for schools which will help each school to identify how they can move forward in embedding information and communication technology to support teaching and learning.

The route map will not involve any requirement on teachers to fill in anything.

Key Stage 4

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average value added scores at Key Stage 4 are for (a) maintained school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges, (c) further education colleges and (d) special schools. [210186]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Figures[1,2] are unavailable for Parts (a), (b) and (c) of the question as the GCSE and Equivalents[2] value added measures are based on pupils aged 151 at the start of the academic year. Maintained school sixth forms, sixth form colleges and further education colleges do not have 15-year-old pupils on roll, except in rare individual cases. Figures are provided for special schools[3] (d) as follows:

The Key Stage 2—Age 15[1,2] value added measure is 1019.4 for special schools[3] in 2004.

The Key Stage 3—Age 151[2] value added measure is 1022.5 for special schools[3] in 2004.

[1] As standard the results reported relate to pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year i.e. 31 August and therefore reaching the end of compulsory education at the end of the school year.

[2] 2004 results incorporate GCSEs, GNVQs and a wide range of other qualifications approved pre-16.

[3] 'Special schools' include Community special schools, Foundation special schools, Special schools not maintained by LEA and Independent schools approved to take pupils with Special Education Needs.

New Deal for Schools

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding each school in Stoke-on-Trent has received from the new deal for schools. [209910]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The funding for new deal for schools allocated to Stoke-on-Trent from 1997–98 to 2000–01 is set out in the following table:

Stoke-on-Trent LEA	£000
1997–98	650
1998–99	2,799
1999–2000	1,753
2000–01	3,123

Decisions on detailed allocations to individual schools were made locally by the LEA. The breakdown of funds allocated to schools by constituency is not held centrally.

Newborn Hearing Screening

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what monitoring he conducts of local authority provision of support for families of deaf children identified through newborn hearing screening; [201674]

(2) what entitlement deaf children identified through newborn hearing screening and under the age of two years have to support from qualified teachers of the deaf. [201675]

Margaret Hodge: The Children Act 2004 introduces new requirements for integrated inspections of children's services. Proposals will be published soon for public consultation. Joint Area Reviews will make judgments about how services collectively improve the well-being of all children, including disabled children. Ofsted will work closely with the Healthcare Commission, the Commission for Social Care Inspection and other inspectorates to carry out integrated inspections.

In May 2003, we published guidance for local education authorities in relation to early support for deaf children and their families. This guidance covered the aims of education service provision and the contribution which qualified teachers of the deaf could make, working alongside health and other professionals.

Since then, additional material has been made available through our Early Support Programme. This includes a monitoring protocol to check the progress which deaf children make in the first three years or so after deafness has been identified, an information booklet on deafness for parents and a service audit tool for supporting the development and improvement of services for disabled children under three and their families.

Nursery Places

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many three and four-year-olds in Leyton and Wanstead have benefited from the scheme guaranteeing a free part-time nursery place. [208771]

Margaret Hodge: All four-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since September 1998. All three-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since April 2004.

The available information on the numbers of free part-time early education places taken up by three and four-year-olds in Leyton and Wanstead parliamentary constituency and Redbridge local education authority area is shown in the tables. Information for private and voluntary providers is available for Redbridge but not for Leyton and Wanstead.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 39/2004 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2004 (final)", which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Out-of-classroom Learning

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment her Department has made of the merits of supporting research into the costs and benefits of out-of-classroom learning; and if she will make a statement; [209284]

(2) what assessment she has made of the role of out-of-classroom learning in increasing (a) physical activity and (b) inclusivity among school children; and if she will make a statement; [209285]

(3) what practical steps will be taken to increase opportunities (a) within the curriculum and (b) outside the school day for trips and visits for school children as identified in her Department's five year strategy; and if she will make a statement; [209286]

(4) what guidance has been given to academies in relation to the promotion of outdoor learning; [209287]

(5) if her Department will asked Ofsted to conduct a special survey of outdoor education in all schools; [209539]

(6) what plans her Department has to commission further research into the contribution of (a) outdoor education and (b) biology fieldwork to the curriculum; and if she will make a statement; [209540]

(7) what steps she has taken to ensure that all students experience the benefits of outdoor education as identified in the recent Ofsted report, and if she will make a statement. [209541]

(8) what recent discussions she has had with the teaching unions regarding their position on educational visits, and if she will make a statement. [209542]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Over the past few years the Department has both commissioned and jointly funded external studies to examine benefits and potential barriers for outdoor education: outdoor learning, including fieldwork; out-of-classroom learning, including museums and galleries and residential experiences; and out-of-hours learning. We may commission further research into specific aspects of some or all of these. We have no plans to ask Ofsted to survey outdoor education in all schools. We have not made an assessment of the role of out-of-classroom learning in increasing physical activity or inclusivity in schools. We have not sent any guidance to Academies on outdoor learning.

We are in talks with the NASUWT regarding their long-standing concerns about out of classroom safety. In particular, we are investigating with them what else we could do to help local authorities and schools ensure that investigations following pupil accidents are fair to school staff, as well as to pupils and their parents. The National Curriculum has statutory requirements in PE and geography for all pupils to experience learning outside the classroom. We are developing further practical steps to encourage schools to expand provision for all pupils, across and beyond the National Curriculum, including trips and visits.

Pupil to Teacher Ratios

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will set out (a) for the London borough of Redbridge and (b) for the London borough of Waltham Forest, for 1997 and 2004, (i) the pupil to teacher ratio and (ii) the pupil to teacher plus classroom assistant ratio. [209017]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The data requested are shown in the table.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what representations she has received on the effect of pupil ratios on the allocation of funding to schools. [210130]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: None.

Schools Infrastructure

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will publish regular information on the number of (a) schools and (b) children's centres that have been built, rebuilt or remodelled in each of the Department's programmes. [209448]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We do not have this information across all of our programmes and have no plans to publish it. All local authorities and schools receive support for capital investment from us for their priority needs. In the main, we do not specify how they must invest it; they decide this on the basis of local asset management plans. We do not collect information about these local decisions, in order to keep administrative burdens to an acceptable level. Detailed information should be held locally.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will set intermediate targets for the number of secondary schools to be improved in the Building Schools for the Future programme. [209449]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We aim to deliver Building Schools for the Future within 10 to 15 years from 2005-06, subject to future public spending decisions. The projects announced from the spending review 2004 will renew an estimated 380 secondary schools. We do not intend to set targets for schools to be included beyond each spending review period.

We will also support improvements to other secondary schools over the next three years through devolved formula capital allocations to every school, formulaic allocations to every local authority, the Academies programme, the Targeted Capital Fund, and the new joint 16-19 capital budget.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what definition she uses of the term 21st century schools in the Building Schools for the Future programme. [209450]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Building Schools for the Future is the practical application of the Government's commitment to transform secondary education, and will help ensure that secondary pupils in every part of England learn in 21st century facilities.

To demonstrate what this could mean, we developed exemplar designs for schools fit for the 21st century. The exemplars show how to create high quality, modern school buildings with the latest integrated ICT systems. They show how to provide attractive, imaginative and stimulating environments, which are also safe and secure places for children to learn in. These are some of the requirements that are needed in a school for the future. They should also be inclusive, so that no child is left out and all can achieve their full potential, and be open to wider use, strengthening schools connection with their local communities. Overall, the transformation of the secondary school estate will help to raise standards and will play a crucial part in our ambitious programme of educational reform.

Secure Units

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the local authority secure units which have closed since 2000; and what the bed capacity of each was at the time of closure. [209277]

Margaret Hodge: The local authority secure children's homes which have closed since 31 March 2000 are in the following table along with the approved number of residents at time of closure.

Secure children's homes	Number of residents
Briars Hey	8
Brunel	8
Dales House	8
Stamford House	26
Stoke House	14
Thornbury House	7

SEN and Disability Tribunal

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many claims of unlawful discrimination have been (a) received and (b) cleared in favour of the claimant by the Special Educational Needs and Disability Tribunal in England in each year since 2002; and if she will make a statement. [208112]

Margaret Hodge: In the school year 2002/03 the Special Educational Needs and Disability Tribunal (SENDIST) received 104 claims of discrimination and registered 78 of these. The other 26 fell outside the Tribunal's powers. In 2003/04 it received 108 claims and registered 81.

The SENDIST decided 14 cases in 2002/03 and upheld three of these. In 2003/04 it decided 69 claims and upheld 21.

Sex Education

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what rights parents have to withdraw their children from sex education in schools; and what steps her Department takes to inform parents of these rights. [210692]

Derek Twigg: Parents have the right to withdraw their child from all or part of the sex and relationship education (SRE) provided at school, except for those parts included in the statutory science curriculum.

Guidance issued to schools in July 2000 makes it clear that parents have the right to withdraw, and emphasises the importance of schools working in partnership with parents. The Department has also published a leaflet for parents setting out their rights in relation to SRE. The leaflet is available on the Department's website at www.dfes.gov.uk/sreandparents and in hard copy for schools to distribute to parents.

Special Needs

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what provision is being made to enable North Yorkshire schools to meet their special needs requirements and to ensure that their inclusion policy is adequately funded. [208543]

Margaret Hodge: The majority of funding for schools is distributed according to a locally agreed formula which will include factors for SEN and deprivation. Most pupils with SEN are in mainstream schools and are funded through their authority's local funding formula. This enables schools to intervene early and make good arrangements to meet children's needs while ensuring that these pupils are fully included. It is for local authorities to decide how best to distribute their funding.

Up to 2003–04 a grant for special educational needs was paid to all local education authorities through the Standards Fund; North Yorkshire's allocation was £788,153; of which 50 per cent. was government grant and 50 per cent. contributed by the local authority. In 2004–05, this allocation was increased by 4 per cent. to £819,679 for North Yorkshire. In 2004–05 a number of previously separate grants for schools including the grant for SEN were brought together within a single grant—the School Development Grant. This grant is allocated to schools to use for any purpose to promote school improvement, including special educational needs. In 2003–04 LEAs could retain 50 per cent. of the SEN grant for central support for special educational needs. In 2004–05, LEAs are allowed to retain the same cash amount from their schools development grant for these purposes.

Specialist Schools (England)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many specialist schools there are in England; how many are in areas within the most deprived 20 per cent. of wards according to the Government's index of deprivation; and what specialisms have been chosen by the schools situated in those areas. [209788]

Student Support

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will assess the merits of a single system of student support based on intensity of study. [209236]

Dr. Howells: There are no plans to adopt a single system of general support based on intensity of study. However, changes we are introducing for the 2005/06 academic year will pro-rate the amount of fee support that a part-time student receives to the intensity of their part-time study. This Government are the only one to have provided support for part-time students. Prior to academic year 1998/99 no financial support of any kind was available to them. Since then we have introduced schemes which have enabled some part-time students to have their tuition fees met, to qualify for disabled students' allowances and to take out loans to cover course costs. In 2004/05 a new package of grants was introduced and this is being improved on further in 2005/06.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the extent to which support for part-time students takes account of the costs of (a) travel, (b) child care and (c) lost income. [209237]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Education and Skills commissioned the Open University to carry out a survey into the incomes of and costs incurred by part-time higher education students while studying. The survey found that, excluding course fees, students faced extra costs of on average £246 per year. This is slightly less than the maximum course grant of £250 which is available to part-time students.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures the Government has taken since the Higher Education Act 2004 to support part-time students. [209241]

Dr. Howells: The Government are building upon the improved support for part-time students, which was introduced in academic year 2004/05, by increasing the amount of fee grant that a student may get in academic year 2005/06. There will be three maximum fee grants rates of £590, £710 and £885 for students who are studying at 50 per cent. or more of an equivalent full-time course with the highest rate applying to those who study at 75 per cent. or more FTE. The threshold below which students can get both the fee grant and the £250 course grant in full is also being increased from £14,600 in 2004/05 to £14,970 in 2005/06.

Sure Start

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to transfer responsibility for administering Sure Start to county councils after 2006. [201043]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 30 November 2004]: Before April 2006, we will be discussing with local authorities and Sure Start local programmes how to ensure that the high quality services and successful ways of working pioneered by the Sure Start programmes can be maintained as local authorities take on increasing responsibility for planning of children's services. We expect that all local programmes will be administered through local authorities by April 2008.

We have no plans to remove the national ring fence from the Sure Start budget before 2008. However, some local removal of the ring fence will be piloted from 2005 as part of the Local Area Agreement pilots.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to ring fence the funding for Sure Start programmes in Kent when the funding arrangements are moved to Kent county council. [208426]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 17 January 2005]: Kent county council (CC) is taking part in the Local Area Agreement (LAA) pilot from April 2005 and as such will be able to request the inclusion of Sure Start local programme revenue funding as part of the children's services block of the LAA. As part of the LAA, Sure Start local programme funding would not be ring fenced.

Sure Start funding will however only be considered for inclusion in LAAs where areas can demonstrate that outputs will support Sure Start and the other targets in the 10 year childcare strategy. Kent CC will also be expected to continue to involve parents, children and community groups in the planning and delivery of services, and that will be reflected in the assessment of their performance. If Kent decide not to include Sure Start local programme funding within the local area agreement then the Sure Start local programmes revenue grant will be paid to the programmes' accountable bodies as in earlier years.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of Sure Start in reaching homeless families with children in temporary accommodation; and if she will make a statement. [209648]

Margaret Hodge: Sure Start Local Programmes are area-based programmes bringing together health and family support services with play, learning and child care opportunities to give young children living in the 20 per cent. most disadvantaged communities the best possible start in life. Some programmes with large numbers of homeless families in their catchment areas have specifically targeted the needs of homeless families, for example by providing play and advice sessions for children living in temporary accommodation.

The experience of local programmes and other services has shown that Sure Start, with its combination of universal and targeted services and focus on outreach, has been effective in reaching groups such as homeless families who often fall through the service network. By providing them with information and support, services encourage such groups to access services. Many Sure Start services have also supported mainstream services to reach out to and be more responsive to the particular needs of homeless families.

A major evaluation of Sure Start Local Programmes began in January 2001. This is looking at: the impact of the programme in the short, medium and long-term; access and quality of services; and its cost-effectiveness. One aspect will be to assess the outreach and home visiting services in place within programmes and the methods being developed to meet the needs of hard-to-reach families. Information will be available in summer 2005.

The Government's 10-year strategy for child care, announced in December 2004, aims to provide every family with easy access to integrated services through children's centres and extended schools in their local community. They will build on the success of Local Programmes and other initiatives for young children and families. 2,500 centres will be in place by 2008, and 3,500 by 2010. They will be proactive in reaching out to ensure that families who do not access services readily, including homeless families, nonetheless receive the help and support they need.

The Sure Start Unit is continuing to develop approaches for piloting, from April 2006, ways of ensuring that particularly disadvantaged 2-year-old children, including homeless children, receive Sure Start services.

Transformation Fund

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what the annual £125 million Transformation Fund announced in the pre-Budget report will be allocated from 2006. [209774]

Margaret Hodge: The 10-year child-care strategy, published in December 2004, set out the Government's vision for every child to have the best start in life and for parents to have more choice about how to balance work and family life. Our long term aim is for affordable, flexible, high quality child care to be available for all families with children under 14. We are making substantial additional investment in early years and child care over the next three years: the Sure Start budget will more than double from this year to 2007–08. This includes a new Transformation Fund of £125 million a year from 2006–07.

The aim of the Transformation Fund is to ensure a more sustainable approach to investment in child care. The fund will be distributed to local authorities from April 2006. The fund will complement the child care funding already available and support investment by local authorities in high quality, affordable, flexible and sustainable child care provision.

Options for making best possible use of this additional revenue are currently under discussion. We are reviewing the domestic and international experience of investing to support the quality and sustainability of child care, and the lessons learned will be used to inform decisions on how the Transformation Fund should be spent. An announcement will be made in due course.

World Darts Championship

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department spent advertising at the World Professional Darts Championships. [207886]

The materials were part of the Department's ongoing campaign to promote adult literacy, language and numeracy skills.

Nor did she meet the criteria for an ex gratia payment of compensation under the terms of the then Home Secretary's statement to the House of Commons on 29 November 1985, Official Report, columns 691–92.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the effect of having separate definitions of antisocial behaviour in the Housing Act 1996 and the Crime and Disorder Act 1999. [204534]

Ms Blears: Antisocial behaviour is defined in the Part 1 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 for the purposes of seeking Anti-social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) as behaviour that is likely to cause alarm, harassment or distress. For the purposes of seeking a Housing Injunction under Section 153A of the Housing Act 1996 antisocial behaviour is defined as conduct which is capable of causing nuisance or annoyance. It is important to note that both definitions relate specifically to these legislative measures and are not to be taken as general definitions of what constitutes anti-social behaviour.

Both definitions are wide enough to encompass most practitioners own understanding of antisocial behaviour and are designed to ensure that these legislative measures can be applied to tackle a broad range of antisocial conduct.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines his Department has given to agencies on assessing whether behaviour is anti-social. [204536]

Ms Blears: While there are no fixed guidelines the key to categorising behaviour as antisocial must be in consideration of its impact on others. The term 'antisocial behaviour' includes a variety of behaviour covering a whole complex of selfish and unacceptable activity that can blight the quality of community life. Other terms such as 'nuisance', 'neighbour disputes' and 'disorder' are also used to describe some of this behaviour. A legal definition of behaving in an antisocial manner is found in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998; this definition is used in relation to anti-social behaviour orders. The definition of antisocial behaviour being

> "that is to say in a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as himself".

Many agencies tackling antisocial behaviour have adopted this definition for more general purposes.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures he has in place to keep track of people waiting for asylum applications to be processed. [209366]

Mr. Browne: As part of the initial screening process asylum seekers are required to provide proof of residence at a particular address. Residence at that address is then made a condition of their temporary admission into the United Kingdom, to which other conditions may be added, principally a requirement that the asylum seeker reports regularly to the Immigration Service (IS) at a dedicated reporting centre or local police station. Verification of the place of residence occurs during reporting. In addition, the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) make regular checks, including personal visits, to ensure that individuals still reside at the recorded address.

IND maintains a central database containing the information supplied, which is also included in the individual Home Office (HO) file. All applicants, and their representatives, are informed of the obligation to notify the HO of any subsequent change of address throughout the asylum process. This may be done either in writing or in person to the nearest IS reporting centre or local enforcement office.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Department will respond to the proposal from Wirral police force for Bobbybanks. [208427]

Community Support Officers (London)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) community support officers and (b) street wardens are employed within the Greater London area. [209921]

Ms Blears: As at the end of September 2004, when figures were last published, there were 1,809 community support officers (CSOs) in the Greater London area.

Neighbourhood and street wardens are dealt with by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, who informs me that there are 321 wardens in Greater London funded by his Department. There are other wardens in addition to this operating in Greater London and elsewhere but they are not funded centrally and there is no central record of their numbers.

Coroners

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inquests in the jurisdiction of the Cleveland Coroner were heard in (a) August, (b) September, (c) October, (d) November and (e) December 2004 by (i) the coroner, (ii) the deputy coroner and (iii) the assistant deputy coroner. [207492]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 10 January 2005]: There are two coroners within the area of the former county of Cleveland. The information requested is not held centrally.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the salaries of the (a) coroner, (b) deputy coroner and (c) assistant deputy coroner of Cleveland were at 1 December 2004. [207493]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 10 January 2004]: This is a matter for the relevant local authorities. There are two coroners within the area of the former county of Cleveland. The two authorities responsible are Middlesbrough borough council (for the Teesside coroner) and Hartlepool borough council (for the Hartlepool coroner). They lead for the other authorities in the former county.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many days in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004 (i) the Coroner, (ii) the Deputy Coroner and (iii) the Assistant Deputy Coroner for Cleveland sat on inquests. [207539]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 10 January 2005]: This information is not available centrally. There are two coroners within the former county of Cleveland. Home Office statistics on case numbers in Teesside show that 274 inquests were held in 2002 and 273 in 2003; and that 82 inquests were held in 2002 and 59 in 2003. Data (in Hartlepool) for 2004 are not yet available.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many days on average in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004 (i) coroners, (ii) deputy coroners and (iii) assistant deputy coroners in the north-east region sat on inquests. [207616]

Paul Goggins: This information is not available. Data on days of sittings are not collected centrally.

Correspondence

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan will receive a reply to his letter of 25 November 2004 to the Minister of State for Citizenship, Immigration and Nationality regarding the Sectors Based Scheme, Arrangements for Foreign Employees. [208017]

Mr. Browne: I regret that the original copy of the letter of 25 November appears to have gone astray, which is why there has been no reply until now.

There is nothing in the Sectors Based Scheme itself that requires a person to sign on with the police. However, where someone given leave under that scheme is a "relevant foreign national" for the purposes of part 10 of the Immigration Rules, he would normally be required to register with the police.

The arrangements relating to the administration of the police registration scheme at a local level are a matter for the individual police force concerned, and the matter raised in the letter is therefore one for Grampian police to consider.

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer letters from the hon. Member for Hornchurch dated 29 January, 1 October and 12 November 2004, concerning the case of Brian Kent, reference M19306/4; and if he will make a statement on whether computer problems led to the delay. [209201]

Mr. Browne: I can confirm that the letters referred to by my hon. Friend were received by the Home Office. Although a reply to his letter of 29 January 2004 was drafted, it is not clear why this was not sent and why his two further letters were not acted upon more quickly. Mr. Kent has now commenced action to take his case to the European Court of Human Rights and we are considering our response. It is expected that the Home Office will be in a position to send a full reply to my hon. Friend's letter of 12 November within four weeks.

Crime

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many snatch thefts have been reported to (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police in each year since 1997; and how many reports led to a (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction. [208638]

Ms Blears: The available information relates to offences of theft from the person. Tables 1 and 2 give the number of offences recorded by the police in the Essex police force area and the Southend Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) area. Recorded crime data are published on a financial year basis and data at CDRP level for theft from the person are only available from 2001–02.

Table 3 gives the number of defendants proceeded against and found guilty in the Essex police force area and South East Essex petty sessional area. Court proceedings data are published on a calendar year basis. Data for 2004 will not be available until the autumn.

Because recorded crime deals with offences and court proceedings deals with defendants, the two data sets are not directly comparable.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of gun crime have been reported to (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police in each year since 1997; and how many reports led to a (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction. [208641]

Ms Blears: The available information is given in the table and relates to crimes recorded by the police in Essex in which firearms were reported to have been used. This information is not collected centrally for Southend.

With regard to prosecutions and convictions, this information is not available centrally as the individual circumstances of the offence are not collected.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of crimes reported within the Greater London area has been cleared up in each of the last three years. [208747]

Ms Blears: The clear up rate for all offences recorded in the Greater London region was 14 per cent. in 2001–02,15 per cent. in 2002–03 and 16 per cent. in 2003–04.

Criminals (Release of Identity)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the policy of his Department is on publishing the identities of criminals wanted by the police; [205354]

(2) what the policy of the police is on publishing the identities of criminals wanted (a) for questioning and (b) to appear in court. [205355]

Ms Blears: The issue of publishing the identities of persons suspected of involvement in an offence and wanted by the police either for questioning or for court appearance is an operational matter for the individual chief officer police.

Guidance is published by the Association of Chief Police Officers Media Advisory Group on using public media to locate or identify individuals. The guidance is available at http://www.acpo.police.uk/policies/index.html.

Departmental Expenditure (Asylum)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on the delivery of the asylum process in the last year for which figures are available. [209485]

Mr. Browne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate's (IND) resources cover a wide range of activities including the asylum process and it is not possible to identify separately the costs of the asylum process. Total IND resource expenditure for 2002–03 was £1,863 million.

Deportation

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to accelerate the deportation of foreign nationals who remain in detention, having completed their sentence; and if he will make a statement. [209451]

Mr. Browne: Detention under Immigration Act powers is only used where there is no reasonable alternative once a deportee reaches the end of his or her prison sentence but cannot be immediately removed. The common barriers to removal are the unavailability of valid travel documentation, an outstanding application for leave to remain in the United Kingdom or an appeal against the decision to make a deportation order.

The Immigration and Nationality Department's (IND) criminal casework team recruited an additional 16 staff in November 2004 to ensure that the deportation cases are considered at an earlier stage into the sentence and to afford those being detained greater priority. It is additionally currently recruiting a further seven immigration officers to increase the number of surgery visits conducted across the Prison Service estate in order to complete applications for replacement passports at an earlier stage where they have been lost or destroyed.

IND has no influence over the determination of an appeal as this properly falls to the independent appellate authorities who in turn are responsible to the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA). However, IND does highlight to the independent appellate authorities that a person is detained in order for the appeal to be heard as quickly as possible.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in the prison estate are held on remand awaiting deportation having completed their sentences; how many prisoners were held on this basis in 2004; and what the average period was for which such prisoners were held on remand. [208507]

Mr. Browne: Information on the number of people who were detained in prison establishments awaiting deportation after completion of a criminal sentence is not available.

Work is on-going to improve the quality of data held on those people detained under Immigration Act powers in prison establishments.

Domestic Violence

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether funding for domestic violence advocacy services will be ring-fenced; [206043]

(2) whether domestic violence advocacy services will include assistance in respect of (a) justice systems, (b) health, (c) housing and (d) benefits; [206044]

(3) what plans he has to ensure that the development of domestic violence advocacy services will (a) identify and assess existing provision of local Women's Aid and other domestic violence advocacy services and (b) build on what already exists. [206045]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 20 December 2004]: We recognise that advocacy services are an important element in supporting victims of domestic violence, both in and outside the criminal justice system. It is important that there is a range of services for all victims of domestic violence locally, including advocacy provision, which is the responsibility of local partnerships.

Each partnership is required to produce a strategy every three years for reducing crime and disorder in their area, following an audit to establish need. These audits were undertaken earlier this year, and partnerships should now be identifying what the needs of their local communities are, including for services addressing domestic violence. They will then set out how these needs will be met in their three year strategies, bearing in mind their budgets, which come from a range of sources. There is no ring fenced funding for domestic violence advocacy services from the Home Office, though the Department allocated those local partnerships with responsibility for crime and disorder £74 million in 2004–05 through the Building Safer Communities Fund. Among a variety of interventions, this could be spent on domestic violence services.

How local services are then commissioned is a matter for local areas, though we would recommend that they consider working in partnership with voluntary and community organisations where appropriate.

The precise remit of individual advocacy services will be based on identified local need, and may include a range of emotional, legal and practical support.

To support partnerships in developing their three year strategies and considering the range of domestic violence services that might be appropriate in their area, we have recently launched 'Developing Domestic Violence Partnerships: A Guide for Partnerships', which includes a section on advocacy and where partnerships can go for further advice. The guidance can be found at http://www.crimereduction.gov.uk/domesticviolence46.doc.

Drink Driving (Wales)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions for drink driving there have been in Wales in each year since 1996. [208842]

Paul Goggins: Information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database on findings of guilt for offences of driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs 1996 to 2002 (latest available) is given in the table.

Data for 2003 will be available in March 2005.

Drug-related Crime

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug-related crimes in (a) South Tyneside, (b) Tyne and Wear and (c) England and Wales were linked to heroin in the most recent period for which figures are available. [209289]

Caroline Flint: Recorded crime figures, which are used to measure trends in crime, include statistics on drugs offences, such as possession, and on property crimes, such as burglary, do not record whether the latter are related to an offender's drug habits. They also do not separately identify drug offences relating to heroin. There are therefore no figures currently available for the total number of crime in different areas linked to heroin. Statistics on the number of convictions for drug offences do contain more information about the type of drugs involved but only provide national figures.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes in (a) South Tyneside, (b) Tyne and Wear and (c) England and Wales have been linked to drugs in each year since 1997. [209291]

Caroline Flint: Recorded crime figures, which are used to measure trends in crime, include statistics on drugs offences, such as possession, and on property crimes, such as burglary, do not record whether the latter are related to an offender's drug habits. There are therefore no figures currently available for the total number of crimes in different areas linked to drugs.

Information on recorded drug offences, including trafficking and possession can be found in table 2.04 of the Home Office "Crime in England and Wales 2003–04" Statistics, which can be accessed via the RDS website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs04/hosb1004 .pdf

These figures are not broken down by drug type.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under the age of 18 years have been arrested for possessing class A drugs in each of the last seven years. [206229]

Caroline Flint: Figures on the number of people under the age of 18 years arrested for possessing Class A drugs are not collated. However we do have data on the number of people under the age of 17 years found guilty, cautioned or dealt with by compounding for unlawful possession of all drugs.

This information, which is only available since 2001, can found in Table 3.8 of the Home Office Drug Seizure and Offender Statistics which can be accessed via the Research Development and Statistics website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs04/hosb0804.pdf.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under the age of 18 years have been arrested for selling Class A drugs in each of the last seven years. [206240]

Caroline Flint: Figures on the number of people under the age of 18 years arrested for selling Class A drugs are not collated. However we do have data on the number of people under the age of 17 years found guilty, cautioned or dealt with by compounding for unlawful supply of all drugs.

This information, which is only available since 2001, can found in Table 3.8 of the Home Office Drug Seizure and Offender Statistics which can be accessed via the RDS website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs04/hosb0804.pdf.

Evidence

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the recommendations on disclosure from (a) the study commissioned by his Department, (b) the thematic review by the Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate and (c) Lord Justice Auld's review of the Criminal Courts have been implemented. [207449]

Paul Goggins: The prosecution disclosure recommendations made by the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) Inspectorate and the Home Office commissioned research were taken forward by a joint police/CPS project which produced revised joint operational instructions issued in November 2002. This was followed up by training based on the new instructions which began in April 2003. The Government's response to Sir Robin Auld's recommendations, including those on disclosure, is set out in the Annex to the Criminal Justice White Paper: Justice for All (CM 5563) issued in July 2002.

Lord Justice Auld's recommendation that the two stage prosecution disclosure test should be replaced by a single test was included in part 5 of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 as were provisions aimed at addressing the findings of the Home Office commissioned research that many defence statements are inadequate. A public consultation exercise relating to the implementation of Part 5 of the 2003 Act ended last month and the responses are being evaluated with a view to implementation in April this year.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the admission of similar fact evidence in trials. [207450]

Paul Goggins: The common law "similar fact" rule allowed the prosecution to rely on a defendant's previous misconduct in certain circumstances. However the Bad Character provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003, which were implemented on 15 December 2004, abolished this and other common law rules governing the admissibility of such evidence in criminal proceedings. In their place the Act sets out a number of "gateways" through which evidence of a defendant's bad character may be admissible, where relevant and probative. One of these is where such evidence is > "relevant to an important matter in issue between the defendant and the prosecution".

The Act makes clear that such > "matters in issue between the defendant and the prosecution"

include the question whether the defendant has a propensity to commit offences of the kind with which he is charged.

Firearms

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been proceeded against for the conversion of firearms in England and Wales in each year since 1993. [203520]

Caroline Flint: Statistics on the number of people proceeded against for the conversion of firearms is shown in the table.

Statistics for 2004 will be available in autumn 2005.

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences it is the offence for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.

Fixed Penalty Notices

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many penalty notices for disorder for consumption of alcohol in designated public places have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208951]

(2) how many penalty notices for disorder for using public telecommunications systems for sending messages known to be false in order to cause annoyance have been issued by (a) Essex Police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208952]

(3) how many penalty notices for disorder for wasting police time or giving false reports have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208953]

(4) how many penalty notices for disorder for disorderly behaviour while drunk in a public place have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208954]

(5) how many penalty notices for disorder for buying or attempting to buy alcohol for consumption in a bar in licensed premises by a person under 18 have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208955]

(6) how many penalty notices for disorder for throwing stones etc at trains or trackside buildings on railways have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208956]

(7) how many penalty notices for disorder for trespassing on a railway have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208957]

(8) how many penalty notices for disorder for knowingly giving a false alarm to a fire brigade have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208958]

(9) how many penalty notices for disorder for alcohol related offences have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004; [208959]

(10) how many penalty notices for disorder for throwing fireworks in a thoroughfare have been issued by (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police since the scheme was rolled out nationally in 2004. [208960]

Ms Blears: Data are collected centrally at police force level only. The following table gives the number of notices issued, by offence, by Essex police from January to the end of November 2004.

Foreign Students

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects of increasing charges to foreign students for leave to remain in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [208334]

Mr. Browne: In September 2004 a joint project team—comprising representatives from the Department for Education and Skills, the Home Office and the British Council—was asked to improve the evidence base around international students, and to undertake an assessment of the likely impact of increased leave to remain fees to attract more international students to the UK.

The outcomes of this work will be made available, alongside a Regulatory Impact Assessment for the education sector, when the Government announces its response to the recent Home Office Consultation on "Review of Charges for Immigration Applications".

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Chancellor of the Exchequer and (b) others about (i) the contribution to the UK economy made by foreign students and (ii) the proposals to increase the charges for leave to remain in the UK. [208346]

Mr. Browne: We hold frequent and regular discussions with other Departments, including the Treasury and the DFES, at both ministerial and official level, which involve consideration of the economic contribution made to the UK by overseas students.

The Home Office consultation paper, "Review of Charges for Immigration applications" in September 2004, was agreed within Government, as will the decision on the final fee levels. The consultation has engaged a wide range of stakeholders and individuals, including UKCOSA and Universities UK, among others.

Fraud

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of Chip and PIN technology on levels of fraud. [202992]

Ms Blears: Chip and PIN is a finance and retail industry initiative that aims to reduce plastic card fraud by requiring card transactions to be authorised by the customer keying in a PIN rather than signing a receipt. At the same time the introduction of microchips into cards will help prevent the production of counterfeit cards (skimming). The public trial of Chip and PIN was a success and national roll out has now started, with a view to the majority of card transactions being Chip and PIN by 2005.

The Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) estimates that without Chip and PIN card fraud might have risen to £1 billion by the end of the decade. APACS forecasts that in 2007 total card fraud losses on UK issued cards currently looks set to fall to approximately £330 million.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on card fraud; and what steps the Government are taking to make the use of cards as a method of payment safer. [205551]

Caroline Flint: On 26 April 2002, the Government launched a two-year pilot of a unique policing unit (the Dedicated Cheque and Plastic Crime Unit(DCPCU) based in London, which works closely with the banking industry to reduce organised card and cheque fraud, using intelligence largely provided by the card industry. The Home Office funded 25 per cent. of the unit's costs (£1.4 million over two years) during the pilot with the remainder being met by the card industry. An independent evaluation of the unit showed that it had been successful in detecting or preventing a significant amount of cheque and credit card fraud. Government are delighted that the unit is now continuing with full financial support provided by the card industry. The Home Office continues to chair the Steering Group.

We have been encouraging financial and retail sectors to work towards early implementation of more secure systems to combat fraud. This includes Chip and PIN, a finance and retail industry initiative that aims to reduce plastic card fraud by requiring card transactions to be authorised by the customer keying in a PIN rather than signing a receipt. At the same time the introduction of microchips into cards will help prevent the production of counterfeit cards (skimming). The public trial of Chip and PIN was a success and national roll out is under way.

The Home Office publishes fraud prevention advice on its website and has launched a website to combat internet fraud. The e-tailing mini site forms part of the crime reduction website and provides information to help both consumers and businesses protect themselves when buying and selling over the internet.

The Home Office has also published, jointly with APACS, a leaflet for members of the public about safe credit card use. Supplies of the leaflet have been sent to all police forces and Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership's in England and Wales. It is also available on the Home Office website.

Identity Cards

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many centres there will be in (a) Orkney and Shetland, (b) the Highlands and Islands and (c) Scotland where biometric data can be collected when identity cards are introduced. [208057]

Mr. Browne: No decisions have been taken on the number and location of centres where biometric information may be recorded. Not all centres would necessarily need to be at fixed locations. The recent biometric enrolment pilot included a fixed location in Glasgow but also conducted trials using mobile equipment. In Scotland, the mobile demonstration unit visited Methol and Dunfermline.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the facial biometric planned for (a) passports and (b) identity cards will (i) constitute a scan of a photograph provided by the applicant and (ii) involve the use of special technology which will require the individual to attend a processing centre. [208269]

Mr. Browne: The facial biometric planned for the ePassport will be presented as a photographic image within the passport, as is currently the case, and will additionally be held as data within the new passport's biometric chip. Data will continue to be captured by scanning a photograph submitted by the applicant. The photograph must conform to the recently agreed and issued standards. Image capture and its reproduction in the two forms required by the new passports will not require an applicant's presence at a processing centre or elsewhere.

The biometric requirements for the identity card are not yet complete. However, it is expected that the applicant will be required to attend an enrolment centre in order to have images of other biometrics, such as fingerprints and irises recorded. Therefore it is likely that a facial image will be recorded at same time, allowing more control over the lighting and the size and quality of the image than might be the case if a photograph supplied by the applicant were used.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contribution the Police Information Technology Organisation has made to the development of the identity cards scheme. [208280]

Mr. Browne: The Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) has helped the identity cards programme team to identify the uses which the police might make of the identity cards scheme and the requirements which it will be necessary for the scheme to support in order to deliver benefits to the police. PITO's advice has helped to ensure that the possible uses the police might make of the scheme are feasible within the context of existing and planned police systems and that technological compatibility has been considered at all stages. Additionally, they have shared their experience of the procurement and implementation of automated fingerprint identification systems.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent consultants from PA Consulting are advising his Department on the design of the national identity card programme; what the average annual cost per consultant is; what the total cost of the consultants is; and if he will make a statement. [209052]

Mr. Browne: The number of PA consultants working on the identity cards programme varies from day-to-day according to the needs of the programme. In December the full time equivalent of 32.5 staff were employed at an average daily cost of £1,093 each. Total expenditure on PA Consulting Group from May to December 2004 was £5,632,553.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of public resistance on the take-up rates of identity cards. [209621]

Mr. Browne: In the early years of the scheme, the large majority of ID cards will be issued as people renew or apply for passports. As the case for upgrading the security of passports is well understood and supported by the general public, the Government do not anticipate any significant public resistance.

When the Government announced their policy to proceed with a scheme in November 2003, they stated that in considering any decision to move to compulsion they would want to be confident that roll out during the first phase had delivered significant coverage of the population and that there was clear public acceptance for the principle of a compulsory ID card which would be used to access free public services.

Immigration

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of migrants from EU accession states who have failed to register with the workplace monitoring scheme since entering the UK. [208886]

Mr. Browne: Under the Accession (Immigration and Worker Registration) Regulations 2004, workers requiring registration who do not make an application within one month of starting work will be employed illegally.

An employer who continues to employ a worker requiring registration, who has not applied to register within one month of starting work, may be committing a criminal offence and could be liable to a fine of £5,000.

The Government are supporting compliance of the Scheme. Information is available on the 'Working in the UK' website www.workingintheuk.gov.uk and by telephoning the Worker Registration Scheme on 0114 259 6262. Employers can also find information and advice on the Home Office website www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk and from the Employers' Helpline (0845 010 6677). Management information published on 10 November 2004 showed that between 1 May and 30 September just under 91,000 workers applied to register with the Worker Registration Scheme (my statement of that date refers).

There is no current estimate of Accession Country nationals working without registering.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals who have been granted full British citizenship since 1997 have had their status revoked following the imposition of a custodial sentence for crimes committed in the UK. [208944]

Mr. Browne: There have been no removals of citizenship since 1973. The power to deprive a person of his or her citizenship on grounds of ordinary criminality (as opposed to actions seriously prejudicial to the vital interests of the United Kingdom) was rescinded by section 4 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002.

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change there has been in the average time UK and other EU arriving passengers have to wait to pass through immigration over the past 12 months. [209231]

Mr. Browne: Following the strengthening of the EU control in 2004 some passengers may have noticed an increase in clearance times. However, there is no specific measurement of the time taken to clear UK and other EEA arriving passengers through UK immigration controls so I am unable to provide specific details of any increase.

The UK Immigration Service is committed to clearing all bona fide passengers with minimal delay, and arrival volumes are closely monitored to ensure that staff are deployed to maintain this.

Immigration and Nationality Department

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will instruct the Immigration and Nationality Department to return the passport of the constituent of the hon. Member for Basingstoke Mr. Ahmed Rizwe (ref. R350848). [208177]

Mr. Browne: I wrote to the hon. Member about Mr. Rizwe's case on 20 January.

Magistrate's Court (Dyfed Powys)

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many warrants were issued by Dyfed Powys Magistrates' Court for the arrest of people normally resident in the Greater London area in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003; and how many were served in each year. [207840]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions occurred in each of the last three years of drivers who were incapacitated as a consequence of (a) alcohol, (b) illegal drugs and (c) legal pharmaceuticals; and if he will make a statement. [204960]

Ms Blears: Available information on the number of proceedings and convictions for offences of driving while impaired by drink or drugs or while above the specified limit for alcohol in England and Wales is given in the following table. The data cannot separately identify whether alcohol or drugs were involved.

Proceedings at magistrates courts and findings of guilt at all courts for offences of driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs[1], England and Wales, 2000 to 2002

Total England and Wales	Proceedings	Findings of guilt
2000	96,160	85,829
2001	95,983	84,748
2002	102,032	90,488

[1] Including the following offences under Road Traffic Act 1988:
Driving or attempting to drive a motor vehicle while unfit through drink or drugs (impairment) [s. 4(1)].
Driving or attempting to drive a motor vehicle while having a breath, urine or blood alcohol concentration in excess of the prescribed limit, [s. 5(1) (a)]
Failing without reasonable excuse to provide a specimen for a laboratory test or two specimens for analysis of breath if at the relevant time, he/she was driving or attempting to drive a motor vehicle, [s. 7 (b)]
In charge of a motor vehicle while unfit through drink or drugs (impairment), [s. 4 (2)]
In charge of a motor vehicle while having a breath, urine or blood alcohol concentration in excess of the prescribed limit, [s. 5 (1) (b)]
In charge of a motor vehicle and failing to provide a specimen for a laboratory test or two specimens for analysis of breath if at the relevant time, he/she was driving or attempting to drive a motor vehicle, [s.7 (b)]
Failing without reasonable excuse to provide a specimen of breath for a preliminary test. [s. 6(4)]
Excluding offences under Road Traffic Act 1988 sec 3A: Causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the public protection function of the probation service to be the subject of contestability under the National Offender Management Service structures. [201030]

Paul Goggins: Detailed plans for introducing contestability are being developed. There are currently no plans to apply contestability to the public protection function of the probation service.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether liaison arrangements with magistrates at a local level will continue to be based on the local criminal justice areas after the introduction of the National Offender Management Service. [204963]

Paul Goggins: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) places great importance on liaison arrangements with magistrates at local criminal justice area level and at individual courts within criminal justice areas. We are consulting on proposals for improved consultative arrangements between NOMS and sentencers at both magistrates' courts and criminal justice area level.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the business risk to the Home Office of the introduction of the National Offender Management Service; and if he will make a statement. [208691]

Paul Goggins: A risk assessment has been carried out on the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) Change Programme. It considered a range of potential risks to the programme and considered the consequences should any such risks occur. The resulting risk register details the actions required to ensure that the consequences of any risk are minimised. These actions are being taken forward by the Directors of NOMS.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether provisions in the proposed Bill on the management of offenders which strengthen the powers of probation boards will be consistent with the latest National Offender Management Service structure blueprint. [208694]

Paul Goggins: As I made clear in the statement I made on 20 July 2004, we are developing the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) within the framework of the existing probation board structure. The measures in the Bill will make small and sensible adjustments to existing legislation. These include setting out the aims of NOMS and establishing sentence planning and review as a core offender management function and a duty of local probation boards.

Although we have started to explore what longer term organisational change might be needed to deliver NOMS in its final state, detailed feasibility work and further consultation will be needed before decisions are made. Creating a 'central spine' of accountability from offender managers to the National Offender Manager is crucial to implementing the Carter reforms and we are now looking at organisational models which will deliver this. We are discussing with the Probation Boards

Association the changes to the role of Boards which it is likely will be involved, and will continue to be open in planning the "end state" for NOMS.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the model for contestability for the National Offender Management Service will allow (a) the Probation Service, (b) the Prison Service and (c) the voluntary sector to work in (i) competition and (ii) co-operation with each other; and how this model will influence the aim of breaking down the separation of the services. [209631]

Paul Goggins: Contestability within the National Offender Management Service includes both competition and co-operation between sectors. We are keen to encourage all sectors to compete for the delivery of the full range of services for offenders and to increase the number of private companies and voluntary and community bodies involved. The case for co-operation between sectors, for instance through a consortium rests on value for money. When the contestability model is in full operation, we expect to see probation services and prisons within a given region combining to procure services in a way that will improve value for money, drive up quality and achieve consistency of service for offenders in custody and the community.

Operation Stealth

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearms seized by Nottinghamshire Constabulary during "Operation Stealth" were real firearms subject to Section 5 (1)(aba) of the Firearms Act 1968 (as amended); how many were imitation firearms capable of being readily converted to fire live ammunition as set out in the provisions of Section 1 (1)(a) of the Firearms Act 1982; how many were gas cartridge firearms subject to Section 5 (1)(af) of the Firearms Act 1968 (as amended); how many were imitation firearms; and how many were air weapons. [206931]

Caroline Flint: The information is not available in the form requested. However, I understand from the Nottinghamshire police that since August 2002 a total of 317 guns have been seized during "Operation Stealth", as follows:

	Number
Section 1 handguns	70
Converted handgun	43
Shotgun	23
Rifles/machine guns	17
BB gun	27
Blank firing	40
Air weapon	41
Gas-powered	12
Stun gun	19
Imitation	25

Passports

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) financial and (b) other assistance with passport applications will be given to people living in remote and peripheral areas when the right to apply by post is removed. [208056]

Mr. Browne: I announced on 21 December 2004 that from late 2006 adults applying for their first passport would need to attend an interview as part of the process of confirming their identity. The initial application may still be made by post and other existing channels, and the right to apply by post will remain for all other passport application types.

The United Kingdom Passport Service is working on detailed proposals for implementing this requirement, including establishing a network of new offices where the interview will be held. While these proposals are not yet finalised, the aim, using a 70–80 office model, would be that nearly 97 per cent. of applicants would have an interview office within 20 miles of their home, 2.4 per cent. would be in a 20–40 mile radius with only 0.7 per cent. having to travel further than 40 miles. Wherever possible, applicants will be given the flexibility to choose when and where they are interviewed within the network, and we will, as far as practicable, manage office opening hours to suit applicant demand. For those in more remote areas of the UK, we are considering the practicality of mobile facilities or peripatetic staff. We have no plans at present to provide financial assistance.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the documentation requirements for passport applications have been changed to long birth certificates. [209133]

Mr. Browne: All first time applications for those born on or after 1 January 1983 must be supported by a full birth certificate showing details of parentage.

The previous practice of accepting a short birth certificate as proof of nationality for people born in the United Kingdom on or after 1 January 1983 was vulnerable to false claims of nationality. This was primarily because the short forms of birth certificate do not show details of parentage.

A person born in the UK could enter fictitious details about his/her parents on the passport application form, or a person here unlawfully could attempt to obtain a British passport for a child born here by making a false statement about his/her self. Under the previous requirements these types of false representation were very unlikely to be detected, but could be prevented by the requirement for a full birth certificate to be submitted with the passport application.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the completion of questions relating to bank account details on application forms returned in relation to the UK Passport Service's Personal Identification Project affects the application for a passport. [209445]

Mr. Browne: Bank account details have been collected as part of the pilot scheme identification matrix used to support the processing of passport applications within the Personal Identification Project. Following analysis of the pilot scheme outcomes and feedback, the decision has been made not to request this customer information when the system is deployed nationally in Q3 2005.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the credit reference company Equifax retains the information it receives from passport applicants for use on its databases. [209446]

Mr. Browne: Equifax are currently contracted to the UK Passport Service (UKPS) to provide database services to support the UKPS Personal Identification Project (PIP). During the life of this contract, Equifax retains the data on behalf of the UKPS, but it is contractually excluded from any use, including commercial use, of this information beyond the scope of the UKPS Personal Identity Project.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the credit reference company Equifax is allowed to use for commercial gain the information it receives from passport application forms. [209455]

Mr. Browne: Equifax are currently contracted to the UK Passport Agency (UKPA) to provide database services to support the UKPA Personal Identification Project (PIP). Equifax are contractually excluded from using data, for any reason outside the scope of PIP, gathered from passport application forms.

This data, whilst of a personal nature, does not differ from that included in a normal credit application, but does include checks against data from other Government Departments.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the locations in Scotland where the UK Passport Service plans to set up passport offices to meet the new requirements on passport issue announced on 21 December 2004. [209148]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 17 January 2005]: I announced on 21 December 2004 that from late 2006 adults applying for their first passport would need to attend an interview as part of the process of confirming their identity. Applications will continue to be sent in by post and other existing channels and will be processed initially in the present regional passport offices. First time adult applicants will then be invited to make an appointment for an interview. The UK Passport Service (UKPS) is seeking additional premises where interviews may be held. These will generally be small offices dedicated only to carrying out interviews and will not be passport offices offering the full range of UKPS services.

While UKPS proposals are not finalised, the aim, using 70 to 80 offices, is that nearly 97 per cent. of applicants would have an interview office within 20 miles of their home, 2.4 per cent. would be in a 20–40 mile radius with only 0.7 per cent. having to travel further than 40 miles. In order to take account of public transport links, the UKPS will be consulting transport planning authorities, including the relevant officials in the Scottish Executive, on possible locations for offices. Initial planning on the 70 to 80 office model has indicated a need, subject to consultation, for 11 new offices in Scotland: three in the borders, two in the central area (in addition to the regional passport office in Glasgow) and six distributed on the east and west coasts. For those in more remote areas, we are considering the practicality of mobile facilities or peripatetic staff.

Police

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many stop and account procedures were undertaken by the police on average in a day in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by (a) police force area and (b) crime reduction partnership. [203511]

Ms Blears: There is no data currently held centrally on stop and account procedures. The requirement to record all stops in line with recommendation 61 of the Stephen Lawrence inquiry will become effective on 1 April 2005.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of members of the police force in Stoke-on-Trent are (a) community support officers, (b) reserve officers and (c) part-time officers. [209896]

Ms Blears: Community support officers (CSOs) are not police officers, but police staff for whom the chief officer of the force may designate certain limited powers. The police service in England and Wales does not have a category of reserve police officers. Information on police numbers is not available in a way that makes it possible to identify the number of part-time police officers in the Stoke-on-Trent basic command unit (BCU).

The number of police officers (full-time equivalent) in the Stoke-on-Trent BCU on 31 March 2004 was 587. On 31 March 2004 there were 109 special constables in the Stoke-on-Trent BCU and at the end of September 2004 there were six CSOs in the Stoke-on-Trent BCU. I understand that the chief constable is using some of the funding made available by the Home Office in 2004–05 to increase the number of CSOs in Stoke to 18.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) community support officers and (b) police officers have been recruited in each of the last 24 months, broken down by (i) police force and (ii) police authority. [205360]

Ms Blears: Information on police officer and community support officer (CSO) joiners is published annually. For 2002–03 it can be found at Table 5 (police officers) and Table 8 (CSOs) in Home Office Statistical Bulletin No.11/03 "Police Service Strength, England and Wales, 31 March 2003", published on 1 October 2003. For 2003–04 the same information can be found at Table 5 (police officers) and Table 8 (CSOs) of Home Office Statistical Bulletin No.13/04 "Police Service Strength, England and Wales, 31 March 2004", published on 27 September 2004. Copies are in the Library.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police recruits have completed basic police training in each year since 1997. [200288]

Ms Blears: The number of police recruits who have completed Stage 2 of Foundation Training in Centrex regional training centres in each financial year since 1997–98 are given in the table.

The number of police recruits who have completed Foundation Training in the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) are also given in the table. (The MPS were unable to provide accurate figures for 1997–98.)

	Centrex	MPS
1997–98	4,885	—
1998–1999	3,750	1,113

2000–01	5,861	862
2001–02	7,578	1,690

Policing (Lewisham)

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) community support officers and (b) estate wardens have been deployed in the Lewisham, Deptford constituency, broken down by year of appointment. [201097]

Ms Blears: The Lewisham, Deptford parliamentary constituency is part of the Lewisham borough operational command unit (OCU). The information available is for the OCU, in which 36 community support officers have been deployed. The Commissioner informs ~~me~~ that compiling a breakdown by year of appointment would incur disproportionate cost. community support officers were first deployed in Lewisham on 31 March 2003.

The ministerial responsibility for wardens lies with my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, but I understand that 30 wardens have been deployed in the borough of Lewisham.

Prison Suicides

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the prisoners who committed suicide in 2004 were housed in safe cells;. [208205]

(2) how many safe cells were installed in 2004; and how many he plans to install in 2005. [208206]

Paul Goggins: During 2004 there was one apparently self-inflicted death of a prisoner in a safer cell.

To confirm the number of safer cells installed during 2004 would require disproportionate cost. However, there are to date approximately 3,400 safer cells (including 389 at Bronzefield prison, which opened in June 2004) and there will be an additional 1,900 by April 2006.

No cell can be considered totally "safe", but a safer cell can complement a regime providing care of at risk prisoners and reduce risks around impulsive suicide attempts. The design of these cells includes features such as specially designed furniture and fixtures which are manufactured and installed to make the attachment of ligatures very difficult, and the prevention of access to window bars via non-opening windows with integral ventilation grills. The use of this type of accommodation should be seen as just one part of the multi-faceted suicide prevention strategy, as outlined in my answer to the hon. Member's accompanying Question [208208].

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners who committed suicide in 2004 were (a) men and (b) women; how many of each sex were aged under 21; and how many of each sex were on remand without conviction; [208207]

(2) how many prisoners committed suicide in 1998. [208209]

Paul Goggins: The information requested about prisoner self-inflicted deaths in 2004 is shown in the following table.

Self-inflicted deaths 2004

Sex	Total	Under 21	Remand
Male	82	5	30
Female	13	0	2
Total	95	5	32

Reducing the number of prisoner self-inflicted deaths remains a priority for myself and the Prison Service.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the number of suicides in prison; and whether his policy includes a target for the number of suicides each year which should not be exceeded. [208208]

Paul Goggins: On 31 March 2004, I announced the outline suicide prevention strategy that would be developed over the coming year. It can be summarised as, "Reducing distress and promoting the well-being of all who live and work in prisons". This follows extensive consultations including those with the Howard League, Prison Reform Trust, Inquest, the Youth Justice Board, Prisons and Probations Ombudsman, HM Chief Inspector of Prisons, Samaritans and the Department of Health.

This strategy builds on the three-year safer custody strategy that ran from April 2001 and has a close relationship with issues of resettlement, detoxification, health, purposeful activity, as well as staff attitudes, leadership and training. Key achievements were the setting up of suicide prevention co-ordinators or equivalents in all prisons across the estate, an investment of over £21 million at six 'safer local' pilot sites and the development of a safer prison design, including "safer cells".

Clearly, all self-inflicted deaths in prison are deeply regrettable. To accompany the three-year safer custody strategy, a target was set for reducing the rate of self-inflicted deaths per 100,000 prisoners from the 1999–2000 figure of 141 to 112.8 by 2004–05. A rate of about 130 deaths per 100,000 is projected for 2004–05. The prisoner targets are being reconsidered in the light of experience.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners committed suicide in 2004 broken down by prison; and how many of those were (a) remand prisoners, (b) convicted but not sentenced, (c) aged under 16, (d) aged 16 or 17 and (e) aged between 18 and 21. [208516]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is provided in the following table.

On 31 March 2004, I announced the outline suicide prevention strategy that would be developed over the coming year. It can be summarised as, "Reducing distress and promoting the well-being of all who live and work in prisons". It has a close relationship with issues of resettlement, detoxification, health, purposeful activity and staff training.

The strategy recognises that prisoners are at particular risk of harming themselves in their early period in custody, when they are coping with issues of fear of imprisonment, detoxification or the impact of arrest on their family. Equally such risk is heightened when a prisoner's custodial status changes, for example when convicted or sentenced.

Remand prisoners form a large proportion of the prisoners in early custody and are therefore subject to a number of assessments and policies designed to enhance their safety. Any new prisoner or one whose status has changed has an interview with a reception healthcare screener, who looks for signs that a prisoner may self-harm. Induction sessions for new prisoners emphasise the support that is available, from staff, health care and other specialists, and from prisoner peer supporters such as insiders or Samaritans-trained listeners. The importance of maintaining contact with family and employers, and providing support to prisoners in respect of maintaining their housing, is further emphasised through the Custody to Work programme.

The Prison Service and the Youth Justice Board (YJB) are working closely together to prevent the suicides of young people held in their care. The YJB funds a dedicated juvenile outreach team to specifically assist juvenile establishments further develop and maintain their local suicide and self-harm prevention strategies. As part of the national Prison Service suicide prevention strategy, a separate (but linked) strategy is being developed for juveniles.

Prisons

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of self-harm have taken place in prisons in London in each of the last three years. [208740]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is provided in the following table:

[1] In December 2002 new procedures for reporting self-injury were introduced in prisons in England and Wales. The evidence suggests that much of the increase in reported self-harm from 2003 may result from this rather than reflect an actual increase in incidence of self-harm

[2] 1 January—30 September only

[3] Bronzefield opened in June 2004

A number of intervention strategies have been introduced into establishments for people who self-harm. These include counselling, support groups, and specialised psychological interventions. A network of establishments has been set up to develop interventions, facilitate evaluation and share good practice. Guidance to staff on managing people who self-harm has been circulated to establishments.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many escapes from prisons in England and Wales there have been in each of the last three years. [209404]

Paul Goggins: The following table details prison escapes in the last three years, and so far this current financial year. Prison Service key performance indicators identify an escape as one where (i) the prisoner is not recaptured within 15 minutes or (ii) is recaptured within 15 minutes but has committed an offence other than escape before recapture.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners have been detained beyond their sentence expiry date in each prison in each of the last 10 years in England and Wales. [209595]

Mr. Browne: Information on the number of people who have been detained beyond their sentence expiry date is not available.

Work is ongoing to improve the quality of the data held on those people detained under Immigration Act powers in prison establishments.

Psilocin

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research his Department has conducted into psilocin use; [208270]

(2) if he will make a statement on the link between psilocin use and crime. [208271]

Caroline Flint: The Home Office has not conducted research into psilocin use.

Hallucinogenic mushrooms are known to be harmful to those with a mental illness or with an underlying mental health problem and can precipitate psychosis. Users are also vulnerable to self harm while under the influence of these mushrooms and those using them may experience negative flashbacks.

There is no clear evidence of a link between psilocin use and acquisitive or other crime.

Security Industry

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been (a) warned, (b) prosecuted and (c) convicted for failure to comply with the Security Industry Authority requirements for the licensing of door staff; and what plans he has to introduce further penalties for individuals and organisations for failure to comply with those requirements. [203711]

Ms Blears [holding answer 9 December 2004]: Prosecution of organisations or individuals who have failed to comply with the door supervisor requirements of the Private Security Industry Act 2001 is the responsibility of individual police forces and this information is not held centrally. There are no plans to introduce further penalties for individuals or organisations at this moment.

Sentencing

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when sentencing statistics for 2003 will be published. [208273]

Paul Goggins: Current plans are to publish a Home Office Statistical Bulletin on Sentencing Statistics for 2003 next month. This will include sentencing trends from 1993.

However, detailed statistics on sentencing for 2003 were included only in the four Supplementary Volumes of Criminal Statistics published on the Home Office website on 11 November 2004. Provisional sentencing data were also released (covering the first quarter of 2004 for the Crown Court and the last quarter of 2003 for magistrates courts) on the website on 15 November in a Quarterly Brief "Sentencing Statistics, England and Wales".

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average per annum cost of detaining a prisoner in England and Wales was in the latest year for which figures are available. [207067]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 10 January 2004]: The latest figure available is for the financial year 2003–04. For that year, the average cost of detaining a prisoner in England and Wales was £25,687. This figure incorporates both public and private sector prisons.

Sex Abuse (Historical Cases)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had over the last two years regarding anonymity for defendants in historical sex abuse cases; and what the outcome of those discussions was. [207322]

Paul Goggins: The Home Secretary and other Ministers considered and discussed anonymity for defendants in sex offence cases in the context of amendments tabled during the passage of the Sexual Offences Bill.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many witnesses in historic child abuse cases have been prosecuted for perverting the course of justice, on the basis of deliberate fabrication, since 1995. [207458]

Paul Goggins: It is not possible from the information held on the Home Office Court Proceedings database to identify witnesses in historic child abuse cases who have been prosecuted for perverting the course of justice, as the circumstances of an offence are not collected centrally.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government will extend the statutory reporting restrictions which preserve the anonymity of victims of historical sex abuse to persons accused of those offences. [207511]

Paul Goggins: The Government have carefully considered whether defendants in sex offence cases should be entitled to anonymity through reporting restrictions but does not believe that there is a case for a change in the law. The Government consider that strengthened guidance issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Press Complaints Commission is the right approach.

Sex Offenders

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of prisoners are imprisoned for committing a sex offence. [207334]

Paul Goggins: On 30 November 2004 there were 657 persons held on remand and 5,975 under immediate custodial sentence for sexual offences in prison establishments in England and Wales, as recorded on the Prison Service central IT system. These figures constitute 5 per cent. of the total remand population and 10 per cent. of the total population under immediate custodial sentence.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce an alternative to the Sex Offenders Treatment Programme which requires no admission of guilt on the part of the prisoner. [207514]

Paul Goggins: There are no plans to introduce an alternative sex offender treatment programme for offenders who do not admit their offences. An alternative programme intended to encourage offenders out of denial was trialled but was not successful as it did not reduce the number of those in denial or address their particular needs. It may also have an adverse impact on the effectiveness of existing programmes.

Mrs. Claire Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on how risk assessment of convicted sex offenders is carried out. [207515]

Paul Goggins: Risk assessment of those who are convicted of sexual offences is carried out before sentence and regularly throughout their period of supervision, both in custody and in the community.

The following risk assessment tools have been devised in order to facilitate these assessments:

The Risk Matrix 2000 predicts reconviction rates for both two and 20-year periods, based on actuarial factors empirically associated with risk of sexual offending.

The Offender Assessment System (OASys) is a risk assessment document, used jointly by the Probation Service and the Prison Service, which incorporates static and dynamic risk factors in order to inform accurate and current assessment.

Assessments measuring dynamic risk known to be associated with sexual reconviction, for example, sexual interests, self-management, distorted attitudes, are also routinely used.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support his Department plans to make available to sex offenders to find (a) accommodation and (b) employment after their release from prison. [208822]

Paul Goggins: The issue of appropriate accommodation is addressed prior to an offender's release as part of his licence conditions; this could include consideration for approved premises. For offenders who potentially pose a risk of harm to the public, this is managed under the Multi Agency Public Protection Arrangements (MAPPA), which include local housing authorities and registered social landlords as part of the duty to co-operate.

Jobcentres are also subject to the duty to co-operate provisions under MAPPA and securing employment is a factor contained within an offender's individual Supervision Plan. Finding employment is managed by local arrangement and suitability of any such employment is evaluated. The Criminal Justice Act 2003 provides for disqualification orders, which make it a criminal offence for convicted sex offenders to seek employment that would provide unsupervised access to children.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the impact of overcrowding on the number of prisoners completing the Sex Offender Treatment Programme. [209528]

Paul Goggins: The main risk created by overcrowding is that prisoners do not complete offending behaviour programmes to which they have been assigned because they are transferred to another establishment before the programme is completed. It is well understood in the Prison Service that prisoners who have started an offending behaviour programme should not be moved before the programme is completed.

The Prison Service monitors the delivery of all offending behaviour programmes for the proportion of prisoners who do not complete. The number of prisoners who start but do not complete the Sex Offender Treatment Programme is small and reasons include illness, breach of group rules and the offender voluntarily withdrawing. We believe that the number who do not complete because of overcrowding is negligible.

Tsunami

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's policy is on enabling children who have been orphaned as a result of the tsunami disaster from Sri Lanka and India to be allowed to join close relatives who now live in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [208726]

Mr. Browne: The immigration rules already contain provision allowing relatives who are settled in the United Kingdom to sponsor the entry of a child where there are serious and compelling considerations and suitable arrangements have been made for the child's care. In the case of children affected by the tsunami, such care will have to take account of the special needs of these children.

Recently, some countries affected by the tsunami have imposed restrictions upon the travel and adoption of children from the disaster areas, in part as a result of recent accounts of traffickers seeking to exploit vulnerable children there. Our decisions must take account of these restrictions and in view of the dangers presented by traffickers, our investigation of the full circumstances of individual cases will be as thorough as ever. However, my hon. Friend may be assured that a sympathetic approach will be taken in such cases.

UN Convention on Migrant Workers

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the changes to UK law which would be required for ratification of the UN Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and their Families. [207707]

Mr. Browne: Ratifying the UN Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families would require a number of changes to UK legislation. The Convention would give migrants the same access to public funds and services as British citizens, regardless of their length of stay in the UK. Changes would be required to enable these migrant workers to access benefits, housing, education and social services.

Overseas nationals who are granted settlement in the UK are entitled to claim income-related benefits and non-contributory benefits and to access social housing in the same way as a British citizen. Individuals coming to the UK for employment have to support themselves and any dependants without recourse to public funds. However, state school education and treatment under the NHS do not qualify as public funds under the Immigration Rules. So migrant workers without settlement do have access to state education services and, as long as they remain in employment, NHS services. We believe that to extend this access to all benefits before these workers are settled in the UK would act as an unnecessary "pull factor" and undermine immigration controls.

We have no plans to ratify the UN Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of their Families. The rights of migrant workers are already protected in UK law, including under the Human Rights Act 1998 and we believe we have struck the right balance between the need for immigration control and the protection of the interests and rights of migrant workers.

Violent Incidents (Prisons)

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent incidents were reported in each institution within the secure estate in the most recent year for which records are available. [208118]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 17 January 2005]: There are a range of incidents that might be classified as violent. HM Prison Service defines violence as

> "any incident in which a person is, abused, threatened, or assaulted. This includes an explicit or implicit challenge to their safety, well-being or health. The resulting harm may be physical, emotional or psychological".

The tables which include centrally collected data about the most serious incidents in prisons, remand centres, juvenile and young offender institutions and secure training units, during the financial year 2003–04, have been placed in the Library. No central records are kept of violent incidents in immigration removal centres or local authority secure children's homes.

Wrongful Conviction (Compensation)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the criteria are for the award of (a) compensation and (b) ex gratia payments in cases of wrongful conviction and imprisonment; and if he will make a statement. [208514]

Paul Goggins: The criteria for the statutory scheme for compensation for wrongful conviction are set out within the provisions of section 133 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988. The criteria for the ex gratia scheme are set out in the then Home Secretary's statement to the House of Commons on 29 November 1985, Official Report, columns 691–92.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 December 2004, Official Report, column 650W, on xenotransplantation, what steps he took to ascertain that all of the animals were cynomolgous macaques; and what time period the information relates to. [207045]

Caroline Flint: The information was drawn from material prepared by the Home Office Chief Inspector during his review of compliance with the licence authorities granted to Imutran Ltd. staff for their xenotransplantation research. It relates to studies carried out in each of the years 1995 to 1999.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much the Department spent on lawyers in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) number of actions, (b) number of settlements, (c) number of court cases and (d) the costs of each settlement. [206464]

Mr. Miliband: Information is not held centrally in the form requested.

The information available on the costs of litigation (including inquiries) is shown in the table.

	Cases[1]	Hours	Cost (£)
1997–98	18	237	27,909
1998–99	36	208	42,362

Disbursements are the costs caused by representation by barristers and outside solicitors. Disbursements were increased in 2003–04 due to the Hutton Inquiry.

The number of cases and costs increased in 1999–2000 due to the BSE Inquiry and legal challenge to the House of Lords Bill.

Departmental Website

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when the searchable database of all Government (a) non-departmental public bodies and (b) independent regulators will be available on his Department's website. [210294]

Mr. Miliband: 'Public Bodies 2004' will be published for the first time as a searchable database. We anticipate that the new searchable database containing information about non-departmental public bodies will be launched in the first quarter of this year, and I will announce its availability to the House.

The issue of identifying which public bodies sponsored by central Government Departments should be classified as independent regulators has been included in the review of the variety and complexity of public bodies being carried out at present in response to a recommendation of the Public Administration Select Committee (PASC). The Government indicated this in their response to the Better Regulation Task Force report "Independent Regulators" which my predecessor announced in a written ministerial statement on 9 February 2004, Official Report, column 61WS. This indicated that such bodies would not be identified separately when the database is first launched with 2004 data. That remains the case. The report of the review for PASC is due to be published soon and will comment further on this point.

Ministerial Residences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the (a) capital and (b) notional open market rental value is of each official residence available to Ministers. [210419]

Mr. Miliband: Admiralty House contains residential accommodation for three Ministers. No Cabinet Office Ministers are currently accommodated in official residencies.

The capital value of the three flats, if extracted from the overall capital value of Admiralty House, is £7 million. The term "Open Market Rental Value" is no longer recognised by the Appraisal and Valuation Standards but is now defined as "Market Rent". The notional market rent for all the three flats is £21,900-£25,500 per calendar month (each flat is estimated to be in the region of £7,300-£8,500 per calendar month).

Parking Spaces

John Mann: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many car parking spaces are provided for those (a) working in and (b) visiting his Department. [208972]

Mr. Miliband: For Cabinet Office staff based in central London, there are 52 designated parking spaces. These are mainly for staff who work unsocial hours; staff/visitors who are disabled, ministerial and operational vehicles.

The Centre for Management and Policy Studies (CMPS) College (formerly known as the Civil Service College) has 322 designated parking spaces at its residential training centre in Sunningdale. These are mainly for use by CMPS College staff and those of its Public Private Partnership/Public Finance Initiative partner, delegates attending CMPS College courses, visitors and any of those who are disabled. The CMPS College has an additional seven designated parking spaces at its non-residential training centre in London.

These are mainly for use by CMPS College staff, delegates attending CMPS College courses, visitors and any of those who are disabled.

The Emergency Planning College (EPC) has 105 designated parking spaces at its residential training centre in Easingwold. These are mainly for use by EPC staff and contractors, delegates attending courses, visitors and any of those who are disabled.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Antisocial Response Courts

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what training is made available to magistrates on dealing with antisocial behaviour. [210726]

Mr. Leslie: Statutory responsibility for the training of magistrates currently rests with the 42 independent Magistrates' Courts' Committees (MCCs). The Judicial Studies Board (JSB) has provided training materials to MCCs on antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs), with are available on the JSB website.

In February 2004, the JSB advised MCCs that it expected every magistrate to receive a minimum of two hours face to face training on ASBOs by the end of this financial year.

The Home Office issued detailed guidance on ASBOs to Magistrates' Courts in November 2002. Preliminary Home Office guidance on the new Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 was issued to all magistrates courts in January 2004.

Asylum Process

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Home Affairs on delivering an efficient asylum process; and when each meeting to discuss such matters took place. [209487]

Mr. Leslie: The Lord Chancellor and the Secretary of State for Home Affairs both attend the regular Asylum Stocktake chaired by the Prime Minister.

Claims Direct

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2004, Official Report, column 29W, on Claims Direct, if he will publish the minutes of the meeting between representatives of Claims Direct and officials of his Department in 2002 to discuss matters relating to the operation of the personal injury market. [210301]

Mr. Leslie: It would be inappropriate for me to disclose the minutes of the meeting that took place on 13 May 2002 between officials and Claims Direct without consulting with third parties. I shall write to the hon. Member for Blaby with a decision once those parties have been consulted.

Community Legal Service

Ross Cranston: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 770W, on the Community Legal Service, what the percentage was in each of the last 10 years. [210741]

Mr. Leslie: In the time available it was not possible to obtain an estimate for the whole of the UK legal services market for year 1994–95. However, for each of the nine remaining years, the estimated proportion of Community Legal Services[1] expenditure as a percentage of the UK legal services market was as follows:

[1] The Community Legal Service was created in April 2000. The percentage prior to this in the table covers legal aid for civil matters formally administered by the Legal Aid Board.

	Percentage
1995–96	8.3
1996–97	7.6
1998–99	7.0
1999–2000	5.5
2000–01	5.2
2001–02	4.3
2002–03	4.5
2003–04	4.7

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when he will reply to the letter dated 9 November 2004 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mrs. Catherine Lim. [209854]

Mr. Leslie: The Secretary of State and Lord Chancellor wrote to my right hon. Friend on 7 December 2004 in response to his letter of 9 November. Unfortunately, due to an administrative error, the letter was not sent. Officials contacted my right hon. Friend's office on 18 January and a copy of the letter of 7 December has now been sent.

Crack Houses

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many crack house closures there have been since the introduction of the orders allowing such closures, broken down by region; and if he will make a statement on (a) the ease with which such orders can be served in the courts and (b) the most common cause of delays in seeking such orders in the courts. [206845]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

Closure orders by Government Office region for the period 20 January to end September 2004 are as follows.

	Number
East of England	5
South East	23
South West	24
East Midlands	10

	Number
West Midlands	3
North West	13
North East	7
Yorkshire and the Humber	4
Wales	5
Total	158

There is no official data relating to the most common cause of delays in seeking such court orders in the courts. Once a notice of closure has been served upon a premises the court hearing has to be heard within 48 hours. There are no reports of this legal requirement not being met. Feedback from police and others involved in closures made so far are very positive about the process.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department in the (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 session, broken down by Act. [206794]

Mr. Leslie: The information requested is as follows:

(a) 2002–03 Session

s 57—assaulting and obstructing court security officers.

s 95—Inserts a new section (1A) into the Criminal Justice Act 1991 to extend the offences in that section to make it an offence for a person charged to fail to provide means information when there has been an official request to do so.

s 96—inserting new s 24(2A) and (2B) in the Criminal Justice Act 1991—failure to provide information/providing false information relating to fines.

Schedule 3, inserting a new s 8D in the Magistrates Courts Act 1980—reporting pre-trial hearings.

Schedule 5 paragraph 48—fines: failure to provide information/providing false information.

Schedule 5, paragraph 49—meddling with a vehicle clamp.

Schedule 6, paragraph 2—failure to provide information/providing false information in relation to statement of means for work order.

(b) 2003–04 Session

Gender Recognition Act 2004

s 22—prohibition on disclosure of information

European Parliamentary and Local Elections (Pilots) Act 2004

s 6—personation: arrestable offence (extension of an existing offence).

External Suppliers

John Mann: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many tenders were let by his Department to external suppliers in financial year 2003–04; and what the value was. [209115]

Mr. Leslie: During 2003–04 my Departments central procurement and estates function let 26 new contracts, for national/regional provision, and with an individual value in excess of £100,000. The estimated total value of these contracts is around £17 million.

The total number of contracts let by my Department, including orders placed against existing contracts, contracts placed locally, and contracts below £100,000 is not held centrally and could only be established at disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his Department in the last three years. [207824]

Mr. Leslie: The Freedom of Information Act does not make specific categories of information available, but operates on the presumption that all information held by public authorities should be available, subject to the 24 exemptions of the Act.

Whether or not information is exempt under the Act requires the exercise of judgment in each case. The majority of the exemptions also require that the public interest in releasing the information should be weighed against the public interest in withholding it. If the public interest in disclosing the information outweighs the public interest in withholding it the information must be disclosed. The assessment of the public interest has to be made in all the circumstances of the case, on a case-by-case basis as far as each request is concerned.

Norman Baker: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will provide a list of the contact points for each Government Department for all applications for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [210291]

Mr. Leslie: The following is a list of Freedom Of Information contacts for each of the Government Departments.

Legal Aid

John Mann: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the legal aid bill for defending drug addicts in court was in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004. [210145]

Mr. Leslie: The information requested is not available. A defendant charged with murder or robbery for example may well be a drug addict but that information is not recorded centrally.

Mental Capacity Bill

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the purposes will be of the Government amendments to the Mental Capacity Bill which he has indicated will be tabled in the other House. [209802]

Mr. Lammy: At Report Stage of the Mental Capacity Bill the Government undertook to amend the Bill in two key areas. The amendments fulfilling these commitments have now been tabled for debate at Committee in the House of Lords. They provide additional reassurance sought by the House in two key areas. The first amendment relates to decisions about life-sustaining treatment in the context of best interests determinations for people who lack capacity. It provides that when someone is making a decision about whether the provision of life-sustaining treatment is in the best interests of a person lacking capacity, he cannot be motivated by any desire that the person lacking capacity should die—for whatever reason. The amendment tabled in the House of Lords on 18 January will replace the existing clause 4(5). It states:

> "Where the determination relates to life-sustaining treatment he must not, in considering whether the treatment is in the best interests of the person concerned, be motivated by a desire to bring about his death."

This emphasises that the person assessing best interests must look only at the treatment which might be given, for example its possible benefits and burdens. He must not bring into the process any wish or desire to end the person's life. This should lay to rest any lingering doubt that the Bill will permit euthanasia.

The second area of amendments concerns advance decisions to refuse treatment. The amendments tabled on 18 January mean that an advance decision will have no application to any treatment which a doctor considers necessary to sustain life unless strict formalities have been complied with. These are that the decision must be in writing, signed and witnessed. In addition, there must be an express statement that the decision stands "even if life is at risk". These amendments build on the already significant safeguards in the Bill surrounding advance decisions, and respond in particular to points raised by the Joint Committee on Human Rights.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list the ministerial engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that the Secretary of State has cancelled since 1 January 2004. [209227]

Mr. Leslie: There is no full record kept of cancelled engagements in the Lord Chancellor's diary. When engagements have had to be cancelled, wherever possible we try to re-instate them at a later date. All engagements are subject to Ministerial and Parliamentary business.

Sir Mark Thatcher

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will recommend to Her Majesty the Queen the removal of the hereditary baronetcy from Sir Mark Thatcher. [210680]

Mr. Leslie: It would require primary legislation to remove a Baronet's title and the Government have no plans to introduce such legislation.

Voting Eligibility

Mr. Heald: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the UK residency requirements are to vote in general elections; and if he will make a statement on the eligibility of (a) citizens from the European Union who are not UK or Irish citizens and (b) non-EU migrants with a right to remain to vote in general elections in the UK. [210348]

Mr. Leslie: Residence for the purpose of eligibility to be included in electoral registers entitling electors to vote at UK general elections is not defined in law but has been ruled by the courts to entail a considerable degree of permanence. Electoral Registration Officers decide in the light of the relevant circumstances whether a person may be said to be resident at a particular address. Eligibility to vote in general elections in the UK does not extend to (a) citizens of European Union States who are not UK or Irish citizens, unless they are also resident qualifying Commonwealth citizens (Cypriot or Maltese) and (b) non-EU migrants with a right to remain unless they also are resident Commonwealth citizens whose right is still extant.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further measures are planned to help combat opium production in Afghanistan. [209290]

Mr. Rammell: The UK, as lead nation, remains committed to supporting the Afghan Government in the implementation of their comprehensive National Drug Control Strategy. We are working with the Afghan Government and others to increase activity in all areas of their strategy over the coming year—the principles of which were underlined by President Karzai during the first Afghan Counter Narcotics National Conference held at the beginning of December shortly after his inauguration. As well as co-ordinating the activity of international partners, we are providing substantial financial and practical support—spending more than £100 million over the period 2003–06.

I refer my hon. Friend to the written statement I made on Afghanistan: Counter Narcotics on 29 November 2004, Official Report, columns 17–18WS. Since then, we have already seen a number of developments, such as the start of the Criminal Justice Task Force training programme in December, which will help to bring about the successful prosecution of drugs traffickers. So far over the last financial year, we have run seven training courses on intelligence and investigation techniques for the Afghan Counter-Narcotics Police; supported over five major seizures; provided a mobile forensic laboratory; and helped to establish regional law enforcement offices in seven provincial centres outside Kabul.

In addition, the UK works closely with Afghanistan's neighbours, including providing assistance, to help their efforts to counter the flow of opiates from Afghanistan.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent estimate has been made of the percentage of the UK's heroin supply coming from Afghanistan. [209292]

Mr. Rammell: HM Customs and Excise estimate that approximately 25–30 tonnes of heroin is smuggled into the UK each year and that over 95 per cent. originates from Afghanistan. This represents less than 10 per cent. of Afghanistan's potential heroin production in 2004.

The UK, as lead nation, is committed to supporting the Afghan Government in the implementation of their comprehensive National Drug Control Strategy. I refer my hon. Friend to the written statement I made on Afghanistan: Counter Narcotics on 29 November 2004, Official Report, columns 17–18WS.

African Union Summit (Gabon)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department sent observers to the African Union summit in Gabon; and if he will make a statement. [209087]

Mr. Mullin: We did not send observers to the African Union (AU) Peace and Security Council meeting in Libreville, Gabon on 10 January 2005. We do however, follow closely the AU's development. I will attend the next AU summit in Abuja later this month.

Armament Sales (China)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he makes an evaluation of the human rights performance of recipient countries in decisions on their eligibility to purchase British armaments. [209942]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The United Kingdom has one of the strictest and most transparent arms export licensing systems of any country. All export licence applications are rigorously assessed on a case by case basis against the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria, taking account of the circumstances prevailing at the time and other announced Government policies. The criteria include our commitment not to issue an export licence if there is a clear risk that the proposed export might be used for internal repression. The Government will also exercise special caution and vigilance in issuing licences to countries where serious violations of human rights have been established by the competent bodies of the UN, the Council of Europe or by the EU.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the governments of China's neighbouring countries on the lifting of the EU's embargo on the sale of armaments to the People's Republic of China. [209945]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The review of the EU Arms Embargo on China and any decisions arising from it are to be undertaken by the EU only. But in discussions, China and other countries in the region have expressed an interest in the issue. The EU will take all relevant factors into account in the review.

The European Council in December 2004 discussed the embargo and invited the Luxembourg Presidency of the EU to take forward work on the review. The Council underlined that the result of any decision should not be an increase of arms exports from EU member states to China, neither in quantitative terms nor in qualitative terms. The European Council also recalled the importance of the criteria of the EU Code of Conduct on arms exports, including criteria regarding stability and security in the region.

Burma

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the oral statement of 15 December 2004, Official Report, columns 1674–82, on European Affairs, if he will name the state to which he refers in column 1679 as holding strong commercial interests in Burma; which companies are involved; what representations he has received from these companies; and if he will make a statement. [207116]

Mr. Straw: No. I have nothing further to add to my statement.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will urge the Association of the South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) (a) to suspend Burma from the organisation and (b) not to proceed with Burma's chairmanship of ASEAN in 2006. [209055]

Mr. Alexander: The terms of membership of ASEAN is an internal matter for its members.

However, we take advantage of our regular bilateral and multilateral contacts with all ASEAN nations to encourage substantive change in Burma. The prospect of Burmese chairmanship of ASEAN in 2006 makes the need for change all the more pressing.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the scale of the impact of the Asian tsunami disaster on Burma in addition to the official reports of damage and casualties made by the Burmese Government. [209369]

Mr. Alexander: Burma has been largely spared the destructive forces of the earthquake and subsequent tsunami. The initial emergency needs have been met by the Burmese regime and by the aid community. The assessment of the scale of impact by the Tsunami Assistance Co-ordination Group (chaired by the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC) and made up of representatives of the UN organisations and various other international NGOs) is in line with the Burmese Government's own findings with a death toll of approximately 60–80 people. It is estimated that 5,000–7,000 have been directly affected through a loss of their homes, with a further 10,000–15,000 suffering a loss of livelihood.

Non-governmental organisations in Thailand estimate that up to 2,500 Burmese migrant workers may have been killed in Southern Thailand.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Burmese chairmanship of the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) in 2006; and what the implications of the Burmese chairmanship are for the UK's relations with ASEAN. [209370]

Mr. Alexander: We are concerned about plans for Burma to take over the Chairmanship of the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) in 2006 unless there is real progress towards genuine democratisation in Burma. We use our regular bilateral and multilateral contacts with all ASEAN members to encourage them to press the military regime in Burma to enter into a meaningful dialogue with the democratic movement and ethnic groups as soon as possible. The prospect of Burmese chairmanship of ASEAN makes the need for change all the more pressing.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the UN Security Council regarding human rights abuses in Burma. [209371]

Mr. Alexander: We have raised our concerns on the situation in Burma, including the many human rights violations there, in the UN and with our Security Council Partners. However, there is no consensus at present to bring Burma before the Security Council.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of his Department's staff is based in London. [208035]

Mr. Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) employs approximately 6,000 UK-based staff and approximately 9,500 locally engaged staff. All locally engaged staff work overseas. At any one time, approximately 2,000 staff (12.9 per cent.) work in the FCO's buildings in London and about 1,200 (7.7 per cent.) at Hanslope Park, near Milton Keynes.

European Constitution Referendum

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's plans for the proposed referendum on the constitutional treaty for the European Union. [208547]

Mr. MacShane: The Gracious Speech on 23 November announced that a Bill would be introduced to give effect to the treaty establishing a constitution for Europe, subject to a referendum. The Bill will set out provisions for the holding of the referendum.

Free Trade Unions

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries have been assisted by his Department in the development of free trade unions. [208975]

Mr. Alexander: Free trade unions can have a vital role to play in the development of democracy, human rights and economic prosperity. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has sought to promote the development of free trade unions in many parts of the world. For example, the FCO has supported the development of better labour market practices through programmes within the Global Opportunities Fund. These countries have included China, Serbia, Ukraine and Kazakhstan. The delivery of the programmes has often involved close working between the FCO and the UK trade unions. The FCO has also provided logistical support and briefing to UK trade unions in their own work in seeking to promote the development of free trade unions in various countries. These have included Iraq, China, Zimbabwe, the Occupied Territories and Israel. The FCO has established a strong partnership with the Trades Union Congress in Britain in support of many of these activities and initiatives. For example, the FCO set up a conference for regional trades unionists in Antigua in 2004 in close consultation with the TUC.

Illegal Logging

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking in conjunction with other Government Departments to encourage developed countries to collaborate to discourage (a) the practice of illegal logging and (b) trade in forest products. [209379]

Mr. Rammell: The UK plays a key role in international efforts to combat illegal logging and to encourage sustainable forest management. This will be an objective for our presidencies of the G8 and EU in 2005.

The UK is working with EU partners on the development of the EU Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Action Plan. This includes the development of EU legislation to prevent illegal timber from entering into the European market and negotiation of Voluntary Partnership Agreements with key timber producing countries. These agreements will require partner countries to establish schemes to license legally produced timber. Timber originating in FLEGT partner countries will not be permitted to be imported into the EU without such licences. The UK also supports Forest Law Enforcement and Governance regional initiatives in Africa and Asia to help developing countries strengthen their forest governance and trade.

As part of this overall approach, the UK Government have been seeking, since July 2000, to purchase their timber from legal and sustainable sources and have been promoting the benefits of this policy to other countries, particularly those that import significant quantities of timber.

The UK works through key multilateral environment agreements and other international fora, including the Convention on Trade in Endangered Species, Convention on Biological Diversity and the United Nations Forum on Forests, to encourage sustainable use of forest products and protection and conservation of endangered species.

Iraq

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which UK private security firms and personnel are employed in Iraq. [209281]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The Government employ Control Risks Group and ArmorGroup to provide security for our staff in Iraq. ArmorGroup are also contracted by the Government to provide 40 international police advisers in southern Iraq. There are a number of other UK based security firms and personnel working in Iraq which are contracted to other employers.

We do not have a list of these firms. However, we encourage all British nationals in Iraq to register with the British embassy in Baghdad or the offices of the British embassy in Basra and Kirkuk.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of the allegations of corruption in connection with the operation of the United Nations' oil for food programme in Iraq. [210255]

Mr. Rammell: The Government take very seriously all allegations of corruption surrounding the UN's Oil for Food (OFF) programme in Iraq. The Government are concerned about the assessment made by the Iraq Survey Group on the likely nature and scale of OFF corruption in its report of 6 October 2004. The Government are co-operating fully with the Independent Inquiry Committee appointed by the UN in April 2004 to investigate these allegations. It would be inappropriate to comment on any specific allegations of wrongdoing until the inquiry is completed.

Lusitania

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government will be represented at 90th anniversary commemorations of the sinking of the Lusitania close to the Old Head of Kinsale or elsewhere; and if he will make a statement. [209596]

Mr. Alexander: I am not aware of an invitation for the Government to be represented at any anniversary commemorations of the sinking of the Lusitania.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the ministerial engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that he has cancelled since 1 January 2004. [209221]

Mr. Straw: Engagements I take on are cancelled very rarely, and then only if this is unavoidable. We do not however keep records of any such cancellations.

Nigeria

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the potential for political instability in Nigeria following recent increased levels of civil unrest emanating from the national elections of 2003. [209637]

Mr. Mullin: We do not believe the situation in Nigeria has worsened significantly since the April 2003 elections, although there have been some worrying outbreaks of violence, notably in Plateau State and the Niger Delta. We judge the principal cause of such incidents is over control of resources and political power. Officials from the British High Commission in Nigeria have been in close touch with the Federal and relevant State authorities on these events.

Press Officers

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many press officers are employed in the Department. [206532]

Mr. Straw: As at April 2004, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office employed 18 press officers within its main press office in London. This figure excludes press and public affairs officers posted to British overseas missions.

There are approximately 180 officers, both UK-based and locally engaged, employed within our missions overseas who spend a percentage of their time on press and public affairs. Some of these are full time. An exact breakdown of these figures is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Seal Pups

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Canadian Government about the culling of seal pups in the forthcoming season; and if he will make a statement. [209273]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 18 January 2005]: We last made formal representations to the Canadian Government in 1999 and the matter was raised again in May 2004. The Canadian authorities are fully aware of our views. We do not accept the need for any seal cull, but if one does take place it should be sustainable and based on a precautionary principle.

Sexual Abuse (UN Peacekeeping Troops)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the UN on allegations of sexual abuse by peacekeeping troops in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and whether he has discussed this matter with the governments of the countries concerned. [209171]

Mr. Rammell: The recent reports of allegations of sexual abuse by peacekeepers in the Democratic Republic of the Congo is disturbing. We have fully supported the actions of the UN Secretary-General in appointing Prince Zeid of Jordan as his special adviser on this issue. In addition, we have had detailed discussions with officials of other governments to decide how best to ensure that this issue is properly dealt with in the United Nations. We have agreed that the Special Committee on Peacekeeping during their meeting at the end of January will ask the UN Secretary-General to commission a full report and to come back to the Security Council with concrete recommendations and to ensure that any recommendations are implemented.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role the Government are playing in assisting peace talks between the Government of Sudan and rebel organisations in the Darfur region. [209173]

Mr. Mullin: A UK observer attends the Abuja peace talks between the Government of Sudan and the rebel organisations in Darfur where he presses both sides to reach agreement on political issues. We are urging both sides to fully implement the provisions of the Security and Humanitarian protocols signed in Abuja as part of this process, and to participate constructively when the talks reconvene.

Yemen

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of his Department's resources have been dedicated to diplomatic representation in Yemen in the last 10 years. [208400]

Mr. Rammell: The percentage of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's budget spent in Yemen from 1 April 1998 is as follows:

	Percentage
1998–99	0.10
1999–2000	0.15
2000–01	0.25
2001–02	0.26
2002–03	0.28
2003–04	0.28

No figures are held centrally for the years 1994–95 to 1997–98.

Zimbabwe

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current human rights situation in Zimbabwe. [209610]

Mr. Mullin: The human rights situation in Zimbabwe remains bad. Zimbabweans are subject to political violence and intimidation. Attacks on what little is left of the independent media continue, and an NGO bill about to become law will restrict the freedom of civil society. There is no indication that parliamentary elections in March will be genuinely free and fair. We continue, with our international partners, to promote a return to democratic governance and the rule of law.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Leader of the House what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his office in the last three years. [207810]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs earlier today in column 140W.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list the official engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that he has cancelled since 1 January 2004. [209228]

Mr. Hain: There is no record kept of cancelled engagements in my diary. When engagements have had to be cancelled, wherever possible we try to reinstate them at a later date. All engagements are subject to ministerial and parliamentary business.

TREASURY

Alcohol-related Deaths

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how many deaths in (a) North Staffordshire and (b) Stoke on Trent alcohol was the primary cause in each of the past five years. [209906]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Mark Fisher, dated 24 January 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for how many deaths in (a) North Staffordshire and (b) Stoke on Trent, alcohol was the primary cause in each of the past five years. (209906)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2003. Figures in the attached table show number of deaths where the underlying cause of death indicated a condition directly related to alcohol use, in the years 1999 to 2003 among residents in the former Health Authority of North Staffordshire and the Unitary Authority of Stoke on Trent.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) definition of alcohol-related deaths only includes those causes regarded as being most directly due to alcohol consumption. Apart from deaths due to accidental poisoning with alcohol, this definition excludes external causes of death, such as road traffic deaths and other accidents, and alcohol-related suicides and homicides. Estimates of the annual total number of deaths in which alcohol has played a role can therefore vary widely depending on the criteria used. The definition used by ONS allows for consistent comparisons over time for those deaths where a clear association with alcohol consumption can generally be assumed.

Alcohol-related deaths[1] in the former health authority of North Staffordshire (which comprises the four primary care trusts of: Staffordshire Moorlands, Newcastle-under-Lyme, North Stoke and South Stoke) and Stoke on Trent unitary authority[2], 1999 to 2003[3]

Number of deaths

	Former North Staffordshire health authority	Stoke on Trent unitary authority
1999	61	35
2000	60	39
2001	62	39
2003	90	50

[1] For the years 1999–2000 the cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9). The codes used by ONS to define alcohol-related deaths are listed below:
291(Alcoholic psychoses
303(Alcohol dependence syndrome
305.0(Non-dependent abuse of alcohol
425.5(Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
571(Chronic liver disease and cirrhosis
E860(Accidental poisoning by alcohol.
For the years 2001–2003 the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) was used. To maintain comparability with earlier years the following codes were used:
F10(Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol
I42.6(Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
K70(Alcoholic liver disease
K73(Chronic hepatitis, not elsewhere classified
K74(Fibrosis and cirrhosis of liver
X45(Accidental poisoning by and exposure to alcohol.
The selection of codes to define alcohol-related deaths is described in: Baker A and Rooney C (2003). Recent trends in alcohol-related mortality, and the impact of ICD-10 on the monitoring of these deaths in England and Wales. Health Statistics Quarterly 17, pp 5–14.

[2] Usual residents of these areas.

Corporation Tax

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2004, Official Report, columns 981–82W, on corporation tax, if he will provide the information which he collects for the most recent years for which it is available. [210635]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible separately to identify from central corporation tax records national governing bodies for sport or international sporting headquarters in the UK. These governing bodies are grouped under 'recreational services' which include many other service types such as radio and television, leisure facilities and self-employed artists.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton dated (a) 13 December 2004 with regard to Ms Amaal Azi, (b) 9 December 2004 with regard to Mr. Ken Wych and (c) 10 December 2004 with regard to Ms Jade Summer. [209853]

Dawn Primarolo: I have replied to letters referred to under (a) and (c). Letter regarding Mr. Ken Wych, dated 6 December, was transferred to the Department for Works and Pensions on 9 December and notified to you.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to answer the letter dated 23 November 2004 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Carl Walker. [210832]

Dawn Primarolo: I have done so.

Council Tax

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many dwellings in Stoke on Trent are in council tax bands (a) A, (b) B, (c) G and (d) H; and what percentage of all dwellings in Stoke on Trent each represents. [209912]

Dawn Primarolo: As at 25 October 2004 the number of dwellings banded in Stoke-on-Trent totalled 109,716.

	Number of dwellings banded	Percentage
(a) Band A	68,809	63
(b) Band B	21,207	19
(c) Band G	123	0.1
(d) Band H	46	0.04

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value of the council tax rebate grant paid to Scottish local authorities was (a) this year and (b) in each of the last three years. [210364]

Mr. Boateng: Council tax benefit is paid by the Department for Work and Pensions to council tax payers in Scotland in the same way as in the remainder of Great Britain; grants to Scottish local authorities are a devolved matter for the Scottish Executive.

Death Certification

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he proposes to take regarding the release of certified death records to appropriate private sector bodies in order to facilitate the prevention of fraud through impersonation of the deceased. [209840]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Registrar General, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Dr. Alan Whitehead, dated 24 January 2005:

As Registrar General for England and Wales, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the release of certified death records to the private sector for fraud prevention purposes. (209840)

The Births and Deaths Registration Act 1953 is quite specific as to the means of access to records of deaths held by registration officers and myself. The Act gives persons the right to search the indexes in order to identify the entries they are looking for and to obtain certified copies (certificates) on payment of the statutory fee. Neither registration officers nor I have any powers to disclose or share information in any other way.

Proposals in the form of the draft Regulatory Reform (Registration of Births and Deaths England and Wales) Order 2004, presented to Parliament on 22 July 2004, contained a draft provision that would have enabled me to provide list cleaning services that would have assisted the private sector in combating fraud relating to impersonation of the deceased. The House of Commons' Regulatory Reform Committee and House of Lords' Delegated Powers and Regulatory Reform Committee, whose first scrutiny reports were published in December 2004, decided that the draft Order should not proceed to its second stage scrutiny as it was an inappropriate use of the order-making powers in the Regulatory Reform Act 2001. The Government is now considering its next steps for modernisation of the civil registration service.

My officials continue to be in contact with representative Private Sector Bodies to discuss how this issue can be addressed.

Debt Relief

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has held discussions with experts in institutions in the City of London to seek advice on new methods of restructuring and financing international debt. [210284]

Mr. Timms: Treasury Ministers and officials regularly exchange views with financial sector experts on a wide number of issues, including new methods of restructuring and financing international debt.

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the effect that debt relief for heavily indebted poor countries will have on (a) foreign direct investment and (b) private bank lending; [210285]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect that debt relief will have on the international credit standing of each heavily indebted poor country; [210286]

(3) what research he has conducted into the effect on each heavily indebted poor country's credit standing of debt relief by (a) Paris Club countries and (b) other countries. [210287]

Mr. Timms: The majority of HIPCs have no access to the capital markets, and are dependent on grants and concessional financing from the official sector. The Enhanced HIPC Initiative, and our proposals for deeper multilateral debt relief, are designed to deliver genuine debt sustainability to the world's poorest countries, and to free up resources for the investments in health, education, and infrastructure necessary to achieve the millennium development goals.

Countries need the right preconditions in terms of physical infrastructure and human capital to be able to take advantage of the opportunities offered by international trade and investment. That means increased levels of public sector investments are the essential counterparts to private investment. The World Bank estimates that effective aid 'crowds in' private investment by $2 for every $1 of aid.

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the balance of trade figures were between the UK and each heavily indebted poor country in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [210288]

Mr. Timms: Balance of trade figures between the UK and each HIPC country for each of the last five years can be found in the Overseas Trade Statistics published by HM Customs and Excise, which is available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the cost of travel within the UK for the Department was in each year since 1997; and how much of this was spent on (a) hire cars, (b) helicopter hire, (c) hotel accommodation and (d) subsistence; [206466]

(2) how much the Department spent on first class travel in each year since 1997; [206573]

(3) how many overseas trips, and at what total cost, have been made by his Department in each year since 1997; and what the costs of (a) flights, (b) internal travel, (c) hotel accommodation and (d) subsistence were of each trip. [206652]

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent on travel in each of the last seven years. [209506]

Mr. Timms: The costs for the Treasury of all travel and all subsistence within the UK, all travel and all subsistence overseas over the last two years, and all first class travel for 2003–04 are given in the table. In respect of total costs for earlier years, I refer to the answer given by the then Financial Secretary to the hon. Member for Haltemprice and Howden (David Davis) on 22 July 2004, Official Report, column 482W. Further detail in respect of the earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the "Ministerial Code", the "Civil Service Management Code" and the "Code of Conduct for Special Advisers".

Note:

The costs of first class travel are sourced from the Treasury's travel management contract, which began in July 2002. 2003–04 is therefore the first year for which a complete figure can be given without incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Policies (Clwyd, South)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Clwyd, South constituency, the effects on Clwyd, South of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [210329]

Mr. Timms: The Government have put in place a radical programme of both macroeconomic and microeconomic reform since our election in 1997 to improve the economic performance of all parts of the UK. There is significant evidence that these policies have already yielded considerable benefits for the Clwyd, South constituency. For example, since May 1997, claimant unemployment has fallen by 52 per cent., and both long-term unemployment and long-term youth unemployment have nearly been eliminated, with falls of 85 per cent. and 92 per cent. respectively.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at Parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./.

Earnings (Scotland)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the gross (a) average and (b) median weekly earnings (i) including and (ii) excluding overtime are for (A) male, (B) female and (C) all full-time workers in (1) Scotland and (2) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland; [209795]

(2) how many and what percentage of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all full-time workers in (i) Scotland, (ii) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland and (iii) the United Kingdom earn less than (A) £279.00 per week, (B) £209.62 per week and (C) £168.75 per week in gross pay, (1) including and (2) excluding overtime; [209796]

(3) what the (a) average and (b) median (i) hourly and (ii) weekly gross earnings (A) including and (B) excluding overtime are for (X) male, (Y) female and (Z) all full-time workers aged (1) 18 to 21, (2) 22 to 29, (3) 30 to 39, (4) 40 to 49 and (5) over 50 years in (aa) Scotland and (bb) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland; [209812]

(4) what the (a) average and (b) median (i) hourly and (ii) weekly gross earnings (A) including and (B) excluding overtime are for (X) male, (Y) female and (Z) all full-time workers in the (1) private, (2) public and (3) unclassified sectors in (aa) Scotland and (bb) each of the unitary local authority areas in Scotland. [209813]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply. His answer has been placed in the Library.

Economic and Financial Affairs Council

Mr. Moore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Government's priorities for the Economic and Financial Affairs Council will be during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [209557]

Mr. Timms: As set out in Box 2.4 of the 2004 pre-Budget report, the Government will use their leadership of the G7/8 and the EU to tackle the key challenges of international poverty reduction, structural economic reform, trade reform and climate change.

The Luxembourg-UK Annual Operating Programme sets out further details of priorities for 2005. These include delivering on the Lisbon agenda of more and better jobs, sustainable economic growth and increased competitiveness and regulatory reform. Copies of this are available in the Library of the House.

Employment Levels

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) actual and (b) percentage annual changes in job levels for the (i) private and (ii) public sectors were in the last two calendar years. [210282]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Stephen O'Brien, dated 24 January 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about changes in job levels in the public and private sector. (210282)

The most recent public and private sector job figures published by ONS on the basis of National Accounts definitions were published in the article "Jobs in the public sector: mid-2003" in the July 2004 issue of "Labour Market Trends".

Drawing upon this source, the attached table shows the number of UK jobs in the public and private sectors for each of the years from 2001 to 2003, the latest available data. The table also shows the annual changes and annual percentage changes in these totals.

Job levels for the private and public sectors are obtained from returns from public sector organisations and the Labour Force Survey, and are currently available on an annual basis. Private sector employment is calculated as the difference between overall employment as estimated from the Labour Force Survey, and public sector employment as derived from returns from public sector organisations.

Haiti

Ms Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whether Haiti will be included in his Department's recent proposals to support the countries least able to pay off World Bank debts by paying 10 per cent. of annual servicing of that debt. [209819]

Mr. Timms: The UK is proposing that the international community provide up to 100 per cent. relief on the debt owed by poor countries to the World Bank, African Development Bank, and IMF. We are leading the way by paying our share of debt payments owed to the World Bank and African Development Bank, and are calling for better use of IMF gold to fund its debt relief costs.

Eligible countries include all post-completion point HIPCs, and all other low income IDA-only countries with suitably robust public expenditure management systems to ensure the savings are directed towards poverty reduction. The current proxy for this is whether the country is receiving direct poverty-reduction budgetary support from the World Bank through the poverty reduction support credit (PRSC). As an IDA-only country Haiti is potentially eligible for assistance under this initiative, and will be able to benefit after it receives support in this form from the World Bank.

Highly Indebted Poor Countries

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much external Government debt is owed by each highly indebted poor country to private financial institutions; and what proportion that sum is of total external debt in each case; [210227]

(2) what the (a) total external debt and (b) estimated annual repayment of that debt is for the Government of each highly indebted poor country (i) in total and (ii) as a proportion of Government spending; [210251]

(3) how much external Government debt is owed by each highly indebted poor country, broken down by amounts owed to each (a) country and (b) multilateral institution. [210252]

Mr. Timms: The HIPC Status of Implementation Report published annually by the World Bank and IMF, in conjunction with individual country update reports, provide the data requested. These numbers are all publicly available, and can be found via the following links: http://www.imf.org/external/np/hipc/2004/082004.pdf; http://www.imf.org/external/country/index.htm.

International Finance Facility

Mr. Alan Duncan: To the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries have agreed to participate in his proposed International Finance Facility; what amounts each participant has agreed to contribute; and on what financial terms. [210296]

Mr. Timms: The IFF will be a temporary financing mechanism to provide an additional $50 billion a year in development assistance between now and 2015. It will "frontload" commitments made at Monterrey by leveraging in money from the international capital markets, against long-term pledges of Monterrey commitments.

42 countries—including France, Italy and Sweden—have given their support to the IFF. We have also received the support of a wide range of non-governmental organizations, faith groups and the business community.

Decisions on the level of financing will be made when the IFF is established.

MRSA

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons it is not listed on a death certificate when MRSA has been a contributory factor. [210274]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 24 January 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking for what reason it is not listed on a death certificate when MRSA has been a contributory factor. (210274)

Doctors are required to complete the Medical Certificate of Cause of Death to the best of their knowledge and belief. Guidelines on completing death certificates are included at the front of every book of certificates. Certificates are not available without these instructions.

In accordance with internationally accepted guidelines from the World Health Organization, these instructions tell doctors to include only conditions which they believe contributed to death.

It is up to the individual doctor's clinical judgment to decide whether or not a condition present at or immediately before death contributed to death, and so should be mentioned on the death certificate. In addition, in the case of MRSA, whether the infection was antibiotic resistant or not may not be known to the doctor when completing the certificate.

Office Supplies

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department has spent on office supplies in the last 12 months. [209436]

Mr. Timms: In the year ended 31 March 2004, the Treasury spent £308,000 on stationery.

Shellfish Farming

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the Crown Estate has received from rents paid by shellfish farmers in (a) Orkney, (b) Shetland, (c) Scotland and (d) the UK in each of the last 10 years. [209747]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table shows the rents received in Orkney, Shetland, Scotland and the UK, over the last 10 years.

Single Currency

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many officials in his Department are assigned to work on the UK's potential integration with the European Monetary Union. [209437]

Mr. Timms: The Chancellor's statement to the House on 9 June 2003 on UK membership of the single currency set out a reform agenda of concrete and practical steps to address the policy requirements identified by the assessment of the five economic tests. A range of officials from across the Treasury contribute to this work.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department has spent on evaluation of the five economic tests for entry to the single currency. [209492]

Mr. Timms: The assessment of the five economic tests was comprehensive and rigorous. The assessment and supporting studies relate to a number of publicly stated Treasury objectives and the cost of producing them was met from within the Treasury's three-year departmental expenditure limits.

Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the appeal made by the right hon. Member for Birkenhead's constituent, Mr. Edwards, on 9 November 2004, against the decision of the Inland Revenue to recover a tax credit overpayment will be heard. [209701]

Dawn Primarolo: Claimants can appeal against decisions about their entitlement but there is no right of appeal against the recovery of an overpayment. The Inland Revenue's Code of Practice 26, "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?", which is available on the Department's website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk, explains what claimants can do if they believe they should not be asked to pay back on overpayment.

The Inland Revenue replied to my right hon. Friend and his constituent on 24 November 2004. The Department wrote again to the constituent on 14 December 2004. I have asked the Department to write to my right hon. Friend again in case he requires anything further.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Department has made of the procedures used by the Inland Revenue to recover tax credit overpayments since April 2004; and if he will make a statement. [209877]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue regularly assesses and reviews its procedures for recovering tax credit overpayments.

The Inland Revenue's approach to dealing with overpayments is set out in a Code of Practice "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?". A copy has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to how many tax credit recipients in (a) Scotland and (b) Moray local authority area tax credit overpayment notices have been issued since April 2004; what percentage of total claimants of tax credits this represents in each case; and if he will make a statement. [209878]

Dawn Primarolo: The amount of any overpayment of tax credits is detailed on the decision notices that the Inland Revenue sends to claimants. Information on the number of decision notices where an overpayment is shown is not available.

For information on the number of tax credit overpayments I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, South (Miss Begg) on 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 129W.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Department has made of the (a) financial and (b) social impact on tax credit claimants of the tax credit overpayment recovery process; and if he will make a statement. [209879]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue's Code of Practice 26 ("What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?") sets out their approach to handling overpayments of tax credits.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average amounts of tax credit overpayments to claimants since April 2004 in (a) the UK, (b) Scotland and (c) the Moray local authority area are; and if he will make a statement. [209880]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, South East (Dr. Iddon) on 21 December 2004, Official Report, column 1596W.

Unemployment (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the levels of long-term (a) adult and (b) youth unemployment were in Liverpool, Riverside in each of the last eight years. [210256]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mrs. Louise Ellman, dated 24 January 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about unemployment in the Liverpool, Riverside Parliamentary Constituency. (210256)

Table 1 gives estimates of the numbers of long-term unemployed people, both youth and adult, who were resident in the Liverpool Riverside Parliamentary Constituency, for each twelve month period ending February from 1999 to 2004, the most recent available period. Information on length of time unemployed is not available for earlier periods.

These estimates from Labour Force Survey (LFS) are, as with any statistical sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for local areas. Table 2 gives the annual average number of young people aged 18 to 24 years old and adults (aged 25 and over) resident in the Liverpool Riverside Parliamentary Constituency claiming JSA benefits for over 12 months or more in each year from 1997 to 2004.

Table 1: Long-term[1] unemployment in Liverpool, Riverside parliamentary constituency

12 months ending February	Youth unemployed (aged 16–24)	Adult unemployed (aged 25 and over)
1999	[2]—	2,000
2000	[2]—	1,000
2001	[2]—	2,000
2002	[2]—	2,000
2003	[2]—	2,000
2004	1,000	2,000

[1] People unemployed for 12 months or more.

[2] Estimates not shown as they are potentially disclosive.

Note:

These estimates are based on very small sample sizes and are subject to a higher degree of sampling variability. They should therefore be treated with caution.

World Bank/IMF

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has held discussions with (a) the World Bank (b) the IMF and (c) other interested parties to encourage (i) the World Bank and (ii) the IMF (A) to publish the minutes of its meetings, (B) to publish the record of its voting and decisions on lending and policy and (C) to adopt a practice of transparency and openness in its decision making. [210295]

Mr. Timms: The UK is a leading supporter of greater transparency at the IMF and World Bank, and has held extensive discussions with the IMF and World Bank to encourage publication of minutes, lending and policy decisions, and more transparent decision making. These discussions have taken place at ministerial level through the Chancellor and Secretary of State for International Development, and at official level through the UK's Executive Director at the IMF and the World Bank.

There has been significant progress in recent years, with the agreement in 2003 of new IMF guidelines which presume publication of all surveillance, programme and policy documents. Programmes which involve exceptional access to fund resources will not normally be approved unless authorities agree to publish programme documents. In addition, the IMF board's agenda is made public in advance, and decisions are published through Public Information Notices. Discussions are ongoing at the World Bank on the extension of their transparency policy. The Treasury's Annual Report to Parliament on the UK and the IMF, and DFID's Report on the UK and the World Bank, will set out in greater detail the UK's position on transparency in these two institutions.

HEALTH

Alzheimer's

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of (a) men and (b) women suffering from Alzheimer's disease within the Greater London area. [209924]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Care Homes (Cleanliness)

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what obligation is placed on the Health Protection Agency to carry out an investigation when a care home resident dies of MRSA; and what such an inquiry involves. [204585]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Care home providers are required to notify the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) of the circumstances of a care home resident's death. The CSCI may decide to investigate those circumstances. Ministers may also cause an inquiry to be held. Where a resident dies of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus, the Health Protection Agency (HPA) is under no obligation to carry out an investigation. However, if invited, the HPA could provide expert advice and support to any investigation instigated by CSCI or by a coroner.

Clinical Critical Mass

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects on clinical critical mass in hospital trusts of the independent sector treating a high percentage of simpler cases of elective admissions. [209609]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 January 2005]: Separating out routine elective procedures allows hospitals to focus on emergencies and more complicated cases. Treatment centres, of which more than half are actually directly in the national health service, allow for faster treatment of NHS patients at up to eight times faster than traditional NHS services.

Independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) provide extra capacity over and above expanding NHS capacity and have been negotiated to ensure that the ISTC programme meets the needs of the NHS locally.

Dentistry

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will lay before Parliament the General Dental Council and the Dentists Act (Amendment) Order 2005. [209507]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Dentists Act 1984 (Amendment Order) 2005 will be laid in the spring.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists there are in each county in England per 10,000 of the population; how many accept NHS patients; and what the figures were in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [202691]

Ms Rosie Winterton [pursuant to her reply, 16 December 2004, Official Report, c. 1312W]: I regret my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

The number of general and personal dentists at September in the years 1997, 2001 and 2004 in each county in England per 100,000 of the population, is shown in the table. All of these dentists are doing national health service work.

Dental Practice Board and resident population figures for 1997, 2001 and 2004

Population figures for 1997 and 2001 are resident estimates 2001 based. Population figures for 2004 are resident population projections 2003 based.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists have left the NHS for wholly private practice within the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [209926]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists leaving the general dental service (GDS) or personal dental service (PDS) in the five London strategic health authority (SHA) areas are shown in the table. Dentists are counted as leavers if they are not practising in the general or personal dental service on 30 September, but were working on 30 September in the previous year.

Dentists will stop practising GDS or PDS dentistry for any one of a number of reasons, including retirement and short-term breaks. Very few dentists stop national health service work altogether in order to do private work.

Dermatology

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the value of competency frameworks for health professionals working in dermatology; and what action he will take to ensure that they are rolled out across the NHS. [209019]

Mr. Hutton: Competency frameworks and national occupational standards are already being used in the national health service to design services that are more flexible and relate directly to patient choices and needs. The aim is to enable individuals to develop career pathways in accordance with local needs and their own abilities, enabling them to progress or gain access to other areas of work based on the competences that they have achieved.

Skills for Health (SFH), the sector skills council for health, is currently considering the development of a competence framework that will cover all health professionals working in dermatology as part of its 2005–06 programme of work.

SFH is very much aware that the competency frameworks it produces need to be backed up with plans to spread their use. It is developing networks and other mechanisms to spread best practice in the use of competencies.

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role the long-term conditions care group workforce team dermatology group has in the development of NHS dermatology services; and if he will make a statement. [209020]

Mr. Hutton: The dermatology sub-group of the long-term conditions care group workforce team was established in May 2003, with a remit including assessing the make-up of the dermatology workforce, informing national planning processes and sharing good and innovative practice on a national and local level. The dermatology sub-group has worked with the British Dermatological Nursing Group to conduct a survey of dermatology nurses working in both primary and secondary care and analysis of the findings is now underway.

The sub-group has also helped develop a primary care nursing skin care course in conjunction with the university of Southampton. Further, the group is currently in the process of identifying a range of service models, that cover all levels of the patient pathway and include examples of good practice.

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he will take to incorporate (a) specialist nurses and (b) non-consultant career grade doctors within e-booking for dermatology. [209021]

Mr. Hutton: The Choose and Book service is available to be rolled-out to all clinics that receive outpatient referrals from general practitioners. This includes dermatology clinics run by specialist nurses and non-consultant career grade doctors. The implementation of Choose and Book in clinics that do not provide consultant outpatient services is a matter for providers, primary care trusts and strategic health authorities, to decide on locally.

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of e-booking on the (a) workload of and (b) quality of patient care by dermatology consultants. [209022]

Mr. Hutton: Electronic booking through the choose and book service is expected to have a positive impact on secondary care working practices and has significant potential to reduce consultant workload.

An independent report produced by Yorkshire Institute for Clinical and Health Informatics (December 2003) found that electronic booking reduced did-not attend rates and offers substantial benefits to patients who were able to choose convenient appointments that fitted in with their other commitments at work and home.

DH/EU Co-operation

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with the European Commission on the supporting, co-ordinating and complementary action which may be undertaken by the EU in the field of protection and improvement of human health under article I-17 of the proposed EU constitution. [209588]

Mr. Hutton: None. The Treaty has not yet been ratified by the United Kingdom and several other member states and is therefore not yet in force.

Doctors

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the ratio of doctors per head of population is in England. [210212]

Mr. Hutton: The standard ratio used by the Department is per 100,000 population. The population data used is from the Office for National Statistics population census.

Hospital, public health medicine and community health services (HCHS) staff and general medical practitioners, all doctors per 100,000 population

Drug Overdoses

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many drug overdose admissions there were to accident and emergency departments in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004, broken down by hospital. [209106]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not collected on the number of attendances at accident and emergency departments related to drug overdoses. However, data on the number of emergency admissions via A and E related to drug overdoses by National health service trust for 2002, 2003 and 2004 have been placed in the Library.

E-mails

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's policy regarding the retention of e-mails in electronic form (a) after and (b) up to 1 January 2005; and what instructions have been given regarding the deletion of e-mails prior to 1 January 2005. [206962]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Guildford (Sue Doughty) on 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 101W.

External Suppliers

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many tenders were let by his Department to external suppliers in the financial year 2003–04; and what the value was. [209096]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold centrally a record of individual tenders, nor does it have similar details for its agencies. To secure such details would involve disproportionate cost.

Free Eye Tests

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many old age pensioners in the Harwich constituency have benefited from the introduction of free eye tests. [210683]

Dr. Ladyman: Figures for the number of sight tests by constituency are not collected centrally. Information by primary care trust is collected and is available for 2003–04.

The total number of sight tests undertaken on those people of 60 years and above in the Tendring PCT, which includes pensioners in the Harwich constituency, during 2003–04 is 15,967.

The data for 2004–05 are not yet published.

Health Select Committee

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his statement before the Health Select Committee on 8 December 2004, when he will provide the information that he undertook to supply to the Committee in response to the questions from the hon. Member for West Chelmsford. [210193]

Dr. John Reid: I have done so.

Health/Social Care Staff

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to assist the least well-qualified staff in health and social care, in particular through the "Skills Escalator". [202762]

Mr. Hutton: We are committed to supporting all national health service staff, including those least-well qualified, to realise their potential; to the benefit of the NHS, their communities, and themselves. The workforce development strategy, the "Skills Escalator", is one way in which NHS employers can do this.

The "Skills Escalator" is about attracting and enabling a wider range of people to work within the NHS and giving those already in the NHS the opportunity to develop and enhance their skills and take on new and more challenging roles. We are continuing to promote the "Skills Escalator" to the NHS through "Skills for Health".

The NHS Plan (July 2000) pledged major investment to develop staff who do not have professional qualifications. During the three years from April 2003, over £180 million will be invested in support of NHS learning accounts, national vocational qualifications (NVQs), adult literacy, numeracy and language skills (Skills for Life) development. This investment will support learning opportunities for up to 240,000 staff.

Between April 2001 and September 2002 more than 43,000 staff accessed either a NHS learning account or NVQ training—of which over 21,000 undertook NVQ training to levels 2 or 3. Between April 2003 and March 2004 this rose to more than 65,000 staff accessing an NHS learning account and more than 34,000 undertaking NVQ training to levels 2 or 3.

For social care, funding of £15 million is being provided through the Topss England national training strategy grant, with the aim of having an additional 300,000 social care staff qualified to NVQ2 or higher by 2006. Funding is also provided to local councils through the national training strategy grant.

IT Strategy

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the IT strategy for the NHS. [208360]

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards achieving an online system of (a) booking GP appointments, (b) health records and (c) prescription processing for NHS patients. [209233]

Mr. Hutton: Key components of the national health service care records service were delivered in July 2004 to support electronic booking of appointments. These included support for secure access using smartcards and user authentication, patient demographic information and the protocols for secure messaging, data storage and retrieval. Alongside these elements of the NHS care record, the application for electronic appointment booking for patients went live in early adopter sites in July 2004. Work is now well advanced to introduce electronic prescriptions during early 2005, with the core application delivered for integration testing by the end of 2004 as planned. The new national network is now on track to deliver, and probably exceed, contracted broadband connections by the end of March 2005. Progress has also been made on other national programme for information technology (NPfIT) services, particularly the roll out of the quality management and analysis system (QMAS) application to support the general medical service contract and the implementation of the new contract with Cable and Wireless to deliver the "Contact" e-mail service.

More detailed information can be found in the most recent (December 2004) edition of the NPfIT's newsletter, "Making IT Work", available on the publications page of the NPfIT website at www.npfit.nhs.uk. Printed copies have been placed in the Library.

Language Therapists

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many qualified speech and language therapists are employed by the NHS; how many unfilled vacancies there are; how many are in training; and what the Government target for speech and language therapists in post is. [209525]

Mr. Hutton: There are no specific targets for speech and language therapists, though we expect that the national speech and language therapist workforce will grow in line with local workforce needs.

As at September 2003, there were 6,243 speech and language therapists employed in the national health service, an increase of 28 per cent. since 1997.

In 2003–04, 630 students entered training to become a speech and language therapist, an increase of 38 per cent. since 1999–2000.

The Department's vacancy survey collects information on the number of vacancies lasting three months or more as at 31 March each year. As at March 2004, there were 193 three month vacancies for speech and language therapists, which represents a rate of 3.8 per cent.

Medicines (Licensing)/Regulation

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will take measures to reduce the time between the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency granting a licence to first-in-class medicines and the issuing of guidance by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence; and if he will make a statement; [208181]

(2) if he will instruct primary care trusts to give equal consideration to the routine use of medicines which are not reviewed by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) and those which are to be reviewed by NICE; and if he will make a statement; [208182]

(3) if he will direct the National Institute for Clinical Excellence to issue general guidance for new medicines at the time of their launch, followed by a full review or clinical guidance; and if he will make a statement. [208183]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) develops its guidance after careful consideration of the available evidence, and in close consultation with patient groups, professional organisations and the pharmaceutical industry. Where new drugs are referred to NICE for appraisal, it monitors the licensing position closely and schedules the appraisal so that guidance follows as soon as possible after the granting of a licence. Other sources of advice are available in advance of publication of full NICE guidance, including Medicines Resource Centre publications produced by the National Prescribing Centre and funded by NICE.

In August 1999, the Department issued Health Service Circular 1999/176, which asks national health service bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE is not available at the time the technology first became available. These arrangements should involve an assessment of the available evidence.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the outcome has been of the exploration by the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency, following its discussions with HM Customs, for the use of effective counter-warnings on foreign websites selling prescription and pharmacy-only medicines direct to the public; what improvements HM Customs have made in recognising and dealing with such packages of medicines; how these improvements are reflected in the number of (a) items being impounded or (b) prosecutions for breaches of the Medicines Act 1971; and if he will make a statement. [208777]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) controls the advertising, sale and supply of medicines on the United Kingdom market by regulation and enforcement of these regulations. Websites based overseas do not fall within UK jurisdiction and are therefore outside the MHRA's control. Although the MHRA cannot compel a foreign website to comply with UK domestic legislation, if there is a breach, details of the site will be passed on by the MHRA to overseas enforcement authorities.

The MHRA is currently investigating 43 cases involving sale of medicines via the internet. In addition, 30 sites have been identified as being hosted overseas and are being forwarded to the appropriate national regulatory authorities.

There is no restriction on the importation of medicines for personal consumption, unless they contain substances subject to control under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. Where Her Majesty's Customs and Excise detect importations of medicines and the quantities involved seem inconsistent with amounts for personal use, Customs officials alert the MHRA on the grounds of public interest. Representatives from Customs and MHRA are engaged in on-going discussions about how this process might be strengthened.

Mental Illness (Smoking Cessation)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of how the proposals on banning smoking in enclosed public places will affect NHS mental health facilities. [203196]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Health Development Agency will shortly publish guidance for the national health service on the provision of smoke-free buildings to protect staff, patients and others from the health risks of second hand smoke.

In NHS mental health facilities, the hospital is for some patients their main place of residence and therefore their home. We will be consulting on the special arrangements needed for establishments such as these in due course.

Midwives

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwife vacancies there are in (a) Kingston hospital and (b) South West London, (c) Merton, Surrey and Mid-Surrey, (d) London and (e) England. [209826]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The national health service vacancy survey collects information on the number of vacancies lasting three months or more. Information on the number and rate of three month vacancies for midwives in England, London and the South East is shown in the following table.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the annual percentage increase in total budgets for (a) Kingston Hospital and (b) the NHS in (i) South West London, (ii) London and (iii) England has been in each year since 1992; [209822]

(2) what the total budgets for (a) Kingston Hospital and (b) the NHS in (i) South West London,

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 January 2005]: Information relating to the income of the Kingston Hospital NHS Trust and to total national health service expenditure is shown in the table in cash terms. Figures for London prior to 1996–97 have not been provided as they are not comparable.

Total net NHS expenditure.

Comparisons year on year will be affected by the local reconfiguration of NHS bodies and services. These may be explained in accounts published by the individual NHS bodies but not collected centrally.

Figures for Kingston Hospital NHS Trust show the total income of the trust, including all income from activities and all other operating income, as budget information is not collected centrally.

Figures for London and South West London are the expenditure by strategic health authorities, predecessor health authorities and primary care trusts within the current five London strategic health authority areas and the South West London strategic health authority area, respectively.

NHS Expenditure by area is taken from audited health authority accounts and primary care trust summarisation schedules, which are prepared on a resource basis and therefore differ from cash allocations in the year. The expenditure is the total expenditure by the relevant health authorities, and the commissioner costs of the primary care trusts.

The total NHS expenditure cannot be identified by health authority area because the majority of general dental services expenditure is not included in the individual health authority accounts or primary care trust summarisation schedules and is separately accounted for by the Dental Practice Board. The majority of pharmaceutical services expenditure is accounted for by the Prescription Pricing Authority and not by health authorities or primary care trusts.

Figures for 2002–03 and 2003–04 based on strategic health authority areas have been adjusted to eliminate expenditure, which would be double counted where an authority acts as a lead in commissioning healthcare.

Total NHS expenditure is the total net NHS expenditure for England where expenditure pre 1999–2000 is on a cash basis; expenditure figures from 1999–2000 to 2002–03 are on a stage one resource budgeting basis; expenditure figure for 2003–04 are on a Stage two resource budgeting basis. Figures are not consistent over the full period, hence no comparisons should be made across different periods. The percentage increases for 1999–2000 and 2003–04 have therefore not been provided.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the annual percentage increases in total budgets for (a) Kingston hospital and (b) the NHS in (i) South West London, (ii) London and (iii) England are for (A) 2005–06, (B) 2006–07 and (C) 2007–08; [209823]

(2) what the projected total budgets for (a) Kingston hospital and (b) the NHS in (i) South West London, (ii) London and (iii) England are for (A) 2005–06, (B) 2006–07 and (C) 2007–08. [209825]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The Department does not allocate funding directly to national health service hospitals. Allocations are made at a primary care trust (PCT) level. Work on 2006–07 and 2007–08 PCT allocations is ongoing. The information requested is shown in the following tables 1 and 2.

Table 1: Primary care trust revenue allocations

South West London	2,260	9.3
London	9,105	9.8
England	53,925	9.3

Table 2: Total net NHS expenditure

	England (£ million)	Percentage increase
2005–06	76,384	10.1
2006–07	83,818	9.7
2007–08	92,143	9.9

Notes:

1. Primary care trust allocations are revenue only. Centrally financed services such as Research and Development and training are not included.

2. Total net NHS expenditure includes both revenue and capital expenditure.

NHS Trusts

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people resident in the 20 per cent. most deprived wards are serving as non-executive directors on each NHS trust in the north-west; [209789]

(2) what progress has been made in appointing more people from Warrington, North to NHS trusts. [209790]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 20 January 2005]: This information is not held centrally. The appointment of chairs and non-executive directors to national health service trusts has been delegated to the NHS Appointments Commission. Sir William Wells, chair of the NHS Appointments Commission has been asked to write to my hon. Friend.

NHS University

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he will make to ensure that there is no diminution in the quality of the training provided when the NHS university is replaced by the NHS institute for learning, skills and innovation. [209238]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service institute for learning, skills and innovation will integrate and strengthen the way we support people development, service improvement and technical innovation in the NHS. The changes will build on the learning achieved from the best of the NHS university's existing programmes.

The work of supporting the development of a quality assurance framework for learning in the NHS is undertaken by Skills for Health, the sector skills council for health. This work will continue unchanged.

Likewise, we remain committed to enhancing skills through the Skills Escalator and through mechanisms such as NHS learning accounts, national vocational qualifications (NVQs), adult literacy, numeracy and language skills (Skills for Life), with £180 million to be invested during the three years from April 2003.

We have further demonstrated our commitment to improving the learning opportunities for NHS staff through the appointment of Professor Bob Fryer as the new national director for widening participation in learning.

Dr. Francis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff have participated in NHS university courses since its inception, broken down by subject. [209240]

Mr. Hutton: The number of staff who have participated in NHS university courses for the period 16 July 2003 to 11 January 2005 is shown in the table.

Nursing

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what incentives are in place to discourage people from leaving the nursing profession. [209419]

Mr. Hutton: There are more qualified nurses working in the national health service than ever before, as at March 2004 there were 396,359 NHS nurses, an increase of 77,500 since 1997.

There are a wide range of programmes in place to support nurses in the NHS to fulfil their aspirations, to drive forward new ways of working, and to value and respect their contribution to improving patient care. These include a new pay system; the knowledge and skills framework; the NHS child care strategy and "Improving Working Lives".

"Agenda for Change", the new pay system for non-medical staff in the NHS, provides a unique opportunity for improved career opportunities for NHS staff working across the range of clinical and managerial roles, which in turn will support service redesign and a modernised work force able to deliver a 21st century service for patients. An integral part of "Agenda for Change" is the NHS knowledge and skills framework, which defines and describes the knowledge and skills which individuals need to apply in their work in order to deliver quality services. It provides a single, consistent, comprehensive and explicit framework on which to base the review and career development of all staff.

The NHS child care strategy is part of the wider "Improving Working Lives" programme, which supports staff, provides a healthy and safe working environment and helps them through a range of flexible working and flexing retirement opportunities manage a healthy work/life balance.

Orthodontists (North-east)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects vacancies for orthodontists at Sunderland Royal Hospital to be filled; and how long the positions have remained vacant. [210141]

Mr. Hutton: This is a matter for the chair of City Hospitals Sunderland National Health Service Foundation Trust. I have written to Mr. David Graham, chair, informing him of my hon. Friend's inquiry.

Ovarian Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial resources have been made available for research into ovarian cancer in the last five years. [207088]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The NHS Plan announced that the Department would provide an additional £20 million per year to establish a national cancer research network. The National Cancer Research Network (NCRN) and the National Translational Cancer Research Network were established as a result. The NCRN is currently providing NHS infrastructural support for 11 trials in ovarian cancer.

The research costs of these trials are being met by public, private and charity sector funders. The Medical Research Council (MRC) is meeting some or all of the costs of five, including the £8.7 million United Kingdom collaborative trial of ovarian cancer screening.

The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality, improvement, and service development in the NHS. Research on identifying potentially significant diagnostic factors for ovarian cancer in primary care was commissioned in 2001 and £130,000 has been spent on it.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by NHS organisations. Details of individual projects, including more than sixty ovarian cancer research studies, can be found on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Paddington Basin Health Campus

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to announce the selection of a private finance initiative partner for the Paddington Basin Health Campus project; and which companies are under consideration by his Department for this role. [209357]

Mr. Hutton: The outline business case submitted to the Department in December 2004 assumes the appointment of a private finance initiative partner (PFI) to develop the Paddington Health Campus in April 2008 following financial close in a PFI procurement. No companies are being considered by the trusts.

Parking Spaces

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many car parking spaces are provided for those (a) working in and (b) visiting his Department. [208936]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has a total of 381 car parking spaces available on its administrative estate for which it is responsible, over half of which are in Leeds.

Patient to Nurse Ratios

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the (a) minimum and (b) maximum patient to nurse ratios are; and in which health authorities they apply; [209416]

(2) what the recommended minimum nurse to patient ratio is in the NHS; [209417]

(3) what the average patient to nurse ratio was in (a) the London borough of Havering, (b) Greater London and (c) England for each of the last seven years. [209418]

Mr. Hutton: Information is not collected on nurse to patient ratios. The table shows the nurse to population ratios for London and England, and the minimum and maximum ratios by strategic health authority.

There is no recommended minimum nurse to patient ratio, it is for national health service organisations to determine their own work force mix.

Police Cells

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether a police cell is deemed to be a place of safety for individuals with mental illness; and if he will make a statement. [208738]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In certain circumstances, people who are believed to be suffering from mental disorder may be removed to a place of safety under Part 10 of the Mental Health Act 1983. The Act defines a place of safety for these purposes as including a police station. The identification of a preferred place of safety is a matter for local agreement, but the Mental Health Act Code of Practice states that, as a general rule, it is preferable for a person thought to be suffering from mental disorder to be detained in a hospital rather than a police station.

Primary Care Trusts

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to primary care trusts on providing health services for prisons; and what resources have been provided for this purpose. [209656]

Dr. Ladyman: On 1 April 2003, funding responsibility for health services in the publicly run prisons in England was transferred from the Home Office to the Department. From 1 April 2004, at the beginning of a staged process, 18 national health service primary care trusts (PCTs) assumed commissioning responsibility for health services in 34 prisons. By April 2006, that commissioning responsibility will be fully devolved to PCTs and, in some cases, the PCT will also be the health care provider. Prisons and their NHS partners are now expected to work together to determine how best to meet prisoners' health needs. The Government are committing significant additional resources to facilitate the transfer of commissioning responsibility to the NHS. Revenue investment will have risen by over £40 million a year by 2005–06, an increase of more than a third over the 2002–03 baseline. The Prison Service is investing around £20 million a year over the same period to rebuild and refurbish prison health care facilities.

Policy development advice and support is available from the central prison health team and also the regional prison health leads, whose roles will become integrated in strategic health authorities after 2006. Additionally, there is a learning network, facilitated by the university of Birmingham, where health care staff and PCT commissioners are encouraged to share good practice and participate in learning sets and themed workshops. National and local guidance documents are available on the internet and distributed through local channels.

Prostate Cancer

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what his Department's publicity budget for prostate cancer awareness is in the current year; what his Department's expenditure on prostate cancer awareness was in each of the last six years; and if he will make a statement; [207903]

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps his Department is taking to increase public awareness of (a) detection, (b) diagnosis and (c) treatment of prostate cancer; [208408]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to increase clinical knowledge of prostate cancer amongst (a) general practitioners and (b) other health professionals; [208409]

(3) what progress has been made in (a) detection and (b) treatment of prostate cancer since 1997; [208411]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The national health service prostate cancer programme was launched in September 2000 and set out the Government's commitment to improve early detection of prostate cancer, to improve treatment and care for prostate cancer patients and to enhance research into prostate cancer. Since the launch, significant progress has been made.

The prostate cancer risk management programme (PCRMP) has been set up to ensure that all men considering a test for prostate cancer are given information on the benefits, limitations and risks associated with having a prostate specific antigen (PSA) test.

We have issued clinical best practice so that PSA testing is performed to an explicit quality standard and that there is a systematic and standardised follow-up for those men with a high PSA level.

Raising public awareness of prostate cancer is one of the key challenges for the future. We want men to know what their prostate is, what is does and what can go wrong with it. However, we have to raise public awareness in a responsible way so as not to cause undue anxiety and worry.

Thanks to the work of the prostate cancer advisory group we now have, for the first time, a definitive set of key messages for the general public, which include prostate cancer and in such a way as not to cause unnecessary anxiety.

The key messages have been agreed by 20 organisations, including charities, patient groups and professional bodies, as well as the Department and can be fed into existing and future communications vehicles or as stand alone messages.

We have provided funding for the following organisations to increase public awareness of prostate cancer:

In 2003–04 we provided £30,000 to the Men's Health Forum to help fund its publication, the Men and Cancer manual.

We have provided £135,000 to the Prostate Cancer Charity to increase available information about prostate cancer.

We are providing £105,000 to the Prostate Cancer Charity to improve awareness of the risks and symptoms of prostate cancer in African and Afro-Caribbean men in Britain.

We are working with the voluntary sector to develop a national prostate cancer website and have provided £100,000 of funding. It is expected that the website will be launched this summer.

We are also working to both increase and improve clinical knowledge of prostate cancer. In April 2000, we published referral guidelines for suspected cancer to help general practitioners identify those patients who are most likely to have cancer and who therefore require urgent assessment by a specialist. The guidelines included a section on prostate cancer.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently reviewing this guidance and an update is due to be published in 2005.

The PCRMP has produced a booklet, called, The PSA test and prostate cancer: Information for primary care. This booklet provides GPs with an easy reference source on prostate cancer, from risk factors to treatment. The booklet was produced after consultation with GPs, primary care cancer leads and an expert advisory group.

In September 2002, NICE published guidance on urological cancers, including prostate cancer. This guidance covers all aspects of cancer care for urological cancer patients and is aimed at helping all of those involved in planning, commissioning, organising and providing cancer services to ensure high quality services.

As well as this guidance NICE is developing guidelines for the clinical management of prostate cancer and an overview of brachytherapy as an interventional procedure for prostate cancer. NICE is also appraising two prostate cancer drugs, Docetaxel and Atrasentan.

The cancer services collaborative has been working with urology teams across the country to improve access to care and to streamline the delivery of care.

We have also increased twenty-fold research funding for prostate cancer since 1999–2000; from £200,000 to £4.2million for 2003–04. This level of funding will be maintained, subject to the quality of research proposals.

Smoking

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the organisations and individuals from whom representations on the displacement of smoking from public places to homes as a result of legislation restricting smoking in public places were received during the preparation of the Public Health White Paper; [201951]

(2) what research his Department has collated on the possible displacement of smoking from public places to homes, as a result of legislation restricting smoking in public places; [201952]

(3) what research he has commissioned on the possible displacement of smoking from public places and workplaces as a result of legislation restricting smoking in such places; [201982]

(4) what assessment has been made of the effect of exempting from restrictions on smoking in public places/pubs which do not serve prepared food would have on displacing smoking from public places to homes. [201995]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The proposals for legislation set out in the White Paper "Choosing Health—Making Healthy choices easier" to shift the balance in favour of smoke-free enclosed public places and workplaces were based on the scientific evidence of harm from second hand smoke and the views from the public. In preparation of the proposals, we took full account of the latest scientific and medical evidence of the risk to health from exposure to second hand smoke, as set out in the report from the Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health, which was published alongside the White Paper. Many of the studies covered look at the effects on non-smokers of living with smokers.

We took full account of the views of the public, as expressed in over 150,000 responses to the public consultation on public health, in preparing our proposals. While protecting the right of the majority to go out for a meal or a drink without damage, inconvenience or pollution from second hand smoke, the proposals also provide a degree of choice for the minority. We believe that this is a sensible solution that balances the protection of the majority with the personal freedom of the minority in England.

We have made an assessment of the impact that smoking in public places would have in a reduction in smoking prevalence, which would thereby have a beneficial impact of reducing smoke at home. We will continue to act on the issue of second hand smoke in the home and have already taken action through the hard hitting campaign launched last year depicting the dangers of smoking around babies and children.

Social Workers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision for mental health training is included in the new degree course for social workers. [210361]

Dr. Ladyman: The social work degree is a generic degree based on a prescribed curriculum. Training providers must ensure that students undertake specific learning in a number of key areas. As part of their learning and assessment, students receive training on mental health matters in the human growth and development element of their degree. This forms a key element of the prescribed curriculum, which is also based on the National Occupation Standards for Social Work, in England, developed by Topss England. Mental health matters are covered in some detail in these standards.

On qualification, there are opportunities for further training in specialist areas. As part of the reform of the social work education, the General Social Care Council is undertaking a review of the current framework for post-qualifying training for social work.

Trust Financial Shortfalls

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the likely financial shortfall of (a) NHS Plymouth Hospital Trust and (b) Plymouth Primary Care Trust at 31 March; and if he will make a statement. [209955]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In line with shifting the balance of power, strategic health authorities (SHAs) are responsible for the financial performance management of individual health organisations within their health economy.

The latest information published by the South West Peninsula SHA shows that the 2004–05 forecast outturn position for Plymouth Hospitals national health service trust is a deficit of £6.2 million. The 2004–05 forecast outturn position for Plymouth Primary Care Trust is that they will achieve financial balance.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources he plans to devote to information and education campaigns in relation to tuberculosis in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [200099]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department is currently funding a joint campaign with the charity, TB Alert, targeted at raising awareness of tuberculosis among health professions and the public. This media campaign will launch this spring and the Department will resource a continuing media campaign throughout 2005.

Waiting List Deaths

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many persons died while on a waiting list for (a) an in-patient and (b) an out-patient appointment in England in each of the last five years. [209915]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected centrally.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Abandoned Vehicles (Morecambe Bay)

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether (a) Lancaster city council and (b) South Lakeland district council have responsibility for the removal of abandoned vehicles on the sands of Morecambe Bay. [206083]

Keith Hill: Under Section 3(1) of the Refuse Disposal Amenity Act 1978, local authorities are under a duty to remove vehicles that are abandoned in their area on any land in the open air or on any other land forming part of a highway. However, under Section 3(3) of the same Act, local authorities are absolved of this duty regarding vehicles that are situated otherwise than on a carriageway if it appears to them that the cost of removing them to the nearest convenient carriageway would be unreasonably high.

Anti-social Behaviour Act

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he intends to publish guidance to local authorities on implementation of Part 8 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003. [210351]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to issue guidance for local authorities at the same time as the Regulations to bring Part 8 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 into force are laid before Parliament. We expect the complaints system to be fully operational early this year.

Consultation

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidelines he issues on periods appropriate for consultation on major documents; and if he will make a statement. [210414]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister follows the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Consultation which can be found at: http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/regulation/docs/consultation/pdf/code.pdf

Council Housing

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total income in capital receipts was from the sale of council housing under the right-to-buy in each year between 1997–98 and 2002–03, broken down by Government Office region. [209697]

Keith Hill: Figures for the estimated right-to-buy receipts (based on the selling price net of discount) for 1997–98 to 2002–03 by Government Office region are tabled as follows:

Right-to-buy receipts (£ million)

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03

Council Tax (Bexley)

Derek Conway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the discussions between his Department and Bexley borough council on the level of council tax increases. [210408]

Mr. Raynsford: I wrote to all local authority Leaders on 9 December making it clear that the Government expect all local authorities to budget prudently in 2005–06 and that the average council tax increase in England should be less than 5 per cent. I also said that the Government are prepared to take tougher capping action than we did in 2004–05 to deal with excessive budgets.

The Leader of Bexley borough council will have received this letter along with all other authorities.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent by his Department on (a) indoor bought plants, (b) indoor hired plants, (c) outdoor bought plants and (d) outdoor hired plants in each year since 1997. [205588]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established in May 2002. Since that date the following has been spent on the provision and maintenance of indoor and outdoor plants. The figures include VAT.

	The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister	Government Office Network
May 2002 to March 2003
(a) Indoor hired and maintained	16,300	38,100
(b) Indoor bought	6,600	0
(c) Outdoor hired and maintained	0	200
(d) Outdoor bought	20	0
April 2003 to March 2004
(a) Indoor hired and maintained	17,800	32,200

(b) Indoor bought	4,000	20,000
(c) Outdoor hired and maintained	0	800
(d) Outdoor bought	0	300

All expenditure incurred in the purchase and procurement of these services and items has been made in accordance with the departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Although the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has overall responsibility for the buildings occupied by Government Offices, they carry out functions on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

The information for agencies is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the Department spent on lawyers in each year since 1997; how many (a) actions, (b) settlements and (c) court cases there were in each year; and what the costs were of each settlement. [206448]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister came into existence from May 2002. The information listed in following table provides the expenditure related to litigation cases worked on in year by the Treasury Solicitor's Department on behalf of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

	Financial year
	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05 April to December
Number of litigation cases worked on in year by the Treasury Solicitor' s Department on behalf of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister	385	412	343
Costs paid by the Office of the Deputy to the Treasury Solicitor's Department (£ million)	1.02	1.26	0.74

To provide a breakdown of expenditure exactly as requested would incur disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of his Department's staff is based in London. [208031]

Yvette Cooper: Information on regional distribution of staff is available in the Libraries of both Houses, and also at http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_information/statistical_information/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2003_report/index.asp

Figures relating to 1 April 2004 are due to be published during February 2005.

Development Plans (South-West England)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the proposal by the South West Regional Assembly that up to 30,000 houses should be built on green belt land between Cheltenham and Gloucester. [210415]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware that a consultation exercise is currently being carried out in Gloucestershire, seeking views on technical work that has been undertaken on behalf of the Regional Assembly by a Steering Group led by the county council. We are also aware that the consultation document does not contain proposals but seeks views on this technical work and the possible implications of different levels of housing growth in the Gloucester and Cheltenham area. This work and the views of local people will help the Regional Assembly to prepare a draft Regional Spatial Strategy that will be submitted to my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister at the end of this year.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what instructions he gave the South West Regional Assembly regarding the Regional Spatial Strategy for the South West; and if he will instruct the Assembly to extend the consultation period on its proposals for Gloucestershire to at least three months. [210417]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's policies on the preparation of Regional Spatial Strategies (RSSs) are set out in Planning Policy Statement 11, which was issued in 2004. Those policies must be taken into account by Regional Planning Bodies, including the South West Regional Assembly, in preparing their RSS. We have given no specific instructions to the South West Regional Assembly, separate from those policies. I understand that a consultation exercise is currently being carried out in Gloucestershire, seeking views on technical work that has been undertaken on behalf of the Regional Assembly by a Steering Group led by the County Council. The consultation period runs from 17 January to 18 February 2005. This is entirely a matter for the Regional Assembly and its local partners and it would be inappropriate for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to intervene.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost has been to (a) each of the six local district authorities in Gloucestershire in preparation of current local plans and (b) Gloucestershire county council in the preparation of its current Structure Plan. [210418]

Keith Hill: The Government do not monitor the costs incurred in preparing local and structure plans by individual authorities. The number of factors affecting the final cost of plan production will differ greatly between authorities, based upon for example, the development issues affecting the area, consultation processes, printing costs, number of representations received, length of inquiry, legal costs, and staff overheads.

Fire Service

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received regarding the availability of life insurance for firefighters. [206071]

Mr. Raynsford: The Fire Brigades Union have made representations to my right hon.. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister about life insurance cover in connection with terrorist incidents and was able to inform the General Secretary that assurance had been given by the Association of British Insurers that most life insurance policies have no terrorist exclusions.

Subsequently the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received correspondence from the President of Chief Fire Officers' Association and from the Fire Officers' Association. This is in addition to correspondence from a small number of fire and rescue services and five letters from MPs expressing the concerns of their constituents.

Flood Plains (Development)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what studies (a) the Government Office for the South West and (b) his Department has commissioned into the effect upon the flood-plain in Gloucestershire near Cheltenham and Gloucester of development near the flood-plain. [210416]

Keith Hill: The Environment Agency has the lead role in providing advice on flood issues, at a strategic level and in relation to planning applications. In October 2004 the Environment Agency published the new Flood Map and Flood Zones data, which covers the whole of England and provides information on the extent of flood risk areas and the location and implications of flood defence provisions.

The Government's policy on development in flood-plains, contained in Planning Policy Guidance Note 25, is to reduce the risks to people and the developed and natural environment from flooding and it looks to local planning authorities to ensure that flood risk is properly taken into account in the planning of developments to reduce the risk of flooding.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to prohibit the use of domestic oil tanks and oil heating systems in flood plains and coastal areas which are at risk from flooding in respect of (a) new housing and (b) existing housing; and what representations he has received from the Environment Agency concerning this issue. [210355]

Phil Hope: There are currently no plans to prohibit the use of oil tanks and oil heating systems in areas which are at risk from flooding and, to date, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received no representations from the Environment Agency concerning this issue.

Housing

Simon Hughes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will provide a breakdown of the Low Cost Home Ownership units planned for Southwark in the Housing Corporation's 2004–06 Approved Development programme by (a) one-bed, (b) two-bed, (c) three-bed and (d) four-bed or more; [202970]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of the Low Cost Home Ownership units planned for Southwark in the Housing Corporation's 2004–06 Approved Development Programme by (a) conventional shared ownership, (b) key worker shared ownership, (c) Homebuy and (d) other forms of low cost home ownership. [202971]

Keith Hill: A table with the breakdown of Low Cost Home Ownership by type and by bedroom numbers for 2004–06 for all London boroughs has been made available in the Library of the House.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total amount of capital receipts from shared owners staircasing up their equity share in 2003–04 was; and how many units were involved. [209709]

Keith Hill: In 2003–04 a total of £65.5 million was credited to the recycled capital grant fund (RCGF) in respect of shared owners staircasing up their equity share. This involved a total of 3,551 dwellings.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many and what proportion of (a) council tenants, (b) housing association tenants and (c) tenants in the private sector in Stoke-on-Trent receive housing benefit. [210858]

Keith Hill: A table with the percentage of housing association tenants for local authority areas in England has been made available in the Library of the House. Comparable data for local authority tenants and tenants in the private sector are not available centrally.

Leasehold Reform Act

Mr. Colman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to amend section 29 of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 dealing with restrictive covenants. [208531]

Keith Hill: The Government have no current plans to amend section 29 of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967.

Mr. Colman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will introduce an arbitration scheme for cases in which a freeholder disputes the level of premium charged by a local authority, exercising its legal right to do so, for a release under section 29 of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 covenant. [208532]

Keith Hill: No.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) specific, (b) special and (c) non-ring-fenced grants that the Government has allocated to local authorities in 2004–05. [207921]

Mr. Raynsford: The following table lists all grants allocated to local authorities in England in 2004–05 within Aggregate External Finance (AEF) in addition to Revenue Support Grant, National Non-Domestic Rates and Police Grant. There are other grants outside AEF but these are not provided for an authority's core services and relate, in the main, to areas of funding which are passed on by local authorities, such as Mandatory Student Awards.

Minerals Planning Guidance No. 3

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received on the operation of Minerals Planning Guidance Note 3; and if he will make a statement. [210047]

Keith Hill: The Coal Producers Federation (COALPRO) has made representations to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister about Minerals Planning Guidance Note 3 "Coal mining and colliery spoil disposal". It suggested that the test of the circumstances within which it is appropriate to permit opencast coal applications in paragraph 8 of MPG3 has sometimes been misinterpreted and that this has contributed to the significant decrease in new planning permissions for open cast coal extraction in England in recent years. It also considered that policies in some draft Regional Planning Guidance and local planning documents prepared by Minerals Planning Authorities do not accord with that national guidance, for example by applying a double test of environmental acceptability and local community benefits whereas these are specified as alternatives in MPG3. On careful reading, the meaning of this paragraph should be clear, and at present there are no plans to review MPG3. However officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, together with those in the relevant Government Offices, will continue to examine and comment on regional and local planning documents to help ensure that these conform to national policy on this and other matters dealt with in MPG3.

Mobile Network (Code of Best Practice)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects his Department to complete the study of the effectiveness of the Code of Best Practice on Mobile Network Development. [210696]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has commissioned the University of Reading and Arup to undertake a study to assess the impact that the Code of Best Practice on Mobile Network Development has had since its introduction. We expect their work to conclude at the end of March.

New Dimension Programme

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the management structure of the Department's New Dimension programme is; and if he will make a statement. [209718]

Mr. Raynsford: The New Dimension programme is managed in accordance with the Office of Central Government Commerce (OGC) guidelines. As required by OGC for programmes of this size and profile, the Senior Responsible Officer is a Grade 3 Civil Servant and I am the named responsible Minister. The New Dimension programme is part of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Fire Resilience Programme, which is overseen at Director General (Grade 2) level.

New Dimension is part of the Government's overall civil contingencies programme. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently investing £188 million of resources in the fire and rescue service on mass decontamination equipment, urban search and rescue equipment and high volume water pumps. The programme is currently developing on budget, on time and to high quality standards.

Open Cast Coal Mines

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many open cast coal mining planning applications were made in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; how many approvals were granted (a) by local planning authorities and (b) on appeal in each of those years; and what tonnage was approved for extraction in each of those years. [210048]

Keith Hill: Figures for the years 1991–92 to 2000–01 are tabled. Figures for subsequent years are available only with respect to approvals on appeal or call-in and for the calendar year 2003.

	Number of applications made	Approvals by local planning authorities	Approvals on appeal or call-in	Tonnage approved for extraction (Thousand)

Organic Waste Disposal

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the farming of worms in connection with the business of organic waste disposal is regarded as an agricultural activity for planning purposes; and if he will make a statement. [210357]

Keith Hill: Section 336 (1) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 defines "agriculture" as including, among a number of specific activities:

> "horticulture, dairy farming, the breeding and keeping of livestock (including any creature kept for the production of food, wool, skins or fur, or for the purpose of its use in the farming of land), the use of land as grazing land, market gardens and nursery grounds."

In the first instance it is for local planning authorities to determine the status, for planning purposes, of particular developments and activities.

It may ultimately fall to the courts to interpret and decide such matters.

Pay Television Subscriptions

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many pay television subscriptions the Department had in each year since 1997; and what the cost was in each year. [207659]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was established in May 2002. Complete data is not held on the number or cost of cable and satellite subscriptions held in 2002–03.

In 2003–04, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister had cable and satellite service in five of its buildings. Two of these were provided at no cost and three were base package satellite/cable services provided at a cost of £21,310 including VAT.

Although the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has overall responsibility for the buildings occupied by Government Offices, they carry out functions on behalf of ten Government Departments.

Police Funding

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to provide additional grant to (a) Hampshire police authority and (b) other police authorities who lost grant as a result of errors in calculating the 2001 population. [210979]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has always been clear that we would issue an Amending Report for the 2003–04 settlement to incorporate the revised 2001 population estimates. It is only fair that authorities should receive the correct amount of grant relative to the updated population estimates. Indeed, we consulted on options for the 2003–04 and 2004–05 Amending Reports during the previous summer.

However, it is not possible for authorities that receive less grant under the Amending Report than they did under the original Local Government Finance Report to reopen their budgets for 2003–04. For this reason we will pay, or recover, any changes in 2003–04 grant amounts during 2005–06; and we have proposed amending the floor damping scheme for 2005–06 to ensure that all authorities should receive at least the floor increase in their formula grant after paying back any money owed under the 2003–04 Amending Report.

Under the provisional 2005–06 settlement, Hampshire police authority will receive a year-on-year increase of 3.75 per cent. on a like-for-like basis net of the effects of the 2003–04 Amending Report.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many representations he has received from (a) individual local authorities and (b) others concerning the delay in publishing the updated version of Planning Policy Guidance Note 3; and if he will make a statement; [210200]

(2) when he expects to publish the revised version of Planning Policy Guidance Note 3; and what the reasons are for the delay. [210202]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published in July 2003 two consultation updates to Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: Housing (PPG3) entitled 'Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing', and 'Supporting the Delivery of New Housing'.

In the 'Planning for Housing' statement made to the House on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 3WS, the publication of two updates to PPG3, entitled 'Supporting the Delivery of New Housing' and 'Planning for Sustainable Communities in Rural Area' was announced. These relate respectively to new policies on the re-use of unneeded employment land where it is needed and suitable for housing, and the provision of affordable housing in rural areas (the latter forming part of the consultation update 'Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing').

In the 'Planning for Mixed Communities' statement also made to the House on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 1WS, the publication of a consultation update to PPG3, entitled 'Planning for Mixed Communities' was announced. It proposes a revised approach to planning for a mix of housing to that which was set out in 'Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability of Housing'. The consultation period for responses closes on 15 April 2005.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has considered the responses it received during the consultation period and has since held extensive discussions with key stakeholders, in particular on the approach to the mix of housing set out in 'Influencing the Size, Type and Affordability'. The 'Planning for Mixed Communities' statement explains why the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is re-consulting. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not received any representations concerning the delay in publishing the updated version of PPG3.

Regional Housing Boards

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the role of the regional housing boards is in relation to (a) social housing and (b) Travellers. [209706]

Keith Hill: The Boards were established as part of a dynamic and more strategic approach towards addressing housing and other associated problems. They recommend to Ministers how resources for housing capital investment is best targeted to address regional and national priorities, and to address the needs of all groups.

These recommendations are made on the back of Regional Housing Strategies, which the Boards produce, and which cover all tenures, including social housing, and groups with different housing needs, including Travellers. The resources are used to increase the supply of social housing, to ensure that existing social housing meets the decent homes standard, and to provide sites for Travellers.

Right to Buy

Mr. Pike: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent changes have been implemented to the (a) right-to-buy and (b) right to acquire regulations; and if he will make a statement. [209998]

Keith Hill: The Housing Act 2004, which received Royal Assent on 18 November 2004, makes a number of changes to the Right to Buy scheme set out in Part V of the Housing Act 1985. It:

> extends the initial qualification period from two years to five years for new tenants, although they will then qualify for the same amount of discount as under the current rules—i.e. after the five years, 35 per cent. for a house or 50 per cent. for a flat > extends the period after sale during which landlords may require owners to repay some or all of their discount on early resale, from three years to five years
> makes it clear that landlords have discretion to waive repayment of discount, to address cases where repayment could involve genuine hardship (the Government will issue guidance on this)
> requires the amount of discount repaid to be a percentage of the resale value of the property (less the value of any improvements made by the owner since exercising their Right to Buy) rather than the current flat rate basis > shortens from 12 months to three months the period after which a landlord may serve on a tenant a 'first notice to complete'
> allows landlords to suspend the Right to Buy for up to five years on dwellings scheduled for demolition, or to exempt such dwellings from the Right to Buy altogether if they are due to be demolished within two years
> requires tenants who agree to resell their homes to companies within the discount repayment period (a 'deferred resale agreement') to repay some or all of their Right to Buy discount > requires owners who wish to resell properties within 10 years of their being sold under the Right to Buy to offer them back to a local social landlord (the local authority or a registered social landlord) at market value. Landlords have always been able to do this for properties in national parks, areas of outstanding natural beauty, and areas designated as 'rural' for this purpose, of which there are now 35. The Act extends this power to other areas. The Government will specify procedures and timescales in regulations, which will be laid before Parliament as soon as possible > requires landlords to give their tenants information on the costs and responsibilities of home ownership. The Government will specify the matters on which information is to given in an order, which will be laid before Parliament as soon as possible
> enables landlords of secure tenants to seek an order suspending the right to buy for a specified period in respect of the tenancy on the grounds of anti-social behaviour
> ends the little-used Rent to Mortgage scheme from 18 July 2005 (eight months after Royal Assent)
> transfers jurisdiction over appeals by tenants denied the Right to Buy on the grounds that their homes are particularly suitable for occupation by elderly persons from the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, to residential property tribunals in England. This will take place on a date to be determined by the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, which is likely to be in the spring of 2005.

All these changes except the last three came into effect on 18 January 2005. Mostly, they do not affect applications for the Right to Buy made before that date, apart from the following:

> the extended qualification period does not apply to existing tenants
> landlords have been given discretion to waive the repayment of discount in respect of disposals which take place after 18 January
> provisions relating to deferred resale agreements apply to any agreements made after 18 January > information for tenants will be provided to all tenants regardless of whether an application has been made for the Right to Buy or not; and > the transfer of jurisdiction for elderly exclusion appeals will be dependent upon the date of the appeal rather than the date of the Right to Buy application.

The changes automatically apply to the Preserved Right to Buy (available to tenants transferred with their homes from local authorities to registered social landlords, mainly under large-scale voluntary transfer arrangements) (see section 171C of the Housing Act 1985), also and, with the exception of the last two, to the Right to Acquire scheme (see section 17 of the Housing Act 1996). Provision has to be made to continue orders suspending the Right to Buy because of antisocial behaviour in cases where the tenant ceases to be a secure tenant, but has a Preserved Right to Buy or the Right to Acquire, so that their right to purchase their home is still suspended.

The Preserved Right to Buy regulations and the Right to Acquire regulations will be replaced with new regulations which reflect these changes. These will be made and laid before Parliament as soon as possible.

Social Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many units of affordable housing for (a) rent and (b) sale were built with funding generated by recycled capital grant in 2003–04; and how many existing social housing units were refurbished with recycled capital grant funding. [209708]

Keith Hill: In 2003–04, 464 homes for rent, 436 homes for sale and 1,769 refurbished dwellings of Registered Social Landlords (RSL) stock were provided through recycled capital grant fund (RCGF).

Ms Oona King: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how much recycled capital grant was spent by registered social landlords to fund investment in refurbishment to bring existing stock up to the Decent Homes Standard in each year since 1997; [209710]

(2) if he will make a statement on the use of recycled capital grant by registered social landlords to fund investment in bringing existing stock up to the Decent Homes Standard rather than building new affordable housing. [209711]

Keith Hill: Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) can spend or commit recycled capital grant to projects that would be eligible for Social Housing Grant (SHG) within three years of the receipts being received or repay the grant to the Housing Corporation. For example, the recycled grant can be used to fund new dwellings and major repairs.

The Housing Corporation collects data on the extent of re-improvements and major repairs to RSL stock funded through the Recycled Capital Grant Fund (RCGF). The following table shows the total from the RCGF used in respect of re-improvements and major repairs to RSL stock between 1997–98 and 2003–04.

Total RCGF withdrawals for re-improvements and major repairs

1997–98	0.000
1998–99	0.372
1999–2000	1.888
2000–01	16.575
2001–02	25.100
2002–03	30.818
2003–04	35.232
Total	109.985

Supporting People Programme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what formula was used for the outline allocation for the 2005–06 Supporting People programme; and if he will make a statement. [210302]

Yvette Cooper: Supporting People grant allocations in 2005–06 have been informed by the use of a needs based distribution formula which aims to ensure that funding better reflects relative need.

The new Supporting People distribution formula was specifically developed for the Supporting People programme and takes into account levels of deprivation, population and social economic factors within an authority.

Detailed information on the formula and its use is available on the Supporting People web site at: http://www.spkweb.org.uk/Subjects/Finance/Distribution_formula/

Use Class Orders

Jim Knight: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he plans (a) to finalise and (b) to publish changes to the Use Class Orders for Use Class 'A'. [210894]

Keith Hill: The amendments to the Town and Country Planning (Use Classes) Order 1987 (the UCO) will take the form of two statutory instruments, one amending the UCO itself; the other amending the General Permitted Development Order. The statutory instruments have been finalised and will be published very shortly.

Voting Rights (Foreign Nationals)

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the UK residency requirements are to vote in local elections; and if he will make a statement on the eligibility of (a) citizens from the European Union, who are not UK or Irish citizens and (b) non-EU migrants with a right to remain, to vote in local elections in the UK. [210347]

Mr. Raynsford: Under Section 4(3) of the Representation of the People Act 1983 (the 1983 Act) a person is entitled to be registered in the register of local government electors for any electoral area if on the relevant date he is resident in the area and satisfies other criteria on legal capacity, age and citizenship. Registration, along with the satisfaction of other criteria, brings with it the right to vote in local elections in that area.

(a) Such citizens of the European Union member states resident in the UK have been eligible to register and to vote in local government elections in the UK since 1996. This is as a result of the UK Government applying the European Council Directive 94/80/EC which allows EU nationals to vote and stand in local government elections of the member states they are resident in.

(b) Non-EU migrants who have a right to remain on the UK are not eligible to register and vote in UK local government elections, unless they are also qualifying Commonwealth citizens.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's priorities for the Agriculture and Fisheries Council will be during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the European Union; and if she will make a statement. [209551]

Mr. Bradshaw: The overall Council Agenda for 2004–06 is set out in the Multi-Annual Strategic Programme and the UK-Luxembourg Annual Operating Programme (AOP) for 2005, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House. The agenda for the UK Presidency will be determined, to a large extent, by the agenda we inherit from the Luxembourg Presidency and their progress on the dossiers identified in the Multi-Annual Strategic Programme and the Annual Operating Programme.

Consistent with the Government's priorities of promoting better regulation, sustainable development and economic reform in the EU, the key priorities in the agriculture sector in 2005 will be: to contribute to progress of the WTO development round, particularly through reform of the sugar sector; and make progress on the Rural Development regulation and the regulation on CAP financing, if these have not been concluded beforehand.

The Council is also likely to be dealing with dossiers on organic farming, fruit and vegetables, flax and hemp, wine, avian influenza, aquaculture health, welfare of broiler hens, BSE, animal by-products, forest law enforcement, fisheries conservation, third country fisheries agreements, simplification of fisheries legislation, improvements to fisheries control and inspection, the European Fisheries Fund and the setting of total allowable catches and quotas for the fishing industry in 2006.

Animal Rights Activists

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the safety from animal rights activists of agricultural landowners who have their details published on the Department's website when applying for a temporary closure of right to roam land during the shooting season. [210254]

Alun Michael: Personal details of applicants are not published on the Countryside Agency's website.

Shooting often proceeds without difficulty on access land without any formal restriction being put in place. Where an application is made for this or any other reason and a restriction is granted, the location and nature of the restriction and the reason for it appears on the Countryside Agency's www.openaccess.gov.uk website, so that members of the public wishing to check in advance about the possible existence of restrictions over an area of access land are able to do so.

The land manager has the further option to post local notices drawing attention to the restriction. A model site notice is issued with the direction imposing the restriction—but the decision as to whether to post the notice lies with the land manager.

If animal rights activists or others set out to disrupt lawful activities on access land or to intimidate those taking parts in shoots, Part V of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 provides clear scope for immediate action by the police.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the reasons are for her assessment that the UK would not be able to achieve the Government's original target of a 20 per cent. carbon dioxide reduction by 2010; and if she will make a statement. [211026]

Mr. Morley: While the projections published by DTI in November 2004 confirmed that, on the basis of existing policy measures, we were on track to go well beyond our Kyoto Protocol commitment, they also showed that we were only likely to achieve a 14 per cent. reduction in carbon dioxide emissions by 2010.

The shortfall is because projected emissions were higher than previous estimates due mainly to lower nuclear generation, higher electricity demand and higher coal generation and because the measures to reduce emissions were in aggregate expected to deliver less than originally anticipated. The current review of the UK's Climate Change Programme will consider what additional measures are needed to close the gap.

A copy of the DTI exercise to update energy and emissions projections is at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/projections.pdf

A copy of the addendum to the November report is at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep_addendum.pdf

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the reasoning and methodology the Government employed in determining that a UK target for carbon dioxide reduction of 20 per cent. was achievable. [211027]

Mr. Morley: The UK's 3rd National Communication under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) sets out the reasoning and methodology employed by the Government in determining that a UK target for carbon dioxide reduction of 20 per cent. was achievable.

A copy is available on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/3nc/default.htm

Chicken Welfare

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent research she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) the effects on the welfare of hens of enriched battery cages and (ii) the economic effects of switching to alternative systems; and if she will make a statement. [210201]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra research into the welfare aspects of enriched cages is on-going. Details of current and past projects and reports can be found on the Defra website.

A Regulatory Impact Assessment was prepared during implementation of Council Directive 99/74/EC concerning the welfare of laying hens. To help formulate our thinking for the next review of the Directive, we will be taking into account the latest scientific and veterinary information on the different systems of laying hens production as well as environmental, political, social and economic factors.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the state of the UK's coral reefs; and what future changes she expects to see due to climate change. [209279]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The UK has a small number of known cold-water coral reefs. The best studied of these is the Darwin Mounds some 150 km off the north-west coast of Scotland. When last surveyed in 2000, there was evidence of damage from bottom trawling. The UK sought, and was granted in 2003, emergency European Commission measures to restrict this type of fishing and so avoid further damage to the reef. The emergency measures were made permanent in 2004. It is hoped that surveys in 2005 will enable the condition of other possible reefs to be checked.

It is not certain what the full effects of global warming will be on the seas of the UK although it seems unlikely that warming of the seas will be great enough to affect cold-water corals in the short to medium future. Deep-water reefs are less likely to be affected.

The rise in CO_2 in the atmosphere is likely to cause a rise in acidity of surface waters, and affect the amount of calcium carbonate used by coral reefs for growth in shallow waters. How these predicted effects in shallower waters will affect deeper waters is not known, but any decreases in amounts of available calcium carbonate will not be beneficial to coral reefs.

Cormorants

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to what level the (a) UK and (b) English population of the cormorant would need to fall (i) in the breeding season and (ii) in winter for the Government to decide that it was no longer meeting its obligations for this species under the EU Birds Directive. [209811]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government's obligation under the Birds Directive is to ensure that measures taken under the directive do not worsen the initial status of the species protected. The directive was made in 1979 and although no accurate figures for wintering or breeding cormorant numbers are available for this date, it is generally accepted from monitoring of trends that wintering numbers in Britain have increased around four-fold since that date. These are our legal obligations. However, we have no intention of allowing the cormorant population to be reduced to anything approaching this level and the current policy, which aims to resolve cormorant/fishery conflicts at problem sites, will balance the interests of fisheries with the sustainable conservation status of the cormorant.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the quantity of (a) unapproved and (b) experimental GM material entering (i) animal feed and (ii) food intended for human consumption. [210879]

Mr. Morley: Importers and suppliers of food and feed have the responsibility for ensuring that only GM material approved under relevant EU legislation are imported into the EU and supplied through the food and feed chain. Our information is that importers and suppliers take these responsibilities seriously and that the quantity (if any) of unapproved GM material in the food and feed supply chain will be very low.

In the UK release of experimental GM material is closely controlled and strict precautions taken to prevent it from entering the food or feed chain.

Greyhound Licensing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will require British Greyhound Racing Board members' (a) kennels and (b) tracks to be licensed by local authorities; and if she will make a statement. [210411]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the proposed Animal Welfare Bill, the Secretary of State will be able to introduce secondary legislation regulating certain activities, and the welfare of racing greyhounds is a possible area for regulation. No decisions have yet been taken as to the level of regulation that should apply. Dogs in the care of man, which includes racing greyhounds, would also be protected by the welfare and cruelty provisions in the Bill.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Antisocial Behaviour

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the establishment of central-local partnerships in relation to antisocial behaviour; and what their (a) terms of reference and (b) membership will be. [210758]

Yvette Cooper: The last Central Local Partnership (CLP) meeting agreed to set up a CLP sub-group on Crime. Antisocial behaviour issues could be covered under this new sub-group. Terms of Reference and membership are yet to be decided.

Building Regulations

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the potential to achieve the objectives of (a) lower fuel bills and (b) lower carbon emissions through amending Part L of the Building Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [210655]

Phil Hope: The most recent assessment is contained in the consultation document published last July by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. That document contains proposals to raise the standards in Part L this year in line with the commitments in the Energy White Paper. As normal, the proposals aim to achieve substantial improvements consistent with Better Regulation policy, cost-effectiveness, design flexibility and the avoidance of excessive technical risks.

Flood Risks

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he plans to ban the use of oil tanks and oil heating systems in flood plains and coastal areas believed to be at risk from flooding in respect of (a) new housing and (b) existing housing; what representations he has received regarding this from the Environment Agency; and if he will make a statement. [210631]

Phil Hope: There are currently no plans to prohibit the use of oil tanks and oil heating systems in areas which are at risk from flooding and, to date, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received no representations from the Environment Agency concerning this issue.

Living Spaces Programme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which projects in the Eddisbury constituency under the Living Spaces programme have (a) applied for funds, (b) been supported with funds, (c) been refused funds and (d) have applications pending that were submitted before the 21 July 2004 deadline. [210283]

Phil Hope: Five projects in the Eddisbury constituency have applied for funding from the Living Spaces programme. Four projects have been approved and awarded funding. They are:

The Nantwich Embankment Environmental Improvement Scheme project which has been awarded a grant of £40,000.

The Nursery Road Recreation Ground Revitalisation project which has been awarded a grant of £82,275.

The Comberbach Recreation Area project (phase 1) which has been awarded a grant of £25,000.

The Moulton Children's Playing Field Trust Improvements project which has been awarded a grant of £25,000.

The fifth group has had its initial application approved and has since worked up their plans with the help of a trained Living Spaces enabler. Once Living Spaces receives a final recommendation from the enabler a decision on funding will be taken. This project is:

The Comberbach Recreation Area project (phase 2) which has applied for a grant of £25,000.

To date, no applications from groups in the Eddisbury constituency have been refused funds from the Living Spaces programme.

New Build Standards (South Midlands)

Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) whether the Building Research Establishment standards of (a) EcoHomes and (b) BREAM will be applied in the construction of new homes in the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-region as part of the sustainable communities plan; [210226]

(2) what steps the Government are taking to ensure that the proposed new housing in the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-region has high standards of energy efficiency and thermal insulation. [210228]

Phil Hope: The Government are not in a position to impose mandatory environmental standards specific to housing in the Milton Keynes South Midlands sub-region as the boundaries of the growth areas do not have any legal status. Furthermore, to set such mandatory standards could potentially lead to perverse consequences, by providing a disincentive to development in the growth areas relative to other areas.

However, the Government are keen to promote the construction of sustainable and energy efficient housing in the growth areas and believes that local delivery vehicles (LDVs) have an important role to play in promoting all aspects of sustainable development. Draft guidance has been circulated to the LDVs in the newer growth areas which identifies achievement of high quality design and higher environmental performance as being among their main objectives.

More generally, the Government are keen to promote environmentally sustainable and energy efficient housing throughout the country. In line with the commitments made in the Energy White Paper and at the Better Building Conference work is in train on bringing the next major revision of the building regulations energy efficiency provisions into effect this year and to publish a Sustainable Buildings Code that will encourage energy efficiency standards above those in the regulations and address sustainability more widely. For publicly funded housing, the Housing Corporation is already recommending that social housing schemes should achieve an EcoHomes rating of "very good" from April 2005 with the "good" rating as an essential condition for a project to receive a grant.

Regional Government (North-west)

David Maclean: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on the legal status of the unelected regional structures that have been established in the north-west region; [210197]

(2) what the legal status is of the North West regional chamber; and if he will make a statement. [210920]

Mr. Raynsford: The North West Regional Assembly is an unincorporated association designated by the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister under section 8 of the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998 as the regional chamber for the North West Regional Development Agency. Further to the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 the North West Regional Assembly has been designated by the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister as the Regional Planning Body for the region.

The North West Regional Development Agency is a body corporate established under the Regional Development Agencies Act 1998.

Right to Buy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with (a) housing associations, (b) the Housing Corporation and (c) banks about the effects of a right to buy for housing association tenants on the (a) financial projections and (b) business plans of registered social landlords and their funders. [210625]

Keith Hill: There have been no such discussions about the extension of the right-to-buy for housing association tenants.

Telecommunications Masts

Tom Cox: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many objections have been made to his Department by residents living within the Greater London area to the siting of mobile telephone masts within their borough; and if he will make a statement. [211053]

Keith Hill: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Switchover

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Government intend to launch a public awareness campaign in advance of digital switchover; and if she will make a statement. [209606]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 19 January 2005]: The responsibility for communicating the switchover process and ensuring that everyone gets all the right information well in advance will primarily be one for "Switchco", broadcasters and the supply chain. The Government will continue to take responsibility for communicating its switchover policy, and we have been running, since November, a campaign to help raise awareness of digital switchover through the mainstream media, which will continue until March.

National Lottery

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the Government funded the recent Henley Centre publication Has the National Lottery helped the UK. [211066]

Estelle Morris: The Government did not fund the recent Henley Centre publication. The research was commissioned and published by the Camelot group.

The report concludes that the National Lottery has produced significant social and economic benefits within the UK.

TV Licensing Enforcement Unit

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what mechanisms are in place to ensure that the TV Licensing Enforcement Unit does not pursue pensioners over the age of seventy-five years who are entitled to a free TV licence. [209652]

Mr. Caborn: People aged 75 or over are entitled to a free television licence but are not exempt from the television licensing requirements. However, the BBC has indicated that TV Licensing carries out extensive public awareness campaigns to inform over-75s of their entitlement, that inquiry letters sent to unlicensed addresses include information on the concession and that inquiry officers carrying out home visits are specifically trained to assist over-75s in applying for free licences.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

John Mann: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers on behalf of the Public Accounts Commission in the last three years. [207833]

Mr. Alan Williams: The Public Accounts Commission already pursues a policy of maximum transparency and openness in its proceedings. It has achieved this both by meeting in public and by publishing a wide range of material about its activities, including regular reports to the House. I am not aware of any examples in the last three years of information which has been refused in response to a parliamentary question but which would be provided under the Freedom of Information Act.

TREASURY

Child Benefit (Hartlepool)

Iain Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of additional 16 to 19-year-olds in Hartlepool that will be entitled to child benefit if the Child Benefit Bill receives Royal Assent. [210646]

Dawn Primarolo: If the Child Benefit Bill receives Royal Assent it will enable the Government to extend child benefit to the families of unwaged trainees on Government Supported Training and the families of 19-year-olds in full-time education or training finishing a course.

In relation to the number of families who may gain from the extension of child benefit for unwaged trainees, there were approximately 4,750 young people aged 16–19 on unwaged Government Supported Training courses in Tees Valley Local Learning and Skills Council in 2003–04.

There is insufficient data to estimate the number of families who would gain from the extension of child benefit to over 19-year-olds finishing their courses.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department in the (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 session, broken down by Act. [206874]

Mr. Timms: The following provisions created criminal offences in primary legislation sponsored by HM Treasury in the 2002–03 and 2003–04 sessions:

Finance Act 2003

Section 17(5)—Being supplied with goods or services in contravention of paragraph 4(2) of Schedule 11 of the Value Added Tax Act 1994 (Power to require security and production of evidence).

Section 94—Delay or obstruction of officer inspecting premises.

Section 95—Fraudulent evasion of tax.

Schedule 13, paragraph 53—Falsification, concealment, destruction or disposal of documents.

Child Trust Funds Act 2004

Section 18—Disclosure of information held in exercise of child trust fund functions.

Finance Act 2004

Schedule 1, paragraph 5—Possession, sale etc. of unstamped containers containing liquor.

Schedule 1, paragraph 6—Use of premises for sale of liquor in or from unstamped containers.

Schedule 1, paragraph 7—Sale of liquor following conviction for offence under paragraph 6.

National Insurance Contributions and Statutory Payments Act 2004

Section 7—Falsification, concealment, destruction or disposal of documents delivered or made available under section 110ZA of the Social Security Administration Act 1992 (Class 1, 1A, 7B or 2 contributions: powers to call for documents etc).

Section 8—as for section 7 above, but in respect of Northern Ireland.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the running costs of the Department were in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) electricity, (b) water, (c) gas, (d) telephones, (e) mobile telephones and (f) televisions; [206681]

(2) how much has been spent by his Department on lighting in each year since 1997. [205866]

Mr. Timms: In respect of water costs for all years and electricity costs for the years up to 2002–03, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers given by the then Financial Secretary (Ruth Kelly) to the hon. Member for North Norfolk (Norman Lamb) on 14 July 2004, Official Report, column 1134W. For the Treasury, the costs of electricity, gas, telephones (including mobile telephones) and television licences for 2002–03 and 2003–04 are given in the following table. It is not possible to disaggregate the cost of lighting from total electricity costs. Information in respect of the earlier years, and the cost of mobile telephones disaggregated from total telephone costs, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Electricity	288	260
Gas	3	4
Telephones, including mobile telephones	1,592	1,416
Television licences	0.2	0.2

European Communities Medium Term Financial Assistance

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what actions were funded in 2004 through European Communities' Medium Term Financial Assistance funds within the special reserve for borrowing and lending Activities. [207128]

Mr. Timms: In 2004, one action was carried out through the European Communities' Medium Term Financial Assistance funds: a loan disbursement of €10.0 million (£7.0 million[1]) to Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Details of the borrowing and lending activities conducted by the European Communities are published every six months in reports from the Commission on guarantees covered by the general budget. The reports are deposited in the Library of the House.

[1] Converted at the average annual rate for 2003 of £1 = €1.4320

Illegal Drugs (Africa)

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the quantity of illegal drugs (a) produced in Africa and (b) exported from Africa to Europe or the UK in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [210061]

Dawn Primarolo: The detailed estimates requested are not held by this department and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The broad position is that drug production in Africa is limited to cannabis cultivation. There is no evidence of any significant production of heroin or cocaine.

Seizure patterns and intelligence indicate the increasing use of west Africa as a transit point for cocaine and heroin to Europe and the UK.

Income Policy

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what policies the Government are pursuing to increase household incomes in areas with the lowest household incomes. [210444]

Mr. Timms: Through the child and working tax credits and the pension credit the Government have significantly improved financial support for working age and pensioner households on low incomes. As a result of tax and benefit reforms since 1997, by April 2005:

families with children in the poorest fifth of the population will be, on average, £3,000 a year better off; and the poorest 10 per cent. of pensioner households will be, on average, £2,170 a year better off

The Government have also invested over £1.6 billion since 1997 in neighbourhood renewal programmes for the most deprived areas of the country, and has introduced employment programmes providing additional support for jobseekers in the poorest areas.

Income Tax (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers in the Nottingham, North constituency have benefited from the lower 10 per cent. starting rate of income tax. [211006]

Dawn Primarolo: All income taxpayers benefit from the 10 per cent. starting rate. Estimates of the number of taxpayers in each constituency within the UK will be published as National Statistics on the Inland Revenue website in February 2005.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the ministerial engagements (a) out of London and (b) in London that he has cancelled since 1 January 2004. [209222]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Details of cancelled engagements are not retained centrally.

National Minimum Wage (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have benefited from the national minimum wage in the Nottingham, North constituency. [211011]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 25 January 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people have benefited from the national minimum wage in Nottingham North Parliamentary Constituency. I am replying in his absence. (211011)

Estimates for the number of jobs paid below the minimum wage for Parliamentary Constituencies are not available. However, the Office for National Statistics calculates estimates of the number of jobs paid less than national minimum wage rates for the United Kingdom and Government Office Regions. A guide to measuring low pay and associated articles and data can be found on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 5837&Pos = l&ColRank = l&Rank = 272

Savings Gateway

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the Savings Gateway pilot. [210438]

Mr. Timms: The last of the initial pilot Saving Gateway accounts matured in November last year and the evaluation team at the Personal Finance Research Centre at Bristol University are in the final phases of collecting the data and interpreting the evidence for their final report to HM Treasury.

The interim evaluation, published on the HM Treasury website in October 2003, finds that matching can provide an important new dimension to Government support for saving. We will build upon this evidence-base in the new larger £15 million pilot which was announced in the 2004 pre-Budget report.

Tax Credits

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints have been made about the tax credits system in each financial year since its inception, (a) via hon. Members and (b) direct from constituents; how many cases have been referred by hon. Members to the Inland Revenue for investigation; and if he will make a statement. [209042]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 17 January 2005]: At the end of March 2004 6 million families were benefiting from tax credits and the Inland Revenue had received 32,000 written complaints in relation to tax credits. It is not possible to split this figure by those received via hon. Members and those received direct from constituents.

All complaints made to hon. Members are referred to the Inland Revenue for investigation.

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the total expenditure on (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit was in each year that these schemes have been in operation; [210055]

(2) what proportion of the budget for (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit has been spent on administration in each year that each scheme has been in operation. [210058]

Dawn Primarolo: Child and working tax credits were introduced in April 2003.

For the year ended 31 March 2004, the total expenditure on these tax credits, and the costs of managing and paying them, appear on pages 103–4 of the Inland Revenue Annual Report and Accounts for that year.

This can be found on the Inland Revenue website, at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/pdfs/report2004.pdf.

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people were overpaid (a) child tax credit and (b) working tax credit during 2003–04; [210331]

(2) how many families received (a) child tax credit and (b) working tax credit recovery notices during 2003–04. [210332]

Dawn Primarolo: For the number of tax credits overpayments, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Members for Northavon (Mr. Webb) and for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 15 November 2004, Official Report, columns 946–48W.

Overpayments of tax credits are established after the end of the tax year, when final income and circumstances for the previous year are known and the award can be finalised. Where an award of tax credits has ceased and there remains an overpayment to be recovered, the Inland Revenue issues claimants with a 'Notice to Pay'. A small number of these notices were issued to recover tax credits in 2003–04, where awards were terminated on the grounds of no entitlement. To the end of March 2004, around 3,000 had been issued.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the average amount of compensation for errors paid by the Inland Revenue to claimants of tax credits was between April 2003 and December 2004; [211022]

(2) how many of the compensation payments made for errors to tax credits claimants between April 2003 and December 2004, were for (a) £0-£25, (b) £25-£50,

(c) £50-£100, (d) £100-£150, (e) £150-£200, (f) £250-£300, (g) £300-£350, (h) £350-£400, (i) £400-£450 and (j) £450-£500. [211023]

Dawn Primarolo: The circumstances in which the Inland Revenue will make compensation payments to its customers are explained In the Department's Code of Practice 1 "Putting things right when we make mistakes" which is available at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk. The Department will pay compensation for reasonable costs incurred as a direct result of their mistakes or delays and to recognise worry and distress caused by those mistakes or delays.

For the average amount of compensation authorised by the Inland Revenue to claimants of tax credits in 2003–04 I refer my right hon. Friend to paragraph 2.15 in the Report of the Comptroller and Auditor General attached to the Inland Revenue Annual Report and Accounts for the year ending 31 March 2004.

The average amount of compensation paid in the period 1 April to 31 December 2004 was £63.

The detailed information sought by the right hon. Gentleman relating to compensation payments for errors between April 2003 and December 2004 is available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when Mr. Fitzgerald and Ms Johnson of Rock Ferry, constituents of the right hon. Member for Birkenhead, will receive their tax credits. [211034]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue wrote to my right hon. Friend's constituents on 24 January 2005.

Terrorism

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what instructions his Department has given concerning the closure by the Royal Bank of Scotland of bank accounts used by terrorists. [210753]

Mr. Timms: HM Treasury has given no instructions to the Royal Bank of Scotland to close bank accounts used by terrorists.

From time to time the Bank of England, on HM Treasury's instructions, directs all UK financial institutions to freeze funds (not close accounts) belonging to an individual or entity listed by the UN Security Council, associated EC Regulations or domestic legislation on countering terrorist finance. All organisations and individuals whose assets have been frozen in accordance with the UN Security Council Resolutions, associated EC Regulations and domestic legislation are listed, by HM Treasury instruction, on the Bank of England's Financial Sanctions website.

VAT (Trade Union Subscriptions)

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether VAT is charged on trade union membership subscription. [211003]

Dawn Primarolo: VAT is not charged on trade union membership subscriptions.

"Trade union" in VAT legislation has the meaning assigned to it by section 1 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Correspondence

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will reply to the letter from the honourable Member for the Isle of Wight dated 26 October 2004 concerning John Havies. [211021]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The hon. Gentleman's letter was received on 29 October, unfortunately, due to an administrative error, it was overlooked for which I apologise. It has now become apparent that the hon. Gentleman's concerns are the responsibility of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and his letter is being transferred to them with a request that they respond as soon as possible.

Home Workers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she plans to publish the results of her consultation on changes to the law on the rights of home workers. [210209]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We aim to issue a Government response to the consultation on the Discussion Document on Employment Status in relation to Statutory Employment Rights this year. This review has been considering the position of diverse groups of working individuals, including the clergy, agency workers and home workers.

Internet Shopping

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the number of purchases made on the internet in 2004 where the goods (a) never arrived and (b) were of inferior standard to those advertised. [210011]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have no estimates of purchases made last year on the internet.

Consumers are protected by the Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 which stipulate that unless the parties have agreed otherwise, the supplier must deliver the goods within 30 days; and that if the goods are unavailable the consumer must be informed and reimbursed. Consumers purchasing goods over the value of £100 by credit card in the UK are protected by section 75 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, if the seller fails to honour the contract consumers may claim costs from the credit card company.

Also, advertising material on websites must not be misleading and goods supplied must be as described and of satisfactory quality. Trading Standards or the Office of Fair Trading can, where appropriate, take action against suppliers breaching these requirements.

The Home Office launched a website to combat fraud over the internet. The 'e-tailing mini site' forms part of the Crime Reduction Website and includes information to help on-line consumers protect themselves from fraud.

Government is also involved in the development of Project Endurance, an initiative that will launch an internet security public awareness campaign in spring this year. The project is an alliance of public and private sector, which brings together a number of UK

Government Departments and law enforcement organisations with a number of high-profile private sector companies. This campaign is to be targeted at micro businesses and consumers, primarily aimed at helping these users gain confidence in using the internet.

We will continue to monitor and review the effectiveness of these many different initiatives.

Subsidiary Companies

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to ensure that United Kingdom registered companies apply operational standards in operating subsidiaries located abroad which are compatible with legislation on environmental and social protection that applies in the United Kingdom. [205898]

Ms Hewitt: UK companies that operate overseas are subject to the laws applicable in those countries which will take account of the particular circumstances and practices of each host country. We encourage companies to apply high standards of corporate behaviour by addressing their environmental and social impacts wherever they operate, including adhering to relevant internationally agreed norms and initiatives. In line with this, we promote the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises which recommend standards of responsible business conduct for businesses operating in or from the 37 adhering countries and will be writing to the FTSE 100 companies to raise awareness of these expectations. We have also set out our approach to encouraging environmentally and socially responsible practice internationally in our draft international strategic framework on Corporate Social Responsibility.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the running costs of the Cabinet Office were in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) electricity, (b) water, (c) gas, (d) telephones, (e) mobile phones and (f) televisions. [206667]

Mr. Miliband: It is not possible to provide information for all the Cabinet Office Estate for running costs since 1997 as these costs are not held centrally and are not separately identifiable on the Department's accounting system. It cannot therefore be readily retrieved without incurring disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Cars

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office which individuals other than Ministers have had the use of Government cars provided for ministerial use in each year since 2000. [210420]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive Mr. Nick Matheson to write to the hon. Member. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library.

Social Justice

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what definition her Office uses of the term social justice in Cabinet Office documents. [204279]

Mr. Miliband: As far as I am aware the Cabinet Office has not used the term social justice in any of its documents.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Immigration (Appeals)

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average waiting time was for the determination of an application for permission to appeal to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal, at the latest date for which figures are available. [210892]

Mr. Leslie: Latest provisional information taken from the IRIS database of the Immigration Appellate Authority indicates that applications for permission to appeal to the Immigration Appeal Tribunal, promulgated within the period 1 October 2004 to 31 December 2004, took an average time of 15.5 weeks to process from receipt to determination.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Council Tax

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the composition is of the monies being re-allocated from her Department to local authorities as part of the re-allocation from Government Departments to reduce the council tax in the next financial year. [207312]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: In his pre-Budget report on 2 December the Chancellor announced a total of more than £600 million in additional revenue support grant and specific formula grant over and above Spending Review plans for 2005–06, including the £100 million children's safeguarding grant to local authorities. It also included a further £25 million from general underspends within my Department's programmes.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students aged 16 to 18 years in receipt of an education maintenance allowance there are in each educational institution in Tower Hamlets. [209647]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the number of young people who have applied, enrolled and been paid EMA is available at local authority level. As at 14 January 2005 1,898 young people in the Tower Hamlets local education authority area had received an EMA payment.

A table showing how many young people are receiving EMA in individual educational institutions in Tower Hamlets is as follows.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make it her policy to continue payment of education maintenance allowance to juveniles in custody aged 16 years and over. [210498]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The payment of EMA to young people in detention was trialled in some pilot areas including Stoke-on-Trent. Experience from the pilots was used to inform the design of the national scheme.

Under the national scheme EMA is not available to young people in custody aged 16 years and over. The reason is that EMA is an incentive to support young people with the costs of their learning, and for those in custody these costs are already met. Connexions services and other agencies promote EMA as part of a range of services and support to help young people leaving custody return to learning.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students aged between 16 and 18 years resident in Stoke-on-Trent have been in receipt of education maintenance allowances in each of the last three years. [210861]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The following list gives the number of students aged 16 to 18 years who were resident in Stoke-on-Trent and received an education maintenance allowance in each of the last three academic years when the pilot operated in this local education authority area.

Academic year	Total number of 16 to 18-year-olds

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students aged 16 to 18 years in each institution in Stoke-on-Trent were in receipt of education maintenance allowance in each of the past five years. [210862]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department did not collect data about the number of students aged 16 to 18 in each institution in Stoke-on-Trent who were in receipt of education maintenance allowance during the pilot stage.

We do collect this data for the national scheme which began in September 2004. The list gives those institutions in the Stoke-on-Trent local education authority area, and the number of students in each who have received education maintenance allowance as part of the national scheme, as at 6 January 2005. The total figure excludes students who are resident in the Stoke-on-Trent LEA area but who study in institutions outside this LEA area.

E-learning

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what groups are being consulted on whether e-learning credits are to be extended beyond 2005–06; and when a decision will be made. [210182]

Derek Twigg: Electronic learning credits are a valuable resource for schools that improve significantly access to, and stimulate the use of, high quality digital content for learning and teaching. £30 million was made available in 2002–03 and £100 million in each of 2003–04, 2004–05 and 2005–06. Since no commitment was made to continue funding beyond 2005–06 (as a specific ring-fenced allocation or otherwise) we are taking account of the views of head teachers, teachers, school governors, the Curriculum Online Content Advisory Board, Becta (the British Educational Technology and Communications Agency), the relevant trade associations as well as direct representations from the content developers and suppliers. Following consideration of these views and representations, a decision will be made as soon as possible as to whether and in what form funding for electronic learning credits might be extended.

Further Education

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the need for (a) level 1 and (b) level 2 further education courses in the London borough of Brent. [210478]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) was established in 2001 to plan and fund post-16 education and training. This is therefore a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Independent Schools (Pre-registration)

Mrs. Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many independent schools there are in the pre-registration category; how many have had (a) one visit and (b) two allotted visits; and how many are faith schools, broken down by faith. [210849]

Derek Twigg: There are 148 provisionally registered schools in the transitional phase of registration. 123 have had one visit and 25 have had both of their allotted visits. 76 are faith schools, 41 being Muslim, 30 Christian Brethren, four Evangelical Christian and one Jewish.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will instruct learning and skills councils not to restrict the number of training providers contracting with them which offer courses leading to the same qualification. [210675]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Contracting with training providers is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council and Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list her ministerial engagements out of London in February. [209732]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The following is a list of the Secretary of State's planned ministerial engagements out of London in February 2005. These engagements are subject to change due to parliamentary commitments and final confirmation.

Date	Venue
2 February	World Sustainable Community Summit in Manchester
3 February	Specialist Sports Colleges Conference in Telford
21–22 February	EU Education and Youth Council, Brussels
23 February	Visit to Caroline Chisholm School in Northampton

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Maidenhead on 18 December 2004, reference 204405. [210484]

Margaret Hodge: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 79W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will reply to the questions tabled by the hon. Member for Maidenhead on 21 December 2004, reference (a) 207312 and (b) 207313. [210998]

Margaret Hodge: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for School Standards has today replied to PQ 207312. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 24 January 2005, Official Report, columns 70–71W, for the reply to PQ 207313.

Post-16 Education

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the implications of the Tomlinson Report for the number of places needed in 16–19 education. [210188]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The increased availability of personalised learning programmes to meet 14–19 year olds' needs, aptitudes and aspirations will raise participation and achievement in learning at 16–19. The Department's Five Year Strategy sets out our estimate that over the next five years we will need some 100,000 new 16–19 places, although the increase in demand will vary from place to place. That means we will need more school and college sixth forms and more apprenticeships and other vocational opportunities to give young people more choice.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils have been permanently excluded from schools in (a) the West Suffolk parliamentary constituency and (b) the county of Suffolk in each year since 1997. [210697]

Derek Twigg: The available information is given in the table.

Exclusions data for 2000/01, 2001/02 and 2002/03 are known to have been under-reported by some schools. The Department carried out a checking exercise, but this was at LEA level only. As a result this information is not available at parliamentary constituency level for the three most recent years.

Maintained primary, secondary and all special schools[1,2]: number and percentage of permanently excluded pupils 1997/98 to 2002/03

Pupil Numbers

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much of the increase in the number of places needed in 16 to 19-year-olds' education set out in her Department's five-year strategy is attributable to (a) increased participation rates and (b) the number of 16 to 19-year-olds in the period. [210948]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We expect around 100,000 growth in the number of first time entrants in maintained schools and 16–18 FE between 2003/04 and 2008/09 as outlined in our five year strategy. We expect the 100,000 increase to be attributable to both demographic changes which account for 40 per cent. of the growth and policies to boost participation accounting for 60 per cent.

School Playing Fields

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to introduce a moratorium on the sale of school playing fields. [210374]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 24 January 2005]: We have no plans to introduce a moratorium on the sale of school playing fields. Section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 requires local authorities and schools to obtain the written consent of the Secretary of State before they can dispose of any part of a school's playing field. Applications to sell school playing fields are only approved where it is clear that they meet the needs of local schools and their communities and that any proceeds are used to improve school sports provision or educational facilities.

Secondary School Violence

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department is taking to tackle violence in secondary schools. [209731]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 24 January 2005]: Although violence in schools is rare the Government takes the issue very seriously. We are determined to help schools create an environment that reduces the risk to an absolute minimum. To achieve that we have:

given every secondary school access to high-quality behaviour management training materials and expert advice from behaviour management consultants;

funded extra support for schools facing the greatest challenges through our Behaviour Improvement Programme; made it clear that head teachers may permanently exclude pupils for violence even where this is a first offence;

provided £120 million for school security improvements since 1997; issued a School Police Protocol to help schools develop effective relationships with the police; and based over 300 police officers in schools.

In addition we are:

developing specific violence prevention materials through our Violence Reduction in Schools project; developing curriculum materials to help secondary schools develop pupils' social, emotional and behavioural skills; and consulting on new proposals on keeping knives out of schools, including searching suspect pupils.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average size is of (a) maintained school sixth forms and (b) sixth form colleges in each (i) local education authority and (ii) learning and skills council area. [210174]

Derek Twigg: The requested information relating to maintained school sixth forms has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

The number of learners and size of sixth form colleges is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. I have therefore asked Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, to write to the hon. Member with the information requested and to place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the retention rate for (a) maintained school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges and (c) other further education colleges was in each local education authority in the most recent period for which figures are available. [210179]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on retention rates in maintained school sixth forms is not available. Retention rates in sixth form colleges and other further education colleges are a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. I have therefore asked Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, to write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested and to place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the reasons for higher participation rates in full-time education and training of pupils from maintained schools with sixth forms. [210187]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The report "The Influence of the School in the decision to participate in learning post-16" indicated a number of reasons why the provision of a sixth form within a school might be an important influence on the decision of young people to participate in post-16 education and training:

> (i) "Schools with sixth forms have a ready made post-16 route and pupils are more channelled in their choices and decisions." Such schools often actively promoting post-16 academic routes, compared to other forms of post-16 participation which were much less clearly promoted. In schools with no sixth form there was a greater element of choice and decisions were aimed more generally at providing students with opportunities that more adequately addressed their needs.
> (ii) "Careers advice in schools with sixth forms was found to be qualitatively different from that in 11 to 16 schools." Pupils attending 11 to 16 schools were more positive about the careers education they had received and often exposed to a rich network of information, guidance and advice from diverse sources. Pupils in schools with sixth forms felt their advice and guidance to be less impartial than those in schools with no sixth form. Schools with sixth forms tended to have a strong academic tradition and a focus on university entrance, and an expectation that students would continue in full-time education post-16 which may not be the right decision for the young people concerned.
> (iii) "There was a greater tendency in schools with a sixth form to provide post-16 advice and guidance which is more closely related to academic sixth form provision." Knowledge about post-16 provision in schools and colleges tended to be strongest among pupils in schools with sixth forms and weakest in schools with no sixth forms. The opposite was true about knowledge of post-16 training and labour markets.

Other important influential issues of the school "in the decision of young people to participate in learning post-16" were the socio-economic environment of the school, and the schools' culture, ethos and leadership.

School Dinners

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent discussions she has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Health and (b) others about the effects of partially hydrogenated oils (trans fats) in school dinners; and if she will make a statement. [210429]

Derek Twigg: The Secretary of State for Education and Skills has had no recent discussions with the Secretary of State for Health, or any others, on this issue.

However, this Department works closely with the Food Standards Agency (FSA), who provide information to the public and Government on food safety, nutrition and diet. We have a formal agreement with FSA which requires them to inform us, without delay, of any information on food safety, nutrition and diet that requires us to take action.

This Department together with the Department of Health, Department for Food, Environment and Rural Affairs and the FSA, have jointly provided £1.1 million that will be used over the next three years to improve school meals. We will be revising both primary and secondary school meal standards, to reduce the consumption of fat, as well as salt and sugar and increasing the consumption of fruit and vegetables.

In our guidance, 'Healthy School Lunches', we advise that monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats should be used wherever possible. www.dfes.gov.uk/schoollunches.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Zimbabwe

16. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to discuss with his EU colleagues the range of sanctions in place against Zimbabwe. [210398]

Mr. Mullin: The EU's targeted measures against Zimbabwe run until 18 February 2005. We see no evidence that Zimbabwe has addressed the EU's concerns on human rights and democracy. We therefore believe that sanctions should remain in place, and are discussing this with EU partners now.

Iraq

18. Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the level of violence in Iraq has risen since Christmas. [210400]

Mr. Alexander: Since Christmas we have seen a number of attacks designed to disrupt election operations. Both the Iraqi Independent Electoral Commission and the Iraqi Government have made clear their determination that the elections go ahead on time. The UK, with its allies in the Multi-National Force will continue to support the Iraqi authorities to that end.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the openness of the Iraqi electoral process will be assured; who has overall responsibility for the process of the 30 January elections; who appointed them; what their qualifications are for the role; whether the names of would-be candidates who have not been allowed to stand will be disclosed; whether reasons will be given for their ineligibility; who will monitor the polls and undertake the count; who the returning officers will be; whether there will be independent monitoring of the elections; and if he will make a statement. [207220]

Mr. Rammell: The Independent Electoral Commission of Iraq (IECI) is responsible for planning, organising and supervising the electoral process. The IECI is headed by nine Commissioners. The Commissioners were nominated by the UN following a rigorous selection procedure and approved by Prime Minister Allawi. None of the commissioners had any direct experience of managing an electoral process with the exception of a non-voting commissioner. Carlos Valenzuela of the UN. Valenzuela has extensive experience of conducting elections in post-conflict environments.

No prospective candidates were rejected by the IECI. The elections will be observed by national election monitors that have been trained by international organisations. In addition, an international mission to assess the elections is being organised by the Canadian Electoral Commission. The IECI is responsible for co-ordinating the return of ballot papers, the counting process and tabulation of results. The official result will be announced around 20 days after the election but a probable share of seats for the Transitional National Assembly will be announced within a week of the election.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements are in place to ensure that no non-Iraqis cast votes, or arrange for votes to be included in the poll count, in the Iraqi elections on 30 January; and if he will make a statement. [207249]

Mr. Rammell: Only Iraqi citizens that appear on the electoral roll are eligible to vote. The electoral roll was compiled from the Public Distribution System used to allocate food rations. On polling day, voters will be checked against the voter register before being allowed to enter the polling station to cast their vote. Election monitors working for the Independent Electoral Commission of Iraq (IECI) will supervise polling stations.

Iraqis living outside Iraq will also be able to cast their votes. The IECI asked the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) to put in place arrangements for voting in 14 countries (including the UK). In order to register to vote, Iraqis will be required to provide evidence of their eligibility. Voters must have been born in Iraq or have a father who was born there. Arrangements for monitoring out of country voting are currently being developed by the IECI.

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the merits of an independent inquiry into the number of (a) Iraqi military personnel and (b) Iraqi civilians killed or injured by the activities of coalition forces in Iraq since 19 March 2003; and if he will make a statement. [209234]

Mr. Rammell: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary explained in his written statement to Parliament on 17 November 2004, Official Report, columns 92–95WS, we believe that the Iraqi authorities remain in the best position to record casualties in their country.

An independent inquiry is highly unlikely to be able to gain better access and provide more accurate information on casualties than the Iraqi Government.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which period is covered by the Iraqi Ministry of Health data for casualties which the Government are using as their estimate of casualties. [209380]

Mr. Rammell: The Iraqi Minister of Health released a statement on 29 October 2004 in which he quoted statistics covering the period of 5 April 2004 to 5 October 2004. These statistics, which are compiled by some 180 hospitals, show that 3,853 Iraqis were killed and 15,517 were injured during this period. We continue to believe that this is the most reliable data available.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the price in dollars of 20 litres of (a) kerosene and (b) petrol was in Baghdad in January (i) 2000 and (ii) 2005. [210253]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer of 24 January 2005]: Official prices for kerosene and benzene (petrol) have not changed since 1999. Using an exchange rate of 1 Iraqi Dinar (ID) = 0.0008$ on 01 January 2000 and 1ID = 0.00068$ on 01 January 2005, 20 litres of kerosene cost 16 cents in January 2000 and 14 cents in January 2005. 20 litres of benzene cost 32 cents in 2000 and 27 cents in 2005.

Electoral Information (British Citizens Abroad)

19. Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Electoral Commission relating to the dissemination of information to British citizens living abroad who are entitled to vote in UK elections. [210401]

Mr. Mullin: Officials from my department have been in regular communication with the Electoral Commission in support of their efforts to publicise information to British citizens living abroad who are entitled to vote in UK elections.

Middle East Peace Process

20. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policies are for taking forward the peace process in Israel and the Palestinian territories. [210402]

Mr. Rammell: Our policy, as made clear during my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's visit to Washington on 11–12 November, has been to support Palestinian presidential elections, the improvement of Palestinian infrastructure, and Prime Minister Sharon's disengagement plan. We remain committed to the road map. We are working to ensure that the London meeting on 1 March, which aims to support Palestinian institution building, contributes to progress on the road map.

21. Chris Bryant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his French counterpart on the middle east peace process. [210403]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary spoke to French Foreign Minister Barnier on 15 January regarding the middle east peace process, specifically to discuss the London meeting on 1 March on strengthening the Palestinian Authority. The Foreign Secretary and Foreign Minister Barnier agreed that the London conference should contribute to progress on the road map.

Kashmir

22. Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of recent ministerial visits to Kashmir. [210405]

Mr. Alexander: During my recent visit to Pakistan, I did not visit Pakistan-administered Kashmir. However, I did discuss India/Pakistan relations and Kashmir with Prime Minister Aziz and Foreign Minister Kasuri. I assured them that the United Kingdom fully supported the ongoing dialogue between Pakistan and India. My right hon. Friend Mr. Blunkett and my hon. Friend Mr. O'Brien visited Pakistan-administered Kashmir in February 2004 and December 2003 respectively.

Afghanistan

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the size of the poppy harvest in Afghanistan has been in each year since 2000. [209283]

Mr. Rammell: The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) conducts an annual survey into the level of opium poppy cultivation and production in Afghanistan. It has reported levels of cultivation and production since 1999 as follows:

	Hectares	Tonnes
1999	91,000	4,600
2000	82,000	3,300
2001	8,000	185
2002	74,000	3,400
2003	80,000	3,600
2004	131,000	4,200

The UNODC figures for 1999, 2000 and 2001 were recorded under the Taliban regime. The low level of cultivation and low production figure in 2001 reflect the Taliban ban on opium cultivation; the ban did not however address the underlying causes of poppy cultivation in Afghanistan, which was enforced with a mix of threat and bribery and drove up the price of opium, benefiting those with opium stockpiles.

Detained British Citizens

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidance was issued to British consular staff and others visiting (a) Guantanamo Bay and (b) other places of detention overseas on measures to guard against allegations that they may have implicitly condoned torture and ill treatment or encouraged prisoners to make false confessions; and what plans he has to issue further guidance. [209047]

Mr. Mullin: Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) staff visited the British nationals at Guantanamo Bay to check on their welfare. The staff concerned were aware of the importance of the human rights of the detainees and of the need to report information about this. The visits have been reported to Parliament, to the detainees' families and to Ministers.

UK intelligence personnel also visited Guantanamo to interview detainees to gather information that might prove valuable in the protection of the UK and its citizens. These officials were also aware of the importance of the human rights of the detainees.

In May 2004, the Permanent Under-Secretary of the FCO issued guidance to all staff on reporting torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. This guidance was then included in the FCO Human Rights Guidelines which are available to all staff on the FCO intranet.

Egypt

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Egypt regarding their response to the killing of Christians in El-Kosheh in January 2000. [209564]

Mr. Rammell: The sectarian violence in El-Kosheh in January 2001, which left 20 Christians and one Muslim dead, was deeply concerning. We have followed the case closely and made our concerns known at the time; including visiting the area. We were initially encouraged that the Prosecutor-General persistently sought judicial review of early judgments in the case. However we are disappointed that, due to the Court of Cassation's ruling last year, the legal process is now at an end.

We regularly raise human rights issues with the Egyptian authorities. Most recently we raised our concerns about the requirement to specify religious affiliation on identity cards, which is a concern for minority religious groups. In January 2005 we raised the individual cases of Heidi Salib, Wafaa Constantine and William Shaiboub.

Eritrea

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Eritrea concerning the arrest of 60 members of the Ream Charismatic Church in Asmara. [209703]

Mr. Mullin: We raise the issue of religious freedom with the Eritrean Government regularly. Our Chargé d'Affaires raised this case on 18 January and I raised the issue with President Isaias, in Asmara, during my visit there in January last year. We will continue to make clear our concern.

Geronimo Agency

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what penalty clauses have been included in his Department's contract with the Geronimo PR agency to be effective if the agency fails to achieve the required coverage for the EU and the proposed EU constitution. [210949]

Mr. MacShane: The presence of penalty clauses is the same as for any other standard Central Office of Information contract in line with contracts issued by other Government Departments.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the names are of the employees of the Geronimo agency who (a) presented the company's proposal to the Department and (b) will work on his Department's account. [210950]

Mr. MacShane: The release of the names of the individuals at Geronimo PR is a matter for that company.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the contract between his Department and the Geronimo PR agency. [210951]

Mr. MacShane: The contract between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Geronimo will follow the standard Central Office of Information framework agreement with all of their roster agencies. Further details are commercially sensitive.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list agencies which (a) tendered for and (b) were shortlisted for the contract to promote the EU and the proposed constitution. [210952]

Mr. MacShane: (a) Geronimo PR, Grayling, Weber Shandwick and Harrison Cowley.

(b) Geronimo PR, Grayling, Weber Shandwick and Harrison Cowley.

Guantanamo Bay

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings he has planned with US officials to discuss the status of British nationals held at Guantanamo Bay. [206224]

Mr. Mullin: I refer my hon. Friend to the Statement my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave to the House on 11 January 2005, Official Report, columns 173–74.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK residents with indefinite leave to remain in the UK are held at Guantanamo Bay; and what their names are. [209375]

Mr. Mullin: We are aware of five. In accordance with our obligations under the Data Protection Act 1998, we are not in a position to give their names.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received concerning Guantanamo Bay prisoners who are residents with indefinite leave to remain in the UK. [209376]

Mr. Mullin: We have received representations from some family members, lawyers, MPs and Peers on behalf of the five British residents at Guantanamo Bay that we should provide them with consular assistance.

India/Pakistan

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to facilitate and support talks between India and Pakistan about safeguarding against nuclear conflict. [205908]

Mr. Alexander: We warmly welcome the on-going dialogue between India and Pakistan on nuclear confidence-building measures as part of the composite dialogue process. We hope that both countries will work together to implement swiftly confidence-building measures, e.g pre-notification of missile tests, following their recent meeting on 14–15 December. We continue to discuss issues relating to nuclear non-proliferation with the governments of both countries.

Iran

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's assessment of Iran's nuclear programme. [210388]

Mr. MacShane: We continue to have serious concerns about Iran's nuclear programme. Together with the French and German Governments and representatives of the European Union, we are engaged in dialogue with the Iranian Government in order to resolve these concerns. The Government believe that, to restore confidence in the peaceful nature of Iran's nuclear programme, it is essential for Iran to agree, as part of this process, to cease permanently all enrichment-related and reprocessing activities. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs published on 18 January a White Paper, "Iran's nuclear programme: a collection of documents" which draws together public documents on Iran's nuclear programme since September 2002.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the extent of persecution of Jehovah's Witnesses in Iran. [210118]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer of 24 January 2005]: We have no specific information on the situation of Jehovah's Witnesses in Iran. We continue to receive reports of discrimination against members of Iran's religious minorities, including the surveillance, intimidation, and arrest of members of Iran's Christian communities. We have made clear to the Iranian authorities on many occasions that this is unacceptable, and have called upon them to permit Iranians of all faiths to practice their beliefs freely and without interference, in line with Iran's international obligations.

Jamaica

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Jamaican citizens have been refused entry into the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [209920]

Mr. Mullin: From April 2002-March 2003 the visa section in Kingston received 10,185 applications and refused 2,736; a refusal rate of 26.9 per cent.

Following the introduction of the requirement for all Jamaican nationals (including visitors) to have visas to enter the United Kingdom in January 2003, applications from April 2003-March 2004 went up to 26, 603 and 11,646 were refused; a refusal rate of 43.8 per cent.

Figures on refusal rates for 2004–05 are not yet available. When they are, they will be posted on the UKvisas website at www.ukvisas.gov.uk. Further entry clearance statistics are available on the UKvisas website at "Entry Clearance: Facts and Figures".

Jordan

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Jordan regarding Mrs. Siham Qandah's custody of her children; and if he will make a statement. [209565]

Mr. Mullin: This case remains sub judice within the Islamic Court system in Jordan. Through our embassy in Amman, we continue to follow the legal process and, where appropriate, draw the Jordanian authorities' attention to the strong concerns which the case has raised in the UK and elsewhere, both over the welfare of Mrs. Qandah and her children, and over the underlying principles involved.

Madagascar

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how the UK diplomatic presence in and relations with Madagascar will be maintained if the British embassy is closed; [210081]

(2) if he will appoint a one man diplomatic mission at Chargé d'Affaires level instead of the proposed nomination of an honorary Consul in place of the embassy in Madagascar. [210082]

Mr. Mullin: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary explained in his written statement on 15 December 2004, Official Report, columns 137–40WS, we have decided to close our Embassy in Madagascar, while maintaining an honorary Consul in Antananarivo and non-resident accreditation from Port Louis. This reflects the need to better align our resources with our priorities, to maximise efficiency, and to ensure that the UK has a cost-effective and flexible network of overseas representation.

Palestinian Authority

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Government plans to provide the new Palestinian leadership to carry out internal reforms to strengthen security apparatus in order to tackle powerful warlords and corrupt officials, and establish law and order in Palestinian society. [209035]

Mr. Rammell: We have been providing technical support and assistance to the Palestinian security services in order to help them to effectively tackle terrorism. The UK-supported Ramallah Central Operations Room in the West Bank has already had some success in foiling attacks against Israelis. The London meeting on 1 March is intended to support the new Palestinian leadership in preparing for disengagement and implementing the Roadmap. It therefore includes work to help the Palestinians strengthen their security apparatus, as well as facilitating reform in the fields of governance and the economy. We are committed to working with the Palestinians, our European partners, the US, Egypt and others in order to improve the infrastructure necessary for establishing a Palestinian state.

Proof of Death

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) which (a) Departments, (b) Ministers and (c) officials are involved in the review into the criteria necessary for proof of death abroad in exceptional circumstances following the Asian tsunami disaster; [210103]

(2) what progress has been made in reviewing the criteria necessary for proof of death abroad in exceptional circumstances following the Asian tsunami disaster; [210104]

(3) who will be consulted in the course of the review into the criteria necessary for proof of death abroad in exceptional circumstances following the Asian tsunami disaster; [210105]

(4) what timescale has been set for the review into the criteria necessary for proof of death abroad in exceptional circumstances following the Asian tsunami disaster. [210106]

Mr. Mullin: [holding answer of 24 January 2005]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the written statement my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Mr. Alexander) made on 24 January 2005, Official Report, columns 5–6WS.

South Africa

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of reports of xenophobia in South Africa aimed at refugees from Sudan; what discussions (a) he, (b) members of his Department and (c) representatives of the UK Government have made in regard to this issue to (i) members and (ii) representatives of the Government of South Africa; and if he will make a statement. [206312]

Mr. Mullin: I am aware of a UN High Commission for Refugees report of 15 December describing the experiences of Sudanese refugees in South Africa. We have not discussed these with the South African authorities. But the South African Government is working to address the broad issue of xenophobia in South African society. The UK Government has a regular dialogue with the South African Government on human rights issues, and is engaged in project work in South Africa in this field.

Syria

David Cairns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Syria concerning support for Hezbollah and Hamas. [210399]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised these issues on 18 October 2004 with Syrian Foreign Minister Shara'a during the latter's visit to London.

During this and other discussions with the Syrian Government, we urged Syria to use its influence with Hezbollah to refrain from the use of violence.

We have also regularly raised with Syria the need to address the problems created by rejectionist groups such as Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad.

Trinidad and Tobago

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to review his Department's travel advice in relation to Trinidad and Tobago. [209893]

Mr. Rammell: We keep all Travel Advice under constant review. At a minimum it is reviewed once a month and re-published every three months. The Travel Advice for Trinidad and Tobago was last reviewed on 19 January.

Tsunami Relief

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements were made by the Government to aid British passport holders in the wake of the Asian tsunami. [210413]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer of 24 January]: As soon as the Government received news of the tsunami in the Indian ocean, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) activated its emergency plans for handling a major crisis overseas involving British nationals.

On 26 December, the FCO established temporary offices working in all the affected areas to offer support and assistance to British nationals. Providing this support was the priority of all FCO posts in those areas. Our Embassy in Bangkok and our High Commission in Colombo were reinforced with consular staff from both London and other posts in the region. A rapid deployment team of 18 was sent to Colombo. There are currently 45 staff in Bangkok and 32 in Phuket providing consular assistance.

In the immediate aftermath of the event, FCO staff provided those British nationals in the affected areas with the full range of consular support including helping them to access medical facilities, issuing emergency travel documents and registering missing persons. An FCO charter flight brought 98 passengers back from Thailand on 1 January.

The Government also ensured that there were full reception arrangements at airports for people returning to the UK. This included tailored medical attention where necessary, assistance with getting home and access to psychological and emotional support services. The British Red Cross also established a Help Line for victims of the disaster and their family and a family support network for those affected.

FCO officials and UK police personnel are now working with the families of the victims to repatriate remains where appropriate and to help the injured get home. There are 84 UK police personnel in the affected areas helping to identify people as quickly as possible. Police family liaison officers have been assigned to bereaved families. There are currently over 300 liaison officers assigned to families. The FCO has put together a package of financial and other assistance to those affected by the tsunami. This package includes meeting the cost of repatriating remains; immediate medical expenses for those seriously injured; medical evacuation; long-term psychological support; and return travel for two members of the victim's family to the region and five nights accommodation.

Ukraine

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Governments of Estonia and Latvia about the political situation in Ukraine. [210397]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary and I have discussed Ukraine regularly with Estonian, Latvian and other EU partners over the last few months, most recently at the 13 December General Affairs and External Relations Council. I will be having further talks in Poland and Lithuania this week. Ukraine is also on the agenda for the next General Affairs and External Relations Council on 31 January.

West Papua

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to seek to facilitate dialogue between the Indonesian Government and the Papuan people to find a peaceful resolution to the West Papua conflict. [209003]

Mr. Alexander: We have consistently made clear to the Indonesian Government our support for full implementation of the 2001 Special Autonomy Law. We believe this takes into account the aspirations of the Papuan people and respects Indonesia's territorial integrity. The new Government of President Yudhoyono has publicly committed itself to taking steps to implement this Law. We welcome this.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with the United Nations regarding the possibility of sending UN observers to monitor the human rights situation in West Papua. [209032]

Mr. Alexander: We are not aware of any discussions held with the UN to send Human Rights observers to Papua. We have followed the situation in Papua closely, and continue to make clear to the Indonesian Government our support for full implementation of the 2001 Special Autonomy Law.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Committees of the House

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Leader of the House if he will bring forward proposals to merge the Modernisation of the House of Commons and Procedure Committees. [210426]

Mr. Hain: Decisions about the appointment of select committees are taken at the start of a new Parliament. The re-establishment of the Modernisation Committee would, of course, be subject to the approval of the House, as would any proposal to change the Procedure Committee's terms of reference.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the Memorandum of Understanding on the role of the Physical Integrator as part of the Future Aircraft Carrier project. [203934]

Mr. Ingram: There is no such Memorandum of Understanding. The role of the Physical Integrator (PI) on the Future Aircraft Carrier project will be developed and agreed between Alliance members during the remainder of the assessment phase.

Army Training Ground, Otterburn

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have been (a) killed and (b) injured as a result of accidents during exercises at the Army Training Ground at Otterburn in each of the last 10 years. [209153]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 17 January 2005]: Since 1 January 2000 no service or civilian personnel have been killed and six service personnel have been injured as a result of accidents during exercises at the Army Training Ground at Otterburn. Information regarding deaths and injuries at Otterburn before 2000 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Competitive Tenders

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much work was put out to competitive tender (a) RAF Cottesmore and (b) RAF Marham in (i) 2003 and (ii) 2004. [209518]

Mr. Ingram: None. This excludes contracts awarded in support of station services.

Departmental Efficiency Programme

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the planned headcount changes attributable to his Department's efficiency programme are for the (a) Army Base Repair Organisation, (b) Defence Aviation Repair Agency, (c) Defence Science and Technology Laboratories, (d) Meteorological Office and (e) UK Hydrographic Office for financial years (i) 2005–06, (ii) 2006–07 and (iii) 2007–08. [209332]

Mr. Ingram: The published headcount reductions for the Ministry of Defence Efficiency Programme does not include headcount changes for these agencies.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the planned cashable savings attributable to his Department's efficiency programme are for the (a) Defence Medical Training Agency, (b) Defence Procurement Agency, (c) Defence Storage and Distribution Agency, (d) Defence Transport and Movements Agency and (e) Defence Vetting Agency in financial years (i) 2006–07 and (ii) 2007–08. [209342]

Mr. Caplin: The Ministry of Defence Efficiency Programme brings together those activities which have resulted from strategic level judgements on the modernisation we needed in order to better meet future operational and business needs. Its benefits are tracked principally on a functional basis (e.g. Human Resources, Finance, etc.) rather than at individual budget areas. Further information on the MOD Efficiency Programme and how it will be delivered is contained in the MOD Efficiency Technical Note which was published on 30 October and can be found on the Departmental website at http://www.mod.uk/issues/finance/efficiency.htm.

Eurofighter Typhoon

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) costs and (b) penalties would arise from a decision to cancel Tranche 2 of the Eurofighter Typhoon. [210597]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 January 2005]: Under the international collaborative production arrangements for Typhoon, manufacturing work has been allocated between partner nations in proportion to their respective numerical requirements for the aircraft. Cancellation of the United Kingdom's Tranche 2 order would necessitate re-allocation of workshare to partner nations in order to re-balance these proportions and the UK would be required to compensate the other nations for the extra costs incurred, up to the total amount the UK would have paid had we not cancelled the order.

In addition to these costs, the cancellation of Tranche 2 would result in a failure to equip the Royal Air Force with a key element of its future fighting capability, a significant loss of UK manufacturing and an associated loss of jobs and skills across the European Rapid Reaction Force

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he expects the UK contribution to the European Rapid Reaction Force to be future rapid effect system equipped when that vehicle family enters service. [202986]

Mr. Ingram: There is no standing European Rapid Reaction Force nor any EU agreement to create one. What has sometimes been referred to as a "European Rapid Reaction Force" is, in fact, a catalogue of forces which member states could make available to the EU should they choose to participate in a particular EU-led operation. Any contribution to a particular EU-led operation would depend on the operation's requirements and the availability of forces at the time.

One of the purposes of FRES is to improve the ability of United Kingdom forces to achieve rapid effect by providing a highly capable but rapidly deployable family of vehicles as the central pillar of the Medium Weight Force. Therefore, it is likely that the UK may, in the future, offer FRES equipped forces as part of the EU "catalogue".

Gibraltar Police

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions in (a) the joint negotiating machinery between his Department and the Gibraltar Service Police Association and (b) other forum his Department formally raised its intention to deduct moneys from police officers' pay in relation to rent and other allowances; and if he will place a copy of the minutes relating to such discussions in the Library. [209693]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 20 January 2005]: Officials in Gibraltar wrote to the Chairman of the GSPSA in February 2004 setting out in detail the rationale of the Department's position and explaining that recovery action would only be taken for the last 12 months overpayment. The subject was discussed again at the GSPSA Whitley meeting in May 2004. In June 2004 Officials wrote to each individual affected by the overpayment explaining that recovery action would be taken. A subsequent letter was sent in November 2004 as a result of a recalculation, reconfirming the intent to deduct monies owed. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 20 October 2004, Official Report, column 711W, whereby a copy of the minutes of the GSPSA Whitley Committee meetings were placed in the Library of the House.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place a moratorium on the deduction of Gibraltar Service Police salaries until discussions between the Gibraltar Service Police Association and the Association's solicitor have been concluded; and if he will make a statement. [209695]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 19 January 2005]: No. The Gibraltar Services Police Association has been aware of the Department's intention to recover the overpayment of rent allowance since June 2003.

Iraq

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the free post service to Iraq. [207310]

Mr. Ingram: There are no plans to change the current entitlement to free aerogramme letters (blueys) or their electronic version (eblueys) to service personnel deployed on operations.

In respect of the free postal packet scheme to Iraq which ceased on 8 April 2004, there are no plans to permanently re-instate this service. I refer my hon. Friend to my written ministerial statement of 27 February 2004, Official Report, column 70WS, and subsequent answers of 5 March 2004, Official Report, column 1155W, to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock), 1 April 2004, Official Report, column 1605W, to the hon. Member for Mid-Norfolk (Mr. Simpson), 5 May 2004, Official Report, column 1527W, to the hon. Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Randall), 15 June 2004, Official Report, column 811W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike), 1 September 2004, Official Report, column 713W and 4 October 2004, Official Report, column 1882W to my hon. Friend the Member for Bately and Spen (Mr. Wood).

However, on 3 November 2004 when the Prime Minister announced the temporary reinstatement of the free postal packet scheme for a limited period at Christmas, he did promise a review after the scheme finished (15 December 2004), 3 November 2004, Official Report, column 304.

A formal review cannot be carried out until the detailed costs of the scheme have been captured from the Royal Mail Group, Defence Logistic Agency and British Forces Post Office. This is unlikely to happen before February 2005. However, I can inform the House that over the period 17 November-15 December 2004 when the scheme was in place approximately 112,000 Kg of packets were successfully processed by the British Forces Post Office Depot at Mill Hill so that they would reach service personnel deployed worldwide in time for Christmas.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK service men have been repatriated from service in Iraq since 1 October 2004 because of injury, broken down by type of injury suffered. [209950]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 24 January 2005]: Since 1 October 2004, 82 United Kingdom Service personnel have been evacuated from Iraq as a result of injury. 23 of those injuries are believed to be the result of hostile action. 59 are the result of accidents or other incidents.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which area of responsibility will be allocated to 1st Battalion Royal Highland Fusiliers once they are operational in Iraq. [210379]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The 1st Battalion The Royal Highland Fusiliers (Princess Margaret's Own Glasgow and Ayrshire Regiment) will, once operational, be used to relieve acclimatised theatre troops from static guarding and security tasks at a variety of locations.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions he has visited (a) The Black Watch, (b) The Royal Scots, (c) The Highlanders, (d) The Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, (e) The King's Own Scottish Borderers and (f) The Royal Highland Fusiliers regiments; and where each visit took place. [201569]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Mr. Brown) on 20 December 2004, Official Report, column 1374W.

Parliamentary Questions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what target his Department sets for the maximum acceptable time to respond in full to a parliamentary question; and what percentage of answers given by his Department failed to meet this target in each parliamentary session from 1997–98 to 2003–04. [202557]

Mr. Caplin: Defence Ministers aim to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the day named and endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. Unfortunately this is not always possible, but the Department makes every effort to achieve these timescales.

Information relating to the percentage of answers that failed to meet this target in each parliamentary session from 1997–98 to 2003–04 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Second World War Anniversary

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans the Government have to commemorate on 10 July the 60th anniversary of the ending of the Second World War; and if he will make a statement. [208201]

Mr. Caplin: The events in London on 10 July will begin with a Service of Thanksgiving and Commemoration in Westminster Abbey. This will be followed by a lunch for veterans in the grounds of Buckingham Palace hosted by the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh.

In the afternoon, an event of reminiscence and remembrance will take place on Horse Guards Parade, this will begin with a unique evocation of the period, using entertainment to take veterans back in time. There will then be a period of remembrance encompassing a two minute silence.

The Queen will watch a fly-past of vintage Second World War aircraft from the Palace Balcony. A poppy drop from a Lancaster Bomber will bring the day to a close.

Telephone Numbers

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many non-geographic 0870 telephone numbers are in use by his Department; and what services can be accessed by calling each of them. [205835]

Mr. Caplin: The use of non-geographical 0870 numbers in the Department is determined at the local level in accordance with individual business requirements. Records of non-geographic 0870 numbers and details of services accessed through them are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much revenue his Department has received from the use of non-geographic 0870 telephone numbers for the period 1 October 2003 to 30 September 2004. [205845]

Mr. Caplin: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Travel Costs

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total travel costs to his Department have been for (a) Ministers, (b) special advisers and (c) officials for each year since 1997. [203783]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 9 December 2004]: Since 1999, the Government publishes on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. Copies of the lists are available in the Library of the House. The travel costs for those special advisers who accompanied their Minister is included in the annual list on Overseas Travel by Cabinet Ministers. Details on the cost of domestic travel for Ministers and special advisers is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All travel is undertaken in accordance with the guidelines set out in the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Tsunami (Military Assistance)

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military (a) assistance and (b) aid the UK has provided to each country following the tsunami disaster; what plans he has made for further military (i) assistance and (ii) aid to each country; and if he will make a statement. [209329]

Mr. Ingram: The following military assets were assigned to assist in the relief operation in the Indian ocean.

The frigate HMS Chatham (which carries two Lynx helicopters) was redirected to the area on 30 December, arriving on 3 January; and the support ship RFA Diligence, already in the region, joined Chatham off Sri Lanka on 5 January. These vessels have undertaken a number of relief tasks, including assistance to the town of Baticoloa in the east of Sri Lanka, and provision of engineers to the Maldives to assist with refurbishment of generators and desalination equipment. Chatham and Diligence have worked closely with an Observation, Liaison and Reconnaissance Team (OLRT) which deployed to Colombo on 31 December, part of which also deployed to the Maldives on 6 January. Both Chatham and Diligence, as well as the OLRT, have now completed their tasking and are leaving the area.

Of the five C-130 aircraft made available to support DFID, two have been used so far: one to move aid supplies between Norway and Denmark, and one to transport equipment to Sri Lanka. The larger C-17 aircraft has been used across the affected region. The Tristar has been used to bring tents and fuel into Penang for onward transport into the affected areas.

A further OLRT deployed to Indonesia on 2 January, including to the Aceh region. MOD liaison officers have been deployed with the US, Australian and Indonesian military headquarters in the region.

Two Bell 212 helicopters from the Gurkha Garrison in Brunei are currently conducting recce, humanitarian assistance and liaison tasks with the Australian forces in the Aceh region.

Further, small, deployments of niche capabilities such as logistics planners and engineers have also taken place in response to DfID and OLRT requests.

The MOD continues to work closely with DFID to determine the requirement for military assistance over the coming period.

Wounded British Soldiers

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which facilities wounded British soldiers are being treated in the UK. [210194]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 24 January 2005]: When casualties are aeromedically evacuated to the United Kingdom, the decision as to which hospital they should be treated is made in conjunction with the Department of Health (DoH) on the basis of clinical need and bed availability. However the majority are treated at Selly Oak hospital in Birmingham.

Those requiring specialist treatment will be referred to the most appropriate facility for their needs.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Bottled Water

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) how many bottles of water were purchased by Departments of the House last year for consumption other than in restaurants and cafeterias; and what the cost was; [210271]

(2) if the Commission will make it their policy to replace bottled water with tap water in (a) Westminster Hall, (b) committee rooms and (c) other meeting rooms. [210272]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Prior to 1994, the SAA Department provided tap water for Committee and meeting rooms. A trial was conducted in that year in response to requests from Members who frequently found the tap water stale and undrinkable. It was found that the use of bottled water was significantly more convenient and required fewer staff, as well as being more hygienic and better tasting. Subsequent experience with operating this system has confirmed these benefits. They are particularly valuable given the increase in the number of committee rooms following the opening of Portcullis House and the earlier sittings of committees under the revised sitting hours. For these reasons there are no plans to return to the previous arrangements.

During financial year 2003–04 the SAA Department spent £11,530 on water for Westminster Hall, committee and other meeting rooms, equating to approximately 25,000 bottles.

Catering (Food Waste)

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what the policy is on the disposal of (a) untouched food left over from receptions in the House and (b) residuary food waste from catering outlets. [210273]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The House of Commons Refreshment Department is required to take all reasonable precautions and exercise due diligence to ensure that their premises and working practices comply with the provisions of the Food Safety Act 1990 and associated regulations. Its food disposal policy is designed to meet these legal obligations and to take all possible precautions against the risk of causing food poisoning to any person consuming food prepared by or sold by the Refreshment Department.

The policy on the disposal of food left over from receptions is that same as the policy on the disposal of left-over foods from its catering outlets. Fresh-cooked foods that have retained a core temperature of 65°C or above while on display are chilled rapidly and are then either held chilled or frozen for re-use. Hot foods that have fallen below this safe temperature, or that have been re-heated, are disposed of with the general refuse. Chilled foods that have been maintained at a temperature of 8°C or below are retained and re-offered for sale provided that they are within any "use-by" date stamp. Foods which have exceeded 8°C are also disposed of with the general waste.

Although the Department makes every effort to re-use foods that are still safe to consume, there are some occasions on which this is not possible. From time to time, the Department has contacted charities assisting the homeless to discuss the possibility of donating left-over food. Such inquiries to-date have been unsuccessful for two principal reasons: the charities (as part of their own due diligence procedures required under the food hygiene legislation) are unwilling to accept foods that have been prepared in our own kitchens; and, the charities have been unable or unwilling to make collection arrangements for any packaged foods because of the infrequency and relatively low quantity of such food being available to them.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Coal Mines

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) whether the extinguishing of burning coal mines falls within the scope of the clean development mechanisms introduced by the Kyoto Protocol; [209841]

(2) what assistance his Department has provided to developing countries seeking to extinguish burning coal mines. [209842]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In 1997, the Kyoto Protocol established the Clean Development Mechanism (CDM). The purpose of the CDM is to enable developed countries and economies in transition (more precisely, those countries that are included in Annex I to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change) to meet their greenhouse gas (GHG) reduction targets (5 per cent. compared to 1990 levels by the period 2008–12) at lowest possible cost by undertaking projects in developing countries. To be eligible under the CDM, projects must also assist in the achievement of sustainable development, and contribute to the attainment of the environmental goals of the Framework Convention.

To fall within the scope of the CDM, any project proposal to extinguish burning coal mines would need to meet these three criteria. It would further ~~need to be~~ shown that the resulting emissions reductions were "additional" (i.e. going beyond what would have happened in the absence of the project) and calculated in accordance with an approved CDM methodology. To date, the Department for International Development (DFID) has not received any requests from developing countries to provide assistance to extinguish coal mine fires. We would encourage any country seeking international support to consider using the CDM.

Commission for Africa

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will publish the minutes of meetings of the Commission for Africa. [210298]

Hilary Benn: Reports of the two Commission meetings which have taken place are available on the Commission for Africa website. www.commissionforafrica.org.

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on what date he expects the report of the Commission for Africa to be published. [210299]

Hilary Benn: The members of the Commission for Africa are still working on their report and have not yet set a date for publication. Subject to discussion at the next full meeting of the Commission in February, the report may be published around the middle of March.

Debt Relief

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his budget is for spending on heavily indebted poor countries debt relief in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08 from (i) existing departmental spending plans and (ii) sources additional to those plans. [210300]

Hilary Benn: DFID's contribution to HIPC debt relief covers the UK pledge to the HIPC Trust Fund and the UK's policy of going beyond the requirements of HIPC to cancel 100 per cent. of all bilateral debts to HIPC countries. The vast majority of HIPC debt write-off is financed by the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD).

For the HIPC Trust Fund, DFID has budgeted £29 million in 2005–06, £20 million in 2006–07 and £20 million in 2007–08.

It is not possible to predict accurately how much the 100 per cent. bilateral policy will cost DFID because the amount that will be cancelled under HIPC requirements (financed by ECGD) is not yet known. DFID has provisionally budgeted £14 million in 2005–06, £25 million in 2006–07 and £10 million in 2007–08.

In addition, many HIPC countries will benefit from the UK's new multilateral debt relief initiative. The total DFID budget for this initiative is £30 million in 2005–06, £40 million in 2006–07 and £50 million in 2007–08. HIPC countries account for approximately 70 per cent. of the total cost.

DFID has no budgets additional to DFID's existing spending plans.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many of his Department's employees in each country in receipt of development aid from the UK were of (a) UK nationality, (b) local origin and (c) other origin in the latest year for which figures are available. [210317]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Details of DFID current staff shown by local origin and by UK and other nationality are set out in the following table. We are unable to provide figures for UK nationality as a separate category as such data is provided by staff on a voluntary basis and thus any figures may not be completely accurate.

Iraq

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in determining the details of the system replacing food rations with cash payments in Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [209947]

Hilary Benn: The Government of Iraq has said that it is committed over the medium term, to enhancing the effectiveness of social safety nets in Iraq by moving from a food ration system, which handed out virtually free food to the entire population of Iraq, to a cash distribution system targeted at the poor and unemployed. The aim will be to help domestic agriculture, encourage private trade and remove price distortions, at the same time as ensuring that families in need are properly safeguarded. The details have yet to be determined, and are expected to be followed up by the Iraqi Transitional Government after the forthcoming elections. DFID supports the reform in principle. DFID staff and advisers will continue to maintain contact with the Iraqi authorities, and with interested international organisations including the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the World Bank and the World Food Programme, to ensure that the interests of poor and vulnerable families in Iraq are protected.

Mauritania

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment his Department has made of the impact on (a) food supplies and (b) the economic situation of individuals in southern Mauritania of the locust invasion of 2004; and if he will make a statement; [210338]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the (a) economic, (b) social and (c) humanitarian situation in (i) Mauritania and (ii) southern Mauritania with reference to (A) the recurrent drought since 2001 and (B) the 2004 locust invasion; and if he will make a statement. [210339]

Hilary Benn: Mauritania is poor and often short of its food staples. A high proportion of the population relies on agricultural production to satisfy its food and income needs. During prolonged drought, communities may go hungry through poor yields or lack of recourse to alternative sources of income. In 2004 Mauritania was badly affected by the worst invasion of locusts in West Africa for 15 years. Millet and legumes suffered serious damage; sorghum and rice were less affected. Access to food is already posing problems for many households, both rural and urban, which are directly or indirectly affected by the crisis. The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) estimates that 2004 production will only amount to 64 per cent. of the 5-year average. More food imports, including food aid, may be required. DFID stands ready to contribute to urgent humanitarian needs in Mauritania, and other countries in West Africa.

DFID provided £1.5 million to the FAO's emergency international appeal for locust control and eradication operations in West Africa in 2004. UK funding assisted the immediate emergency control of swarms until December 2004. The European Commission is providing €23.5 million (£16.33 million, UK share about £3 million) to assist those countries worst affected. The FAO operations may need to be continued in northern Mauritania to counter remaining immature swarms gathered there, and also in the Mahgreb countries until the spring, to reduce the scale of potential re-infestation of the Sahel in summer 2005.

In 2002–03 DFID contributed £1 million to the World Food Programme's regional appeal, which covered five countries in the region, but was mainly focused on Mauritania where the drought situation was most severe. DFID also contributed £0.5 million to an Oxfam appeal focused on the most badly affected areas in the south of the country.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment his Department has made of the UN World Food Programme appeal on 17 January for assistance to Mauritania over the next three years; what plans his Department has made to respond to the appeal; what changes are planned for the budget to be allocated to Mauritania; and if he will make a statement; [210340]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the food-for-work projects envisaged by the UN World Food Progamme for the distribution of food aid in Mauritania; and if he will make a statement. [210341]

Hilary Benn: The UN World Food Programme (WFP) appeal for US$30.8 million for Mauritania issued on 17 January aims to provide food aid to 400,000 people in 33 of the most vulnerable communities until 2007. About 60 per cent. of the proposal is for creation of productive assets through food for work activities, the construction of small dams, and improving village water supplies. These activities may be useful, but DFID believes that the sustained developmental impact of food aid is limited. DFID stands ready to contribute to urgent humanitarian needs in Mauritania, and other countries in West Africa.

DFID does not have a bilateral development partnership with Mauritania, but does provide a significant amount through multilateral channels, mainly the EC programme, of which the UK share amounted to some £6 million in 2003. We have also provided humanitarian assistance in recent years in response to the severe drought and food shortages.

Millennium Development Goals

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what proportion of UK aid channelled through the EU was spent in each of the last five years on schemes designed to achieve the millennium development goals. [210309]

Hilary Benn: The European Commission (EC) does not collate and publish data linking expenditure to specific activities in support of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs). However, in 2003, the EC adopted performance indicators based on the MDGs to measure progress in partner countries in receipt of EC development assistance.

In October 2004, the European Commission issued a report on the EC contribution to attaining the MDGs 2000–04. This report will inform the UN 2005 Millennium Review Summit in September 2005. The report does not make an attempt to attribute directly EC funds to MDG objectives, but does stress the importance that the EC gives to the MDGs and outlines further actions currently foreseen to promote their implementation.

The report appears on the Commission's website: http://www.europa.eu.int.comm/development/body/publications/desript/pub7_2_en.cfm.

Secondments

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the people working within his Department on secondment from the private sector, broken down by (a) the organisation or industry they came from and (b) the policy responsibilities they have been given. [208623]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: On 1 January 2005, the Department for International Development (DFID) had two people on secondment from the private sector, as follows:

1. Jeff Delmon, seconded from Allen and Overy, working in the Water, Energy and Minerals team on using finance and private sector investment to meet the needs of the poor in water and sanitation.
2. Charles Lutyens, seconded from Rio Tinto plc, working in the International Financial Institutions Department on private sector policy issues.

St. Helena

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the availability of fresh water on the island of St. Helena. [210242]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: A period of very dry weather led to increased demand on fresh water supplies in St. Helena during the recent holiday period. Within an area that is supplied by the Hutts Gate water reticulation system, this created a water shortage. Water bowsers were introduced for one day only, and a hosepipe ban was imposed in the area on 5 January 2005. Supplies are now sufficient to cope with demand. Water use restrictions have not been required in other areas of St. Helena.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he expects to make a decision on air access for the island of St. Helena; and if he will make a statement. [210245]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Options to maintain future access for St. Helena are under consideration.

Decisions will be taken, in consultation with the St. Helena Government, as soon as it is possible to do so.

Sudan

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much departmental funding is being spent in Sudan on the road verification contract implemented by the South African commercial company Mechem; how many mines have been found by (a) vehicle mounted detection systems, (b) dogs and (c) manual deminers working for Mechem; what width of either side of the centre line of the road is being cleared in accordance with the Mechem contract; and what width either side of the centre line of the road is required for the development agency GTZ to rebuild the road to the specifications recommended by the UN World Food Programme. [209615]

Hilary Benn: The total amount of DFID funding allocated to the MECHEM road clearance contract to date is £1 million.

58 anti-tank mines and 169 items of Unexploded Ordnance (UXO) have been found by the system, which comprises a combination of mechanical detection, dogs and manual demining. These three systems are used in an integrated manner and it is not possible to credit any one individual system as being responsible for locating mines and UXO.

The original project called for four metres of clearance either side of the centre line. Following a request from the World Food Programme (WFP), which has contracted a company, GTZ, to undertake a temporary rehabilitation on the road, it was agreed to extend clearance to 6 metres either side of the centre line.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's estimate is of the number of (a) refugees in Chad, (b) internally displaced persons in Darfur, (c) refugees in Chad receiving aid, (d) internally displaced persons receiving aid in Darfur, (e) civilians killed in fighting in Darfur since the beginning of 2005 and (f) civilians injured in fighting in Darfur since the beginning of 2005. [210336]

Hilary Benn: According to the December 2004 UN humanitarian profile 203,000 Sudanese refugees have fled to Eastern Chad and are registered in camps. The number of refugees living on the border area outside camps is estimated by the United Nations High Commissioner of Refugees (UNHCR) at 15,000.

The UN estimates that over 1.66 million people have been internally displaced in Darfur. A further 530,000 people have been affected by the conflict and are in need of assistance; thus giving a total figure of 2.19 million.

According to the UNHCR, all 203,000 refugees in camps in Chad are in receipt of food and non-food assistance. Those residing outside camps are receiving some assistance from NGOs.

The UN estimated that 1.34 million of the conflict affected population in Darfur received food assistance. Shelter and non-food items were provided to 1.13 million internally displaced people.

There are no reliable figures of civilians killed or injured in 2005 available yet. We are expecting to gain a better understanding of the situation in the next few months when the World Health Organisation completes its next mortality survey.

Tsunami

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's medium and long-term plans are to assist in the reconstruction of countries hit by the tsunami. [210394]

Hilary Benn: In response to the tsunami disaster which followed the earthquake in South East Asia, the Department for International Development has committed £75 million towards the immediate and medium term needs. This assistance is being channelled through United Nations agencies, the Red Cross Movement, non-governmental organisations and by DFID direct action. Of this, £40 million has been pledged as the UK contribution to the UN flash appeal. Requests for support from non-governmental organisations are still being received and we are continuing our direct action in support of priority needs. We estimate that the combined value of these will be about £25 million. The balance is being provided through the Red Cross, local initiatives being considered by DFID country offices, and the Ministry of Defence to cover the marginal costs of their operation.

In addition to the £75 million already committed for immediate and medium term needs, DFID is preparing plans to support longer-term rehabilitation and reconstruction. DFID's focus is expected to be on support to rebuilding livelihoods and services for poor people in affected countries. The governments concerned are currently completing needs assessments with the support of the World Bank and others, and DFID will consider how we can best channel our support once we have the completed assessments of need.

We will work to ensure that the views of the poorest and most vulnerable are taken into account throughout the process of rehabilitation.

It is clear that there needs to be an early warning system and more effective disaster response for the Indian Ocean and probably other areas too. The Association of South East Asian Nations has already committed to a system for their region, and the UK is ready to provide support and contribute to funding. Last week, DFID's parliamentary Under Secretary of State, attended the Kobe World Disaster Reduction Conference which discussed the setting up of a framework to achieve a global warning system covering all natural hazards, and all countries by June 2007.

Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when he expects to announce the Government's plans for long-term assistance for the reconstruction of countries affected by the Asian earthquake and floods. [210404]

Hilary Benn: The governments affected are currently completing assessments of the longer-term rehabilitation and reconstruction needs with the support of the World Bank and other donors. We expect these to be ready in the next few weeks. DFID will make an announcement of plans for supporting the longer-term efforts—which will be additional to the £75 million already committed for immediate and medium-term needs—once we have a clear idea of the need, and of the delivery mechanisms preferred by the governments concerned. DFID will work to ensure that the views of the poorest and most vulnerable are taken into account throughout the process of rehabilitation. It will be important that the donor response is well co-ordinated. DFID will also work to ensure that the UN relief effort is sustained and that there is a smooth transition from the recovery phase to longer-term rehabilitation.

Water Privatisation

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the Government's policy is on whether to support within the EU the inclusion of a requirement for countries to privatise their water delivery under the terms of GATS. [210306]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID's overall objective in the water sector is to ensure that poor people lead a healthier and more productive life by increasing their access to safe drinking water supplies.

It is for this reason that DFID believes that there is an important role for the private sector to play in helping meet these targets (and the Millennium Development Goals) through providing investment and sharing technical expertise and more efficient management practices.

The GATS negotiations are a request and offer process hence there is nothing under the GATS that compels countries to liberalise the water sector if it is not in their national interest. Governments remain free to, and should, regulate to address market failures and national policy objectives.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who signed Council Decision 2004/804/EC L356 volume 47 of 1 December on behalf of the Government of Zimbabwe; where the signing took place; and whether sanctions were lifted to enable this procedure to take place. [207131]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

Mr. Gift Punungwe, the Zimbabwean ambassador in Brussels, signed Council Decision 2004/804/EC L356 volume 47 of 1 December on behalf of the Government of Zimbabwe. EU sanctions were not lifted to enable this procedure to take place, and did not need to be lifted. Mr. Punungwe is not on the EU's visa ban list.

TRANSPORT

A15

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what requests for funding he has received from local authorities to (a) widen and (b) dual the A15 in Lincolnshire. [210424]

Charlotte Atkins: I have received no request for funding from local authorities to either (a) widen or (b) dual the A15 in Lincolnshire.

A3

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on negotiations between the Highways Agency and Balfour Beatty on the future of the A3 Hindhead Road Tunnel. [208758]

Mr. Darling: There have been no formal negotiations between the Highways Agency and Balfour Beatty on the future of the A3 Hindhead Road Tunnel. However, discussions have started on the programming and delivery of the scheme, following the outcome of the 2004 Spending Review announcement.

Dana Footbridge

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what improvements Network Rail plan to carry out to the Dana footbridge. [209723]

Mr. McNulty: This is an operational matter for Network Rail who will write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Policies (Clwyd, South)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Clwyd, South constituency, the effects on Clwyd, South of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [210321]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department has put in place a considerable programme of improvements across a wide range of transport policy areas since 1997. I am confident that the Clwyd, South constituency will have benefited from these. For example, the injury totals for all road casualties in Great Britain fell from 327,803 in 1997 to 290,607 in 2003, and the numbers of children aged under 16 years killed or seriously injured on our roads fell from 6,452 in 1997 to 4,100 in 2003. On our railways, passenger kilometres have increased from 32.1 billion in 1996–07 to 40.9 billion in 2003–04, a rise of 27 per cent. In terms of improvements to air quality, emissions of the UK's two main pollutants—nitrous oxides and particles—fell by 31 per cent. and 27 per cent. respectively between 1997 and 2002.

Responsibility for a number of transport functions has been devolved to the Welsh Assembly Government. For example, it is the Assembly that provides funding to local authorities in Wales in support of their local transport plans.

Finally, the Department for Transport's website also contains data on transport trends over the past 20 years at http://www.dft.gov.uk.

Departmental Staff

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of his Department's staff is based in London. [208041]

Charlotte Atkins: Information on regional distribution of staff is available in the Libraries of both Houses, and also at http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_information/statistical_information/statistics/contents_forcivilservice_statistics_2003_report/index.asp.

Figures relating to 1 April 2004 are due to be published during February 2004.

Edinburgh-Paris Rail Link

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the viability of a direct rail link between Edinburgh and Paris. [209626]

Mr. McNulty: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions commissioned Arthur D. Little to make a comprehensive analysis of the costs and benefits of the options for Regional Eurostar services and their report, "Review of Regional Eurostar Services" was published on 17 February 2000. It concluded that there was not a positive economic business case for any of four options for direct regional services to Paris, including from Glasgow or Edinburgh. The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) has reviewed the market for direct international regional services, including demand from Glasgow via Edinburgh and the east coast main line, and has concluded that in terms of likely demand the position has if anything worsened.

EU Presidency

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Government's priorities for the Transport, Telecommunications and Energy Council during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the European Union will be; and if he will make a statement. [209559]

Mr. McNulty: The overall Transport Council agenda for 2005 is outlined within the Luxembourg-UK Annual Operating Programme (AOP), copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Ongoing work includes; the Third Railway "package"; the framework for charging heavy goods vehicles for the use of certain infrastructures; and the European satellite radio navigation system "Galileo". New legislative proposals may also be brought forward by the Commission, possibly including: airport slot allocation; extension of scope of the European Aviation Safety Agency; access to air transport for passengers with reduced mobility; and maritime safety proposals ("Erika III").

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, leads on the telecommunications and energy aspects of the Transport, Telecommunications and Energy Council.

In the telecoms part it is expected that the e-Europe strategy up to 2010 will be taken forward and concluded, and that the future direction of the existing Universal Services Directive will be discussed. In the energy part of the TTE Council it is expected that the End Use Efficiency and Energy Services Directive and the revised Energy Labelling Framework Directive will be taken forward, and any new proposals and communications put forward by the Commission ahead of the December TTE Council might be discussed.

The final agenda for the UK presidency cannot yet be decided. It will be determined to a large extent by the agenda we inherit from the current presidency, and when specific Commission proposals are published.

Eurostar Platforms

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will enable the Eurostar platforms at Waterloo Station to be made available to serve South West Trains passengers after April 2007; [209793]

(2) if he will provide a new separation system at Clapham Junction to enable commuter trains to gain access to the disused Eurostar platforms after April 2007. [209794]

Mr. McNulty: Officials are working with the Strategic Rail Authority on a review of the possible future uses of Waterloo International station and associated infrastructure after Eurostar transfers its operations to St. Pancras. An announcement will be made in due course.

Hazel Grove Bypass

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will make a decision on authorising a public inquiry into the route of the A555, Hazel Grove Bypass; and if he will make a statement. [210049]

Mr. Jamieson: The A523/A555 Poynton Bypass, A6 Stockport North/South Bypass and the A555 Manchester Airport Link Road West are included in the Stockport Development Plan and it will be for the local authorities to determine the priority and timetable to implement the schemes. Until the highway authority submits any statutory Orders to the Secretary of State for Transport for confirmation for the scheme(s) it is not possible to say whether Public Inquiries will be decided upon or, if that were to be so, when they would be.

IT Projects

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list his Department's IT projects for each year since 1997, broken down by (a) amount spent, (b) purpose, (c) cost of over-run and (d) time of over-run. [205789]

Charlotte Atkins: The requested information has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Pay Television Subscriptions

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many pay television subscriptions the Department had in each year since 1997; and what the cost was in each year. [207663]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport was formed in May 2002 and as a result the information provided only relates from the year 2002–03 onwards.

The only pay television subscriptions the Department had during 2002–03 and 2003–04 were situated at its headquarters buildings in London where there were 30 NTL boxes providing access to satellite channels at a cost of £11,000 per year for the years 2002–03 and 2003–04.

Rail Safety

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the safety of passengers who are (a) sitting and (b) standing in the event of (i) a rail crash and (ii) a derailment. [208509]

Mr. McNulty: A report by the Health and Safety Executive in 1999, entitled 'Implications of overcrowding on railways', concluded that whether a passenger on a train involved in an incident is sitting or standing makes little difference to the overall severity of any injuries sustained. A copy of this report is available in the House Library.

As part of the follow-up to the Ufton Nervet derailment, the Rail Safety and Standards Board is looking at seatbelts on trains. At the same time, it is also researching passenger survivability issues.

Railways

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what he expects the total cost of the Crossrail project will be; what percentage of this money will be provided by the Government; what percentage will be provided by private finance; and what form the private finance will take. [209428]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the written statement on Crossrail that the Secretary of State for Transport made on 20 July 2004, Official Report, column 23WS.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Passenger In Excess of Capacity levels were for fast and semi-fast services into London Paddington from (a) Maidenhead and (b) Twyford in the latest period for which figures are available, broken down by (i) morning and (ii) evening peak time. [210442]

Mr. McNulty: For trains calling at Maidenhead the autumn 2004 figures were 3.1 per cent. in the morning peak and 1.7 per cent. in the evening peak. For trains calling at Twyford the figures were 3.1 per cent. in the morning peak and 0.8 per cent. in the evening peak.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Passenger In Excess of Capacity levels for commuter journeys into London Paddington were in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by (i) morning and (ii) evening peak time. [210443]

Mr. McNulty: The autumn 2004 figures for First Great Western Link were 2.5 per cent. in the morning peak, 1.5 per cent. in the evening peak, and 2.1 per cent. for both peaks combined. This compares with the contractual thresholds of 4.5 per cent. for either peak in isolation or 3 per cent. for both peaks combined. First Great Western are not subject to PIXC.

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether links to and from the Tees Valley was a criterion in the recent East Coast Mainline franchise bid; and if he will make a statement. [210615]

Mr. McNulty: Services to the Tees Valley from the East Coast Main Line will continue to be provided at Darlington by Northern Rail The 'base case' specification (present service levels with minor alterations) contained within the Invitation to Tender for the new InterCity East Coast franchise does not contain any requirement to offer direct services to the Tees Valley.

Road Accidents

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned on the survival rates of drivers and passengers in different types and makes of vehicle in each type of road accident. [210679]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department has no research on the survival rates of drivers and passengers in different types and makes of vehicle in each type of road accident. Nor has the Department recently commissioned any research into this. Estimates have been produced for the risk of driver injury in popular models of car if they are involved in a two-car injury accident. A report on the study is published on the DfT website.

Speed Restrictions

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what speed restrictions may be imposed on vehicles and bicycles using by-ways open to all traffic. [210448]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 24 January 2005]: Local highway authorities are responsible for setting local speed limits on their roads, depending on local needs. This includes any by-ways that may be considered part of the public highway. They can introduce speed limits from 20 mph to 60 mph without the need for consent from the Secretary of State. Speed limits below 20 mph would require consent from the Secretary of State.

Telephone Usage

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many non-geographic 0870 telephone numbers are in use by his Department; and what services can be accessed by calling each of them. [205831]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport headquarters do not have any 0870 telephone numbers in use.

VOSA have two 0870 numbers in use and DVLA have 14.

Transport Industry Support

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on Government support for the transport industry in the last financial year. [210904]

Charlotte Atkins: The Government's strategy for transport was set out in the White Paper, "The Future of Transport", published in July 2004. At the end of the financial year the Department will be publishing its Annual Report which will set out what financial and other support has been provided for transport during 2004–05.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Angela Cannings Case

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether cases similar to the Angela Cannings case are subject to non-judicial investigations. [210002]

Paul Goggins: There are currently no other cases, similar to that of Angela Cannings, being considered for eligibility for compensation.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons were for his decision not to offer financial compensation to Mrs. Angela Cannings for wrongful conviction and imprisonment. [210003]

Paul Goggins: Angela Cannings has not been awarded a payment of compensation for her wrongful conviction, as she did not meet the criteria of section 133 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 for a statutory payment of compensation for her wrongful conviction. Nor did she meet the criteria for an ex-gratia payment of compensation under the terms of the then Home Secretary's statement to the House of Commons on 29 November 1985, Official Report, columns 691–92.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work of crime and disorder reduction partnerships in aiding co-ordination between different agencies in tackling housing-related antisocial behaviour. [204537]

Ms Blears: The Government recognises that partnership working at a local level is the key to tackling crime and antisocial behaviour effectively. The TOGETHER campaign, which targets a wide range of practitioners, including social landlords, is about ensuring that all agencies work together in delivering effective interventions.

We are supporting both social landlords and other agencies in identifying and delivering local solutions to local problems by working together within the framework that Crime and Disorder Partnerships provide.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in (a) West Derbyshire Constituency and (b) Derbyshire since their introduction. [207456]

Ms Blears: Anti-social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) have been available to the courts since 1 April 1999. From commencement, up to 30 June 2004 (latest available), the Home Office has been notified of 36 ASBOs issued within Derbyshire. Of these, three orders were issued, where restrictions have been imposed in Amber Valley borough council area, and six where restrictions have been imposed in Derbyshire Dales district council area (parts of which make up the West Derbyshire constituency).

Data up to 30 September 2004 will be available shortly.

Asylum Seekers

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers have been removed to Zimbabwe since 16 November 2004. [210514]

Mr. Browne: In the period 16 November to 31 December 2004, inclusive, 40 asylum applicants were removed to Zimbabwe from the UK. This includes persons who left the UK under assisted voluntary return schemes organised by the International Organisation for Migration, and those persons who departed voluntarily after enforcement action had been initiated.

This information has not been quality assured and should be treated as provisional management information only.

National Statistics on the number and nationality of asylum applicants removed from the UK during the final quarter of 2004 will be published on the Home Office website on 22 February 2005 www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria his officials use to (a) assess and (b) substantiate accounts of torture and political persecution given by Zimbabwean asylum seekers. [210774]

Mr. Browne: Asylum caseworkers consider the applicant's written and oral evidence in the light of the available sources of information about the country situation and particular incidents, taking account also of any medical evidence of torture, before deciding whether the individual has a well-founded fear of persecution and should be recognised as a refugee under the terms of the 1951 Convention.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will chair the community liaison group for the accommodation centre for asylum-seekers in Bicester; and whether the chair will be elected. [210889]

Mr. Browne: The chair has not yet been appointed. It is expected that the chair will be selected by the members of the group.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will appoint the independent Minister of Accommodation Centres for asylum seekers. [210987]

Mr. Browne: We intend to ensure that the monitor is appointed in good time for him or her to be able to monitor the operation of accommodation centres from the date at which the first centre is open.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will appoint the community liaison manager for the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester; to whom the community liaison manager will be answerable to; and by whom they will be paid. [210988]

Mr. Browne: GSL (UK) Ltd. will appoint a community liaison manager who will deal with local enquiries during the construction phase. He or she will be answerable to the Home Office and paid by GSL (UK) Ltd.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the contractors will be represented on the community liaison group of the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester. [210989]

Mr. Browne: Yes. The contractor will both establish and be represented on the group.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what grade his Department will be represented on the community liaison group for the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester. [210990]

Mr. Browne: The Home Office will be represented by a deputy director or assistant director of the UK Immigration Service.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representation there will be for elected councillors from (a) the councils of (i) Ambros, (ii) Arncott, (iii) Blackthorn and (iv) Piddington, (b) Bicester town council, (c) Cherwell district council and (d) Oxfordshire county council of the Community Liaison Group for the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester. [210991]

Mr. Browne: Representation on the community liaison group has not yet been decided; GSL (UK) Ltd. is actively seeking interest.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) clergy, (b) voluntary organisations, (c) residents and (d) local service providers will be included in the membership of the Community Liaison Group for the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester; and how they will be chosen. [210992]

Mr. Browne: Representation on the community liaison group has not yet been decided; GSL (UK) Ltd. is actively seeking interest.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will determine who the key people from the local community are for inclusion in the Community Liaison Group for the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester. [210993]

Mr. Browne: GSL (UK) Ltd. will invite representation from the local community.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will provide the secretariat for the Community Liaison Group for the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester. [210994]

Mr. Browne: The secretariat will be provided by GSL (UK) Ltd.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual budget will be of the Community Liaison Group for the accommodation centre for asylum seekers at Bicester; and who will provide the funding for the group. [210995]

Mr. Browne: The administrative costs are expected to be minimal. The funding will be provided by GSL (UK) Ltd.

Begging

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consultation he has had with beggars in drawing up measures to tackle the problem of begging; [206583]

(2) how the Department measures the effectiveness of the use of powers to deal with begging; [206588]

(3) if he will make a statement on the measures which are in place to deal with the problem of begging; [206591]

(4) if he will make a statement on the alternatives to using the criminal justice system to tackle the problem of begging. [206592]

Ms Blears: We need to ensure that we address the underlying causes of those who beg. If we help those who beg because of drug use to get access to effective treatment we help them, help communities and help those intimidated by begging. Better use of enforcement powers and alternative giving schemes will help to address the underlying and immediate problems.

Begging is already a criminal offence, by making the offence of begging recordable the offender's details will be entered on the police national computer and there are powers to enable the offender to be finger-printed. This enables the police to identify repeat offenders and the courts will be able to issue community sentences, rather than fines, for those convicted a fourth time for an offence. This may include drug treatment. Since the end of July this year, begging has been included as a trigger offence under the Criminal Justice Interventions Programme. This will mean that those charged with begging will be drug tested and will enhance their opportunities for the underlying causes of their behaviour to be addressed and to route out repeat offending by offering treatment.

Members of the public often find begging intimidating. A MORI survey carried out in August 2003 for the Antisocial Behaviour Unit at the Home Office found that two thirds of respondents resent being approached by those who beg and over half will not use a cash point if someone is begging near it.

The Antisocial Behaviour Unit at the Home Office are working with five areas around the country: Brighton, Bristol, Camden, Westminster and Leeds to tackle begging.

The approach developed in these areas involves a 'twin track' approach of enforcement and support; addressing the underlying causes of begging such as drugs as well as taking enforcement action when people don't heed advice or offers of support.

Initial findings from the trailblazing areas indicate a reduction in begging and positive outcomes for former beggars. More detailed findings from these areas will emerge in March 2006.

Car Theft

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many car thefts there were in each London borough in (a) each year since 2001 and (b) each month to date in 2004. [205116]

Ms Blears: The information requested has been supplied by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and is contained in the following table.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the 20,000 community support officers that the Government have proposed to recruit by 2008, referred to in the HMIC Annual Report 2003–04, are to be posted in Merseyside. [208993]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 January 2005]: The number of Community Support Officers (CSOs) in Merseyside at the end of September 2004 was 82. On 24 November I announced funding under the first round of the Neighbourhood Policing Fund (NPF) to enable Merseyside to recruit an additional 85 CSOs by the end of March. Details of the next phase of the NPF, for 2006–07 and 2007–08, will be announced later this year.

Crime

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Department has to denote business crime as a separate category within its reporting of criminal activity. [205532]

Ms Blears: The Home Office currently publishes annual total crime statistics recorded by the police in England and Wales for the following offences specifically relating to business crime; robbery of business property, theft by an employee, theft from shops and theft of an automatic machine or meter. The most recent figures are available in Statistical Bulletin 10/04 "Crime in England and Wales 2003–04" at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/crimeew0304.html.

However, we recognise that these figures provide a limited picture of the true nature of crimes experienced by the business sector. We are also aware that businesses do not report every incidence of crime for a variety of reasons.

Bearing this in mind, on 26 November, the Home Office also published the initial findings of the 2002 Commercial Victimisation Survey. This provided further information on the actual levels of business crime as well as an indication of the proportion of businesses which report the crimes that they suffer.

The Home Office Business Crime Team is also looking at how current information on business crime, including retail crime, can be enhanced, in particular, whether it is feasible to identify crimes against businesses in police recorded crime statistics through a pilot with South Wales.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alcohol-related violent offences have been reported to (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police in each year since 1997; and how many reports led to a (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction. [208591]

Ms Blears: From the information collected on recorded crime and court proceedings, it is not possible to identify those violent offences which are alcohol-related. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in either data series.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of domestic violence have been reported to (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police in each year since 1997; and how many reports led to a (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction. [208592]

Ms Blears: From the information collected on recorded crime and court proceedings, it is not possible to identify cases of domestic violence. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in either data series.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many youth crime offences have been reported to (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police in each year since 1997; and how many reports led to (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction. [208595]

Ms Blears: Information is not collected centrally on the number of recorded offences involving youths. The reason for this is that the recorded crime series deals purely with offences and does not collect any details on the offender.

Statistics on the number of juvenile defendants proceeded against and found guilty in the Essex police force area and South East Essex petty sessional area are given in the table. Court proceedings data is published on a calendar year basis. Data for 2004 will not be available until the autumn.

[2] For South East Essex PSA the guilty figures include those found guilty at the Crown court where South East Essex PSA was the committing court.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of internet crime have been reported to (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police in each year since 1997; and how many reports led to a (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction. [208640]

Ms Blears: From the information collected on recorded crime and court proceedings, it is not possible to identify internet crime offences. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in either data series.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on crime in retail stores; and if he will make a statement. [205372]

Ms Blears: The Government takes crimes against the business community very seriously and is taking positive action to tackle retail crime and investigate the levels of crime that retailers suffer.

A commercial victimisation survey was carried out in 2002 which covered the incidence and cost of crime suffered by retailers in the preceding 12 months. The survey showed that the level of crime against retailers was lower than in 1993.

As part of the £15 million programme to support retailers in deprived areas, a development and practice report has been published to highlight initial results and best practice. A full evaluation of the programme will be published next year.

The Government Office for London are working with the metropolitan police to conduct a study of crime experienced by Black and minority ethnic businesses in London. This will include retail stores and results of this study are expected to be published next year.

Where reports have been published, they are available on the Home Office Website.

A number of other annual surveys carried out by trade organisations, such as the British Retail Consortium and the British Chambers of Commerce, provide helpful information about the levels of crimes experienced by their members.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the clear up rate for (a) burglary, (b) car theft and (c) possession of illegal drugs was in Southend in each of the last five years. [207632]

Ms Blears: The available information relates to offences cleared up in the Southend Basic Command Unit and is given in the table.

Information on the clear up rate for possession of drug offences is not available prior to 2001–02.

Crispen Kulinji

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will lift the certificate of fast tracking in respect of the case of Mr. Crispen Kulinji, appeal reference AS/18370/2004; if he will arrange for Mr. Kulinji to have access to experienced competent legal advice; what information is available to the department regarding abduction and torture, in respect of Mr. Kulinji; if he will arrange for Mr. Kulinji's release from the holding centre; and if he will grant permission for Mr. Kulinji to remain in this country. [201911]

Mr. Browne: Information on individual cases is confidential and cannot be divulged without the express consent of the individual concerned.

Custodial Sentences

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females aged 15 to 17 received custodial sentences in each year since 1997. [209913]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is contained in the following table.

Departmental Risk Assessments

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has conducted a risk assessment of (a) the implementation of the Criminal Justice Act 2003, (b) the timing of the introduction of the National Offender Management Service and (c) the reorganisation of the courts. [209650]

Paul Goggins: Risk assessments have been carried out on implementation of Criminal Justice Act 2003 (CJA) and the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) Change Programme. They considered the risks to the programme posed by a variety of factors, including timing and considered the likelihood and consequences of any such risks materialising. The resulting risk registers also detail the actions required to ensure that the consequences of any risk is minimised. These actions are being taken forward by the appropriate Directors. Risk management is supported by the NOMS Programme Office and overseen by the NOMS Programme and Executive Board. These feed into wider Home Office risk management procedures.

A Risk Assessment on the re-organisation of the courts has been carried out by the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA). The DCA established the Unified Courts Administration Programme (UCAP) to implement the re-organisation of the courts and to manage associated risks at area and regional levels. Risk registers are considered on a continuous review basis, and appropriate actions taken, by Directors at all levels of the organisation. Risk management is overseen, on behalf of the DCA, by UCAP and its Transitional Management Group.

Erkin Guney

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Scotland Yard's Anti-Corruption Squad's investigation into the circumstances leading to the wrongful conviction of Erkin Guney; when the investigation is expected to be concluded; when the results are expected to be presented to the Crown Prosecution Service; when Mr. Guney will be advised of progress; and if he will make a statement. [205533]

Ms Blears: Erkin Guney was investigated and convicted on 23 July 1996 for possession of heroin with intent to supply and illegal possession of a firearm and ammunition. He received a 14 year prison sentence. Mr. Guney appealed three times against conviction and, on his third attempt in 2003, his appeal was upheld; grounds of an unsafe conviction were cited.

I am advised by the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) that on 23 July 2003 Mr. Guney made a complaint against the police for failing to investigate threats to kill him and for acting dishonestly in gathering information that led to his arrest and prosecution. The MPS referred the complaint to the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) who agreed to supervise an MPS investigation into that complaint. The IPCC took over the supervision of the case on 1 April 2004 from the PCA.

The investigation is continuing but, given the length it has been running, the IPCC has requested that the Investigating Officer's final report be completed by mid-February. On receipt of the report, the IPCC will review the case and, if it is satisfied with the conduct of the investigation, the investigation will be closed.

On conclusion of the investigation, if the report indicates a criminal offence may have been committed, a copy of the report will be sent to the Crown Prosecution Service.

The IPCC wrote to the complainant's solicitors on 14 January 2005 with an update on the current position and will continue to report progress to Mr. Guney until the matter is concluded.

Essex Police (Court Attendance)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many days working at usual duties were lost in each year since 1997 due to police officers in the Essex Constabulary attending court cases; and if he will make a statement. [207752]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of working days Essex police officers spent attending court cases each year since 1997 has not been collected.

Fixed Penalty Notices

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the offences for which fixed penalty notices can be issued by (a) police constables and (b) police community support officers. [208780]

Ms Blears: Police officers can issue fixed penalty notices under the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 for around 150 different offences which are listed in Schedule 3 to the Act. In addition the following offences have been added to the scheme since September 2000:

No MOT contrary to s47 of the Road Traffic Act 1988; No insurance contrary to s143 of the Road Traffic Act 1988;

Failure to supply details necessary to identify an offending driver contrary to s172 of the Road Traffic Act 1988; Overtaking a stationary or moving vehicle in the controlled area of a toucan crossing contrary to Regulation 28 of the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 2002 (TSRGD); Stopping in the controlled area of a toucan crossing contrary to Regulation 27 of the TSRGD; Failing to wear prescribed types of authorised eye protectors when driving or riding a motor bicycle contrary contrary to the Motor Cycles (eye Protectors) Regulations 1999.

The police also have the power to issue fixed penalty notices for disorder as provided for in the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001. The table lists the offences currently included in the scheme.

Community support officers have the power of a constable to issue penalty notices for disorder except for the offences of theft and littering. In addition they have the power of a constable to issue fixed penalty notices for the offence of riding on a footway under s72 of the Highway Act.

They also have the power of an authorised officer of a local authority to issue fixed penalty notices for an offence of dog fouling under s4 of the Dog (Fouling of Land) Act 1996, for littering under s88 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and for offences of fly posting or graffiti under s43 of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003.

Community support officers can issue road traffic fixed penalty notices only where they have additionally been designated by the Chief Constable as traffic wardens.

The police and community support officers also have the power to issue fixed penalty notices for truancy, although these notices are normally issued by education welfare officers.

Hunting Ban

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has given to the Association of Chief Police Officers in response to the request for further clarification of the legal position on enforcing the ban on hunting with dogs; and if he will make a statement. [208211]

Ms Blears: I have had discussions with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) on the enforcement on the ban on hunting with dogs. It is for the police to enforce the ban on hunting with dogs, when the Hunting Act comes into force. ACPO are producing guidance to all forces on the enforcement of the Act.

Identity Cards and Passports

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the outcome was of the consultation with stakeholders on which services should be linked to identity cards and whether there should be unique personal numbers across public services. [210006]

Mr. Browne: The consultation on the draft Identity Cards Bill asked for comments on the powers set out in the draft Bill making regulations on the use of a card. Various stakeholders commented as part of the draft Bill consultation and in broader discussions with the Identity Cards Programme on whether, and if so how, to link identity cards with access to services. The Government published a summary of findings from the consultation exercise in October 2004 (Cm 6358).

We did not consult at the time of the draft Bill however on whether there should be a unique personal number across public services.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 304W, on identity cards, what the value is of the contracts with each private sector company; and what work has been undertaken by (a) the private sector companies and (b) the Government bodies mentioned. [210169]

Mr. Browne: The Identity Cards Programme has received management consultancy advice from the following organisations:

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what coaching will be provided to citizens in how to present their biometrics for verification purposes when applying for an identity card; whether such coaching will form part of the identity card enrolment process; and what provision has been made for such coaching in the published costs for the scheme. [210157]

Mr. Browne: As part of the broader communications plan for the scheme, provision has been made to make the public aware of biometrics and how they will be recorded and used. The precise forms of the communication are to be determined.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 335W, on passports, what the figures are for adult passport (a) applications and (b) renewals. [210172]

Mr. Browne: Table 1 outlines UKPS' 10-year forecast of demand for adult new passports and adult passport renewals.

Table 1: Forecast of new and renewal adult passport applications

	Adult new passport applications	Adult passport renewals

2013	538,733	3,777,595
2014	538,748	4,227,314

These figures do not include applications for replacement lost or stolen passports or amendments to existing passports.

Immigration

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the latest average waiting time is for determination of applications for permanent leave to remain from persons who have in excess of four continuous years of being granted work permits, where the applicant is (a) from an EU member state and (b) not from an EU member state; and what the waiting times were in each of the previous six months. [204996]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 14 December 2004]: The information requested is set out in the table.

All figures are for non-EU nationals, as EU nationals are not subject to work permit requirements. EU nationals are also not required to apply for Indefinite Leave to Remain.

The average processing times do not include applications dealt with on the same day in the Public Inquiry Office.

Number of application for indefinite leave to remain through four years work permit employment.

	2004
	June	July	August	September	October	November
Number of applications	1,465	1,435	1,700	1,765	1,715	1,610
Applications processed on the same day through the Public Inquiry Office (PEO)	365	370	360	385	350	115
Average processing time (calendar days) for applications not processed on same day in PEO	25	30	35	25	30	20

The figure for average processing times in recent months is not final because they do not include a number of the more complex cases that have yet to be completed.

The processing time is taken from the date that the application was received until the dispatch date.

These figures are based on unvalidated information drawn from internal management systems, and there may be data quality variations.

Figures have been rounded to the nearest five.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers whose applications have not been resolved, are currently serving custodial sentences for crimes committed in the UK. [208947]

Paul Goggins: The Prison Service central IT system does not record the immigration status of prisoners who are serving a custodial sentence. The information requested is not therefore available except by examination of individual case-files, at disproportionate cost.

Lincolnshire Police Force

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the police stations in Lincolnshire in each year from 1997 to 2004. [204792]

Ms Blears: The management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each police authority and the chief officer.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community support officers there are in the Lincolnshire constabulary. [204795]

Ms Blears: On 30 September 2004, there were 44 community support officers (CSOs) deployed by Lincolnshire constabulary.

A further 37 CSO posts, all supported by Home Office funding, will be recruited by 31 March 2005.

Metropolitan Police Sports Ground

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether plans are in place to use the Metropolitan Police Sports Ground at Imber Court and related buildings and property for other purposes in certain circumstances; and if he will make a statement. [207600]

Ms Blears [holding answer 10 January 2005]: The management of the police estate and allocation of resources are matters for each Police Authority and the Chief Officer.

Mr. B. Mayo

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the Independent Police Complaints Commission to investigate the reasons for the delay in resolving the case of Mr. B. Mayo. [209174]

Ms Blears: Under the provisions of the Police Reform Act 2002, the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) can investigate a case only if it has been recorded by a police force and referred formally to the IPCC. The Secretary of State has no powers to intervene in that process.

However, it is a statutory function of the IPCC to determine if there are any lessons to be learned following an investigation and, if so, to make recommendations or give advice to the police service concerned or police services in general.

I understand that Mr. Nick Hardwick, Chair of the IPCC, will be providing a substantive response to the hon. Member's letter of 13 January 2005 to the IPCC, in which he sought his assistance in resolving this case.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the introduction of the concept of contestability within the National Offender Management Service. [201033]

Paul Goggins: Contestability is the principle that best quality and best value for money in the supervision, punishment and care of offenders will be achieved through ensuring that all appropriate services are opened up to competition with other providers. We want the most effective and efficient services for offenders both in prison and in the community whether these are provided by the public, private, voluntary or "not for profit" sectors. The concept of contestability is being introduced within National Offender Management Service (NOMS) following its successful application within the Prison Service.

Offender Assessment

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in rolling out the OASys offender assessment tool in (a) prisons and (b) probation; how many prisons have access to the system; when roll-out will be complete; and if he will make a statement. [201383]

Paul Goggins: OASys was rolled out, on schedule, to all prison establishments by early January 2005 and is already in use by all probation areas. Only those public sector establishments that hold juveniles do not have OASys; a separate assessment tool is used for prisoners under 18. We expect to complete the connection of the OASys IT systems between all probation areas and prisons by the autumn of 2005.

Penalty Enforcement Reform

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for reform of the (a) enforcement and (b) administration of (i) criminal penalties and (ii) fixed penalty notices. [209484]

Paul Goggins: Custodial penalties are enforced and administered within the private and public sector prisons system. Community penalties are enforced and administered largely under arrangements made by local probation boards and with electronic monitoring contractors. Provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 will introduce tougher requirements for the courts when dealing with breaches of community orders. The Management of Offenders and Sentencing Bill, currently before Parliament, includes provisions further to develop offender management within the National Offender Management Service. Measures include extended powers to direct the contracting out of probation services and the preparation of sentence plans for all offenders receiving custodial or community penalties.

Financial penalties are enforced by the magistrates courts. The Department for Constitutional Affairs' Enforcement Programme is delivering a wide programme of change aimed at improving the enforcement and administration of financial penalties. These include improving intelligence; a new legislative framework for enforcement provided by the Courts Act 2003; and taking the opportunity offered by the launch of Her Majesty's Courts Service to introduce more effective and efficient ways of working.

Most fixed penalty notices are enforced by prosecution or by the registration of a fine against a recipient who fails to pay the penalty or request a court hearing within the specified time. Registered fines are then enforced by the magistrates court in the same way as any other fine. For road traffic offences, consideration for prosecution follows when the endorsement of the statutory penalty points would result in disqualification. There are no plans to change this process.

Fixed penalty notices for road traffic offences and disorder are administered through a computer system which operates in both police forces and magistrates courts. There are no plans to change this arrangement, although the computer systems will need upgrading in the medium term. Certain changes to the fixed penalty system are proposed in the Road Safety Bill currently before Parliament. These are designed essentially to enable road traffic fixed penalty notices to be given to those who do not hold a GB driving licence and counterpart and to enable more effective enforcement against those who cannot prove an address in the UK.

Police

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to support measures to improve the performance of Northamptonshire Police; and if he will make a statement. [203765]

Ms Blears: The Police Standards Unit (PSU) has been working with Northamptonshire Police since the spring of 2004. This work has included a diagnostic phase which reviewed how the force manages burglary, vehicle and drug related crime. The review has also looked specifically at the use of forensic science and the custody processes in operation. The results of the diagnostic phase were a series of recommendations to enhance performance in each of the above areas, and these have been put to the force to consider for implementation.

In addition to this work, the force has completed a review of its structure and policing style and as a result of this has put into place the Northamptonshire Policing Model (NPM). This model restructures the force around different policing units to enable the force to deal more effectively with incident management and with community issues, crime investigations, and prisoner handling. The PSU is part-funding consultants who are working with the force to ensure that the NPM is implemented with minimum disruption, and that the focus on performance is vigorously maintained.

We are confident that the joint efforts of the PSU, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) and Northamptonshire Police will result in substantial improvements in performance.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of numbers of police officers in Wales are (a) community support officers, (b) reserve officers and (c) part-time officers. [208840]

Ms Blears: Community support officers (CSOs) are not police officers, but police staff for whom the chief officer of the force may designate certain limited powers.

The police service in England and Wales does not have a category of reserve police officers.

The total number of police officers in England in Wales is usually expressed in terms of full-time equivalent posts for which part-time posts are aggregated and not pure headcount (which, consequently, is always a higher figure). The full-time equivalent figure is used when announcing overall police officer numbers.

The full-time equivalent strength for 31 August 2004 for the four forces in Wales was 7,414. The most recent data available on part-time police officers is 31 March 2004, when the full-time equivalent strength was also 7,414 and the headcount figure was 7,545. There were 188 part-time police officers in post at that date; this is 2.5 per cent. of the 7,545 headcount figure.

In addition, there were 629 special constables on that date. At the end of September 2004, there were 130 CSOs in post in Wales. On 24 November I announced that funding was available for an additional 125 community support officers for the four Welsh police forces.

Police Authority Funding

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional funding is available to police authorities from central funds to implement (a) the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 and (b) the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [199526]

Ms Blears [holding answer 29 November 2004]: The Home Office, not police authorities, is responsible for implementation of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. Police authorities fund operations undertaken within the terms of the Act, as part of force activity within the force budget. Operational decisions are a matter for each Chief Constable.

For local and police authorities in England and Wales increases in Revenue Support Grant will cover the new burdens of meeting costs of the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Police Methods

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what proportion of (a) rape and (b) murder investigations by (i) Cleveland police and (ii) other north eastern police forces a scene of crime officer was automatically despatched to the crime scene in the last period for which figures are available. [207498]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Police Numbers

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) police civilian staff each police authority in England and Wales has had in each year since 1995. [204794]

Ms Blears: The information requested is set out in the following tables.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community support officers there are in each police authority in England and Wales. [204797]

Ms Blears: The number of community support officers (CSOs) on patrol in each police authority in England and Wales on 30 September 2004 is shown in the following table. I wrote to all hon. Members on 23 November 2004 setting out the number of additional posts we intended to fund from the first round of the Neighbourhood Policing Fund. This is an additional £50 million we announced in the summer to guarantee that the number of community support officers reaches at least 5,500 by 31 March 2005. We further intend that the number of CSOs should reach 24,000 by March 2008.

Claire Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in Hertfordshire in (a) 1995 and (b) 2004; and if he will make a statement on the percentage change in funding of the police service during that period. [207569]

Ms Blears: On 31 March 1995 there were 1,703 police officers in the Hertfordshire Constabulary. The latest figure, for 31 August 2004, is 2,124 officers, an increase of 421, or 24.7 per cent.

The increase in officer numbers and funding for Hertfordshire Police Authority was affected by changes to the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) on 1 April 2000, when parts of the Metropolitan Police District were transferred to Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey. The effects of the boundary changes were incorporated into the police funding formula and the overall transfer was in terms of financial resources, not officers.

However, 183 MPS officers were seconded to Hertfordshire on 1 April 2000 for up to two years to assist with policing while Hertfordshire Constabulary arranged to recruit its own officers for the expanded force area.

General grants (comprised of Home Office principal Police Grant, Revenue Support Grant and redistributed business rates) to Hertfordshire Police Authority have increased by 45.4 per cent. between 1995–96 and 2004–05.

In addition to general Government grants, Hertfordshire Police Authority has also benefited from specific grants for targeted programmes, first introduced in 2000–01, such as the Crime Fighting Fund (CFF), to increase and maintain the number of police officers. Hertfordshire has had CFF funding to support the recruitment of 113 additional police officers.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent police officers are employed in the metropolitan police force; and what the figure was five years ago. [210315]

Ms Blears: At the end of August 2004 there were 30,021 police officers in the metropolitan police service, compared with 25,485 in March 2000. Following boundary changes on 1 April 2000 with Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey, the metropolitan police district was reduced in size and some resources were transferred to the other three forces. Metropolitan police service strength data prior to April 2000 is therefore not comparable with later data.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables are serving in the metropolitan police force. [210316]

Ms Blears: The metropolitan police service had 726 special constables serving at 31 December 2004.

Police Officers

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers, excluding support staff and community support officers, were employed in each police authority in England and Wales in each year since 1996–97. [207963]

Police Standards Unit

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work that the Police Standards Unit has undertaken with Nottinghamshire police; and what estimate he has made of the cost of such work. [207341]

Ms Blears [holding answer 17 January 2005]: The Police Standards Unit (PSU) has been working with Nottinghamshire police since the spring of 2003. Developed in close liaison with Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, there is now a mature and comprehensive programme of work in place aimed at supporting the force to reduce and better investigate crime through delivering performance improvements in operational and organisational areas.

The key areas of PSU work with the force are on improving capacity for forensics, intelligence-led policing (with a particular focus on drugs and major crime), performance management, and on tackling persistent offenders. PSU is also working with the force on management of serious crime, sanction detections, and tackling violent crime.

In addition to the investment of time from PSU staff, the total cost of PSU's work with Nottinghamshire police to date has been £2.4million. This funding has been divided between provision of staff (including extra Scenes of Crime Officers and a drugs manager), infrastructure (e.g. provision of hardware) and consultancy support (e.g. on the force's performance management framework).

Nottinghamshire police have achieved significant reductions in crime during the time that PSU have been working with them. For example, according to the latest figures from the force, over the last 12 months the number of domestic burglaries has fallen by 23 per cent., robberies by 26 pre cent. and vehicle crimes by 15 per cent., when compared to the previous 12 months.

Police/Prison Service

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have occurred to the entry level fitness tests for the (a) Police Service and (b) Prison Service since 2000. [201857]

Paul Goggins: The Police Service introduced a national standard for Recruitment Fitness Testing in April 2002. Prior to this, different forces used different Fitness Tests and different standards applied. Officers are tested prior to recruitment and during probation.

1 April 2002—test consisted of:

Speed and Agility, 27 seconds

Grip Strength, 32 kgs

Dynamic strength, Dyno Machine—Push 34 kg/ Pull 35 kg

Endurance fitness i.e. Multi-stage shuttle run 1 Shuttle at level 8 (8/1)

1 July 2003—following research conducted by the Prison Service (as set out) and a conclusion that the speed/agility element may not be justified, interim adjustments were made to the test pending further research. These were:

Discontinuation of the speed/agility element

Change to the required standard for endurance fitness to level 5–4 shuttles (5/4).

2 August 2004—following further research and a decision to base the fitness requirement on the level of fitness needed for Officer Safety Training—the test was adjusted by:

Discontinuation of the grip strength element of the test

Currently, police recruits must demonstrate:

Endurance fitness to level 5/4

Dynamic strength—push 34kgs; pull 35 kgs

A working party set up by the Police Advisory Board for England and Wales is looking at the on-going health and fitness of serving officers and fitness levels for officers in specialist roles.

Prison Service

Her Majesty's Prison Service introduced a mandatory annual fitness test for all new Prison Officers joining the service after 2 April 2001. Prison Officers are required to pass this test annually for the rest of their discipline career in order to meet the Services health and safety requirements. Since its introduction there has been two changes to the test.

Change 1: The level of the Multi Stage Fitness Test (Bleep Test) was lowered to 5.4 from 6.5

The reason for the multistage fitness test change was based on advice taken from Loughborough University who said that the minimum level of VO2m for a Prison Officer was 34.7, which equated to level 6.5 on a 20-metre bleep test.

The Prison Service work to a 15-metre bleep test and it was proven by Roehampton University that the 15-metre course is harder than the 20-metre one. The minimum level of 34.7 VO2m on a 15-metre course is achieved at level 5.4, hence the change.

Although the level of the bleep test was lowered it is still measuring the same level of VO2m which is the minimum fitness level required of a Prison Officer joining the Prison Service after 2 April 2001.

Change 2 : The grip test which was lowered from 28kgf to 25kgf

The grip test was reduced due to the Prison Service changing its testing equipment with the original dynometer being was much more user friendly and suited a smaller hand. The change to the dyno-meters was made due to the high cost of repair (they had to be sent to America) as they worked on a hydraulic system that continually leaked.

The new dyno-meter disadvantaged Prison Officers with a small hand and so the grip test was lowered to 25kgf to accommodate this.

Policing

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were employed in the Dagenham constituency in (a) 1997, (b) 2001 and (c) 2004. [207158]

Ms Blears: Published information on the number of police officers in Basic Command Units (BCUs) has only been collected since March 2002 and is set out in the following table.

Barking and Dagenham operational command unit

As at 31 March	Number of police officers
2002	301
2003	360
2004	384

I am told by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the Barking and Dagenham Operational Command Unit (OCU) had 411 police officers at the end of September 2004.

It is not possible to separately show the number of officers in the Dagenham parliamentary constituency from the rest of the BCU. The deployment of officers in Barking and Dagenham OCU is a matter for the borough commander.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to the police on recording attendances at disturbances in pubs and nightclubs. [207630]

Ms Blears: Guidance on crime recording was issued by the Home Office and the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) in 2002 in the form of the National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS). The aim of the Standard was to promote greater consistency between police forces in the recording of crime and to adopt a more victim oriented approach to crime recording. The police should record all reports of incidents, including attendance at disturbances in pubs and nightclubs, in accordance with the NCRS.

The Standard states that all reports of incidents, whether from victims or third parties and whether crime-related or not, will result in the registration of an incident report by the police. Such an incident will subsequently be recorded as a crime if, on the balance of probability:

(a) the circumstances as reported amount to a crime defined by law (the police will determine this, based on their knowledge of the law and counting rules); and

(b) there is no credible evidence to the contrary.

Prisons

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the reports on self-inflicted deaths in prisons completed by the Prisons and Probation Ombudsman in the last 12 months. [200465]

Paul Goggins: In 2003–04, the Ombudsman completed reports on apparently self-inflicted deaths of prisoners in Her Majesty's Prison Styal and Her Majesty's Prison Wakefield. The completed reports on self-inflicted deaths since 1 April 2004 concern prisoners who died in Her Majesty's Prison Liverpool, Her Majesty's Prison Durham, Her Majesty's Prison Lewes, Her Majesty's Prison Holloway, Her Majesty's Prison Nottingham, Her Majesty's Prison New Hall and Her Majesty's Prison Woodhill.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances prison inmates are not required (a) to wear footwear and (b) to cut their toenails; and if he will make a statement. [207939]

Paul Goggins: There is no blanket requirement for prisoners to either wear footwear or cut their toenails. A rule or order requiring either will be imposed where there are good reasons for it. This will normally be where failure to wear footwear or cut toenails is assessed as presenting a risk to health and safety.

A prisoner who refuses to comply with a rule or order requiring the wearing of footwear or the cutting of toenails in circumstances where this presents a risk to health and safety may have to be excluded from certain areas or activities within the prison establishment. Their behaviour may also constitute an offence against prison discipline.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the intermediate estate in the Prison Service. [204477]

Paul Goggins: Intermittent Custody is one of the new sentences introduced by the 2003 Criminal Justice Act. It is designed to avoid some of the negative outcomes—loss of employment or accommodation, and family breakdown—which can accompany even relatively short periods of full-time custody. Pilots of intermittent custody began on 26 January 2004 at Kirkham Prison, in Lancashire, for male offenders and at Morton Hall Prison, in Lincolnshire, for females.

During the 49 weeks to 2 January a total of 147 intermittent custody orders were imposed. The early results—including a high level of compliance with the orders—are very encouraging and we have decided to extend intermittent custody beyond the existing pilot sites. Planning for that expansion is already under way.

The intermittent custody pilots are the subject of a detailed independent evaluation by a team from the Institute for Criminal Policy, based at King's College, London. Their final report will be completed in December 2005, but any emerging findings will be incorporated into the planning for the expansion of intermittent custody during the course of this year.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what projections he has made of the number of inmates in future large prison developments in England and Wales. [208749]

Paul Goggins: A new 840 place prison, Her Majesty's Prison Peterborough, to hold both male and female prisoners in separate units will open in March 2005. The Government are also currently considering the purchase of additional sites. The specific capacity of any prisons subsequently built at these sites is a matter yet to be decided.

Sex Abuse (Historical Cases)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will summarise the guidance available for police forces regarding the interviewing of witnesses in historical sex abuse investigations [207324]

Ms Blears: Guidance for police on appropriate techniques for investigating allegations of historical child abuse is included in the 'Senior Investigating Officer's Handbook—the Investigation of Historical/Institutional Child Abuse' produced by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Guidance on interviewing vulnerable or intimidated witnesses (VIWs) is contained in 'Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings: Guidance for Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses, including Children' issued in January 2002. This guidance became operational in May 2002 when it superseded "Memorandum of Good Practice on Video Recorded Interviews with Child Witnesses for Criminal Proceedings". Victims in sexual offence proceedings are considered to be intimidated. Other witnesses in these cases—but not the accused—may also be treated as vulnerable or intimidated.

Achieving Best Evidence covers preparing and planning for interviews with VIWs, decisions about whether or not to conduct an interview and decisions about whether the interview should be video recorded or whether it would be more appropriate for a written statement to be taken. It covers the interviewing of such witnesses both for the purposes of making a video-recorded statement and also for taking a written statement, their preparation for court and any subsequent court appearance.

Other guidance includes: 'Guidance on the Recording of Interviews with Vulnerable and Significant (Key) Witnesses' issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers; and 'Complex Child Abuse Investigations: Inter-agency issues' issued jointly by the Home Office and Department of Health.

Sex Offenders

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a member of Her Majesty's Armed Forces convicted by a court martial of a sexual offence has his or her name placed on the sex offenders register. [209511]

Paul Goggins: Section 137 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 provides that the notification requirements of Part 2 of that Act (often known as the sex offenders register) apply to convictions for relevant sexual offences received in service courts as well as civilian courts.

The Sexual Offences Act 2003 has introduced a new civil preventative order; the sexual offences prevention order (SOPO). SOPOs can be made by service courts at the time of sentencing for a relevant sexual or violent offence where it is considered necessary to protect the public from serious sexual harm. SOPOs impose prohibitions on the offender and make him subject to the notification requirements for the duration of the order. Essentially this means that violent offenders who pose a risk of serious sexual harm can be made to sign on the sex offenders register.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many sex offenders are held in prisons within 50 miles of their home. [209529]

Paul Goggins: As at 31 October 2004 (the latest date for which these figures are available), 2,375 of the prisoners convicted of sex offences were held within 50 miles of their home address[1].

[1] A prisoner's home area is defined as their home address on reception into prison. For prisoners with no address, the address of the relevant committal court is used as the home address.

In measuring the number of prisoners held under 50 miles from their home area, around 5 per cent. of the sex offenders are not included as they have no home or court addresses.

Southend Basic Command Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) trained police officers and (b) special constables there are in the Southend Basic Command Unit. [207629]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of officers in each Basic Command Unit (BCU) is provided annually (31 March) by each police force. As at 31 March 2004 there were 278 regular officers and 52 Special Constables in Southend BCU.

All officers receive full training for the duties they undertake.

Special Constables

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what form of body protection is provided for special constables. [207291]

Ms Blears: The decision whether to issue protective vests or other types of body armour to special constables is a matter for the chief constable. These decisions are informed by risk assessments of the operational deployment of special constables. While some police forces still issue from a central pool, others provide personal issue.

Aside from any generic risk assessments undertaken, forces need to make specific local risk assessments whenever appropriate, particularly if they do not have a policy stating that protective vests or other types of body armour must be worn.

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables have been injured in the line of duty since 1 January 2001. [207292]

Ms Blears: Information on the outcome of assaults on special constables has been collected centrally since 1 April 2002. For the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2004, there were 318 assaults on special constables which resulted in seven of them being seriously injured. The remaining 311 special constables suffered minor or no injury.

Serious injuries are defined as those resulting from assaults for which the charge would be under Sections 18 and 20 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861.

Stephen Lawrence Inquiry

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the transcript of the Stephen Lawrence inquiry. [201962]

Ms Blears: The department will not be publishing the papers from the Stephen Lawrence Inquiry. The papers received by the inquiry and their own records amount to more than 80,000 pages. The department is currently in the midst of reviewing and appraising the inquiry records prior to their transfer to The National Archives (TNA) where they can be made available for public inspection. This is a huge task and one that needs to be carried out with due sensitivity for the people involved. The current review schedule anticipates the inquiry transcripts being transferred to TNA in March 2005.

Video Evidence

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances a prisoner who is scheduled to make a court appearance by video link from prison can refuse to appear (a) generally, (b) on the grounds the individual cannot walk to the video conference facilities and (c) on the grounds that the individual has refused or failed to cut his toenails, preventing him from walking; and if he will make a statement. [207938]

Paul Goggins: There is no provision for an accused to attend his or her trial by live link from prison. Section 57 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 makes provision for pre-trial hearings to be conducted by live link. By virtue of this section, where a particular pre-trial hearing takes place by live link, the accused is to be treated as being present in court for it. A particular pre-trial hearing may only be conducted by live link where the court, after hearing representations from the parties, directs it. A party is accordingly free to object to the hearing taking place. The decision as to whether to proceed, or not to proceed with a pre-trial hearing by live link in the case of an accused who objects to it, for whatever reason, is a matter for the discretion of the court.

Youth Custody

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what fees are paid by the Youth Justice Board for a bed in a (a) local authority secure unit, (b) youth treatment centre and (c) young offenders institution. [209276]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 19 January 2005]: The juvenile secure estate comprises: young offender institutions run by the Prison Service; privately-operated secure training centres; and places purchased in local authority secure children's homes. The Youth Justice Board for England and Wales commission and purchase the places. They estimate the average annual costs per place to be:

Young offender institution:	50,800
Secure training centre:	[1]164,750
Local authority secure children's home:	185,780

[1] Includes Value Added Tax

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the standard staff to child ratio is in (a) local authority secure units, (b) secure treatment centres and (c) young offenders institutions. [209278]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 19 January 2005]: It is not possible to specify standard ratios because of the many variables involved. Examples of the variation in ranges are given as follows:

> In local authority secure children's homes, between one member of staff to two children and six staff to eight children.
> In secure training centres (STCs), between two staff to five to seven children and three staff to eight children. There are also custody officers on site to cover admissions, movements and supervision of visits.
> In juvenile young offender institutions (YOIs) three to six staff to between 40 and 60 children on the wings; plus establishment reception, healthcare, instructional and education staff and personal and resettlement officers .

WORK AND PENSIONS

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on (a) indoor bought plants, (b) indoor hired plants, (c) outdoor bought plants and (d) outdoor hired plants in each year since 1997. [205621]

Maria Eagle: The information is not collected separately from other expenditure figures.

Departmental Staff

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of his Department's staff is based in London. [208039]

Maria Eagle: Information on regional distribution of staff is available in the Library and also at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_information/statistical_information/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2003_report/
index.asp

Figures relating to 1 April 2004 are due to be published during February 2005.

Disability Benefit

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 6 December 2004, Official Report, columns 370–2W, on disability benefits, how many appellants who were originally in receipt of the lower rate have been awarded the higher rate mobility component of the disability living allowance after appealing against decisions made regarding the award of this benefit; and if he will make a statement. [208105]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for Christina Townsend, Chief Executive of the Appeals Service. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Christina Townsend to Paul Holmes dated 25 January 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your question pursuant to his answer of 6 December 2004 Official Report columns 370–2W on disability benefits regarding how many appellants who were originally in receipt of the lower rate have been awarded the higher rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance after appealing against decisions made regarding the award of this benefit; and if he will make a statement.

The information you require is not available in the format requested as information on Disability Living Allowance appeals is only recorded by the number of appeals and the actual success rate of those appeals.

Table 1, however, gives details of the number of Disability Living Allowance claimants whilst table 2 shows the total number of appeals received and their overall outcome.

Table 1: All disability living allowance claimants as at 31 August 2004

	Number
DLA caseload for all components	2,634.3
Higher rate mobility only	460.6
Lower rate mobility only	99.9

Notes:

1. Figures are in thousands and rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Figures taken from a 5 per cent. sample at 31 August 2004.
3. From November 2002, the methodology for producing these figures was changed to allow statistics to be published much sooner. This has resulted in a small increase in the reported caseload. This is because some cases which have actually terminated but have not yet been updated on the computer system are now included.

Table 2: Disability living allowance mobility appeals received, cleared at hearing and outcome at Tribunal for the period September 2003 to August 2004

	Number
Received	4,395
Cleared at hearing	3,550
Cleared in favour of appellant	1,705
Cleared in favour of appellant (percentage)	48.03
Cleared against appellant	15
Cleared against appellant (percentage)	0.37
Original decision upheld	1,775
Original decision upheld (percentage)	49.97
Cleared others	60

Notes:

1. All figures are subject to change as more up to date data becomes available.
2. Figures for the latest months may rise significantly as information feeds through to the Appeals Service.
3. Figures are rounded to the nearest five and percentages to one decimal place.
4. Cleared against appellant are appeals where the resulting outcome has made the appellant worse off than before the appeal.
5. Original decision upheld—the original decision with regard to the benefit application has been upheld, therefore the appeal has been unsuccessful.

E-mails

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy regarding the retention of e-mails in electronic form (a) after and (b) up to 1 January 2005; and what instructions have been given regarding the deletion of e-mails prior to 1 January 2005. [206949]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the written answers I gave the hon. Member for Guildford, (Sue Doughty) on 21 December 2004 Official Report colums 1727–1728W and 10 January 2005, Official Report column 111W.

Glasgow Pension Centre

Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with representatives from the Public and Commercial Services union on the future of the Glasgow pension centre. [209658]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has regular meetings with PCS officials to discuss and listen to their views and concerns about a wide range of issues facing the Department, including the efficiency challenge. These are generally national issues and therefore, do not focus on individual centres.

However, since January 2004, The Pension Service has held regular meetings with their Pensions Trade Union Representatives to consult and share information on The Pension Service transformation programme. The criteria for selecting sites that would form the future pension service organisation, and the outcome for London Pension Centre (Glasgow), has been included as part of this dialogue.

Newspapers/Periodicals

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) newspapers and (b) periodicals taken by his Department in each year since 1997; and how much the Department spent on each in each year. [207641]

Maria Eagle: DWP was formed in June 2001 from the former Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment, including the Employment Service. Information for the periods prior to June 2001 is not available.

Information on the amount spent in each financial year from 2001 onwards is in the following table.

Financial year	Newspaper spend	Periodical spend
2001–2002	24,757.96	228,207.11
2002–2003	[1]—	314,328.85
2003–2004	[1]—	266,764.89

[1] Included in periodical spend

A list of newspapers and periodicals purchased in financial year 2003–04 has been placed in the Library. Information on titles purchased prior to 2003–04 is not available.

Parking Spaces

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many car parking spaces are provided for those working in and visiting his Department. [208938]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Work and Pensions occupies approximately 1,800 properties. Latest figures show that the total number of parking spaces available at buildings occupied by DWP staff is 35,428.

Where there is joint occupancy of properties, spaces are generally available to other occupants. Information on spaces designated specifically for DWP staff or visitors is not collected centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Pension Credit

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in (a) London and (b) Tower Hamlets are in receipt of the savings element of pension credit; what the average award is for each; and what proportion those figures represent of (i) the total number of pensioners and (ii) his estimate of the total number of eligible pensioners in each area. [209643]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of recipients of the savings element of pension credit in the London Government Office Region (GOR) and in Tower Hamlets at 31 October 2004 is given in the following table. The average award of the savings element in the London GOR at the end of August 2004, the latest date for which this figure is available, was £8.01. The average award in Tower Hamlets at the same date was £8.26. Eligibility estimates for the individual elements of pension credit are not available for either GORs or local authority areas.

Recipients of savings element of pension credit, London GOR and Tower Hamlets, 31 October 2004

	Households	Individual recipients	Individual recipients as a percentage of total population aged 60 or over
London GOR	137,230	159,885	13.7
Tower Hamlets	4,135	4,865	20.1

Notes:

1. Numbers of recipients are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.
3. The numbers of households and individuals in receipt of the savings element include those who were receiving the savings element only and those who were receiving both the savings and guarantee elements.
4. Pension credit figures are available for 31 October 2004 as the final output of processes that were put in place to deliver special monthly reporting during the first year of the roll-out of pension credit. As Parliament was told in the statement accompanying the last such report, data will in future be available on a quarterly basis, in line with standard departmental practice.
5. Numbers of people aged 60 or over are based on the mid-2003 population estimates for England and Wales.
6. Average awards are based on a 5 per cent. sample as at August 2004. These figures are subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to increase the take-up of pension credit. [209933]

Malcolm Wicks: The Pension Service continues to devote considerable effort and resources to increasing levels of Pension Credit take-up. We have already written at least once to every pensioner household in the country to tell them about Pension Credit and encourage them to apply. We are re-contacting directly, by mail, telephone or personal visit, those people whom we believe particularly likely to be eligible. New, targeted marketing campaigns have been developed which seek to overcome the barriers which might prevent take-up of Pension Credit and the reasons which people give for not applying, and further national television advertising began on 17 January. The Pension Service Local Service continues to work in partnership with local authorities and the voluntary sector, particularly in identifying and contacting older people who are vulnerable or who have yet to take up their entitlement

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what proportion of pensioners in Stoke-on-Trent are in receipt of pension credit; [210866]

(2) how many pensioners in Stoke-on-Trent are in receipt of pension credit. [210867]

Malcolm Wicks: At 31 October 2004, 13,880 pensioner households in Stoke-on-Trent, comprising 16,970 individuals, were in receipt of pension credit. The number of individual recipients represented approximately 34 per cent. of the total population aged 60 or over in Stoke-on-Trent.

Notes

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Individual recipients include a small number of partners under age 60.
3. Pension credit figures are available for 31 October 2004 as the final output of processes that were put in place to deliver special monthly reporting during the first year of the roll-out of pension credit. As Parliament was told in the statement accompanying the last such report, data will in future be available on a quarterly basis, in line with standard departmental practice.
4. Numbers of people aged 60 or over are based on the mid-2003 population estimates for England and Wales.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 777W, on pensions, what the percentage rates of contracted-out rebates for appropriate personal pensions are for (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2004–05 for a person aged (i) 40 and (ii) 50 years; and if he will make a statement. [211069]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table:

Percentage rates of contracted-out rebates for appropriate personal pensions

Percentage

Annual Earnings Bands	Age 40	Age 50
2002–2003
3,900 to 10,800	10.80	19.80
10,801 to 24,600	2.70	4.95
24,601 to 29,900	5.40	9.90
2003–2004
4,004 to 11,200	10.60	17.80
11,201 to 25,600	2.65	4.45
25,601 to 30,940	5.30	8.9

Note:

Contracted-out rebates for appropriate personal pensions are set at a level intended to reflect the value of the SERPS/State Second Pension benefit given up. SERPS was introduced in 1978 and so affected employed earners born in 1962 or later(i.e. those aged 40 in 2002–03. So, for those born before 1962, successively younger people have a lower SERPS/state second pension accrual rate. As a result, although the rebate for any one individual increases year on year until the cap bites, someone aged 46 in 2003–04 would have received a lower rebate rate in that year than someone aged 46 received in the preceding tax year.

This information is set out in the Government Actuary's rebate consultation document for the last review of the rebates which set the rates for the period 2002- 03 to 2006–07. Also the report to Parliament when the rebate orders were laid, Cm 5076, particularly the table on page 12. These are available on the Government Actuary Department's (GAD) website.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints were made by departmental civil servants regarding the conduct of special advisers between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004. [203480]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided on 8 December 2004, Official Report, column 578W by the former Minister for the Cabinet Office (Ruth Kelly).

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether departmental special advisers have been responsible for authorising instances of departmental spending since May 1997; [203918]

(2) whether departmental special advisers have given instructions to permanent civil servants without the explicit authorisation of Ministers since May 1997. [203958]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 16 December 2004, Official Report, column 1258–59W by Minister of State for Cabinet Office, Mr. David Miliband.

Winter Fuel Payments

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 21 December 2004, Official Report, column 1746W, on winter fuel payments, how many married (a) women and (b) men in Scotland he estimates will reach the age of 60 years after the qualifying week for winter fuel payments eligibility but before 25 December. [209660]

Malcolm Wicks: It is estimated that around 6,000 married women and 6,000 married men in Scotland will reach the age of 60 after the qualifying week but before 25 December.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Appleby Health Review

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the remit is of the Appleby Health Review. [210025]

Angela Smith: Professor Appleby has agreed to conduct a review of health and social care provision in Northern Ireland, to consider and make recommendations in the following areas:

The current position in levels of demand in relation to levels of funding available;

The demands of the population for heath and social services in NI, taking account of its distinctive characteristics, in terms of long term and sustainable resourcing;

Technological, demographic, medical and other trends over the next two decades that may have implications for the future resource needs of the public sector in NI, consistent, where possible, with the approach adopted in the Wanless Review;

The extent to which resources are being used effectively and efficiently and, if there is evidence of sub-optimal resource utilisation, the issues which are impairing the most efficient and effective use of resources;

The scope for a more effective use of resources (human, revenue and capital) to bring about a significant improvement in access to, and quality of, services in the HPSS and specifically the optimum balance between prevention, community- based care and acute hospital care;

Ways in which the interaction between the health and social care systems can be improved to maximise performance and the use of resources;

The effectiveness of the organisational and incentive structures, decision-making and accountability processes in health and social care in NI;

Further measures to improve health and wellbeing, which can reduce the demand for health and social services.

Child Psychiatry

Mrs. Iris Robinson: : To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many consultants in child and adolescent psychiatry in each of the health board areas in the Province are providing a full-time out-of-hours service. [210024]

Angela Smith: Information requested is provided in the following table.

Chlamydia Screening Programme

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of the working group to consider the introduction of a chlamydia screening programme. [210065]

Angela Smith: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's Chlamydia Testing Group had its first meeting on 6 December 2004. The group's remit is to develop policy and an approach to introducing an opportunistic testing programme for Chlamydia in Northern Ireland. The group is assessing potential settings for testing, the necessary laboratory arrangements to deal with increased numbers of samples, the impact on existing GUM services and a phased approach or roll out. A prevalence survey is also being considered.

Community Care Packages

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost of community care packages in the Province has been in each of the last 10 years. [210068]

Angela Smith: The combined gross Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) expenditure on domiciliary care, residential homes and nursing homes over the past four years, is as shown in the following table. Information on a comparable basis is not available for earlier years.

2000–01	289,700,654
2001–02	314,212,537
2002–03	389,059,551
2003–04	417,428,318

This does not represent the cost to the HPSS of providing such services, because client contributions have not been netted off. For example, client contributions defrayed £80 million of the above 2002–03 costs. Client contributions for other years are not available.

Craigavon Maternity Unit

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of the midwife-led maternity unit at Craigavon. [210039]

Angela Smith: Due to high levels of sick absence among midwifery staff, Craigavon Area Hospital Group Trust has recently had to temporarily redeploy some of the midwife-led Unit's staff to cover shifts in the ante-natal/post natal wards, delivery suite and admissions and assessment unit within the Maternity Unit.

While this temporary arrangement and its short-term effect on the Midwife-led Unit are regrettable, it has been necessary in order to ensure that a safe service is provided across all the Trust's maternity services.

Dementia

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the costs that would be incurred by providing free nursing and personal care to those in the Province with dementia. [210067]

Angela Smith: Nursing care is already provided free of charge to patients in hospital and people in their own homes. In addition, in October 2002 the Northern Ireland Executive introduced a £100 per week contribution towards the cost of nursing care in nursing homes. The cost of nursing care for people with dementia has not been calculated.

No estimate is available of the costs that would be incurred by providing free personal care to people with dementia.

Digital Hearing Aids

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new patients received digital hearing aids in the Province in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004; and how many new patients he expects to receive such aids in 2005. [210064]

Angela Smith: (a) Information on the numbers of persons provided with digital hearing aids is not available for the 2003 calendar year. However, during the period from October 2003 to the end of January 2004, a pilot monitoring programme was put in place, it recorded that approximately 2,000 persons were provided with digital hearing aids during this period.

(b) With regard to 2004, the Department's target for 2004–05 states that "Boards and Trusts should provide the necessary additional staff and digital hearing aids to provide for an efficient and modern audiology service, supplying 5,000 digital hearing aids per annum by 31 March 2005." Boards and Trusts have indicated that this will be achieved. A similar level of service can be expected in 2005–06.

Domiciliary Care

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average cost is of a (a) residential, (b) nursing home and (c) domiciliary community care package in the Province. [210046]

Angela Smith: An average residential home package costs £25,500 per year and a nursing home package costs £22,600 per year, based on the annualised weekly cost. domiciliary care costs £10 per hour delivered. These are average costs based on packages provided to a wide range of clients with differing care needs.

Drugs Bill

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Home Department regarding the extension of the Drugs Bill to Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [210430]

Mr. Spellar: I have sought and obtained approval for the extension to Northern Ireland of the following provisions in the Drugs Bill:

> The ability for a court to draw adverse inferences from a refusal to consent to an intimate drugs search;
> The extension of the power to detain persons suspected of swallowing drugs;
> Amendment to the offence of possession with intent to supply controlled drugs so that intent is presumed if the amount of drugs held by the person exceeds a certain threshold;
> Creation of aggravating circumstances in which a dealer will face an enhanced sentence—such as dealing near a school or using young persons as couriers; and
> Clarifying the law about magic mushrooms by making it a specific offence to possess with intent to supply, to supply, produce or import hallucinogenic mushrooms.

The Bill was introduced in the House on 16 December 2004.

EU Environmental Directives

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 9 December 2004, Official Report, column 784W, on Article 226 Reasoned Opinion proceedings, what the cause of the infraction proceedings was in each case. [208664]

Angela Smith: The following list sets out the EU directives that are subject to Article 226 Reasoned Opinion proceedings or beyond and the cause of the infraction in each case.

Directive number	Directive title	Cause of Infraction
1975/439/EC	Waste Oils	Implementation issue

[210044]

Angela Smith: The total number of hospital trolley waits is reported to the Department by trusts on a quarterly basis.

Tsunami (Fraud)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on fraudulent attempts in Northern Ireland by persons claiming to seek donations destined for victims of the recent tsunami; what his assessment is of (a) the nature of this fraud and (b) how widespread it is; and what advice his Department has given to members of the public about making secure donations. [209120]

Mr. Pearson: As of 17 January, the police service of Northern Ireland noted one minor incident of fraudulent charity collection in connection with the tsunami disaster in Asia. The amount of money involved amounted to no more than £5.

General advice about giving only to registered charities and persons who hold collection permits was circulated by the police last week, via the media. This represented sensible precautions to be taken when contributing to charity appeals, and was not released in connection with any specific incident of fraudulent fund raising.

Ulster Hospital

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time for surgery at the Ulster hospital was in each of the last four years. [210431]

Angela Smith: The average length of wait (in days) for people who had surgery at the Ulster hospital in each of the last four years for which information is available is detailed in the following table.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time for treatment in the accident and emergency department at the Ulster Hospital was in each of the last (a) three months, (b) six months and (c) 12 months for which statistics are available. [210432]

Angela Smith: The Ulster hospital is unable to calculate the average time waited by patients who received treatment in the Accident and Emergency department. However, the Trust has supplied the number of patients treated within the standard set for their priority categories (see the following).

There are five priority categories that patients who attend Accident and Emergency are assigned to:

Priority 1—to be seen by a doctor within five minutes

Priority 2—to be seen by a doctor within 10 minutes

Priority 3—to be seen by a doctor within 60 minutes

Priority 4—to be seen by a doctor within 120 minutes

HEALTH

Allergies

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on EU Directive 2000/13/EC in respect of ingredients listing and allergens. [209814]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A recent amendment of European Union Directive 2000/13/EC on ingredient listing will require the declaration of all ingredients including allergens on pre-packed food from November 2005. The Food Standards Agency (FSA) consulted on the new requirements and the representations received indicated wide support for the new rules from allergy support groups and food manufacturers. In addition, a number of respondents identified the need for better control of the use of "may contain" allergen labelling, and the need for the provision of more allergen information for foods sold loose and in catering establishments. The FSA is actively considering with key stakeholders how best to encourage the provision of clearer, more helpful allergen information in these cases.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government's strategy is for allergy prevention. [209815]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is committed to ensuring that the national health service develops an allergy service which offers high quality and personalised care to all its patients.

The Department will work with a wide range of key players to ensure future developments in allergy care are credible and command respect and ownership of those people they are designed to help and the practitioners who care for them. The first key stage of this work will be to carry out a review of the available data and research on the epidemiology of allergic conditions, the demand for and provision of treatment and the effectiveness of relevant interventions. Developing a sound evidence base will be essential to determining the correct future direction of allergy services.

Chinese People (Care Provision)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms local authorities and other partners use to work together to provide accommodation with culturally appropriate services and extra care provision to Chinese older people under the National Service Framework. [207950]

Dr. Ladyman: It is the responsibility of local commissioners and providers to work together to ensure that the provision of all health and care services are receptive to the needs of people from different ethnic communities and respect cultural differences, as promoted in the national service framework for older people. The provision of "Extra Care" housing does not preclude any ethnic group.

Choosing Health

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the Delivery Strategy for the public health White Paper, Choosing Health. [209722]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A commitment was given in the public health White Paper, "Choosing Health", to publish a delivery plan "early in 2005". The date of publication has not yet been finalised.

Cleanliness Scores

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the results of the 2004 Patient Environment Action Team cleanliness scores were passed to the Healthcare Commission. [209591]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In accordance with a methodology determined by the Healthcare Commission, they received information based on patient environment action team scores, aggregated to trust level, on 28 May 2004.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total external spending by his Department was on public private partnership (PPP) consultants in each of the last two years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by his Department over this period; and if he will make a statement. [200776]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 20 July 2004, Official Report, column 162W, in which I listed expenditure by the Department and the national health service on external consultancy services in each year from 1996–97 to 2003–04. It is not possible to identify separately the figures for consultancy spend on public private partnership consultants.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total external spend by his Department was on private finance initiative (PFI) consultants in each of the last two years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PFI consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by his Department over this period; and if he will make a statement. [200777]

Mr. Hutton: The external spend on private finance initiative consultancy work in each of the last two complete financial years was:

	Cost (£)	Number of firms
April 2002 to March 2003	207,171	6
April 2003 to March 2004	892,859	12

The fee charged in the majority of cases was for specific work at an agreed cost with the company. It is, therefore, not possible to calculate how many consultants were employed, nor how many consultancy days there were per year.

Dermatology

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the length of time that patients with severe skin diseases will wait to access new biological and immuno-suppressant therapies; and if he will make a statement; [209023]

(2) what impact he expects the cost of new biological and immuno-suppressant therapies to have on dermatology services and their resources; and if he will make a statement; [209024]

(3) if he will take steps to ensure that patients with chronic skin diseases have access to the widest possible range of treatments, including new biological and immuno-suppressant therapies. [209025]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has been commissioned to assess the clinical and cost effectiveness of Efalizumab and Etanercept in the treatment of psoriasis and are expected to provide guidance to the national health service by October 2005.

Once advice from NICE is available, we expect the NHS to fund recommended drugs where these are clinically appropriate. The NHS has three months from the date of publication of each technology appraisal guidance to provide funding for treatments.

The delivery of health services, including the funding of treatments recommended by NICE, rests with primary care trusts (PCTs). It is for PCTs to decide what services to provide for their populations, including the treatment of chronic skin conditions, as they are best placed to understand local health needs and commission services to meet them accordingly.

DPT Vaccine

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when mercury was removed from the diptheria, polio and tetanus (DPT) vaccine used in the UK; [209390]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the effect of mercury in the diptheria, polio and tetanus (DPT) vaccine (a) on the immune system and (b) in reaction with the MMR vaccine. [209391]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Prior to 27 September 2004, ethylmercury was present in the combined diphtheria, tetanus and whole-cell pertussis vaccine (DTwP) in the form of the preservative thiomersal. With the introduction of a new combined diphtheria, tetanus, acellular pertussis, inactivated polio and Haemophilus influenzae type b (DTaP/IPV/Hib) vaccine on this date, the routine childhood immunisation programme no longer includes a thiomersal-containing vaccine.

This change was made because the low risk of importation of polio in the United Kingdom provided the opportunity to move from the use of a live polio vaccine to an inactivated polio vaccine as well as the availability of an acellular pertussis vaccine which was as effective as the previous whole-cell pertussis. Measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccine does not contain (and never has contained) thiomersal.

There is no credible scientific evidence that demonstrates a mechanism through which thiomersal in DTP could interact with MMR. The issue of whether ethylmercury-containing vaccines could affect a constituent of another vaccine has been considered by the US Institute of Medicine (IOM) as part of their review of multiple immunizations and immune dysfunction (Immunization Safety Review: 'Multiple Immunizations and Immune Dysfunction', 2002). Several large studies have found no evidence of a link between either MMR vaccine or thiomersal-containing vaccines and neurodevelopmental disorders.

Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) drug and alcohol rehabilitation units and (b) drug rehabilitation beds there were in (i) England, (ii) North Somerset local authority and (iii) the constituency of Weston-super-Mare in each year since 1997. [210344]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 24 January 2005]: In England, there are currently 111 residential rehabilitation units and 2,414 drug rehabilitation beds.

In North Somerset, there are 12 rehabilitation units and 269 rehabilitation beds.

In Weston-super-Mare, there are 11 rehabilitation units and 213 rehabilitation beds.

Full details can be found on the National Treatment Agency's (NTA) residential services directory at www.nta.uk/residential/index. The NTA have published this information from summer 2003 and it is not available before this date.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals received treatment at drug rehabilitation centres in (a) North Somerset and (b) the constituency of Weston-super-Mare in each year since 1997; and what proportion of those receiving treatment discharged themselves from treatment services after less than 12 weeks. [210346]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The National Drug Monitoring System (NDTMS) has data for 2003–04. NDTMS data is not available for earlier years or at constituency level.

In 2003–04, there were 304 people in treatment in the two rehabilitation units in North Somerset for which data are available.

Out of the 304 people in treatment in North Somerset in 2003–04, 36 (12 per cent.) left or dropped out of treatment before 12 weeks.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Government will take steps to require all drug and alcohol rehabilitation centres (a) to be registered with (i) local authorities and (ii) other bodies and (b) to be subject to an inspection regime. [210350]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 24 January 2005]: From the commencement of the Care Standards Act 2000 in April 2002, the registration and inspection of drug and alcohol rehabilitation units as care homes became the responsibility of the National Care Standards Commission (NCSC). In April 2003, the NCSC became part of the new Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI), and NCSCs role of registration and inspection is now part of the work of CSCI.

The Fees and Frequency of Inspections Regulations 2004 require CSCI to inspect most establishments a minimum of once or twice a year.

Eastbourne District General Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on waiting lists at Eastbourne District General Hospital. [208103]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Eastbourne District General Hospital is part of East Sussex Hospitals National Health Service Trust. The Trust is currently achieving both elective admission and first out-patient appointment waiting time targets.

In March 2003, there were 403 patients, waiting over nine months for in-patient treatment. According to latest available data (November 2004), there were no patients waiting over nine months.

In March 2003, there were 302 patients waiting over 17 weeks for out-patient treatment. According to latest available data (September 2004), there were no patients waiting over 17 weeks.

EU Constitution (Rights of the Child)

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Healthwhether it is his Department's assessment that the requirement of article 1–3(3) of the proposed EU Constitution for the protection of the rights of the child applies to unborn children. [208083]

Mr. Hutton: The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union is a political declaration and currently not legally binding. It has been incorporated within the EU Constitution signed recently, and once that is ratified and in force, the Charter will be binding on the EU institutions, and on member states in so far as they are implementing EU law. However, the regulation of medical ethical issues, such as the rights of the unborn child, is not regulated under EU law, and as such, the Charter would not apply.

Food Supplements Directive

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of (a) the effect upon consumers and (b) the impact on his Department's work towards its policy objectives of the removal from the market after July of those food supplements which are regarded as safe by United Kingdom regulatory authorities but which do not meet the technical requirements of the Food Supplements Directive and the Food Supplements (England) Regulations 2003. [209798]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 6 December, 2004, Official Report, columns 351–52W.

Haringey Social Services

Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are employed in Haringey Social Services Department, broken down by grade; what the vacancy rate is; and how many care managers in specialist teams for mental health are employed. [210290]

Dr. Ladyman: At 30 September 2003 (the latest date for which data are available) the whole time equivalent number of staff directly employed by Haringey Social Services Department was 1,295. Data on the number of care managers in specialist teams solely for mental health are not available centrally, but as at 30 September 2003, the whole time equivalent number of care managers in specialist teams for mental health, people with learning disabilities and/or people with physical disabilities directly employed by Haringey was 10. Data on numbers of staff by grade and vacancy rates are not available centrally.

Hepatitis C

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was spent on hepatitis C treatment by Norfolk primary care trusts (PCTs) in each of the last five years; and what guidance he has issued to those PCTs on treatment for hepatitis C. [210247]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We do not hold the information requested about expenditure on hepatitis C treatment by Norfolk primary care trusts.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) published guidance on the use of interferon alfa (pegylated and non-pegylated) and ribavarin for the treatment of chronic hepatitis C in January 2004. The guidance is available on NICE'S website at http://www.nice.org.uk/page.aspx?o = 101627.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been allocated in 2004–05 for hepatitis C awareness and prevention. [210249]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Estimated central expenditure on activities connected with hepatitis C awareness-raising and prevention in 2004–05 is £780,000.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice the Government have given to primary care trusts concerning the relationship between hepatitis C and chronic disease. [210250]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The national health service hepatitis C awareness website at www.hepc.nhs.uk and associated publication, "Hepatitis C: essential information for professionals and guidance on testing", both contain information on hepatitis C and liver disease. Guidance from the National Institute of Clinical Excellence on the treatment of chronic hepatitis C also contains similar advice.

Homelessness

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how his Department provides access to (a) detoxification services and (b) primary health care for homeless people. [206596]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department provides access to detoxification services for homeless people via funding through the pooled drug treatment budget, which is £253.4 million in 2004–05, in addition to primary care trust (PCT) mainstream expenditure.

The National Treatment Agency, which was set up by Government in 2001 to increase the effectiveness and availability of drug treatment is working closely with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. This is to ensure that drug action teams, which have the responsibility for commissioning drug treatment services locally, including detoxification, include the needs of homeless drug users in their treatment plans.

Access is also provided by primary health care for homeless people through PCTs, which have a duty to secure the provision of primary medical services for their local populations, including any homeless people. The new contractual framework for primary medical services now offers PCTs a variety of contracting mechanisms, including provision of a service themselves, to help them to discharge this duty.

Hospital Infections

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what circumstances a product or treatment may bypass the Rapid Review Panel assessment; and if he will list the products or treatments that have done so. [208998]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Consideration by the rapid review panel may not be appropriate for products where the results of manufacturers' own studies have shown that the product has potential value for hospitals and other healthcare premises. To date, only the JohnsonDiversey Jonmaster microfibre cleaning system has not been considered by the panel on these grounds.

Information on products used to prevent and control healthcare associated infections is not collected centrally and it is not compulsory for manufacturers to go through the Health Protection Agency rapid review panel in order to make their product available in the national health service.

Intermediate Care Accommodation

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what provisions of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 the inspection of intermediate care accommodation is required. [204658]

Dr. Ladyman: Health care facilities providing intermediate care are inspected under the provisions of Part two of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Standards Act 2003. Social care facilities providing intermediate care may be inspected under the Care Standards Act 2000, if that care is provided by an establishment or agency as defined in sections four and five of that Act.

London Heart Hospital

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of purchasing the London Heart Hospital; whether the hospital is working at full capacity; and if he will make a statement. [210359]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 24 January 2005]: This is a matter for the Chair of the University College London Hospitals National Health Service Foundation Trust. I have written to the Chairman, Peter Dixon, informing him of the hon. Member's inquiry.

Telecommunications Masts

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent international research he has assessed on the health risks of mobile phone masts. [209299]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 18 January 2005]: The National Radiological Protection Board provides statutory advice on risks from exposure to radiation and electromagnetic fields. Their recent publication "Mobile Phones and Health 2004" (Documents of the NRPB, Vol. 15, No. 5, 2004) issued on 11 January has reviewed the possible health implications of mobile phones and base stations and made a number of recommendations. Appendix D of the report lists and summarises recent research reviews from a number of different countries. The report is available on the NRPB website www.nrpb.org and copies are available in the Library. The Government are currently considering the recommendations.

MRI Scans/Scanners

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting times for MRI scans were in (a) the South Staffordshire Hospital Trust and (b) each of the primary care trusts in Stoke-on-Trent in the last period for which figures are available. [209903]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of (a) a MRI scanner and (b) a CT scanner; and what resource funding is needed to run a scanner for a year. [210366]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The costs of both magnetic resonance image (MRI) scanners and computed tomography (CT) scanners are dependent on a number of factors, such as scanner specification, software and hardware options included and the price submitted by the supplier during the tender process.

The approximate capital purchase costs of an MRI scanner may range from £700,000 to £1,700,000, and £400,000 to £800,000 for a CT scanner.

Revenue funding for CT and MRI scanners will also vary according to staff numbers who operate these scanners directly or indirectly. These include radiologists, radiographers and administrative and clerical staff. There are also non-staff costs such as the maintenance contract, consumable use, and depreciation rate. The annual revenue costs for CT and MRI scanners may range from £250,000 to £400,000 per annum.

MRSA

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has evaluated on the proportion of people who carry MRSA in their nostrils with no adverse effect to themselves; and what precautions are taken to protect hospital patients from medical practitioners who may be carrying MRSA in this way. [208662]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 January 2005]: Many people are known to carry methicillin resistant "Staphylococcus aureus" (MRSA) with no adverse consequences to themselves or others but precise numbers are not available. The prevalence of MRSA in hospital settings varies considerably and transmission is controlled by good infection control and cleaning practices. The Government have published guidance including "Winning Ways and Towards Cleaner Hospitals and Lower rates of Infection" to help the national health service locally control the spread of infection.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government will provide compensation to those contracting MRSA in national health service hospitals and clinics. [209420]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Currently, compensation can only be awarded if a claim for clinical negligence has been made and a breach of duty of care towards the patient is admitted or proven.

Pressure Sores

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the incidence of pressure sores in hospitals in the last year for which figures are available; and how many patients were affected; [209890]

(2) what estimate he has made of the incidence of pressure sores in care homes in the last year for which figures are available; and for what proportion of patients this problem originated in the acute sector. [209891]

Dr. Ladyman: The data are not collected centrally. Pressure sores should be monitored as part of the clinical governance arrangements across the national health service and should also be included in Healthcare Commission inspections.

Public Bodies

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people are employed by the (a) Public Health Laboratory Service, (b) Family Health Services Special Health Authority and (c) NHS Counter Fraud and Security Management Service; what the running cost of each body was in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the future of each body; [203743]

(2) how many people are employed by (a) NHS Estates, (b) NHS Professionals, (c) UK Transplant, (d) the Independent Regulator of NHS Foundation Trusts and (e) the NHS University; what the running cost of each body was in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the future of each body; [203750]

(3) how many people are employed by the (a) Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health, (b) Mental Health Act Commission, (c) National Care Standards Commission, (d) NHS Appointments Commission and (e) Retained Organs Commission; what the running cost of each body was in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the future of each body; [203751]

(4) how many people are employed by the (a) Dental Vocational Training Authority, (b) Human Fertility and Embryology Authority, (c) National Clinical Assessment Authority, (d) National Blood Authority, (e) NHS Logistics Authority and (f) Prescription Pricing Authority; what the running cost of each body was in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the future of each body; [203752]

(5) how many people are employed by the (a) Health Development Agency, (b) NHS Information Agency, (c) NHS Modernisation Agency and (d) NHS Pensions Agency; what the running costs of each body was in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the future of each body. [203824]

Mr. Hutton: Figures for gross operating costs and staff for these bodies were published in the 20 July report, "Reconfiguring the Department of Health's Arm's Length Bodies". This report is available in the Library. Staffing levels and running costs will have changed since then and will be adjusted further in setting budgets for 2005–06.

The National Care Standards Commission and the Retained Organs Commission were dissolved on 1 April 2004.

A written ministerial statement about the future of these bodies was made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health on Tuesday 30 November, Official Report, columns 24–27WS. An implementation framework, setting out the timetable and process for a number of changes, was published and copies are available in the Library.

Social Services (Older People)

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to improve the assessment of older social services clients; and when he expects that the Government target of 70 per cent. completion within two weeks will be reached. [209657]

Dr. Ladyman: In July 2002, the Government announced an additional £1 billion for social services over three years from 2003–04 to 2005–06. We are investing in a range of initiatives to improve care for all older people including grants of £684 million in 2005–06. Councils can use this funding to speed up assessments and the provision of care.

I now expect councils with social services responsibilities to be meeting the December 2004 targets on assessment.

Stewart Report

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which of the recommendations from the Mobile Phone and Health 2004 report by Sir William Stewart have been implemented; [210263]

(2) whether he has met Sir William Stewart to discuss his report Mobile Phones and Health 2004; and if he will make a statement. [210268]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Sir William Stewart, in his capacity as Chairman of the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB), announced the new report, "Mobile Phones and Health 2004"—Documents of the NRPB, Vol. 15, No 5, 2004—on 11 January 2005. The report has provided a review of the progress made since the Stewart Report in May 2000 and made a number of observations and recommendations. The report is available on the NRPB website at www.nrpb.org and copies are available in the Library. Ministers have not met with Sir William to discuss the report and officials are currently considering the detailed recommendations.

Waiting Times

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting times for (a) inpatient and (b) outpatient appointments were in England in each of the last five years. [209916]

Mr. Hutton: Table 1 shows the median waiting time for an inpatient admission at end of month for patients still waiting from March 2000 to November 2004, England.

Table 1: Median waiting time for inpatient waiters

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the contracts signed by his special advisers differ from the Model Contract for Special Advisers. [207241]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister on 17 January 2004, Official Report, column 753W.

Substance Misuse

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which countries were visited by his Department's officials and Ministers in relation to substance misuse in 2004. [208935]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In 2004, officials visited Portugal, Poland and Belgium in relation to substance misuse.

No countries were visited by Departmental Ministers in 2004 in relation to substance misuse.

Written Answers to Questions

DEFENCE

Aircraft Carrier Project

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the Government's choice of programme integrator for the aircraft carrier project. [210690]

Mr. Ingram: The process to select the physical integrator for the future aircraft carrier project is ongoing, and we anticipate announcing the outcome shortly.

Cash Machines

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cash machines are currently provided on (a) bases and (b) other property owned, rented or otherwise used by his Department; how many of these cash machines (i) levy a surcharge for withdrawing cash and (ii) are free to use; whether any of the machines which are free to use are in areas that are only accessible by officers; and if he will make a statement. [204981]

Mr. Ingram: There are 268 machines on military bases in Great Britain, Northern Ireland and Germany. Of these, 257 levy a surcharge, leaving 11 machines that are free to use. The free machines are mainly located where troops are confined to base in some way, either for training or security reasons. At Brize Norton, the air base used by those returning from deployment around the world, including Iraq, there are two free machines to facilitate easy access to cash as soon as the troops reach the UK. There are no machines that are accessible by officers only.

Information on cash machines at other property owned, rented or otherwise used by the Ministry of Defence, is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Chinook HC2 Helicopter

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will place all (a) documents, (b) e-mails and (c) memoranda (i) produced and (ii) received by his Department concerning technical faults discovered in the Chinook HC2 helicopter in the Library; [210373]

(2) on how many occasions in each year since 1990 reviewing officers' conclusions differed from those of the President of an RAF Board of Inquiry. [210640]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants (Opposition Policy)

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library all factual material produced by civil servants in his Department relating to the costing of policies and pledges of Opposition parties since 1997. [206698]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 21 December 2004]: Officials are occasionally asked to provide factual information to allow Opposition party policies to be costed. Such work is carried out in accordance with the guidance set out in Volume One of the Directory of Civil Service Guidance.

Since 1997, examples have included information to support costing of Opposition policies for defence in Scotland in 1999, Conservative policies on increases in the size of the regular Army and the Territorial Army in 2000 and Conservative policies on changes to the infantry structure in 2004.

Cluster Munitions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on (i) improving the reliability of cluster munitions and (ii) finding militarily-adequate alternatives to cluster munitions; and if he will make a statement. [200298]

Mr. Ingram: No research has been commissioned in respect of air launched cluster munitions as they are gradually being withdrawn from service over the next five years. Recent statistics show an overall failure rate which is in line with expectations. For Ground Launched systems, the Multiple Launch Rocket System (MLRS) is due to be replaced by the future GMLRS Area Effects Munition (AEM) with a planned in service date of early 2007. The new system has bomblets fitted with a self destruct faze giving a failure rate of less than 1 per cent. Whilst the Shell 155mm HE L20A1 Extended Range Bomblet Shell (ERBS) has a maximum failure rate of 2 per cent. at the 95 per cent. confidence level the bomblet fuze has a self destruct mechanism. Analysis shows that for a significant percentage of likely targets the bomblet remains the most effective munition.

Disposal Services Agency

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts have been signed by his Department's Disposal Services Agency in the calendar year 2004 for equipment directly sold on a government-to-government basis; and if he will list (a) the equipment concerned and (b) the country to which it has gone or is going. [208779]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence's Disposal Services Agency (DSA) signed contracts with the Dutch Air Force for one ex-Qinetiq Hercules aircraft (to be delivered in 2005) and with the Norwegian Defence Forces for a quantity of Stingray torpedoes and depth charges (delivered in December 2004).

The DSA also signed contracts in 2004 for the supply of equipment to Jordan. These equipments have been sold in support of the Al Hussein Project, which has been established under an inter-governmental memorandum of understanding to facilitate the transfer of ex-MOD surplus Challenger 1 Tank assets. All of the following are sales agreements for support equipments:

Quantity	Equipment
2	Surplus Jones IF8 Wheeled Workshop Cranes (delivered in December 2004)
20	Surplus Chieftain Armoured Repair and Recovery Vehicles (19 to be delivered between October and December 2004 and the DSA plans to ship the last vehicle in March/April 2005)
6	Surplus M578 Tracked Cranes and a package of surplus spares and support equipment (export of these six items will be subject to US Government approval—delivery probable 2005)

Hawk Advanced Jet Trainer

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether he intends to invite BAE Systems to underwrite the through life costs of the Hawk Advanced Jet Trainer; [204832]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the in-service date for the Hawk Advanced Jet Trainer; [204833]

(3) what the main provisions of the gain share agreement between his Department and BAE Systems in respect of the Hawk Advanced Jet Trainer are; [204834]

(4) what design changes the Integrated Project Team for the Hawk Advanced Jet Trainer proposes to make; [204836]

(5) what he expects the through life costs of the Hawk Advanced Jet Trainer to be. [204837]

(6) when he expects to sign the contract for the (a) development phase and (b) production phase of the Hawk Advanced Jet Trainer. [204838]

Mr. Ingram: We expect the Hawk 128 Advanced Jet Trainer aircraft to cost approximately £3.5 billion "Through Life", which amounts to some 20 years. The aircraft will be procured conventionally and paid for by the taxpayer, therefore there is no requirement for BAE Systems to underwrite the Through Life Costs (TLC).

The Ministry of Defence and BAE Systems have defined and agreed a mature Hawk 128 aircraft specification. We do not envisage any significant design changes to the specification during the Design and Development phase.

Gain share incentivises a Company to reduce costs and in return receive financial benefit. This information is commercially sensitive and it would be inappropriate to comment further.

The Design and Development Contract (DDC) was awarded to BAE Systems. on 22 December 2004. Final aircraft numbers, delivery schedule and In-Service Date will all be set at the main investment decision point which is planned for Spring 2006. at which time approval will be sought to place a Production Contract.

Interceptor Missiles

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government have made a decision regarding the stationing of interceptor missiles in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [210412]

Mr. Hoon: No request has been made and no decision is necessary.

Iraq

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK doctors are working in (a) detention centres and (b) prison centres in Iraq. [209282]

Mr. Ingram: The only United Kingdom detention facility in Iraq is the military Divisional Temporary Detention Facility (DTDF) in Basrah. There is one military doctor allocated full-time to the DTDF. We do not hold information about UK civilian doctors or other detention facilities in Iraq.

Military Exercises (Deaths)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have been killed while on military exercises in each of the last three years. [205922]

Mr. Caplin: Between 1 January 2001 and 31 December 2003 (the last three years for which validated figures are held), nine Service personnel have died from injury or poisoning-related causes whilst on military exercises. Of these, six died in 2001, two in 2002 and one in 2003.

Procurement Budget

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 12 January 2005, Official Report, column 574W, on the procurement budget, how the figure of £300 million is comprised; from what sources he has calculated that figure; and if he will make a statement. [209953]

Mr. Ingram: Our estimate that some £300 million annually is saved to the defence procurement budget has been constructed using information received from the defence industry on the value of export orders won, and on the share of fixed overhead costs in defence exports. Defence exports comprise services as well as goods, and the estimate also reflects an assumption that the value of non-equipment exports contain no fixed overhead costs.

Royal Gloucestershire, Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what means he communicated his decision to disband the Royal Gloucestershire, Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment to serving officers and men. [208829]

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps were taken to inform members of the Royal Gloucestershire, Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment that they would be disbanded in advance of the commanding officer's televised announcement. [209193]

Mr. Ingram: As the professional head of the Army, the Chief of the General Staff had responsibility for communicating the decision to disband the Royal Gloucestershire, Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment down the chain of command. On the morning of the announcement, the Chief of the General Staff personally telephoned the Colonel Commandant of the Prince of Wales's Division and, in this instance, also the Colonel of the Royal Gloucestershire, Berkshire and Wiltshire Regiment to inform them of the decision and pending announcement. This was then relayed to the rest of the regiment by the Regiment's Commanding Officer.

Submarines

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many submarines are in service in the Royal Navy; and what the age is of each vessel. [210311]

Mr. Ingram: The Royal Navy has four Vanguard class (SSBN) and 11 Swiftsure and Trafalgar class (SSN) submarines in service. Based on their in service dates the age of each boat in 2005 is as follows:

	Years
HMS Vanguard	12
HMS Victorious	10
HMS Vigilant	9
HMS Vengeance	6
HMS Sovereign	31
HMS Superb	29
HMS Sceptre	27
HMS Spartan	26
HMS Trafalgar	22
HMS Turbulent	21
HMS Tireless	20
HMS Torbay	18
HMS Trenchant	16
HMS Talent	15
HMS Triumph	14

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Boscastle

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) financial and (b) other assistance the Government has (i) made available and (ii) promised to the community of Boscastle in Cornwall following the flood last year; and if she will make a statement. [209781]

Mr. Morley: Defra has overall policy responsibility for flood and coastal erosion risk in England. Defra funds most of the Environment Agency's flood management activities in England and provides grant aid on a project by project basis to the other flood and coastal defence operating authorities (local authorities and internal drainage boards) to support their investment in improvement projects to manage flood and coastal erosion risk.

The Government are assisting, in whatever ways they can, local efforts to help the community of Boscastle recover from the flooding on 16 August.

A Bellwin scheme of emergency financial assistance to North Cornwall District Council (NCDC) has been announced by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) in respect of the immediate action the Council took to safeguard life and property and the clear up costs it has incurred. NCDC has submitted a claim and the ODPM made an interim payment on 20 January 2005.

Business Link (operated by the Small Business Service, an Agency of the DTI) is providing a dedicated Business Adviser to Boscastle for a 12 month period and has made arrangements to cover interest and administration charges for any affected small or medium-sized enterprise requiring additional bank borrowing as a consequence of the floods.

The Government Office for the South West, Regional Development Agency, Business Link and other local agencies are working through a Boscastle Regeneration Steering Group to consider and address the short and longer term regeneration needs of the community and support for its businesses. Objective 1 funding has been offered towards a £20,000 Framework Plan commissioned by North Cornwall District Council for the regeneration needs of the area and £93,000 towards a £300,000 tourism recovery initiative.

Bovine TB

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the latest figures are for the incidence of bovine TB, broken down by holding. [211080]

Mr. Bradshaw: Bovine tuberculosis surveillance data are not available on a holding basis. However, detailed TB statistics, broken down by county in areas of high TB incidence, or by Animal Health Divisional Office (AHDO) in other areas, are published each month on the Defra website at:

www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/stats/index.htm

The published data include the number of TB herd breakdowns in each county or AHDO area.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the devolved administrations concerning the content, frequency and timing of television advertisements placed by her Department on UK-wide satellite television channels. [201322]

Alun Michael: Defra has never placed television advertisements on UK-wide satellite television channels.

Environmental Scheme Costs

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received on the fees charged for the administration and supervision of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. [209846]

Mr. Morley: The subsistence charging amendments to the Greenhouse Gas Emissions Trading Scheme Regulations went out to consultation in October last year (22 October–3 December). Approximately 30 responses from companies have been received. Defra will be publishing a response to some of the questions raised on its website shortly, and the consultation responses will be made available in the Defra library in due course.

EU Emissions Trading Scheme

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs or what reasons she does not envisage a level playing field for the implementation of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme for shipping and aviation. [202198]

Mr. Morley: We do envisage a level playing field for intra-EU aviation flights and the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. As outlined in the 2003 Air Transport White Paper, "The Future of Air Transport", the Government are actively pursuing the inclusion of intra-EU aviation in the EU Emissions Trading Scheme, and progress on this policy will be a priority for the UK Presidency of the EU in 2005. If the UK is successful, it is hoped that intra-EU aviation could be included within the second phase of the Scheme, from 2008 or soon after.

Dealing with all matters maritime, including emissions from ships, is a competence at IMO (the International Maritime Organisation). The nature of international shipping is such that it needs to be treated very differently to all other modes of transport. This is important, as most ships are registered outside of the EU (e.g. Panama). We continue to lobby member states of the IMO to tackle this issue. To date this has met with little success, as the political discussions surrounding environment issues are often blocked outright.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Emissions Trading Scheme will enter into force. [209848]

Mr. Morley: The Greenhouse Gas Emissions Trading Scheme Regulations (2003) state:

> "No person shall carry out a Schedule 1 activity resulting in specified emissions after 1 January 2005, except under and to the extent authorised by a greenhouse gas emissions permit."

UK Regulators have issued about 1,150 permits, and conditions under those permits require installations covered by the Scheme to monitor and report their emissions of carbon dioxide.

Farm Payments

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to publish proposals for the public disclosure of Common Agricultural Policy payments at a farm level; and if she will make a statement. [208024]

Alun Michael: Requests for information about subsidy payments made to farmers in the past will be considered by the Rural Payments Agency. In reaching a decision account will have to be taken of the resource implications of gathering the information and of assessing the balance between the public interest and the commercial or privacy implications for the subject. We are still considering these implications in light of requests received and hope to be able to make the position clear in the near future.

For the new single payment we are minded to publish information as a matter of course, when it becomes available, but we are still considering the options for doing so.

Farm Plastics Recycling Schemes

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farm plastics recycling schemes are in place. [211079]

Mr. Morley: Currently, there is one recycling scheme for farm plastics in place to my knowledge. However, Chapter 8 of the consultation paper on the draft Waste Management (England and Wales) Regulations 2005 discusses the introduction of a voluntary or statutory producer responsibility scheme for the collection and recovery of non-packaging plastic waste from farms. The consultation paper was published on 9 December 2004 and is available in the Library of the House and on my Department's website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult/agwaste-regs/index.htm. Views are invited by 18 March 2005. Plastic packaging waste from farms and elsewhere is already the subject of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended).

Freedom of Information

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what procedures she has put in place to respond to requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 to disclose the level of EU and domestic support made available to individual agricultural producers and landowners. [208265]

Alun Michael: Requests for information about subsidy payments made to farmers in the past will be considered by the Rural Payments Agency. In reaching a decision account will have to be taken of the resource implications of gathering the information and of assessing the balance between the public interest and the commercial or privacy implications for the subject.

For the new single payment, being introduced this year, we are minded to publish information as a matter of course but we are still considering the options for doing so.

Global Dimming

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the dampening effects of global dimming on mean temperatures (a) in the UK and (b) worldwide. [210973]

Mr. Morley: Aerosol pollution cools the climate and partially offsets some of the warming due to greenhouse gases but we don't know with certainty by how much. Defra's Climate Prediction Programme at the Hadley Centre has been investigating the impacts of aerosol on climate change and the risks of acceleration of climate change for some time. Good climate models already include the effects of aerosol and look at how climate change could be affected if the whole range of uncertainty in aerosol is included in model calculations. The result is an increase to the uncertainty range of climate sensitivity both globally and in the UK.

The climate change could therefore be greater than previously thought, with changes in global temperature of up to10°C by 2100, compared to 6°C as represented by the IPCC. However, this is based on the highest emissions scenario, so should be seen as being at the extreme end of the projected range of future climate change.

Growth Antibiotics

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the consumption of antibiotics used to promote farm animal growth was in England in the most recent year for which figures are available. [210845]

Mr. Bradshaw: The VMD collects and publishes figures annually on the UK sales of veterinary antimicrobials, including those sold for use as growth promoters. It is reasonable to assume that there is a close correlation between these figures and the quantities used in the UK. The figures are supplied by the manufacturers on a voluntary basis. The reports are available on the VMD website at www.vmd.gov.uk under the publications and general tabs or from Dr. Kay Goodyear (telephone 01932 338409).

The most recent figure for sales of antimicrobial growth promoters in the UK is 36 tonnes of active ingredient in 2003.

Lead Pipes

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many lead water supply mains and pipes have been replaced since 2000; [208879]

(2) how many kilometres of water distribution mains have been renovated since 2000 to reduce problems associated with discolouration of water. [208883]

Mr. Morley: To deal with water quality problems, including discolouration, water companies renovated 15,460 kilometres of water distribution mains between 2000 and the end of 2003.

Water companies no longer have lead water supply mains. They replaced some 314,000 lead communication pipes between 2000 and the end of March 2004. The communication pipe is the water company owned section of pipe which conveys water from the supply main to the curtilage of a consumer's premises where it connects to the consumer's supply pipe.

Metered Water

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many households within the Greater London area use metered water. [211048]

Mr. Morley: Figures on water customers are collected by water company supply area, not by administrative area. The Office of Water Services (Ofwat) forecast is that 656,500 households who are customers of Thames Water will have a metered water supply in 2004–05.

Mobile Phone Masts

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will discuss with mobile telephone operators the potential for using mobile phone masts to disseminate warnings of severe weather or other disasters that require localised warning messages. [209140]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is responsible for developing and operating the service to warn of possible flooding from watercourses and the sea in England.

It is technically feasible to use mobile phone network providers to disseminate localised warning messages, but certain agreements and procedures would be required. I understand the agency is discussing this possibility with mobile phone network providers.

Additionally, the agency will introduce Floodline Warnings Direct later this year. The £9.4 million warning system will enable the agency to use a range of new channels and technologies to simultaneously warn more homeowners, businesses, emergency services and local authorities of the threat of flooding.

It will be the country's first multi-channel warning system and will exploit current and emerging technologies to deliver warning messages simultaneously via telephone, mobile phone, pager, e-mail and fax and, in due course, SMS text messaging, digital TV and radio.

Members of the public who choose to receive the new service will be able to elect to receive warning messages via their mobile phones (voice and/or text) if they provide the agency with their contact numbers.

Nuclear Waste

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume of (a) low level, (b) intermediate level and (c) high level nuclear waste has gone missing in each of the last five years; and what percentage has been recovered. [210270]

Mr. Morley: None.

An inventory of UK radioactive waste stocks is produced periodically by my Department. The latest edition was published in 2002 providing information on sources, quantities and properties of waste stocks as of 1 April 2001. Work on a 2004 inventory is currently under way.

Oil Contamination

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of oil leaks on land in each of the last four years contaminated (a) sources of drinking water and (b) water used for recreation; what requirements exist to report such occurrences; what powers exist to require remedial action to be taken; and what the estimated cost was to public funds of such occurrences. [210356]

Mr. Morley: With respect to the proportion of oil leaks on land over the last four years, these data are not available. However, the Oil Care Campaign has commissioned research (sponsored by the oil industry) to review all sources of information on the causes of oil pollution. The conclusions of this work, including provisional data for 2004, are due for publication in the next two months.

There are no general requirements for such spillages to be reported, although the Environment Agency (EA) encourages their reporting and has an emergency hotline for this purpose. In addition, the water companies are required to notify the Drinking Water Inspectorate of any incident which affects drinking water quality or where there may be a risk to consumers' health. This includes all instances of chemical contamination including oil leakage/spillage.

The EA has the power to serve a Works Notice in order to prevent the immediate threat of water pollution or to ensure that remedial action is taken following an incident. However, in most cases, the necessary action is secured without recourse to the formal issuing of a notice.

The estimated cost of such incidents to public funds is not readily available. However, the EA expects to be able to provide some indicative costs at the same time as the incident data.

Pheasants

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the change in use of large moveable pens for the rearing of pheasants following the removal of the chemical DMZ; and whether these pens are subject to (a) planning permission and (b) business rates. [207308]

Mr. Bradshaw: DMZ (dimetridazole) is the active ingredient in an antiprotozoal that was indicated for use in game birds for blackhead. Its use in food producing animals was banned by the European Commission for food safety reasons. An alternative way to prevent blackhead is to change husbandry practices such as rearing each year's birds on new pasture. We have not made any assessment of the changes made by producers to help prevent blackhead. Defra is not responsible for the rules governing planning permission and business rates.

Research and Development

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what expenditure was made by (a) her Department and (b) agencies for which her Department is responsible on research projects by companies with headquarters in (i) the UK, (ii) other EU member states and (iii) non-EU states in each year since 2001–02. [206989]

Alun Michael: The Department does not keep this level of information on the organisations at which it funds research.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much and what percentage of her Department's expenditure went on research and development in each year between 2001–02 and 2003–04. [207004]

Alun Michael: The figures are:

	Defra R&D funding (£ million)	Percentage of total Defra expenditure
2001–02	144	3.1
2003–04	146	3.4

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many research and development procurement opportunities were disseminated by the Department to small and medium-sized enterprises registered through the Small Business Research Initiative in each year since 2001–02 to date; and what the value of such opportunities was in each case. [207011]

Alun Michael: Defra fully supports the Small Business Research Initiative and all Defra research competitions are open to small businesses. Since 2002–03, when Defra began recording this information, our records show that we have funded research with small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) (both as main contractor and sub-contractor) as follows:

	Number of SMEs	Value (£)
2002–03	93	2,893,756
2003–04	53	3,131,117
2004–05 (Incomplete)	14	2,734,526

Fairshare Scheme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 713W, on tax credits, whether the fareshare scheme, previously funded under the Landfill Tax Credit Scheme, is eligible for funding under the Waste Implementation Programme; and if she will make a statement. [210978]

Mr. Morley: In November I announced details of the Community Sector Support Programme, which is being administered by the Waste Implementation Programme. This funding package includes one year of grant support in 2005–06 for projects dealing with municipal waste, for which the deadline for applications was 4 January.

Wood Waste

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are being taken to divert wood from landfill to (a) coal-fired and (b) non-coal burning power stations. [210895]

Mr. Morley: The Government are committed to reducing the UK's reliance on landfill, in order to reduce its environmental impact and because landfilling is a missed opportunity to recover value from waste. This commitment applies to waste wood as it does to any other waste material. Using wood as a fuel in power stations is one alternative to disposal in landfills and, under the forthcoming review of the Renewables Obligation, the case for amending eligibility rules regarding electricity generated from mixed wastes, including wood, will be considered.

There are other ways of diverting wood from landfill, such as re-using or recycling it as a raw material in construction or for manufacturing wood based products. To encourage this, wood is one of the priority materials under the Government-funded Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), which was established to create markets for recycled materials. By 2006 WRAP are aiming for a 150,000 tonne increase in the recycling of waste wood into added-value end markets.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the amount of wood which is disposed of in landfill sites; and what action she plans to take to reduce that amount. [210896]

Mr. Morley: The Government have no basis for estimating the amount of wood being disposed of in landfills. However, they are committed to reducing the UK's reliance on landfill, in order to reduce its environmental impact and because landfilling is a missed opportunity to recover value from waste. This commitment applies to wood as it does to any other waste material. As a result, the Government encourage the re-use or recycling of wood as a raw material in construction or in manufacturing wood based products or used as a fuel, rather than being sent to landfill. In particular, wood is one of the priority materials under the Government-funded Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), which was established to create markets for recycled materials. By 2006 WRAP are aiming for a 150,000 tonne increase in the recycling of waste wood into added-value end markets.

PRIME MINISTER

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions when his special advisers have made appearances before parliamentary select committees. [210504]

The Prime Minister: Alastair Campbell, my former Director of Communications and Strategy, gave evidence to the Public Administration Select Committee on 23 June 1998 and to the Foreign Affairs Select Committee on Wednesday 25 June 2003.

WALES

Dental Services

9. Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to meet the new Minister for Health and Social Services of the National Assembly for Wales to discuss dental services in Wales. [209965]

Mr. Touhig: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Congleton (Ann Winterton). As I said then, I have already met the Assembly's new Health Minister and we plan to have further meetings and discussions in the coming weeks.

Pupil Referral Units

10. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with his secretaries in the National Assembly for Wales on the availability of pupil referral units in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [209966]

Mr. Touhig: I regularly meet Assembly Ministers to discuss a range of issues, including education.

Data for Wales indicate a significant rise in the number of referral unit places and pupils. The number of pupil referral units has risen from 24 in 1997 to 31 in 2004 and the number of pupils registered in the units has also risen from 49 to 1,058 in the same timescale.

Manufacturing Industry

11. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the state of the manufacturing industry in Wales. [209967]

Mr. Hain: Manufacturing remains subject to intense global competitive pressures but, despite this, the sector in Wales still makes an important contribution to the Welsh economy accounting for 21 per cent. of Gross Value Added and employing around 180,000 people, or 16 per cent. of the workforce.

Child Trust Fund

13. Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with his Cabinet colleagues on the implementation of the child trust fund in Wales. [209969]

Mr. Hain: I have regular discussions with Cabinet colleagues on a range of issues, including the Child Trust Fund. The Chancellor and the Assembly First Minister have met with the Child Poverty Tax Group and End Child Poverty Network to discuss ways of ensuring the CTF makes a maximum contribution to tackling child poverty in Wales.

Pensioner Poverty

14. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with his Cabinet colleagues on tackling pensioner poverty in Wales. [209970]

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with his Cabinet colleagues on tackling pensioner poverty in Wales. [209963]

Mr. Touhig: I have regular discussions with Cabinet colleagues on a range of issues including tackling pensioner poverty in Wales.

The Government are tackling pensioner poverty with an extra £10 billion to be spent on pensioners in 2005–06. The Assembly is also making £10 million available to 2006–07 for its strategy for Older People in Wales. The strategy will plan for an ageing society and improve services for older people in Wales.

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his Department in the last three years. [207818]

Mr. Touhig: The Freedom of Information Act does not make specific categories of information available, but operates on the presumption that all information held by public authorities should be available, subject to the 24 exemptions of the Act.

Whether or not information is exempt under the Act requires the exercise of judgment in each case. The majority of the exemptions also require that the public interest in releasing the information should be weighed against the public interest in withholding it. If the public interest in disclosing the information outweigh the public interest in withholding it the information must be disclosed. The assessment of the public interest has to be made in all the circumstances of the case, on a case by case basis as far as each request is concerned.

Welsh Economy

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with Cabinet colleagues on the effects of the Chancellor's proposals in the pre-Budget report on the economy in Wales. [209968]

Mr. Hain: Regular ones. As a result of the pre-Budget report, an additional £38.5 million will be invested in Wales, measures to improve skills, productivity and entrepreneurship and Council tax support.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Parliamentary Questions

Paul Holmes: To ask the Leader of the House from which Government agencies letters in response to parliamentary questions are (a) published in Hansard and (b) placed in the Library; and what criteria are applied in deciding which answering mechanism should be used. [210337]

Mr. Hain: All letters from Government Agencies in response to parliamentary questions should be sent to the Official Report for printing, unless they contain personal or confidential information. If the letter is longer than the Official Report would normally publish (a maximum of four A4 pages in length in material received), notification will be printed that the response is available in the Library of the House. The response will be available to Members in the Library and on application to the House of Commons Information Office.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

CPS Prosecutions (Essex)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor General how many prosecutions were undertaken by the Crown Prosecution Service in (a) Essex and (b) Southend-on-Sea in each year since 1997; and how many resulted in (i) conviction and (ii) acquittal. [209473]

The Solicitor-General: Cases prosecuted by the Crown Prosecution Service do not all conclude in a conviction or an acquittal. The difference between the number of defendant files prosecuted and the number of defendants resulting in conviction or acquittal will reflect the defendants that did not proceed to trial or conviction. They will be classed under the Area's performance figures as defendant cases resulting in a discontinuance or discharged committal, or defendants that are on a warrant or have been written off.

Cases undertaken by CPS Essex since 1997

	Number of defendants prosecuted	Number of defendants convicted	Number of acquittals

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Palestine

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of Palestinian economic regeneration. [210700]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Prospects for Palestinian economic regeneration are bleak unless the underlying causes of economic decline and poverty are addressed. The Government of Israel need to ease the system of restrictions on the movement of people and goods imposed since the beginning of the "intifada". The Palestinian Authority also needs to invigorate its programme of governance reforms in order to create an internal environment more attractive to private investors. The UK is working closely with international partners on both these issues. Economic issues will be a key theme of the London meeting on 1 March. This will be an opportunity to support the new Palestinian leadership in strengthening its institutional capacity and will also help stimulate progress on the Road Map towards a settlement which will allow the Palestinian economy to grow again.

TRANSPORT

Concessionary Travel

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the number of pensioners eligible for free bus passes and travel; and what percentage of the pensioner population this represents. [208970]

Charlotte Atkins: In England, there are five areas where older people (men and women aged 60 and over) are offered free concessionary travel on local bus services. These are the London boroughs, Merseyside, Crawley, Redditch and Thurrock. Reading and the West Midlands offer free local bus travel to residents aged 65 and over. Free local bus travel is also offered by Bournemouth and Plymouth to residents aged 80 and over and by Rossendale to residents aged 90 and over.

We estimate that 1.96 million older people are eligible for free bus travel in these areas, representing 18.9 per cent. of older people in England. The remaining 8.42 million older people in England are entitled to at least the statutory half-fare minimum requirement on bus services, with no charge for the pass, though local authorities can offer more generous schemes and many provide concessions between half fares and free travel, such as flat fares. There are 9.19 million pensioners in England (men aged 65 and over, women aged 60 and over) of which 1.79 million are eligible for free local bus travel. This represents 19.4 per cent. of pensioners in England.

Some other authorities offer the choice of free travel with a charge for the annual concessionary travel pass as an alternative to the statutory minimum half fare with a free annual pass. Some local authorities also extend their concessionary fare schemes to cover other forms of public transport—including the free schemes in the London boroughs, Merseyside, and Crawley and the partially free scheme in the West Midlands.

Figures are based on Office of National Statistics 2003 population estimates.

DVLA (Fines)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fines were issued to drivers for failing to notify the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency about a change of address in each of the last five years. [210165]

Mr. Jamieson: The offence of failure to notify a change of address or personal details is normally taken into account as part of investigations into other more serious driving and traffic offences.

Any penalties subsequently imposed by courts for major offences may incorporate a penalty for non-notification, but the court statistics only record the prime offence(s). There are no statistics available for this specific offence of failure to notify changes.

Some 2.7 million replacement driving licences are issued annually by DVLA in response to notifications from drivers of changes to their personal details.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last two years. [202413]

Charlotte Atkins: Pursuant to my answer of 15 December 2004, Official Report, columns 1094–96W the revised energy costs recorded by the Department for the periods 2002–03 and 2003–04 are as follows:

	Electricity		Gas		Oil		Total
	2002–03	2003–04	2002–03	2003–04	2002–03	2003–04	2002–03	2003–04

Overall the decrease in costs from 2002–03 to 2003–04 is 4 per cent. although the figures for costs alone can be misleading if not placed within the wider context of changes in unit price, areas measured, levels of consumption and improved record keeping. The DfT estate comprises some 1,680 properties of varying size, use and nature of occupation and is therefore not possible to make any comprehensive or definitive statements about energy cost changes on such a diverse estate, which may be attributable to these and other factors.

Increases and decreases in unit charges and area occupied can also mask efforts to improve energy efficiency so a better measure of performance is consumption at those properties where energy monitoring is both possible and carried out where the overall usage was down 2.2 per cent. over the same period. For more details on consumption I would refer the hon. Member to my answer of 20 October 2004, Official Report, columns 687–88W to the hon. Member for Ashford (Mr. Green).

The Department will continue to aim to reduce energy consumption and meet other energy targets set out in the Framework for Sustainable Development in the Government Estate.

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the running costs of the Department were in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) electricity, (b) water, (c) gas, (d) telephones, (e) mobile telephones and (f) televisions. [206679]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport was formed in May 2002 and as a result the information provided relates only from the years 2002–03 onwards.

The Department's running costs for the items requested are shown in the following table:

	2002–03			2003–04

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his Department in the last three years. [207813]

Charlotte Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Leslie) on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W.

Railways

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the likely growth in passenger numbers on the rail network over the next (a) five and (b) 10 years, broken down by (i) national rail network, (ii) First Great Western franchise area and (iii) First Great Western Link franchise area. [210440]

Mr. McNulty: The information is not available in the form requested. The Strategic Rail Authority's (SRA) "Capacity Utilisation Policy: Network Utilisation Strategy" document, published in June 2003, states that their planning assumption is that demand growth between 2001–02 and 2010–11 will be in the region of 20–30 per cent. The SRA's "Great Western Main Line Route Utilisation Strategy" consultation document, published in January, states that overall passenger growth for the Great Western Main Line area is forecast to be around 18 per cent. between 2002–03 and 2011–12.

Roads

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library advice which he received from (a) the Highways Agency and (b) departmental officials on determining priorities between road schemes, prior to his recent announcements on road spending. [208216]

Mr. Jamieson: We have no plans to do so at present.

Secondment

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the people working within his Department on secondment from the private sector, broken down by (a) the organisation or industry they came from and (b) the policy responsibilities they have been given. [208622]

Charlotte Atkins: The information requested is as follows:

Department for Transport and the Agencies

Name	Organisation	Role
David Sterland	British Airways	Project management role to co-ordinate the preparation. monitoring and evaluation of a package of agreed. prioritised and strategic aviation and maritime security bids to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Opportunities Fund.
Mike Lloyd	Mercer Management Consulting	Providing economic advice on all Railways Economy issues. particularly franchising, strategy. 10-year plan review and West Coast Mainline.
Nick Joyce	Ernst & Young	Corporate finance adviser.

Single-hulled Tankers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ban single-hulled tankers from operating in UK coastal waters; and if he will make a statement. [208686]

Mr. Jamieson: The UK has played a key role in both the International Maritime Organisation (MO) and the EU in negotiating an acceleration of a programme to phase out single hull tankers from world trade, while ensuring continuity of energy supply. The IMO has recently agreed to an accelerated programme, under which the large majority of single hull tankers will have been phased out by the end of 2010. Single hull tankers which will be under 25 years of age at the end of 2010 will be allowed to continue in service until the end of 2015, or on reaching age 25 if earlier, but only if they first pass a rigorous assessment of their condition. Based on the IMO agreement, there is a EU Regulation, now in force, which prohibits single hull tankers entering or leaving EU ports and anchorages when carrying heavy grades of oil as cargo.

The United Nations Convention of the Law of the Sea, to which the UK acceded in 1997, gives rights of innocent passage though territorial waters for ships which comply with internationally agreed standards governing their construction and use, which includes single hull tankers which have yet to reach their phase out date. Secretary of State has no powers to curtail such rights, which benefit UK ships when participating in world trade.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Child Abuse

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what duties are placed on (a) headmasters and (b) governors of independent schools to report suspicions of child abuse by members of staff. [210441]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The duty to report suspicions of child abuse by members of staff in independent schools is placed on proprietors rather than head teachers and governors. Proprietors are required to make a report to my Department when they have ceased to use a person's services, or when a person has ceased to provide their services, on grounds that they are unsuitable to work with children, on grounds of misconduct, or on grounds relating to the person's health where issues are raised about the safety or welfare of children.

Proprietors of independent schools have a duty to safeguard and promote the welfare of pupils at their school and must ensure that their school has procedures for dealing with allegations of abuse against staff which comply with locally agreed inter-agency procedures.

Childminders

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) registered childminders and (b) registered childminder places were available in 2004. [210747]

Margaret Hodge: At 31 December 2004 the numbers of registered childminders and registered childminder places in England were 71,000 and 318,100 respectively.

Statistics on the number of childcare places registered in England were published on 19 January 2005 in a report by Ofsted "Registered Childcare Providers and Places in England, 31 December 2004". The report is available on the Ofsted website, www.ofsted.gov.uk/publications.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) childminders and (b) childminder places were registered in Stoke-on-Trent in 2004. [210860]

Margaret Hodge: At 31 December 2004 the numbers of registered childminders and registered childminder places in Stoke on Trent local education authority area were 300 and 1,300 respectively.

Statistics on the number of child care places registered in England were published on 19 January 2005 in a report by Ofsted "Registered Childcare Providers and Places in England, 31 December 2004". The report is available on the Ofsted website, www.ofsted.gov.uk/publications.

Departmental Staff

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of her Department's staff is based in London. [208036]

Derek Twigg: Information on regional distribution of staff is available in the Libraries of both Houses, and also at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management information/statistical_information/statistics/contents_for_civil_service_statistics_2003_report/index.asp

Table D shows the numbers of staff by regional distribution. Figures relating to 1 April 2004 are due to be published during February 2005.

DES/EU Co-operation

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions her Department has had with the European Commission on the supporting, co-ordinating and complementary action that may be taken by the EU in the field of vocational training under article I-17 of the proposed EU constitution. [209585]

Dr. Howells: None. The Treaty has not yet been ratified by the United Kingdom and several other member states and is therefore not yet in force.

Education Funding

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding has been spent on (a) higher and (b) further education in Stoke on Trent in each year since 1997. [209911]

Dr. Howells: Public funding for Staffordshire university from the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) is shown in the first table.

[1] HEFCE is not able to provide data on funding allocated in respect of students ordinarily resident in Stoke on Trent.

[2] HEFCE data is provided for Staffordshire university and its partner colleges in the Staffordshire University Regional Federation (SURF), who are funded by HEFCE through the university. The figures therefore include funding not just for Staffordshire university's Stoke campus and Stoke-on-Trent College, but for the university's other campuses in Stafford and Lichfield and its various partner FE Colleges across Staffordshire and Shropshire. We are not able to disaggregate funding for these constituent parts as the university and its partners are funded as a single entity through a block grant.

[3] Funding figures show HEFCE recurrent grant for teaching and research only. They exclude other HEFCE grants such as for capital and other special initiatives. They also exclude funding from other public sources, such as the NHS, TTA, LSC, research councils etc.

[4] Constituent parts may not add to total due to rounding.

[5] Funding for rewarding and developing staff was first allocated for 2001–02 and transferred into teaching grant in 2004–05.

HEFCE

In addition HEFCE provided £549,987 of recurrent funding for teaching to Stoke on Trent college in 1999–2000. From 2000–01 onwards this was transferred to the HE provision for Staffordshire university.

Data on public expenditure paid to students at Staffordshire university and Stoke on Trent college by the Student Loans Company (SLC) in respect of grants, income-contingent loan cash outlay, and tuition fees for academic years 1999/2000 to 2004/05 (provisional) are shown in the second table. Data are not available at the level requested prior to academic year 1999/2000.

Notes:

1. These figures represent allocations of funding for FE provision that was actually paid (but may have been adjusted subsequently for under or over performance) and do not include any non-FE funding that the colleges may have received.
2. The LSC was established in April 2001 and prior to that the FE sector was administered by the FEFC.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the real-term funding guarantee for (a) school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges and (c) further education colleges is in the 2004–05 financial year; and if she will make a statement. [210750]

Dr. Howells: In the academic year 2004/05, the Learning and Skills Council increased its funding rates by 4 per cent. for school sixth forms, in line with the per pupil guarantee funding increase for schools. Funding rates for sixth form colleges and further education colleges meeting their targets increased by 5 per cent. in 2004/05.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will instruct the Learning and Skills Council to fund school sixth forms and further education colleges at the same level for capital investment projects. [210751]

Dr. Howells: Capital funding for school sixth forms is part of the devolved funding for schools which the local education authority administers.

Capital funding for further education colleges is the responsibility of the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) which has sole discretion in how and where it allocates capital support.

In our five-year strategy we set out plans to establish a new 16–19 capital fund combining school and further education resources to support coherent investment in new 16–19 provision.

The fund is expected to come into effect from 2006–07, and will be administered by the LSC.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the level of funding available to further education colleges to implement the Increased Flexibility Programme for 14 to 16-year-olds. [210756]

Dr. Howells: The Department allocates funding to the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) to deliver the Increased Flexibility Programme. Funding of up to £100,000 per partnership has been made available to support activity in 2004–06. The allocation of funding is decided locally between the partners.

The Department has not assessed the funding available to partnerships to implement the Increased Flexibility Programme, but the LSC has commissioned a study into this. Mark Haysom, the LSC's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member with details of the study. A copy of his letter will be placed in the House Library.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the per capita funding for 16 to 18 year olds in Stoke-on-Trent was in (a) school sixth forms, (b) the sixth form college and (c) other further education colleges in each of the past five years. [210863]

Dr. Howells: The Department allocates funds for education and training in the post-six learning and skills sector to the Learning and Skills Council. The Department does not collect information on the level of per capita funding for 16 to 18 year olds in school sixth forms and sixth form and further education colleges at the local level. Mark Haysom, the Learning and Skills Council's Chief Executive will write to the hon. Member with details of the level of per capita funding for 16 to 18 year olds in (a) school sixth forms (b) sixth form colleges and (c) further education colleges in each of the past five years in the Stoke-on-Trent area. A copy of his letter will be placed in the House Library.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students aged 16 to 18 years are in receipt of education maintenance allowance in each institution in the Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire Learning and Skills Council area. [210744]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: EMA is available in 2004–05 to eligible young people aged 16 on 31 August 2004 in the Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire LSC area. As at 19 January 2005 3,260 young people in the Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire LSC area had received an EMA payment.

Education, Youth and Culture Council

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the Government's priorities for the Education, Youth and Culture Council will be during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the European Union; and if she will make a statement. [209555]

Dr. Howells: The Operational Programme of the Council for 2005 submitted by the incoming Luxembourg and United Kingdom Presidencies and based on the Multi-Annual Strategic Programme for 2004–06 sets out priority areas of work in all policy areas, including education, youth and culture. A copy of the Annual Operation Programme for 2005 is available in the Library of the House.

The focus of the programme is on the on-going handling of EU business. What will fall to the UK Presidency depends on the progress made by the Council, European Parliament and Commission under the Luxembourg Presidency. The programme reflects the main UK Presidency objectives and provides the basis for us to take forward our priorities.

Key issues for the UK Presidency generally are likely to include progressing the delivery of the Lisbon agenda of more and better jobs, sustainable economic growth and greater competitiveness. In the Education part of the Council, we will aim to make good progress on the proposed new Integrated Lifelong Learning programme 2007–13. We will also begin work on the preparation of a report to the 2006 Spring European Council on the implementation of the detailed work programme 2010 for education and training systems agreed at Barcelona in spring 2002. In the Youth part of the Council, we will continue our negotiations on the Youth in Action programme for 2007–13. In the Culture and Audiovisual part of the Council, we will seek to move towards agreement on the proposed new culture programmes (2007–13) and the new Media programmes (2007–13). We will also seek to make progress on priority initiatives flowing from the new Culture Council work plan, in particular those on digitisation of cultural heritage and mobility of museum collections. In addition, we will take forward the preparatory work for a review of the Television without Frontiers ("TVWF") directive.

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by her Department in the last three years. [207828]

Derek Twigg "The Freedom of Information Act" does not make specific categories of information available, but operates on the presumption that all information held by public authorities should be available, subject to the 24 exemptions of the Act.

Whether or not information is exempt under the Act requires the exercise of judgement in each case. The majority of the exemptions also require that the public interest in releasing the information should be weighed against the public interest in withholding it. If the public interest in disclosing the information outweighs the public interest in withholding it the information must be disclosed. The assessment of the public interest has to be made in all the circumstances of the case, on a case by case basis as far as each request is concerned. Therefore it is not possible to provide the information requested.

Higher Education

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many and what percentage of pupils went on to higher education from (a) maintained school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges, (c) further education colleges and (d) special schools in the last year for which figures are available. [210190]

Dr. Howells: Information is not available on the numbers of pupils from different establishment types who went on to higher education. However, the Youth Cohort Study, which tracks a sample of young people from the year after they have finished compulsory education until the age of 19, can provide estimates of percentages from certain establishment types.

Of the cohort of students who took their GCSEs in 1999, the proportion from each establishment type who were in higher education in either spring 2002 or spring 2003 were as follows:

Establishment	Percentage
School sixth forms	59
Sixth form Colleges	59
Further education colleges	32

Information is not available on those from special schools.

Non-resident Parents

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidelines have been issued on how much time a non-resident parent should have with their children. [210229]

Margaret Hodge: The Government do not provide guidelines specifying how much time non-resident parents should have with their children. The Government believe that children benefit from a meaningful relationship with both parents following divorce or separation, where it is safe to do so. The Children Act 1989 supports this and, most importantly, it makes the welfare of the child concerned, rather than the rights of the parents, its paramount consideration.

In 2002 the Government published the Parenting Plans which contained a checklist of issues for parents to consider in making contact arrangements. We are currently developing a new edition of the Plans. The new Parenting Plans will contain a set of templates which seek to show parents the sort of contact arrangements that work well for children of different ages and who are living in a range of circumstances. They will describe, in practical terms, arrangements that are generally beneficial for children. They are intended to be used as practical aids, both by parents themselves and by solicitors, conciliators and mediators, to help parents to reach reasonable agreements. These will be made widely in solicitors' offices as well as through advice and mediation services.

NotSchool Project

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many participants there are in the NotSchool project; and how many are entered for formal accreditation. [210181]

Dr. Howells: There are currently 553 participants ("researchers") in the NotSchool.net project of statutory school age, and an additional 18 at post-16.

Last academic year (2003–4) 98 per cent. of researchers achieved a formal accreditation, and current indications suggest a similar figure will be reached this academic year.

Parking Spaces

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many car parking spaces are provided for those (a) working in and (b) visiting her Department. [208928]

Derek Twigg: My Department provides 660 car parking spaces at it's four Headquarter sites. The breakdown is as follows:

Site	Staff (includes spaces for disabled)	Visitors
Darlington	265	9
Sheffield	176	24
Runcorn	143	6

London has 37 car parking spaces and apart from spaces allocated for disabled staff the remainder are assigned to both staff/visitors according to availability.

Post-16 Education

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils were in post-16 education in each (a) local education authority and (b) learning and skills council area in the most recent period for which data are available; and what the participation rates were in each area in that period. [210183]

Dr. Howells: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children migrated (a) into and (b) out of each (i) local education authority and (ii) learning and skills council area to attend a 16–19 education establishment in the last period for which figures are available. [210184]

Dr. Howells: 16 to 19-year-olds attend a range of establishments—schools, FE colleges, work-based learning providers. There is some harmonisation of the data collected—which allows the Department to report on participation rates. However, that harmonisation does not stretch to analyses about learners migrating into and out of LEA and LSC areas.

As the information regarding 16 to 19-year-olds who attend maintained secondary schools with sixth forms is contained in a number of large tables, I have placed the tables in the House of Commons Library.

Additionally, it is possible to analyse LSC funded Further Education by migration across boundaries.

This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. I have therefore asked Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, to write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested and to place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Post-graduate Certificate

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of applicants for Post-Graduate Certificate in Education courses in (a) primary and (b) secondary teaching obtained either a first or an upper second class honours degree in the latest period for which figures are available. [209791]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The available information is taken from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) Student Record and is given in the table.

Proportion of Entrants[1] to Post Graduate Certificate in Education courses at English HEIs with a 1st or upper 2nd class honours degree, 2003/04

[1] Figures are on a snapshot basis as at 1 December 2003.

[2] Percentages are based upon those of known first degree classification. Those students with unknown degree classification and those students who do not hold a UK undergraduate degree are excluded.

[4] Includes those studying to teach "KS2 and KS3 (ages 7–14)", "KS3 and KS4 (ages 11–16)", "KS3, KS4 and post-16 (ages 11–18)" and "KS4 and post-16 (ages 14–19)".

[5] Includes students on courses not leading to qualified teacher status.

School Governors

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of a school's governing body is required to be filled by parent governors for (a) community, (b) foundation, (c) voluntary aided, (d) voluntary controlled and (e) academy schools; and whether the proportion has changed since 1997. [211072]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Before the introduction of the Education Act 2002 the number of each category of school governor on a school's governing body was fixed according to the type and size of school.

Governing bodies can now choose their own size and the proportion of membership of the various stakeholder groups with an interest in the school: parents, staff, the local authority, the community, and the school's foundation body if it has one; in accordance with guiding principles. In all categories of maintained schools parents must constitute at least one third of the total governing body membership. This compares favourably with the proportion of governors of maintained schools required to be parents in 1997. The Academies programme was launched in March 2000 and the first Academies opened in 2002. Academies have different governance arrangements to maintained schools. Their Funding Agreements have required that at least one parent governor is represented on the Governing Body.

Secondment

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the people working within her Department on secondment from the private sector, broken down by (a) the organisation or industry they came from and (b) the policy responsibilities they have been given. [208628]

Derek Twigg: There are currently no people from the private sector working in the Department.

Sixth Form Colleges

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many sixth form colleges have been (a) opened and (b) closed since 1997. [210178]

Dr. Howells: Since 1997, we have incorporated three new sixth form colleges in the FE sector, one of which was the result of the merger of two existing sixth form colleges. A further six sixth form colleges have been dissolved, with their property, rights and liabilities transferred to other FE sector colleges.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children with a statement of special educational needs have transferred from (a) mainstream schools to special or independent schools and (b) independent or special schools to mainstream schools in each year since 1997. [210752]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The requested information is given in the table.

SEN2 Survey

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils with special educational needs are participating in 16–19 education in (a) maintained school sixth forms, (b) sixth form colleges, (c) further education colleges and (d) special schools. [210189]

Margaret Hodge: The available information relates to maintained school sixth forms and special schools only and is given in the table.

Assessments of Special Educational Needs are not made outside schools in the LSC funded post-16 learning sector. So, it is not possible to provide figures on a consistent basis for sixth form colleges and further education colleges.

Staff Vacancies

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department spent on advertising staff vacancies in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [209582]

Derek Twigg: The following table gives the advertising costs for civil servants recruited to work within my Department for financial years 2001–02, 2002–03 and 2003–04:

	Central recruitment relating to Grades AA-Grade 6	Senior civil service recruitment
2001–02	187,890.24	111,266.54

Student Loan Company

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations she has received regarding problems with the Student Loan Company; and if she will make a statement. [210000]

Dr. Howells: The Secretary of State received a representation dated 5 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley), on behalf of a constituent whose children received delayed student loan payments. I am going to reply, as I have ministerial responsibility for student support, to explain that this is now administered through a new system called "Protocol", aimed at improving the administration of the system and in particular streamlining the application and assessment process. However, as with any new system, there were initial difficulties to overcome and we are now reviewing with the Student Loans Company what worked well and what could be improved.

Sure Start

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the total expenditure on Sure Start was in each year that the scheme has been in operation; [210054]

(2) what proportion of the budget for Sure Start was spent on administration in each year that the scheme has been in operation. [210059]

Margaret Hodge: The information is as follows:

	Total expenditure (£ million)	Proportion spent on administrative costs[1] (percentage)
1999–2000	7	15
2000–01	56	4
2001–02	134	3
2002–03	216	2
2003–04	718	2

[1] Administrative costs comprises of salaries and general office administration costs for all activities undertaken by the wider Sure Start Unit, including its regional teams.

The expenditure data quoted for 1999–00 to 2002–03 relate to Sure Start Local Programmes only (the Sure Start "Scheme").

During 2002, Sure Start merged with the Early Years and Childcare Functions and as a consequence, only combined data are available from 2003–04.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what funding has been allocated to Stoke-on-Trent under the Sure Start scheme in each of the past three years; [210859]

(2) what the total expenditure on Sure Start in Stoke-on-Trent has been in each year since the scheme has been in operation; [210956]

(3) how many children have participated in Sure Start in Stoke-on-Trent in each year since the scheme has been in operation. [210871]

Margaret Hodge: There are six Sure Start local programmes in Stoke-on-Trent: Stoke North, Blurton, Longton South, Abbey Bucknall, Shelton Cobridge and Bentilee.

Some £6.25 million of capital funding has been allocated to these programmes over the last three years.

The amount of revenue funding allocated to these programmes since they began totals £14.67 million and is broken down as follows: 1999/2000—£0.14 million (Stoke North only); 2000/01—£1.07 million (Stoke North only); 2001/02—£1.48 million (Stoke North and Blurton only); 2002/03—£2.83 million (all current programmes except Bentilee); 2003/04—£4.49 million; 2004/05—£4.66 million.

The figures for numbers of children participating in these Sure Start local programmes are available on a consistent basis only for the period from September 2002 to September 2004. Across these programmes, an average of 28 per cent. or 1,392 of the children aged four or under in the areas covered by the programmes were seen by their local programme in each quarter in 2002–03 and an average of 29 per cent. or 1,556 of the children in each quarter in 2003–04.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will include as part of the BBC charter renewal review consideration of allowing the BBC to continue developing its commercial activities in (a) the UK and (b) overseas. [209792]

Tessa Jowell: Every aspect of the BBC will be considered as part of Charter review. This will include the Corporation's commercial activities both in the UK and overseas.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by her Department in the (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 session, broken down by Act. [206793]

Mr. Caborn: 72 criminal offences were created in legislation sponsored by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport in the (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04 sessions. A list of these criminal offences, broken down by Act, has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Country Information Policy Unit Reports

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who compiles the information in the Home Office Country Information Policy Unit reports that are referenced by asylum adjudicators and Home Office officials; and what their research and professional qualifications are. [210764]

Mr. Browne: The Home Office Country Information and Policy Unit (CIPU) is staffed by generalist civil servants. Although aptitude for research is an important element in selection of staff, it has not been considered necessary to staff the unit with professionally qualified researchers. This is because CIPU does not undertake "primary" research. The country information material it produces is "secondary" research—identifying and providing a summary of primary research carried out by others.

The independent Advisory Panel on Country Information (APCI) has recommended that CIPU's research skills be strengthened by the introduction of professional research staff who would have supervisory, control and monitoring tasks in the preparation of Country Reports and other country information outputs. This recommendation is being addressed in the context of the reorganisation of CIPU's functions that I announced on 8 September 2004, Official Report, column 119WS.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of trends in the number of animal experiments in the UK; and if his Department will take steps to reduce the number of experiments. [208820]

Caroline Flint: Trends in the number of animal experiments over the last few decades are recorded in the publication Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain 2003-Cm 6291, available in the Library—The Stationery Office Belfast publishes separate figures for animal experiments conducted in Northern Ireland. This shows that the number of scientific procedures using animals started in Great Britain in 2003—the latest year for which data are available—was just over 2.79 million, a rise of about 59,000 (2.2 per cent.) compared with 2002.

There has overall been a significant reduction in the annual number of such scientific procedures since the 1970s and 1980s, but in recent years this trend has more or less levelled out. It is impossible to predict future trends, as many variable factors are involved.

Reduction in experiments in particular programmes of work are achieved through implementation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, which can be licensed only if the number of animals used is minimised. More generally the Government and the scientific community are continuing efforts to try to bring down the overall amount of animal experimentation, including through establishment of the UK National 3Rs centre and working with relevant international bodies.

Asylum Seekers

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Ministers were first advised that the target of 30,000 removals of failed asylum seekers in 2001–02 was unachievable. [206165]

Mr. Browne: Ministers were advised in July 2002 that the target had been revised.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many adults were tagged as an alternative to detaining asylum seeking families at the latest date for which figures are available; [206245]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of asylum-seeking families expected to be monitored through tagging by May 2005. [206246]

Mr. Browne: At 17 January 2005 nobody has been tagged as an alternative to detaining asylum-seeking families.

A pilot to test three types of monitoring: voice recognition, tagging and tracking commenced in October 2004. The pilot will run until March 2005 when results will be evaluated. Subjects for the tagging pilot (40 in total) are being identified. The number of asylum-seeking families we expect to monitor through tagging during the pilot will depend on risk assessments carried out in individual cases. The number is unlikely to be high as the pilot is limited in numbers and in the majority of cases family members are detained only for a relatively short period immediately prior to removal.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of Afghan asylum seekers received (a) refugee status and (b) another form of protection from the UK Government in each quarter since 1997. [210515]

Mr. Browne: The table shows initial decision and appeal determinations by quarter, where available, for Afghan asylum applicants, 1997 to Q3 2004. Decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in the same period and appeal outcomes do not necessarily relate to initial decisions made in the same period.

Information on asylum applications is published quarterly. The next publication covering the fourth quarter of 2004 will be available on the 22 February 2005 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of asylum seekers from Somalia received (a) refugee status and (b) another form of protection from the UK Government in each quarter since 1997. [210517]

Mr. Browne: The tables show initial decision and appeal determinations by quarter, where available, for Somalia asylum applicants, 1997 to Q3 2004. Decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in the same period and appeal outcomes do not necessarily relate to initial decisions made in the same period.

Information on asylum applications is published quarterly. The next publication covering the fourth quarter of 2004 will be available on the February 2005 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases lesbian and gay applicants have been refused asylum in the last five years on the grounds that they will not be persecuted if they return to their home countries and hide their sexuality. [210624]

Mr. Browne: Asylum applications are decided on an individual case by case basis. Information on how many cases have been refused asylum on the grounds that they will not be persecuted because of their homosexuality is not available and could therefore be available only by examination of individual case records.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants have won refugee status in the UK in the last five years on the basis of a well-founded fear of persecution because of their homosexuality. [210765]

Mr. Browne: Asylum applications are decided on an individual case by case basis. Information on how many cases have been granted asylum on the basis of a well-founded fear of persecution because of their homosexuality is not available and could be available only by examination of individual case records.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of asylum applicants in 2004 claiming a well-founded fear of persecution because of their homosexuality were refused asylum. [210766]

Mr. Browne: Asylum applications are decided on an individual case by case basis. Information on how many cases have been refused asylum on the basis of a well-founded fear of persecution because of their homosexuality is not available and could be available only by examination of individual case records.

Botox

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will eliminate the LD50 test as a regulatory instrument for the safety and potency testing of Botox, in favour of in-vitro methods; and if he will make a statement. [209075]

Caroline Flint: Botox is the trade name for one of the products containing botulinum toxin. International and UK regulations concerning safety and efficacy of medicines require testing for botulinum toxin products at various stages of their processing, from harvesting through to marketing as a finished product for use as a prescription-only medicine.

The Home Office and all others concerned with conducting and regulating such testing are committed to moving to less severe testing procedures as soon as it becomes practicable to do so. The laboratories involved in ensuring that botulinum toxin products are safe for therapeutic use (the only use for which animal tests are licensed) are already gaining expertise in non-animal methods to this end.

The European Pharmacopoeia states that the potency of the toxin as a reconstituted product is determined by an LD50 assay in mice (the reference method), or by a method validated with respect to the LD50 assay. Unfortunately there is at present no accepted and validated alternative to the LD50 test for determining the potency of botulinum toxin at the production stage. Other methods, including an in vitro test, can additionally be employed, and are being used, for example when confirmatory assay of potency is needed.

Under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 only the test method which causes the least animal suffering, while achieving the scientific objective, can be licensed in the UK. This means that in vitro tests must be used wherever possible and, when there is no non-animal alternative, animal suffering must be minimised by use of the mildest procedures available. Conditions on project licences require this, so that when a less severe validated alternative to the LD50 test becomes available, it must be used.

Class A Drug Arrests

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests for Class A drug possession took place in Hartlepool last year. [210642]

Caroline Flint: Data for Class A drug possession arrests is currently not collated in the format requested.

Information on the number of known drug offenders found guilty or cautioned for Class A drugs and the number of possession offences in the Cleveland police force area are available in the Area tables, of the "Drug seizure and offender statistics, United Kingdom", United Kingdom, 2001 and 2002, for which figures are currently available. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Country Information Policy Unit Reports

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the sources of the information in the Home Office Country Information Policy Unit reports are; what checks are made to verify their accuracy; and how often those reports are updated. [210763]

Mr. Browne: The Home Office Country Information and Policy Unit (CIPU) produces Country Reports on the 20 countries that generate the largest number of asylum applications in the UK. They are issued twice a year, at the end of April and October and are published on the Home Office website. The reports are used by Home Office officials involved in the asylum and human rights determination process.

The reports are compiled from a wide variety of well respected, independent and publicly available sources. These sources include intergovernmental organisations (such as the UN), governmental sources (including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office) and human rights organisations (for example Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch). All information in each report is attributed, throughout the text, to the original source material. The Country Reports do not contain any Home Office opinion or policy—they are essentially a compilation of material produced by other organisations.

We are firmly committed to ensuring that the country information material produced to inform asylum decisions meets the highest standards. Under the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002, we have established the independent Advisory Panel on Country Information (APCI) to provide rigorous independent external scrutiny of country information material produced by the Home Office and make recommendations to help ensure that it is of the highest quality. The APCI is proving to be very effective in fulfilling its function.

Departmental Electrical Equipment

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many items of electrical equipment were used by his Department in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by (a) cost and (b) number of each type of item. [205735]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much has been spent by his Department on lighting in each year since 1997; [205868]

(2) how much has been spent by his Department on (a) new furniture and (b) hired furniture in each year since 1997; [205615]

(3) how much has been spent by his Department on (a) indoor bought plants, (b) indoor hired plants, (c) outdoor bought plants and (d) outdoor hired plants in each year since 1997. [205591]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Documents

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's policy is in relation to the storage of documents and the use of shredders; and whether this policy has been reviewed in the past 12 months. [206743]

Fiona Mactaggart: The department follows standards set by The National Archives (TNA). Both electronic and paper documents are created as part of its business. They are held for as long as required in line with set retention periods. When no longer required by the business they are then appraised for transfer to TNA as a significant historical record or destroyed. The destruction of documents is determined according to whether or not they are confidential. Confidential material will be destroyed using shredders or specialist disposal companies. The department's policies for managing its records, their retention, and disposal has remained constant.

Drug Trafficking

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were convicted of trafficking (i) class A drugs and (ii) cannabis from Africa to the UK in each of the last five years. [210060]

Caroline Flint: It is not possible from the information held on the Home Office Court Proceedings database to identify men or women convicted of trafficking drugs from Africa to the UK.

Drug-related Crime

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average cost of crime committed by a heroin addict in the UK was for the latest period for which figures are available. [210146]

Caroline Flint: Estimates of the costs of drug-related crime are not available by individual drug type. However, a recent study published by the Home Office provides estimates of the total economic and social costs of Class A drug use. It estimates that the criminal justice costs associated with problematic drug use range between £2.0 and £3.6 billion in 2000. The majority of these costs are attributable to heroin and crack cocaine users. The cost per user is estimated to be £7,013 per annum. These costs include arrest and police detention costs and those accruing to courts and prisons. The study also estimates the victim costs of drug-related crime, including these in the total increases the range of estimates to £8.8 to £15.8 billion—around £31,200 per user per annum.

External Supplies

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many tenders were let by his Department to external suppliers in the financial year 2003–04; and what the value was. [209097]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office does not hold a central record of the number or value of tenders let by the Department in each financial year, to obtain this information would incur disproportionate costs.

Firearms

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the firearms seized under Operation Stealth were legally registered firearms; how many were found to have been used in crimes; and of these, how many had been used by the registered owner. [206629]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Football Banning Orders

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many football banning orders have been issued in each year since 1997, broken down by area in which the offender resides. [209997]

Caroline Flint: Football Banning Orders in their current form were introduced by the Football (Disorder) Act 2000. Detailed information on earlier versions is not available. However, Table 1 provides the total number of Football Banning Orders imposed each year since enactment of the 2000 Act. As at 20 January 2005 there are 2,771 Football Banning Orders in place. Table 2 provides details of the police authority area in which the subjects reside.

Identity Cards

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the proposed identity card will contain an individual's address on the face of the card; what controls will apply to the release of an individual's address to individuals or organisations contacting the databank; and if he will make a statement. [208731]

Mr. Browne: The Identity Cards Bill sets out the information that may be held on the National Identity Register and includes address. The Bill does not specify what information will be recorded on the card face or the card chip and this will be set out in regulations, approved by Parliament. There have been no final decisions on whether address would be displayed on the card.

The Bill sets out to whom information could be provided with, and without consent. Address information could be provided (i) with consent of the individual under Clause 14, (ii) as part of a required identity check for public services under Clauses 15–17 if Parliament agreed the necessary order or (iii) without consent under Clauses 19–22 if it is to one of the organisations specified under those clauses, for the purposes specified either in those clauses or in regulations made under those clauses.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures he proposes to introduce to enable individuals to challenge information about them held on the proposed identity card. [209900]

Mr. Browne: All individuals recorded on the National Identity Register will have data subject access rights under the Data Protection Act.

The Government are also looking at ways of ensuring that an individual will be able to read his card, and Register-entry, easily.

Where an individual notifies us of an error, we will have processes to ensure that we are satisfied that the information provided is correct. This would include ensuring that this information was indeed provided by the correct individual and, where relevant, that the information is confirmed by the party responsible for maintaining that information. We would confirm with the individual that the updated information has been recorded.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures he proposes to introduce to delete erroneous information held on the proposed identity card. [209901]

Mr. Browne: Generally speaking, a modification of details recorded on the National Identity Register would take place because an individual has told us of a change of details. In this case, we will have processes to ensure that we are satisfied that the information provided is correct, which would include ensuring that this information was indeed provided by the correct individual. We would confirm with the individual that the updated information has been recorded. A record of the previous details would be held.

The other situation by which we could receive information that might lead to a modification is if information is provided to us for the purpose of validating information recorded in the Register. As information is likely to be provided to us for validation purposes, prior to attendance at an enrolment centre, we would be able to inquire as to any inconsistencies at the enrolment session.

All applicants will have data subject access rights under the Data Protection Act and we are looking at ways of ensuring that an individual will be able to read his card, and Register-entry, easily.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his latest estimate is of the number of machines to read the proposed identity cards which will be required by (a) police authorities, (b) health authorities, (c) social services departments, (d) benefit agencies and (e) local education authorities. [209902]

Mr. Browne: The Identity Cards Programme is working with a wide range of organisations to develop an understanding of the benefits that the scheme will deliver. As part of these discussions the programme is continuing to develop estimates of the number of card readers required.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether individuals will have access to all information about them held on the proposed identity card. [209905]

Mr. Browne: The Data Protection Act will apply to the identity card scheme, including the National Identity Register and existing subject access rights under that Act will apply. The Data Protection Act does include exemptions that ensure that information that might not be in the public interest to disclose, would not have to be provided. We are also looking at ways of ensuring that an individual will be able to read his card, and Register-entry, easily.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 304W, on identity cards, what tasks are being undertaken by (a) the civil servants, (b) the secondee from the Metropolitan Police and (c) the secondee from the UK Passport Service. [210170]

Mr. Browne: The civil servants conduct a range of tasks to fulfil current programme needs. This includes work to support the passage of legislation, policy development, scheme design, benefits management and business case development. The secondee from the Metropolitan Police Service is leading the benefits management work. The secondee from the UK Passport Service is working on transition planning for the new agency.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 304W, on identity cards, what tasks are being undertaken by (a) the secondee from Shreeveport Management Consultancy and (b) the consultants from PA Consulting Group Ltd. [210171]

Mr. Browne: The Programme team is made up of civil servants, secondees and consultants working together to support the needs of the programme. This includes work to support; the passage of legislation, policy management, scheme design, benefits management and business case management. PA consulting are working in all of these areas. The secondee from Shreeveport Management Consultancy is working on transition planning for the new agency.

Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which EU member states require their citizens to possess identity cards. [210293]

Mr. Browne: [holding answer 24 January 2004]: Of the 25 EU member states, 21 have identity cards; 12 have a compulsory system and nine have a voluntary system. The 12 countries which have a compulsory system are: Belgium, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Germany, Greece, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Poland, Slovakia, and Spain.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures will be introduced to enable individuals to ascertain which Government Departments and agencies have asked to see information held on them on the proposed identity card. [210497]

Mr. Browne: The Data Protection Act contains general rules on notification rights and these have been carefully considered and drafted to ensure compliance with the underlying EU directive. These rules will apply to the ID cards scheme.

Any person who is concerned that information has been provided without their knowledge or consent would have data subject access rights under the Data Protection Act. Therefore it would be possible to view information relating to circumstances where information has been provided where there is no reason for the information to be exempted under the Data Protection Act. An example of an exemption would be where information had been provided to the police in connection with a criminal investigation.

Biometric Passports

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the results of the UK Passport Service biometrics pilot will be made public. [210156]

Mr. Browne: The UKPS Biometrics Enrolment Trial final report will be delivered in February 2005. Quality Assurance of the report will follow and the outcome of the trial released during March 2005.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of (a) police officers and (b) police staff have submitted DNA samples to the police DNA elimination database. [210164]

Caroline Flint: The provision of a DNA sample by police personnel for inclusion on the Police Elimination Database (FED) is voluntary for those who were in employment by the police when the Database was set up in 2000. It is a condition of service for personnel who have joined the police since 1 August 2002.

Approximately 39 per cent. of all police officers and police staff have submitted a DNA sample for inclusion on the Police Elimination Database. A breakdown is not available of the numbers submitted by police officers and police staff.

As at 21 January 2005, there were 78,639 DNA profiles taken from serving officers and police staff in England and Wales retained on the PED. Of these, 62,518 profiles were from police officers and 4,325 from police staff. This represents 44 per cent. of police officers and 5.8 per cent. of police staff.

It was estimated in 2000 at the inception of the PED that approximately 75,000 officers and other police service staff needed to be on the Database because of their role at crime scenes. The vast majority of police officers and police staff who attend crime scenes or handle forensic material now have a DNA profile retained on the Police Elimination Database.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the length of time it will take to check biometric passports at airports, compared with non-biometric passports; and if he will make a statement. [210166]

Mr. Browne: The new biometric passports (ePassports) will have a chip that is to be read by readers located at airports. While all ePassports should conform to a number of international standards, there remains room for interpretation, and thus there will be differences in the way the passports are presented to, and read by, the readers. The time taken to read an ePassport will therefore depend upon the nationality of the ePassport presented and the make/model of the scanner to which it is presented. Trials to assess the interoperability of nations' ePassports and candidate readers are being conducted by some 20 nations. UKPS is fully involved in these. In addition we will be conducting our own tests in UK on a variety of ePassport/reader combinations.

Until satisfactory interoperability can be demonstrated between UK preferred readers and a range of ePassports from other nations, the time to check biometric passports at UK airports cannot be accurately determined. However, current test results indicate that the average reading time is likely to fall in the range 7–10 seconds. It is difficult to make direct and meaningful comparison with non-biometric passport checks since this depends on the actual processes involved.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether individuals applying for a biometric passport will be required to submit (a) a standard passport photograph and (b) a higher-resolution photograph taken by other means; and if he will make a statement. [210167]

Mr. Browne: Applicants for passport renewal or the issue of a first passport will be required to submit a photograph that meets the recently issued ICAO (International Civil Aviation Organisation) standards.

Guidance has been issued and is readily available to the public by means of a detailed leaflet included with passport application forms. It advises on acceptable poses, headwear and facial expression in particular. We have been working with industry over the past year to ensure that photobooths and other photographic equipments are able to produce photographs that meet the new technical standards. It is therefore the expectation that an applicant will be easily able to obtain a photograph from a source that declares itself in conformance with UKPS standards as they have done hitherto.

UKPS is also modifying its own passport processing systems to scan these photographs to the higher resolution needed to meet the biometric passport standard.

Knives

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will discuss with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry proposals for introduction of a code of practice for retailers selling knives that would distinguish between advertising the sale of blades for domestic purposes and promoting the sale of combat knives. [209520]

Caroline Flint: Advertisements for the sale of weapons and knives in the printed media are subject to a self-regulatory system of controls administered by the Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) through its Code of Practice. The Code provides that advertisements should contain nothing that condones or is likely to provoke violence or anti-social behaviour. In addition, it is an offence to market a knife in a way which indicates that it is suitable for combat, or is otherwise likely to stimulate violent behaviour.

We are committed to tackling knife crime and we will discuss proposals to do this with all relevant Government Departments.

Managed Migration Directorate

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria caseworkers at the Managed Migration Directorate were instructed to consider when determining applications for the right of establishment in business under EU association agreements from (a) 1 June 2003 until August 2003, (b) August 2003 to February 2004 and (c) February 2004 until 30 April 2004. [207535]

Mr. Browne: The information is as follows.

(a) Applicants for the right of establishment in business under EC Association Agreements(ECAA) in the period 1 June 2003 until August 2003 were required to satisfy the following basic criteria:

that they held a national passport of one of the countries covered by the EC Association Agreements that if they were switching from another immigration category they had valid leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom or applied no longer than 10 days after the expiry of that leave that they could provide evidence of a certain level of funds that they produced a credible business plan that they provided a declaration indicating that they were going to be self-employed and would not resort to claiming public funds.

(b) In the period August 2003 until February 2004 caseworkers were subsequently instructed that applicants from the relevant qualifying countries who produced a passport with valid leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom and a business plan would be granted 12 months leave. This was subject to there being no other concerns about the application.

(c) In the period 10 February 2004 until 8 March 2004 caseworkers were instructed as far as switching cases were concerned, with the exception of illegal entrants and those who had overstayed their leave by more than 10 days, to grant applicants 12 months leave to remain. Those seeking further leave to remain provided they had not overstayed their original period of leave by six months were granted a further three years leave to remain.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prosecutions for (a) driving or attempting to drive a motor vehicle with excess alcohol and (b) being in charge of a motor vehicle with excess alcohol (i) Essex police and (ii) Southend police have brought successfully in each year since 1997; [209803]

(2) how many prosecutions for (a) driving or attempting to drive a mechanically propelled vehicle while unfit through drink or drugs and (b) being in charge of a mechanically propelled vehicle while unfit through drink or drugs (i) Essex police and (ii) Southend police have brought successfully in each year since 1997; [209804]

(3) how many prosecutions for motor manslaughter offences (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police have brought successfully in each year since 1997; [209805]

(4) how many prosecutions for (a) dangerous driving and (b) careless or inconsiderate driving (i) Essex police and (ii) Southend police have brought successfully in each year since 1997; [209807]

(5) how many prosecutions for driving with uncorrected sight (a) Essex police and (b) Southend police have brought successfully in each year since 1997; [209809]

(6) how many prosecutions for (a) causing death by dangerous driving and (b) causing death by careless driving while under the influence of drink or drugs (i) Essex police and (ii) Southend police have brought successfully in each year since 1997. [209839]

Caroline Flint: Available information taken from the Home Office Court Proceedings Database for Essex police force area and South East Essex petty sessional area, 1997 to 2002 (latest available) are given in the Tables.

Offences of "manslaughter by driving" cannot be identified separately from total manslaughter offences. And offences of "driving with uncorrected sight" cannot be separately identified from other summary driving licence offences.

2003 data will be available in March 2005.

Parking Spaces

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many car parking spaces are provided for those (a) working in and (b) visiting his Department. [208931]

Fiona Mactaggart: An internal survey undertaken in July 2003 showed that there were 27,146 spaces on the Home Office estate. Of these over 21,158 were at Prison Service establishments, which employ 48,133 staff.

There were 326 spaces, which were specifically reserved for visitors and a further 169 reserved disabled spaces. However, many sites do not specifically reserve spaces for visitors, so the figure is not a true reflection of the number of visitors who use our car parks.

As at 1 January 2005 there were 107 car parking spaces available in the Central London Headquarters estate. Of these six are reserved for Orange Badge holders. There are no spaces specifically reserved for visitors. The new Home Office headquarters building at 2 Marsham Street, which the Department is due to take over responsibility for on 26 January 2005 will have 87 spaces, of which 12 are reserved for visitors, and 17 for Orange Badge holders. The numbers of spaces on the current Headquarters estate will reduce as we vacate the buildings, with 90 due to go when we vacate Queen Anne's Gate in April 2005.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many written questions for his Department were unanswered when Parliament Prorogued; and how many of the unanswered questions were tabled in each of the previous months of the 2003–04 Session. [201553]

Fiona Mactaggart: The total number of written questions for which a substantive answer was not provided before the end of Session was 245. The Department did provide substantive answers to 496 Parliamentary Questions in the four days up to Prorogation. The number of unanswered questions tabled by each month of the previous Session are provided in the table:

Month	Number of questions unanswered
2003
November	0
December	0
2004
January	1
February	4
March	1
April	1
June	0
July	7
August	0
September	4
October	45
November	180
Total	245

Ministers make every effort to answer questions substantively in accordance with performance guidelines and especially before Prorogation. However this is not always possible. Where right hon. and hon. Members did not receive a substantive response it is open to them to re-table their question this session.

Police

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which basic command units have been required to improve performance by more than the average following the publication of the National Policing Plan. [209169]

Ms Blears [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The National Policing Plan does not proscribe specific targets for any Basic Command Units (BCUs). Individual performance targets are a matter for the Chief Constable and Police Authority of a given force to agree. In agreeing Force or BCD targets regard must be had to the policing priorities as laid out in the National Policing Plan, however these do not set specific targets.

Police Forces are expected to contribute to local targets which are not specifically police owned. Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships of which both police forces and local police authorities are members, will agree crime reduction targets to which BCUs will contribute, however these are not centrally proscribed targets, neither are they the sole responsibility of the police.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue guidelines to the police in respect of restraint in a prone position for a long period or on a number of separate occasions but during the same detention; and if he will make a statement. [208737]

Caroline Flint: Guidelines on the issue of restraint techniques by police officers are a matter for the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO). They tell me that restraint is covered in the ACPO Personal Safety Manual.

The Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) recently carried out a Restraint and Mental Health Review, which proposes measures to reduce the risks associated with restraint. The findings of this review are now being implemented in the Metropolitan Police and shared with ACPO

Police-Immigration Service (Joint Operations)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have been arrested as a result of joint operations in London between the police and the Immigration Service. [209620]

Mr. Browne: Since April 2004 there have been approximately 786 joint operations with the police in London resulting in around 1,509 offenders being arrested.

Secondments

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the people working within his Department on secondment from the private sector, broken down by (a) the organisation or industry they came from and (b) the policy responsibilities they have been given. [208624]

Fiona Mactaggart: Secondments are part of the Interchange initiative, which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the Civil Service and other organisations: public, private and voluntary. Interchange provides opportunities for civil servants to learn new skills, widen their experience and develop ideas. It also brings in skills and experiences from other sectors.

Four people are currently on inward secondment to the Home Office from the private sector. Their details are set out in the table:

Name	Seconded from	Receiving Home Office Unit	Responsibilities
Georgina Banton	Ernst & Young	Private Office	Private Secretary
Brenten Caffin	PA Consultancy Services Ltd.	Strategic Policy Team	Project work supporting crime reduction incentive

Name	Seconded from	Receiving Home Office Unit	Responsibilities
Joanna Place	Royal Bank of Scotland	Immigration and Nationality Department	Senior Director, Change Management and Reform
Joanna Vickers	Shreeveport	ID Cards Delivery Unit	Leading solutions design workstream for identity cards procurement

Street Crime

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 December 2004, Official Report, column 648W, on street crime, how many individuals have been (a) questioned and (b) arrested by immigration officers under joint multi-agency operations involving the Immigration Service and the police in London, broken down by ethnic group. [206823]

Mr. Browne: While officers routinely record the details of persons questioned in their individual notebooks, records of (a) the number of people questioned or (b) the number of people arrested as part of joint, police-led crime reduction operations are not kept centrally. However, locally collated provisional information indicates that between May 2003 to December 2004 the UK Immigration Service participated in approximately 424 such operations which resulted in the arrest of around 1,357 immigration offenders, including 898 failed asylum seekers.

The Immigration Service is currently exploring better ways of collecting and collating information on people questioned and arrested on joint multi-agency operations.

Yarl's Wood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees were present in Yarl's Wood on the night of 14 February 2002; how many escaped from the detention centre during the incident which was the subject of the Prison Service Ombudsman's report published on 16 November; and if he will make a statement. [206167]

Mr. Browne: A total of 385 detainees were present in Yarl's Wood on the night of 14 February 2002.

There were 23 escapes.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what part Ministers played in the preparation of the contract between the Home Office/Immigration and Nationality Directorate and Group 4 Amey International (GAIL) for the design and build of the Yarl's Wood Detention Centre; and if he will make a statement. [206169]

Mr. Browne: Ministers are not involved in the preparation of contracts either by way of choice of contractor or in the detail contained within the contract document. Ministers and other public officials may however be involved in specification and/or consultation prior to contract tender. The Treasury Solicitors and Freshfields prepared the Yarl's Wood contract.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice Ministers (a) sought and (b) received in relation to the timescale for the project to design and build the Yarl's Wood Detention Centre. [206170]

Mr. Browne: Due to the large volume of records on this project, the answer could be obtained only at disproportionate cost however, I can say that Ministers were kept fully informed during each stage of the process including procurement of the site, construction and finally the opening and operation of the centre. These briefings covered the key milestones at each stage of the project and updates on progress.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps Ministers took to satisfy themselves that the Yarl's Wood Detention Centre opened in November 2001 was fit for purpose. [206171]

Mr. Browne: Yarl's Wood was designed to, and when completed, met all the required British standards and Building Control requirements. As Contract Administrators, PMI (later Osprey PMI) checked both the design and construction to ensure that the project was in full compliance with the requirements.

If PMI were not satisfied with a particular element of the build, a contractual notice of non-compliance was issued to the main contractor and the existence of such a notice, if not corrected, would have prevented the centre being opened.

A limited number of non-compliance notices were issued but were all checked and cleared prior to a Permit to Use (PtU) being issued to GSL. All the operating procedures and contingency plans were written and approved by the Immigration Nationality Directorate prior to a PtU being issued. Ministers were informed when the centre was finally ready for use.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what performance measures relating to assaults by detainees were contained in the contract for the operation of the Yarl's Wood Detention Centre by Group 4; and if he will make a statement. [206172]

Mr. Browne: There is no mechanism for applying Performance Measures for individual assaults by detainees in the contract for the operation of the Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre (IRC).

Performance Measures are applied for incidents of concerted in-discipline whereby for any incident where three or more detainees (and/or dependent children) act together with the intention of disrupting the order and discipline of the Removal Centre, Performance Measures shall accrue. Performance points accrue for each incident. There is no restriction on the number of times this Performance Measure can be applied.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation took place between the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and Group 4 Amey International Limited on the operational implications for the Yarl's Wood Detention

Centre of his decision of October 2001 that the use of prison places for immigration detainees would cease by January 2002. [206173]

Mr. Browne: There were regular meetings between the Immigration Nationality Directorate officials and Group 4 Amey International Limited (GAIL) to discuss operational issues prior to the opening of Yarl's Wood Removal Centre.

The contract with GAIL required them to accept into Yarl's Wood whoever the Immigration Service sent to them and the Centre had facilities, including more secure areas, to assist with the management of difficult detainees.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice was given by Osprey PMI to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (a) in April 2000 and (b) subsequently about the project timescale for the building of the Yarl's Wood Detention Centre; if he will publish this advice; and if he will make a statement. [206175]

Mr. Browne: The brief given to PMI (later Osprey PMI) in April 2000, on their appointment as Consultants, was that there was a requirement to provide 1,800 additional detention places by the end of the financial year 2000–01. PMI initially advised the Immigration Nationality Directorate (IND) that the timescale was not feasible but, after discussion, it was agreed that tenders would be issued to provide the first centre at Yarl's Wood. If the marketplace in general came back with the answer that the timescale for the programme was impossible re-assessment would have to be made. In the process, tenders returned documents offering to complete the project within the required timescale by adopting a modular building solution. Following contract award, IND's contract administrator, PMI carried out continual reviews of programme and progress on Yarl's Wood and advised IND on at least a weekly basis.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the speed of the process leading up to the awarding of the contract to design, build and run the Yarl's Wood Detention Centre, further to the comments made in the report by the Prisons Ombudsman into the disturbance and fire at the centre in February 2002. [206176]

Mr. Browne: The overall timetable was always considered to be exacting, however it could only be tested by going to the marketplace. The contract tender and award process followed European public purchasing rules. All major projects are now subject to a more robust challenge and scrutiny system under the Office for Government Commerce Gateway review process and internally within the Immigration and Nationality Department by the Joint Approvals Committee (made up of senior officials) and also by the Home Office Group Investment Board.

My Department is in the process of planning and identifying detailed policy themes for the UK Presidency, within the context of the broader EU agenda. We expect work in the Competitiveness Council to take forward the conclusions from the Mid-Term Review of the Lisbon Agenda, concentrating in particular on promoting employment, better regulation, open and sustainable markets in an outward-facing Europe and boosting our economies' potential for innovation and research. Key items in the Competitiveness Council during our Presidency are likely to include the Services Directive, Seventh Framework Programme for research and technological development, the REACH chemicals regulation and better regulation work, in line with the recent 6 Presidency statement.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent changes have been made to eligibility for winter fuel payments for those living in residential care who (a) are receiving and (b) are not receiving pension credit; and if he will estimate in each case how many people have been affected by those changes. [211094]

Malcolm Wicks: There have been no recent changes to eligibility for winter fuel payments for those living in residential care. The winter fuel payment regulations were amended in September 2004 to ensure those people who receive pension credit are treated in the same way as those who were previously in receipt of income support.

TREASURY

Alcohol-related Deaths (Lancashire)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in respect of how many deaths in (a) Lancashire and (b) Burnley alcohol was the primary cause in each of the last five years. [210962]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 26 January 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for how many deaths in (a) Lancashire and (b) Burnley, alcohol was the primary cause, in each of the past five years. I am replying in his absence. (210962)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2003. Figures in the attached table show the number of deaths where the underlying cause of death indicated a condition directly related to alcohol use in the years 1999 to 2003, among residents of the County of Lancashire and the Local Authority of Burnley.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) definition of alcohol-related deaths only includes those causes regarded as being most directly due to alcohol consumption. Apart from deaths due to accidental poisoning with alcohol, this definition excludes external causes of death, such as road traffic deaths and other accidents, and alcohol-related suicides and homicides. Estimates of the annual total number of deaths in which alcohol has played a role can therefore vary widely depending on the criteria used. The definition used by ONS allows for consistent comparisons over time for those deaths where a clear association with alcohol consumption can generally be assumed.

Alcohol-related deaths[1] in the County of Lancashire[2] and Burnley local authority area[3], 1999–2003[4]

	Area
	County of Lancashire	Burnley local authority
1999	167	17
2000	149	6
2001	182	10
2002	165	13
2003	177	19

[1] For the years 1999–2000 the cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9). The codes used by ONS to define alcohol-related deaths are listed as follows:

291—Alcoholic psychoses
303—Alcohol dependence syndrome
305.0—Non-dependent abuse of alcohol
425.5—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
571—Chronic liver disease and cirrhosis
E860—Accidental poisoning by alcohol

For the years 2001–03 the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) was used. To maintain comparability with earlier years the following codes were used:

F10—Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol
142.6—Alcoholic cardiomyopathy
K70—Alcoholic liver disease
K73—Chronic hepatitis, not elsewhere classified
K74—Fibrosis and cirrhosis of liver
X45—Accidental poisoning by and exposure to alcohol

The selection of codes to define alcohol-related deaths is described in: Baker A and Rooney C (2003). Recent trends in alcohol-related mortality, and the impact of ICD-10 on the monitoring of these deaths in England and Wales. Health Statistics Quarterly 17, pp 5–14.

[2] Figures provided relate to the current county of Lancashire. This excludes the unitary authorities of Blackburn and Darwen, and Blackpool, created on 1 April 1998, which were part of the former county.

[3] Usual residents of these areas.

[4] Deaths occurring in each calendar year.

Cancer

John Mann: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what the survival rates were for each form of cancer in (a) 1997 and (b) the last year for which figures are available. [211105]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. John Mann, dated 26 January 2005:

As National Statistician., I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning what the survival rates were for each form of cancer in (a) 1997 and (b) the last year for which figures are available. (211105)

Survival rates are not separately available by individual year of diagnosis. The latest available one and five year survival rates for the 20 most common cancers in England and Wales are for adult patients (aged 15–99 years) diagnosed during 1996–99 and followed up to 31 December 2001. These figures were published on the National Statistics website on 9 March 2004, and are available at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/ssdataset.asp?vlnk = 7899

Child Trust Funds

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of children in Burnley are eligible for the Child Trust Fund. [210968]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Martin Linton) on 30 November 2004, Official Report, columns 87–88W. All children born and living in the UK since 1 September 2002 whose families receive child benefit will be eligible for the Child Trust Fund.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the number of children in Hendon who qualify for payments under the Child Trust Fund (a) at £250 and (b) at £500; and if he will make a statement. [210877]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Martin Linton) on 30 November 2004, Official Report, columns 87–88W. All children born and living in the UK since 1 September 2002 whose families receive child benefit will be eligible for the Child Trust Fund.

Departmental Policies (Preseli Pembrokeshire)

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to Preseli Pembrokeshire constituency, the effects on Preseli Pembrokeshire of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [211326]

Mr. Timms: Since our election in 1997, the Government have put in place a radical programme of both macro-economic and micro-economic reform to improve the economic performance of all parts of the UK. There is significant evidence that these policies have already yielded considerable benefits for the Preseli Pembrokeshire constituency. For example, since May 1997, claimant unemployment has fallen by 55 per cent., long-term unemployment has fallen by 87 per cent. and long-term youth unemployment has been eliminated, having fallen from 125 in May 1997 to 0 in December 2004.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at Parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./.

ECOFIN

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the outcome was of the ECOFIN Council held on 18 January; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [210621]

Mr. Moore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with his European Union counterparts on reforming the Growth and Stability Pact; and if he will make a statement. [210793]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I attended ECOFIN in Brussels on 18 January 2005.

The Presidency briefly introduced its work programme, emphasising its three priorities: Lisbon Mid-Term Review, Reform of the Stability and Growth Pact and negotiation of the Financial Perspectives 2007–13. The Commission welcomed the work programme.

Further to discussions between Foreign Ministers at the extraordinary meeting of the General Affairs Council on 7 January, ECOFIN discussed the economic consequences of the South-Asian Tsunami. The Commission noted that the macroeconomic consequences of the Tsunami are likely to be contained, although with significant differences across affected countries. Worst hit in macroeconomic terms are likely to be the Maldives and Sri Lanka. EU financial support could be up to 1.5 billion euros, which will include 100 million euros in humanitarian aid, 350 million euros in reconstruction aid and a proposed EIB loan facility of up to 1 billion euros guaranteed by the EC budget. The size and structure of the facility have yet to be decided and will be dependent on the outcome of the needs assessment being carried out by the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank. The UK emphasised the challenge of long-term reconstruction, and stressed the importance of completing the needs assessment before deciding the terms of the EIB package. The Presidency said they would return to this at the February ECOFIN.

ECOFIN noted Presidency conclusions for France and Germany. The Council reviewed measures taken by Greece to correct its excessive deficit. Greece pointed to continued reforms on both the expenditure and revenues sides of the budget. The Commission noted that despite this corrective action by the Greek government, this was still insufficient for Greece to correct its excessive deficit in 2005. The Council conclusions were approved without discussion, and the 104(8) decision, that Greece has not taken effective action to correct its excessive deficit in line with its convergence programme, was adopted.

The Commission noted that Hungary has exceeded its deficit target for 2004 by 1 percentage point, and that the same outcome was likely for 2005. It recommended that Hungary, in line with article 104(8), had not taken effective action to correct its excessive deficit in line with its convergence programme. Council conclusions and an article 104(8) decision with respect to Hungary were adopted without further discussion.

As regards the excessive deficit procedures against the new member states, the Commission confirmed that the Czech Republic, Poland, Slovakia, Cyprus and Malta were in line with the targets set by their convergences programmes. Council opinions on the stability programmes of Austria, Luxembourg, Sweden and Netherlands and on the convergence programme of the Czech Republic were adopted without discussion.

Discussion of Stability and Growth Pact (SGP) reform options took place, on both the preventative and the corrective arm of the SGP. The UK highlighted that proper account needed to be taken of the economic cycle, of debt sustainability and of public investment.

The Council endorsed the Annual Report on Structural reforms 2005, prepared by the Economic Policy Committee (EPC), which focussed on employment and growth as a core priority. The Council agreed to forward it as a contribution by the Council to the Spring 2005 European Council.

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his Department in the last three years. [207817]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Parliamentary Under-secretary of State, Department of Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Leslie) on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W.

Iraq

Derek Conway: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what the estimated total cost to date is of UK operations and assistance in Iraq. [210406]

Mr. Boateng: In Budget 2003 the Chancellor set aside £3 billion as a Special Reserve to cover the cost of military operations in Iraq. £1 billion was drawn down by the Ministry of Defence in the Spring Supplementary Estimate for 2002–03.

In the 2003 pre-Budget report, the Government carried forward the £2 billion unallocated special reserve into 2003–04 and added a further £500 million in 2003–04. £300 million was also added in 2004–05 as a prudent allowance against continuing commitments in Iraq and elsewhere in the war against terrorism. A further £520 million for the Special Reserve in 2004–05 was announced by the Chancellor in the 2004 pre-Budget report.

The Ministry of Defence drew down £1,539 million in the 2003–04 Winter and Spring Supplementary Estimates for the costs of military operations in Iraq.

At the Madrid Donors' Conference in October 2003, the Government announced a total UK pledge of £544 million towards the reconstruction effort in Iraq up to March 2006. Of this, the Department for International Development has committed over £331 million for humanitarian and reconstruction assistance in Iraq since the conflict.

National Minimum Wage (Lancashire)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people he estimates in (a) Burnley and (b) Lancashire are benefiting from the national minimum wage; what percentage that is of those in work in each case; and if he will make a statement. [210969]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 26 January 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people it is estimated are benefiting from the national minimum wage in Burnley and Lancashire. I am replying in his absence. (210969)

Estimates for the number of jobs paid below the minimum wage for local authority areas and counties are not available. However, the Office for National Statistics (ONS) calculates this information for the United Kingdom and Government Office Regions. A guide to measuring low pay and associated articles and data can be found on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 5837&Pos = 1&ColRank = 1&Rank = 272

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pay television subscriptions the Department had in each year since 1997; and what the cost was in each year. [207660]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury had no pay television subscriptions prior to financial year 2002–03. The number of subscriptions and the costs including VAT for each complete financial year since then are as follows. The costs include £44,000 and £39,000 in 2002–03 and 2003–04 respectively payable to the Central Office of Information for Houses of Parliament television channels.

Productivity

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what GDP per hour worked in the UK has been on a constant price basis in each year since 1979. [210606]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. David Willetts, dated 26 January 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the levels of constant price GDP per hour worked in the UK in each year since 1979. I am replying in his absence. (210606)

The National Statistics measure of output per hour uses Gross Value Added rather than Gross Domestic Product as the numerator. The table below shows the index of whole economy GVA per hour from 1993, which is when the hours series is available from.

Index of whole economy GVA per hour, 1993–2003

	Whole economy GVA per hour[1]
1993	84.5
1994	87.0
1995	88.3
1996	90.0
1997	91.3
1998	93.8
1999	95.4
2000	98.9
2001	100.0
2002	101.7
2003	103.5

Tax Credits

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of tax credit awards have been appealed since their introduction. [210433]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of written appeals received against tax credit decisions by 31 December 2004 is equivalent to roughly 1 per cent. of all tax credit applications put into award since the introduction of working tax credit and child tax credit.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what monitoring of advice given by operators in tax credit call centres his Department has conducted. [210435]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue monitor the quality of advice their Helpline advisers provide in a number of ways. First, every team leader listens to a number of calls each month for every adviser in their team and then gives individual feedback on the quality of their service. Second, there is a Quality Team who listen to 50 random calls each month from each of the six call centres—they too provide feedback to the advisers from their findings. And finally, there is an independent validation that the checks have been completed each month—this team listens to calls that have been picked for checking and they too provide input and advice on the quality of service.

Chris Ruane: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost was of the introduction of the IT system for tax credits; what assessment he has made of the system; and what penalty clauses there were in the contract for the provision of IT services to enable the Government to recover the costs of failure and breakdown. [210437]

Dawn Primarolo: Details are in the Inland Revenue's Annual Report and Accounts for 2003–04 published on 21 October 2004 at page 104.

The Inland Revenue and EDS are currently in discussions over payment of compensation for the errors with the NTC system. These discussions are on-going and so I am unable to say anything further at this stage.

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his forecast is of the expenditure on the child care element of the working tax credit in 2005–06. [210749]

Dawn Primarolo: For a forecast of total tax credit expenditure in 2005–06, I refer the hon. Member to Table B13 and B16 in pre Budget report, December 2004. No separate forecast has been made for expenditure on the child care element of working tax credit in 2005–06.

Tom Levitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of applications for tax credits have been significantly wrongly assessed initially. [210796]

Dawn Primarolo: For the level of accuracy of processing and calculating tax credits for 2003–04 I refer my hon. Friend to page 29 of the Inland Revenue's Annual Report and Accounts for the year ending 31 March 2004. This is available on the Inland Revenue website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk. The Inland Revenue will similarly report against its targets for 2004–05 in due course.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether parents can claim tax credit against the cost of employing a registered nanny; and if he will make a statement. [210816]

Dawn Primarolo: From April 2005, parents in England who use nannies who are approved under the Department for Education and Skills Child Care Approval scheme will be to claim the child care element.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many families in Hendon (a) received child tax credit and (b) were estimated to be entitled to it on the latest date for which figures are available; what the average monthly payment was in the last month for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [210874]

(2) how many families in Hendon (a) received working tax credit and (b) were estimated to be entitled to it on the latest date for which figures are available; what the average monthly payment was in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [210875]

Dawn Primarolo: For (a), estimates of the number of in-work families in each constituency receiving tax credits are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics, Geographical Analyses. December 2004". This can be found on the Inland Revenue website, at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm. The estimates are based on a sample of cases, and are subject to sampling uncertainty.

For (b), estimates of the number of families eligible for these tax credits are not available at the constituency level.

Information on average monthly payments of child tax credit and working tax credit is not available, as explained in the technical note in "Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. December 2004". This can be found on the Inland Revenue website.

Tom Levitt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are in receipt of (a) child tax credit and (b) working tax credit in the High Peak constituency. [210795]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the number of in-work families receiving tax credits in each constituency (broken down by families with and without children) appear in "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Geographical analyses. December 2004." This can be found on the Inland Revenue website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm. The estimates are based on a sample of cases, and are subject to sampling uncertainty.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) families and (b) individuals in Nottingham North constituency benefit from the working tax credit. [211012]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the number of in-work families receiving tax credits in each constituency (broken down by families with and without children) appear in "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Geographical analyses. December 2004." This can be found on the Inland Revenue website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm. The estimates are based on a sample of cases, and are subject to sampling uncertainty.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average tax burden on a single earner family on average earnings with two children claiming the working tax credit in the Nottingham North constituency was in the latest period for which figures are available; and what the tax burden was on such a family in (a) 1975–76 and (b) 1997–98. [211014]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available at the constituency level. For the tax burden for a single earner couple on UK average earnings I refer the right hon. Friend to table 14.10 in the "Tax Benefit Reference Manual 2004–05 Edition" available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what the total expenditure on (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit in Stoke-on-Trent has been in each year since those schemes have been in operation; [210868]

(2) how many people in Stoke-on-Trent have successfully claimed (a) working tax credit and (b) child tax credit in each year since those schemes have been in operation. [210869]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the number of in-work families in each local authority and constituency receiving these tax credits appear in "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Geographical analyses." These can be found on the Inland Revenue website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm. The estimates are based on a sample of cases, and are subject to sampling uncertainty.

The national level of expenditure on tax credits in the year ending 31 March 2004 appears in the Inland Revenue report and accounts for that year. The amounts paid to families in each local authority or constituency are not available.

Teenage Pregnancies

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many teenage pregnancies there were in (a) Romford, (b) the London borough of Havering, (c) Greater London, (d) Essex and (e) England in (i) over 16s and (ii) under 16s in the most recent period for which figures are available. [210529]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mr. Andrew Rosindell, dated 26 January 2005:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question (PQ) asking for information on teenage pregnancies in Romford, the London borough of Havering, Greater London, Essex and England. I am replying in his absence. (210529)

The most recent year for which conception statistics are available is 2002. Figures for this year are provisional.

Conception figures are not routinely produced by Parliamentary Constituency. However, figures for teenage conceptions by Parliamentary Constituency in 2000 were given in an answer to a previous PQ and placed in the House of Commons Library (PQ 87154, Hansard No. 21, column 586W). There were 49 teenage conceptions in Romford in 2000.

Conception figures by age or for subsequent years are not available by Parliamentary Constituency.

The data requested for the London borough of Havering, Greater London, Essex and England are given in the attached table.

Number of teenage conceptions to women aged under 16 and 16–17, 2002

	Age
	Under 16	16–17
London borough of Havering	18	132
Greater London	1,229	5,283
Essex	154	635
England	7,395	31,955

HEALTH

Adverse Drug Reactions

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the Committee on Safety of Medicines takes when it receives reports of adverse drug reactions to insulin glargine; [210114]

(2) how many cases of suspected adverse drug reactions for human insulin there were in 2003; what the symptoms of such adverse reactions were; and what research he has (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned on the effects of the use of GM produced insulin analogues. [210116]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 24 January 2005]: As with all medicines, the safety of human insulins is monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), with independent expert advice from the committee on safety of medicines (CSM). All information on the safety of these products is evaluated as it becomes available.

Insulin glargine (Lantus) is a long acting insulin licensed throughout the European Union. As with all new medicines, it is currently under intensive monitoring by the MHRA and the CSM. Prescribers are asked to report through the yellow card scheme all suspected adverse reactions for products under intensive monitoring, which are identified by an inverted black triangle symbol in the British National Formulary. When reports are received they are added to the database of adverse drug reactions. All reports of serious adverse drug reactions are evaluated by a member of the professional staff of the MHRA with particular responsibility for that product. These reports are then discussed in the context of all reports for the product at a weekly meeting of professional medical and scientific staff of the MHRA to identify any new safety issues.

A total of 142 reports of suspected adverse reactions were reporting through the Yellow Card Scheme in association with all human insulins in 2003. The most common adverse drug reactions reported related to decreases or increases in blood sugar, headache, injection site reaction and pruritis (itching).

In 2000, the CSM's sub-committee on Pharmacovigilance (SCOP) considered a systematic review of the literature on the safety of human insulins (Airey et al Diabetic Medicine 2000). A total of 52 randomised controlled trials were identified, in addition to 56 studies of other designs and case reports. The SCOP advised that although some patients have experienced problems on transferring to human insulin and are better suited to animal derived insulins, there is no clear evidence of safety problem specific to human insulin. This advice was communicated to prescribers in an article in the drug safety bulletin, "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" in September 2000. In 2002, SCOP considered a review of human insulin versus animal insulin in people with diabetes mellitus published by the Cochrane Library. This review included randomised controlled trials of at least one month in duration until May 2002. No significant differences in metabolic control or hypoglycaemic episodes between various insulin species could be elucidated. The patient information leaflets for insulins provide detailed information about the risk of hypoglycaemia and the advice on action to take should it occur.

Burns Units (West Midlands)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist burns services units there are in the West Midlands region. [210125]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 25 January 2005]: There are two specialist burns units within the West Midlands region. University Hospital Birmingham National Health Service Foundation Trust has a unit which deals with adult burns and Birmingham Children's Hospital NHS Trust has a unit which deals with paediatric burns.

Individuals from the Warwickshire area also have access to the burns unit at the Leicester Royal Infirmary.

Care Homes (Pension Credit)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to award care home residents the amount of pension credit they would receive if they were still living in their own homes; and if he will make a statement. [207734]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 13 January 2005]: We have no plans to change the residential charging arrangements relating to the savings element of pension credit. Those people in residential care receiving £4.65 or less savings credit have all of their award disregarded when the local authority assesses what they can afford to pay for their care. In addition, care home residents with weekly incomes so great that they do not qualify for savings credit also receive a savings disregard of £4.65. Only where a resident has an award above £4.65 is the amount above £4.65 taken into account in their assessment.

This solution ensures that the receipt of savings credit by care home residents does not create an anomaly in the system of care home charges. If residents in receipt of savings credit retained it all, they would be better off than residents with higher incomes not in receipt of savings credit.

Continuing Care

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to produce a national framework for assessment for fully-funded NHS continuing care. [210824]

Dr. Ladyman: As was announced on 9 December 2004, I commissioned work to be started on a national framework for continuing care to improve consistency of assessments and approach and ease of understanding of continuing care and the assessment process for patients, their families and practitioners alike. Officials are in the process of working with the national health service, local authorities, voluntary and patient/user groups and the Health Service Ombudsman's office to plan the content and timescale of this piece of work.

Digital Hearing Aids

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how his Department calculates the NHS reference costs for the (a) provision and (b) fitting of digital hearing aids. [210238]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department collects unit cost and activity data from all national health service providers in England each financial year.

Various appropriate activity currencies are used for a range of services and treatments provided by the NHS, which form part of the scope of the reference cost collection. Unit cost data is produced in accordance with the rules detailed in the NHS costing manual, to ensure that both cost and activity data are calculated on a consistent and comparable basis.

The data are collated and national average unit cost figures are produced by calculating, for each service/treatment area, the total national cost for the service, and then dividing this by the total reported activity for that service, at national level.

All national average costs are published in the national schedule of reference costs, at service level, in conjunction with national activity levels, and inter-quartile ranges, detailing the ranges between which the middle 50 per cent., of NHS provider costs lie.

Data on the provision and fitting of hearing aids are available for the 2002–03 financial year, when the average unit cost reported by NHS trusts undertaking the service in house was 144 per aid, but no comparable data will be available for the financial year 2003–04, following changes to the accounting treatment of digital hearing aids.

Copies of the national schedule of reference costs and the NHS costing manual are available in the Library.

Domiciliary Oxygen Supplies

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the new domiciliary oxygen contract will make available the supply of liquid oxygen; and when he expects it to be implemented. [210236]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Liquid oxygen will be available as part of the new domiciliary oxygen contract where this is a suitable option that meets the clinical and other needs of the individual patient. This is part of an integrated service that allows patients improved access to a range of service options and to benefit from new and developing technologies. We expect to complete evaluation of tenders in the next few weeks and will announce awards as soon as possible. The national health service will work closely with successful contractors over the coming month to introduce the new service from 1 October 2005.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with his colleagues in the Home Department with regard to the appropriate balance between drug abuse prevention and drug abuse treatment; and if he will make a statement. [210574]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government drugs strategy covers drug prevention, supply, drug related crime and drug treatment. Both drug prevention and treatment are vital components of the overall strategy.

There are regular discussions between the Home Office and the Department on drug prevention and treatment. These cross-Government meetings discuss the work programmes, which are being implemented in support of the drugs strategy.

Eastbourne District General Hospital

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations at Eastbourne District General Hospital have been cancelled in each of the last six months. [208104]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data about cancelled operations are collected at trust level only. Eastbourne District General Hospital is part of East Sussex Hospitals National Health Service Trust. Cancelled operations figures for East Sussex Hospitals NHS Trust are shown in the table.

Cancelled operations for East Sussex Hospitals NHS Trust

	Period
	Quarter 1 (April to June 2004–05)	Quarter 2 (July to September 2004–05)
Number of elective admissions	7,278	7,357
Number of cancelled operations	125	144
Number re-admitted within 28 days	70	93

GP Surgeries (Lancashire)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner surgeries have been upgraded in Lancashire using the local improvement finance trust programme; and if he will make a statement. [209999]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Currently, no surgeries have been upgraded in Lancashire through the national health service local improvement finance trust programme. However, three new buildings are opening to patients in Wigan between February and June 2005, replacing 11 existing practice premises. A further three new schemes in Darwen, Bacup and Nelson are opening shortly, replacing an additional 16 existing practice premises. Similar developments are under construction in Burnley, St. Helens and Oldham and will be opening to patients in 2005 and 2006.

GPs (North Yorkshire)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on emergency cover for general practitioners in North Yorkshire. [210129]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Primary care trusts in North Yorkshire have set up a team to finalise future arrangements for the provision of out-of-hours services. In the meantime, the North Yorkshire emergency doctors service is continuing to operate.

Health Care-associated Infection

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been allocated for research into health care-associated infections; and what plans he has for how that funding should be spent. [208079]

Miss Melanie Johnson: During the first half of 2003, the Department commissioned a £2.5 million strategic programme of research aimed at improving scientific understanding of antimicrobial resistance. £590,000 of that total sum is being spent on projects that will provide information relating to preventing methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus.

The publication of the Department's report, "Winning Ways—working together to reduce healthcare associated infection in England", in December 2003 was accompanied by the announcement that £3 million would be allocated to fund a new research programme on healthcare associated infections.

We have commissioned the "National observational study of the effectiveness of the Clean Your Hands campaign and a cluster randomised controlled trials of the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of feedback in intensive care units and acute general medical wards". A further call for research proposals is about to be issued, following the Department's recent science summit.

Laser Eye [illegible]gery

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what independent audits have taken place on the (a) efficacy and (b) safety of private provision of laser eye surgery. [209317]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has reviewed available evidence on Laser in situ keratomileusis for the treatment of refractive errors (short and long-sightedness) and issued guidance to the national health service on 15 December 2004. A copy is available on the NICE website at www.nice.org.uk/pdf/ip/IPG102publicinfo.pdf. We are not aware of other independent audits.

Methadone and Buprenorphine

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pharmacies supply prescription (a) methadone and (b) buprenorphine; and how many of these are independent pharmacies. [209105]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on specific pharmacies supplying methadone and buprenorphine is not held centrally, but any community pharmacy providing national health service pharmaceutical services presented with a prescription is expected to provide the medicines ordered with reasonable promptness and in accordance with other legal requirements.

NHS Personnel Costs

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the market force factor is applied to personnel costs for NHS employees beyond agreed weighting factors. [209608]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 20 January 2005]: The market forces factor (MFF) is a component of the weighted capitation formula used to inform allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs). The purpose of the MFF is to equalise the commissioning power of PCTs by adjusting for unavoidable variations in national health service trust costs directly related to location.

The MFF is made up of the following elements.

	Percentage
Staff MFF	around 70
Land MFF	around 1
Buildings MFF	around 4

Skipton Fund

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) total monetary value and (b) average value is of the (i) 2,560 stage one payments and (ii) 112 stage two payments which had been made as at 6 December 2004 to the Skipton Fund under the ex gratia payment scheme for people infected with hepatitis C. [209147]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Under the hepatitis C ex-gratia payment scheme, a standard lump sum stage 1 payment of £20,000 may be available to people who have been infected with hepatitis C from contaminated blood products prior to September 1991. A further £25,000 can be claimed by applicants who have already received stage 1 payments, where the disease has progressed.

The table shows the cost of payments made as at 6 December 2004.

	Number of payments made	Cost of payments (£)
Stage 1 applications	2,560	51,200,000
Stage 2 applications	112	2,800,000

Special Hospitals

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultants and (b) staff there have been in (i) Rampton, (ii) Broadmoor and (iii) Ashworth special hospitals in each of the last 10 years. [210899]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 25 January 2005]: The number of consultants and total numbers of other staff for Ashworth and Broadmoor hospitals from 1996 to 2004 are shown in table 1.

Table 1

	Ashworth hospital		Broadmoor hospital

Teenage Sex

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's policy is on teenage sexual activity; and what scientific evidence is used in the development of this policy. [210530]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The Government's teenage pregnancy and wider sexual health strategies reflect the complex reasons behind England's high rate of teenage pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections (STIs). Key aspects of the Government's response to these issues are:

information campaigns highlighting: the importance of under-16s delaying sexual activity (evidence tells us that delay results in lower rates of regret and improved contraception use); resisting peer pressure to engage in early sexual activity; and—for young people who are sexually active—the importance of using condoms to protect against unplanned pregnancies and STIs. This final message is reinforced through the Department of Health's sexual health campaign which, as highlighted in the recent Public Health White Paper, will be expanded, with an emphasis on reaching young people and other hard to reach groups; support for parents to help them discuss sex and relationship issues with their children (which is proven to result in more openness, later first sex and better contraception use); improving both the quality of sex and relationships education in schools and out of school settings, and young people's access to contraception and sexual health advice services in community settings and general practice; provision of enhanced support to teenage parents, to provide a pathway out of social exclusion, in particular through re-engagement in education and training; and better partnership working between local health and education partners through the "Healthy Schools" programme and the establishment of Teenage Pregnancy Partnership Boards in each top tier local authority.

This multi-faceted approach was recommended in the Social Exclusion Unit's report on teenage pregnancy, published in 1999. The plan reflects the best international evidence of what works in reducing teenage pregnancies and supporting teenage parents. A subsequent review by the Health Development Agency in 2003, confirmed the evidence base for the strategy.

Between 1998 (the baseline year for the teenage pregnancy strategy) and 2002 (the latest year for which data are available) the rate of under-18 conceptions has fallen by 8.6 per cent. and the rate of under-16 conceptions by 11.2 per cent. The proportion of teenage parents engaged in education, employment or training has increased from 23.1 per cent. (average for 1997–99) to 29.7 per cent. (average for 2002–04).

TETRA System

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has discussed the health implications of the use of the TETRA system with representatives of those countries that already use the system. [210267]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The Home Office asked the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) to look at the health and safety aspects of the TETRA technology used by Airwave. The NRPB's independent Advisory Group on Non-Ionising Radiation (AGNIR) drew on peer reviewed scientific literature from around the world in compiling the 2001 report on TETRA (Docs NRPB, Vol 12, No 8). The Home Office continues to liaise with the NRPB and the Department of Health who maintain contacts with the international scientific community.

The Home Office has provided information about its research programme to representatives from other countries.

Walsgrave Hospital

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the funding allocated to Walsgrave Hospital in Coventry for the next year. [210124]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 25 January 2005]: We do not allocate funding to national health service acute trusts. NHS acute trusts, as providers of services, receive the bulk of their revenue funding from commissioning by primary care trusts (PCTs). They also receive revenue funding from the Department for medical staff, education services and for research and development. In addition, acute trusts can charge staff, visitors or patients for services provided, such as catering or provision of private patient facilities.

For the next financial year (2005–06), Coventry PCT has been allocated £348 million, an increase of £29.6 million over the 2004–05 allocation. Future allocations will be announced shortly.

It is for PCTs, in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders, to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Beef Export Ban

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Government will take steps to lift the beef export ban. [210746]

Mr. Pearson: Exports of beef from the UK can take place under the Date Based Export Scheme and six plants have been approved to export including four from Northern Ireland. A general lifting of the ban requires the European Commission to bring forward an appropriate proposal and the agreement of the other member states.

Any such proposal would only be made once the Over Thirty Month Rule has been ended in the UK and following a successful outcome of a further inspection visit from the EU's Food and Veterinary Office to check BSE controls and testing arrangements. This is likely to take until later this year.

In the meantime UK officials are working with the Commission on the detail of the arrangement to be put in place to facilitate the easing of the beef export restriction.

Counterfeit Pharmaceuticals

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the involvement of paramilitary organisations in the Province in the counterfeiting of pharmaceuticals. [210041]

Mr. Pearson: There is no evidence to suggest that Northern Ireland based paramilitary organisations are involved in the manufacture or supply of counterfeit pharmaceuticals. The Police Service of Northern Ireland and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety are acutely aware of the problems associated with counterfeit medicines in other countries and they continue to monitor the situation closely.

A quantity of illegal veterinary medicines was seized in a joint operation between the PSNI and DHSS&PS in April and May 2004. This followed a number of planned searches.

Fall-related Injuries

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) accident and emergency attendances and (b) hospital admissions there were in the Province for fall-related injuries in those aged (i) less than 60, (ii) 60 to 75 and (iii) more than 75 years in each of the last five years. [210071]

Mr. Gardiner: Information is not available on (a) the number of attendances at accident and emergency for fall-related injuries. However, information is available on (b) the number of admissions[1] to hospitals in Northern Ireland each year suffering from fall-related injuries for people aged (i) less than 60, (ii) 60 to 75 and (iii) more than 75 years, and is shown for the years 1999–2000 to 2003–04 in the table.

	Age group
	0–59 years	60–74 years	75 + years	Total

Haemophilia Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the services available in the Province for haemophilia patients. [210023]

Angela Smith: Most services to haemophiliacs are provided in an outpatient primary care or community environment. In addition, the Haemophilia Centre based at Belfast City Hospital provides a regional service for patients with inherited and acquired bleeding disorders. Cover is provided by the Consultant team on a 24-hour basis. A vacancy currently exists for a Centre Director, which is being filled on an acting basis by a senior haematologist, but this has no direct impact on the service to patients.

House Sales

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will support the restriction of house sales to local people in areas of Northern Ireland where the local economy depends upon tourism, with particular reference to (a) Portballintrae, (b) Portstewart and (c) Castlerock, in a manner similar to that recently proposed by the Yorkshire Dales National Park Authority. [210931]

Mr. Spellar: There are no plans at present to introduce the restriction of house sales to local people along the North Coast of Northern Ireland.

The house sales schemes of housing associations and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive give adequate protection for retaining housing in local areas as only the sitting tenant, with others living in the house, may buy that dwelling, and, in the event of re-sale within 10 years from the date of purchase, the dwelling must be offered to the social landlord from whom it was bought.

IT (Disciplinary Procedures)

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in his Department have (a) received official warnings and (b) faced disciplinary procedures following breaches of IT policy in each year since 1997. [205810]

Mr. Pearson: The information is in the table.

	Number of staff receiving official warnings (verbal)	Number of staff who faced disciplinary procedures
1997	Nil	—
1998	Nil	—
1999	Nil	—
2000	2	1 formal
2001	4	1 informal/1 formal

John Lewis Store

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what his policy is on the proposal for a John Lewis store and associated development at Sprucefield; [210610]

(2) what plans he has for public consultation on the proposal for a John Lewis store at Sprucefield. [210939]

Angela Smith: Proposals for any retail development at Sprucefield must be judged against policies contained in the Regional Development Strategy, the current statutory development plan [Lisburn Area Plan 2001], the recently-published Draft Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan 2015 (BMAP) and relevant Planning Policy Statements, in particular PPS5—retailing and Town Centres—a key objective of which is to sustain and enhance the vitality and viability of town centres.

Public consultation on the proposed development has been on-going for some time with the published notices in the local press in respect of the planning application and supporting documentation. The applicants are preparing further information requested by the Department and on receipt of this information a further public advertisement will be placed in the local press. Third parties will have at least 28 days to respond. As the application is being dealt with under the special procedures set out in Article 31 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991, the Department can ask the Planning Appeals Commission to hold a public inquiry if this is considered appropriate. No decision on a public inquiry has been taken at this stage.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many buildings in Northern Ireland have been newly listed by the Environmental and Heritage Service over the last three years. [210447]

Angela Smith: The total number of newly listed buildings in Northern Ireland from 1 April 2002 to date is 103. There were 44 new listings in 2002–03, 47 new listings in 2003–04 and 12 new listings in 2004–05 to date.

A list of the buildings newly listed during the period has been placed in the Library.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits by the President of the Irish Republic to Northern Ireland have taken place over the past three years; and what protocol was followed prior to each visit. [210445]

Mr. Paul Murphy: President McAleese visited Northern Ireland on 33 occasions during the three years 1 January 2002 to 31 December 2004. Nine of these visits were in a private capacity. For the remainder a Lord-Lieutenant or their representative greeted the President. Members of Parliament were advised, for information only, of the President's attendance at all public venues within their constituency.

Waiting Times (Orthopaedic)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time for patients in Northern Ireland to see an orthopaedic consultant is, broken down by Health and Social Services Board area. [211176]

Angela Smith: Waiting list information is collected by time band. It is therefore not possible to calculate the arithmetic mean length of time waiting. It is however possible to identify the median or mid-point waiting time band.

The median time band for patients currently waiting for a first outpatient appointment in the trauma and orthopaedics specialty at 30 September 2004 for each Health and Social Services Board

Purchaser board	Median time band (months)
Eastern	12–14
Northern	3–5
Southern	3–5
Western	3–5
Other	6–8
Northern Ireland	6–8

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the longest time is that a patient has had to wait to see an orthopaedic consultant in Northern Ireland since 1997. [211177]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, the longest period that a patient was waiting for inpatient admission to the trauma and orthopaedic specialty at 31 December 2004 is 2,495 days.

The longest period that a patient was waiting for initial outpatient assessment to the trauma and orthopaedic specialty at 31 December 2004 is 2,254 days.

Peace Funding

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of whether there has been a disparity in the allocation of peace funding in the last five years. [210885]

Mr. Pearson: European peace funding is governed by the general principles of equality of opportunity and targeting social need that apply to all public expenditure and not on the basis of shares to any one group or community.

School Transport

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Department of Education or an education and library board have been subject to judicial review on home to school transport policy. [210772]

Mr. Gardiner: In the current financial year the Department and the North-Eastern Education and Library Board have jointly been party to one judicial review relating to the home to school transport policy. The application was dismissed.

Neither the Department nor the Education and Library Boards have been involved in any other judicial reviews this year in respect of the transport arrangements.

Special Units

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons (a) official publications referring to post-primary enrolments and (b) his Department's figures in the Costello Report exclude pupils in special units. [210771]

Mr. Gardiner: Departmental publications containing actual enrolments in mainstream schools normally include pupils in special units. When calculating school population projections, pupils in special units are projected and presented separately and therefore were not included in the projections presented in the Costello Report.

The inclusion or exclusion of pupils in special units has no impact on the year-on-year change in projected enrolments, as the number of pupils in special units is held constant in the calculations. If pupils in special units were included in the calculation of the projections, the projected decline of 2.1 per cent. in the post-primary school population from 2002–03 to 2004–05 would be the same.

Suicides

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many suicides there have been in the Province in each of the last 10 years. [210028]

Mr. Pearson: The following table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland for each year between 1994 and 2003 due to "suicide and self-inflicted injury"[1] and the number of registered deaths due to "undetermined injury whether accidentally or purposefully inflicted"[2].

[1] International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision codes X60-X84, Y87.0 for years 2001–2003 and Ninth Revision codes E950-E959 for years 1994–2000.

Theft and Fraud

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the cost to each of the Government Departments in the Province of (a) theft and (b) fraud in each of the last six years. [210070]

Mr. Pearson: The cost of (a) theft and (b) fraud to each Northern Ireland Department (including agencies and NDPBs) for 2003–04 is as follows:

2003	Theft	Fraud
Department of Finance and Personnel	1,470	0
Department of Education	0	16,686
Department of Agriculture and Rural Development	1,423	0
Department of Regional Development	1,143	0

Total	72,055	451,590

[1] Figures include both Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and Department of Employment and Learning.

The cost of theft and fraud for the five previous years can only be shown in total for all Departments, as the cost of obtaining the information would be disproportionate.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Armament Sales (China)

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to consider human rights issues before permitting the sale of arms to China. [210078]

Mr. Rammell: This is already the case. Applications for licences to export arms and other goods controlled for strategic reasons are considered against the Consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria. Criterion Two of the Code obliges the Government to refuse an export licence if there is a clear risk that the proposed export might be used for internal repression.

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the US Administration in the past six months concerning the EU arms embargo on China. [210080]

Mr. Rammell: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (John Wilkinson) on 20 January 2005, Official Report, columns 1055–56W.

Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention

Mike Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place a copy of the United Kingdom Confidence-Building Measure return under the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention for 2003 and subsequent years in the Library. [210277]

Mr. MacShane: Some States Party have now published their Confidence-Building Measure returns under the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention on the internet. For example, the 2004 US return is on the US State Department website at http://www.state.gov/documents/organization/32486.pdf. This is a positive development in the interests of transparency. The Government are currently pursuing with those who provide the information for the UK return whether they are prepared to make their information publicly available, including returns from 2003 and 2004.

I will write to my hon. Friend when this consultation exercise is complete and will place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Burkina Faso

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Government of Burkina Faso; what the topics of discussion were at that meeting; what the outcome was of the meeting; and if he will make a statement. [210791]

Mr. Mullin: A Foreign and Commonwealth Office official met the Burkinabe ambassador to London on 10 November 2004, and stressed the need for all Côte d'Ivoire's neighbours to help the international community's efforts to reach a peaceful solution in Côte d'Ivoire.

Burma

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens are held in prisons in Burma. [210095]

Mr. Mullin: We are not aware of any British nationals detained in Burma.

Chechnya

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held in the past year with (a) EU governments and (b) the US Administration in connection with Russia's policy in Chechnya. [210076]

Mr. Rammell: Russia's policy in Chechnya has been a regular and frequent subject of discussion on a range of levels with US and EU governments during 2004, and has been discussed by European Foreign Ministers, including my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary, at successive General Affairs and External Relations Councils.

We also pursued action on Chechnya in international organisations, including the EU, the Council of Europe and the OSCE, and at the UN Committee on Human Rights.

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Russian Government in the past six months concerning human rights in Chechnya. [210077]

Mr. Rammell: The UK Government remain concerned about the human rights situation in Chechnya. Most worrying are the reports of extra-judicial killings, arbitrary detention and torture.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary most recently raised our concerns with the Russian Government when he met Foreign Minister Lavrov on his trip to Moscow in July 2004. Other Ministers and officials have continued to raise Chechnya with the Russian authorities at all levels since then, including at the annual UK/Russia human rights talks in September.

I intend to reinforce this message during my planned visit to Moscow in February and with Mr. Lukin, the Russian Human Rights Ombudsman, when he visits London at my invitation early in 2005.

Democratic Republic of Congo

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the likelihood of free and fair elections being held in the Democratic Republic of Congo in June; and if he will make a statement. [210721]

Mr. Mullin; Free and fair elections are vital to a peaceful and prosperous Democratic Republic of Congo. Many challenges, both logistical and legislative, will need to be overcome if this target is to be met in the timetable laid out by the peace accords.

The UK continues to support the transitional Government's efforts to prepare for elections. We have announced a £5 million financial contribution to the United Nations administered trust fund for this financial year to support the process.

Côte D'Ivoire

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the impact on the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire of General Henri Poncet's announcement on 18 January on the willingness of the French force in Côte d'Ivoire to use force if asked to do so by the UN mission; and if he will make a statement. [210718]

Mr. Mullin: We welcome General Poncet's expressed willingness for French forces in Côte d'Ivoire to use necessary force when requested to do so by the UN Operation (UNOCI). This is provided for in UN Security Council resolution 1528 (2004). With UNOCI, French forces have helped preserve the peace by maintaining the zone of confidence separating the two sides, and have helped restore order after the recent violence; we value their continued support of UNOCI.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he, (b) members of his Department and (c) representatives of the UK Government have had since November 2004 with members and representatives of (i) the French government, (ii) the government of Côte d'Ivoire, (iii) the rebel forces in the north of Côte d'Ivoire and (iv) the UN regarding the (A) size and (B) nature of the French military deployment to Côte d'Ivoire; and if he will make a statement. [210722]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met President Chirac on 18 January and discussed Côte d'Ivoire. The Prime Minister thanked President Chirac for the French role in supporting the UN operation. On 18 November my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary thanked Foreign Minister Barnier for French military assistance in the evacuation of British citizens.

Officials in London and Paris remain in regular contact with the French government about the situation in Côte d'Ivoire.

We also participate actively in Security Council discussions relating to Côte d'Ivoire as part of an on-going assessment of the roles and responsibility of the UN operation in Côte d'Ivoire.

Cyprus

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange to meet representatives of the other guarantors of Cyprus to discuss the future of the island. [210063]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary regularly meets his Greek and Turkish counterparts. The Foreign Secretary met the Greek Foreign Minister on 2 December 2004, and met the Turkish Foreign Minister on 9 December 2004. On both occasions Cyprus was discussed, among other issues.

The Government will continue to work with all the parties towards a just, viable and lasting Cyprus settlement and urges the two communities, and in particular the Greek Cypriot side, to demonstrate the necessary political will to that end. We stand ready to assist the UN Secretary-General in any new settlement process and fulfil our responsibilities as a Guarantor Power. In the meantime, we will continue to work to implement the EU's policy to end the isolation of the Turkish Cypriots, in line with the appeal of the UN Secretary-General in his Report on his Mission of Good Offices of 28 May 2004.

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings he has held with Turkish Ministers to discuss the removal of Turkish troops from Cyprus. [R] [210096]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed a range of issues, including troops in Cyprus, with the Turkish Foreign Minister on 9 December 2004.

Our fundamental goal remains to work for a Cyprus settlement. The Turkish Government gave their full support to the UN Secretary-General's settlement plan, which included a provision for the phased withdrawal of Turkish troops down to a militarily insignificant level.

Diego Garica

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on (a) the circumstances in which the Government of Mauritius told his Department that the Mauritius Shipping Company cancelled a visit to Diego Garcia for Chagossians and (b) the implementation of his undertaking to Chagossians that they be allowed to visit ancestral graves in the British Indian Ocean Territory. [210472]

Mr. Rammell: The British High Commission in Mauritius was informed in November 2004 by the Mauritius Shipping Corporation (MSC), a parastatal company, that the M/V Trochetia would be available for a visit to the British Indian Ocean Territory to take place in April. A provisional booking of the vessel was made on 29 December. In the meantime, I had written to the Mauritian Foreign Minister on 13 December to inform him of the visit and that we were entering into negotiation with the MSC. On 7 January the MSC informed the British High Commission that the M/V Trochetia could not be made available, and the Prime Minister of Mauritius told me on 13 January that it was he who had personally intervened to prevent its use because he felt it would undermine Mauritius' claim to sovereignty.

My officials are seeking to make alternative arrangements to enable the visit to go ahead.

European Constitution

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to employ the services of a private sector organisation to promote the European Constitution; and if he will make a statement. [210929]

Mr. MacShane: As part of on-going work to provide information to the UK public about the EU, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has employed a PR agency and is considering employing external support for partnership marketing and e-communications. This is entirely consistent with established practice—the majority of Government Departments engage outside agencies to deliver information and communications work in a cost-effective way.

John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what guidance he has issued to his Department's civil servants on their role prior to and during the proposed referendum on the Constitutional Treaty for the European Union; [208549]

(2) what guidance he has issued to his Department's press officers on their role prior to and during the proposed referendum on the Constitutional Treaty for the European Union. [208557]

Mr. MacShane: Guidance to civil servants, including special advisers and members of the Government Information and Communication Service, on their conduct during the referendum on the Treaty establishing a Constitution for the EU, and the period leading up to it, will be issued in due course. It will be made public. In addition, Section 125 of the provisions of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 will apply.

Iran

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the US Administration in the past six months concerning Iran and the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. [210075]

Mr. MacShane: The Government continue to have a regular dialogue with the US Administration on a wide range of issues of mutual concern. The most recent discussion on Iran's nuclear programme took place during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's visit to Washington this week.

Liberia

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he, (b) members of his Department and (c) representatives of the UK Government have had since August 2003 with members and representatives of (i) the EU, (ii) the governments of the member states of the EU, (iii) the UN, (iv) the government of the US, (v) the government of Russia, (vi) the government of China, (vii) the government of Australia and (viii) the government of India regarding the economic and security situation in Liberia; and if he will make a statement. [210723]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed Liberia with the then US Secretary of State Colin Powell in January 2004. I have attended two meetings of the International Contact Group on Liberia, where I met senior representatives of the US, UN, France and the EU. I also met senior UN, US and EU representatives during my visit to Liberia in November 2004; security and the economy were among the issues discussed.

UK officials regularly discuss Liberia with the EU and member states at the EU Africa Working Group and the Africa Caribbean Pacific Working Group. There is also frequent contact between UK, US, UN and EU officials in Monrovia, New York and London. This includes discussions over the deployment of Irish, Dutch and Swedish troops to the UN Mission in Liberia.

The UK has had discussions with officials from China and Russia in the margins of the Security Council discussions on Liberia at the UN. I am not aware of any discussions with the Governments of Australia or India.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who the UK representatives will be at the Non-Proliferation Treaty Review Conference in New York in May; and what proposals will be tabled by the UK Government. [210704]

Mr. MacShane: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies I gave him on 1 November 2004, Official Report, column 77W and 13 December 2004, Official Report, column 899W. The UK will send a full delegation to the 2005 Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) Review Conference. The delegation will be led by Ambassador John Freeman, the UK Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament at Geneva. He will be accompanied by other experts and advisers to be decided.

We will stress the need for a stronger and more effective counter-proliferation regime and the central role of the NPT as its cornerstone. We will emphasise the importance of compliance with the treaty and will promote the adoption of safeguards. We will emphasise the strength of the UK's positive record on nuclear disarmament and we will present a final report of the studies we have conducted on the verification of nuclear disarmament.

Palestine

Mr. Lyons: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will meet representatives of the Palestinian authorities following the recent election. [210062]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will meet recently-elected Palestinian president Mahmoud Abbas and representatives of the Palestinian Authority at the London Meeting on strengthening the Palestinian Authority. This will take place on 1 March. We will also hold bilateral contacts and meetings with the Palestinian leadership as necessary in the run-up to the London Meeting.

Serbia and Montenegro

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government of Serbia and Montenegro requesting that they hand over war criminals to the International Criminal Tribunal in The Hague. [210232]

Mr. MacShane: The UK Government continue to take every opportunity—both bilaterally and in multilateral fora—to make clear to the Government of Serbia and Montenegro (SaM), as well as to the competent authorities in Belgrade and in Podgorica, their international obligations, under Chapter VII UN Security Council Resolutions, to co-operate fully with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia in The Hague.

Most recently, during the visit of SaM President Svetozar Marovic and other State Union Ministers to the UK, I—together with my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister, the Foreign Secretary, the Secretary of State for Defence and other Ministers—emphasised that the arrest or surrender and transfer to The Hague of fugitive indictees, in particular Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, is the key requirement for the country's closer integration with Euro-Atlantic structures.

Sir Mark Thatcher (South Africa)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether UK Government officials were involved in the proceedings relating to Sir Mark Thatcher in South Africa. [210073]

Mr. Mullin: No. Officials from our Consulate General in Cape Town provided Sir Mark Thatcher with appropriate consular assistance.

VE Day Celebrations

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has for the celebration of the 60th anniversary of Victory in Europe day. [210578]

Mr. MacShane: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will participate in the major commemorations held on Sunday 10 July 2005 which will incorporate the anniversaries of the cessation of hostilities in Europe and the Far East and are being organised by the Ministry of Defence.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Antisocial Behaviour Response Courts

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will make a statement on the establishment of the antisocial response courts. [210725]

Mr. Leslie: Antisocial behaviour response courts are magistrates courts, which have a particular focus in dealing with antisocial behaviour cases as effectively as possible, in co-operation with local agencies.

The key features of antisocial behaviour response courts are:

Dealing with cases swiftly and efficiently;

Providing high-level witness care;

Ensuring magistrates and court staff are fully trained and aware of local issues and concerns;

Working closely with the other criminal justice agencies;

Identifying an individual with specific responsibility for co-ordinating the courts' response; and Holding specialist sessions, where appropriate.

Within this framework, it is a matter for local management to decide how the courts should operate in their areas.

Antisocial behaviour response courts were originally established in summer 2004 in 12 areas, including Merseyside. The location of these courts was chosen to link up with the appointment of specialist Crown Prosecutors in these areas. Since then antisocial behaviour response courts have been identified across England and Wales. On 21 January 2004 Lord Falconer announced the identification of the 100th antisocial behaviour response court. Lessons learned from the original 12 courts have also been circulated to courts across England and Wales, to ensure that all courts are aware of best practice in their handling of ASB cases.

Further antisocial behaviour response courts will be identified in areas where there is a need.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what advice is issued to asylum adjudicators regarding the grounds for granting refugee status to applicants who have fled persecution because of their homosexuality. [210707]

Mr. Leslie: Immigration Adjudicators are independent members of the judiciary, and as such no specific advice or guidance is issued in relation to claims based on an appellant's sexuality. Immigration Adjudicators will determine each asylum appeal based on their own findings of fact and by applying the law as established to that particular claim.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what training in sexuality issues is given to asylum case adjudicators who handle asylum applications based on persecution on the grounds of sexual orientation. [210710]

Mr. Leslie: Immigration adjudicators are independent members of the judiciary who determine each asylum appeal based on their own findings of fact and by applying the law as established to that particular claim. The training of immigration adjudicators is organised and facilitated by senior judicial members of the Immigration Appellate Authority.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs when he intends to answer the letter dated 15 December 2004 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Thomas Gill. [210837]

Mr. Leslie: I can confirm that the hon. Member's letter was received on 20 December. Unfortunately, however, it has been mislaid. Arrangements have been made to obtain a further copy and the Secretary of State will write to the right hon. Member soon. I apologise for this unfortunate incident.

Royal Charters

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if the Government will take steps to make a complete list of Royal Charters and their provisions available to the public. [210872]

Mr. Leslie: Since the year 1231, over 940 charters have been issued. There are about 400 still in force, but the exact number cannot be determined without historical research which is outside the capacity of the Privy Council Office.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs which Royal Charters granting rights to trade in certain areas also restrict trade within that area; and when these were awarded. [210873]

Mr. Leslie: The Privy Council Office does not hold this information.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps are taken to enforce conditions attached to Royal Charters, and who is responsible for doing so. [211037]

Mr. Leslie: The grant of a Royal Charter is not subject to conditions.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Department has investigated whether any Royal Charter contravenes the European Convention on Human Rights; what steps are taken to ensure that Royal Charters conform to the Convention; and whether court cases have arisen in relation to the conformity of Royal Charters with the European Convention. [211038]

Mr. Leslie: It is not part of the function of the Privy Council Office to carry out such investigations.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what Government policy is regarding the future award of Royal Charters; and if he will make a statement. [211039]

Mr. Leslie: The Privy Council will continue to advise Her Majesty to grant Royal Charters in cases where this is in the public interest.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Building Regulations

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he received relating to the consultation on amendments to Part L of the building regulations to the effect that organisations accredited as competent under the Council for Registered Gas Installers and the Oil Firing Technical Association are (a) fully qualified and (b) under-qualified to assess whole heating systems; and if he will make a statement. [210888]

Phil Hope: During last year's consultation on amendments to Part L of the Building Regulations the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received some representations that the CORGI and OFTEC Competent Persons schemes do not cover works on whole heating systems to the extent that they could. Officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are now working closely with CORGI, OFTEC and other organisations to see what changes are needed to improve the scope of the Competent Persons Schemes in relation to Part L.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the potential for (a) lowering fuel bills and (b) reducing carbon emissions by amendment of Part L of the Buildings Regulations. [210923]

Phil Hope: The most recent assessment is contained in the consultation document published last July by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. That document contains proposals to raise the standards in Part L this year in line with the commitments in the Energy White Paper. As normal the proposals aim to achieve substantial improvements consistent with Better Regulation policy, cost-effectiveness, design flexibility and the avoidance of excessive technical risks.

Council Housing

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total income in capital receipts was from the sale of council housing under the right-to-buy in 2003–04, broken down by (a) debt free and (b) indebted local authorities. [209698]

Keith Hill: Total receipts from council right-to-buy sales in England for 2003–04 are estimated at £3,025 million, of which £338 million are from those local authorities who were debt-free as at 1 April 2003. The remaining receipts (£2687 million) are from indebted local authorities.

Under section 236(4)a person commits an offence if he intentionally alters, suppresses or destroys any document which he has been required to produce by a notice under section 235.

Under section 238(1) a person commits an offence if:

(a) he supplies any information to a local housing authority in connection with any of their functions under any of Parts 1 to 4 or Part 7 of the Act,

(b) the information is false or misleading, and

(c) he knows that it is false or misleading or is reckless as to whether it is false or misleading.

Under section 238(2) a person commits an offence if:

(a) he supplies any information to another person which is false or misleading,

(b) he knows that it is false or misleading or is reckless as to whether it is false or misleading, and

(c) he knows that the information is to be used for the purpose of supplying information to a local housing authority in connection with any of their functions under any of Parts 1 to 4 or Part 7 of the Act.

Under section 241 a person who obstructs a relevant person in the performance of anything which, by virtue of any of Parts 1 to 4 or Part 7 of the Act, that person is required or authorised to do commits an offence.

Paragraph 25 of Schedule 7 gives the local housing authority, or any person authorised by them, the right to enter any part of a dwelling which is subject to an interim or final empty dwelling management order, at any reasonable time, for the purpose of carrying out works. Where any occupier notified of the intention to exercise this right prevents an officer, employee, agent or contractor of the local housing authority from carrying out the work a magistrates' court may order him to permit to be done on the premises anything which the authority consider to be necessary. Under paragraph 25(4) of Schedule 7 a person who fails to comply with such an order commits an offence.

Paragraph 25 of Schedule 11 inserts a new paragraph 20A into Schedule 1 to the Housing Act 1996. This new paragraph provides that any person who, in purported compliance with a notice given under paragraph 20A (notice to give evidence to an inquiry into the affairs of a registered social landlord) knowingly or recklessly provides any information which is false or misleading in a material particular commits an offence.

Paragraph 26(3) of Schedule 11 inserts new sub-paragraphs (4)-(6) in to paragraph 21 of Schedule 1 to the Housing Act 1996. These new paragraphs provide that any person who, in purported compliance with a notice given under paragraph 21 (notice to give information to an inquiry) knowingly or recklessly provides any information which is false or misleading in a material particular commits an offence.

Flood Risks

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to introduce measures to increase the resilience of domestic oil tanks to the risk of flooding on flood plains. [210924]

Phil Hope: There are currently no plans to introduce such measures. Pollution risks from domestic oil tanks have been addressed in the Building Regulations since 1 April 2002 and it would be premature to amend the provisions without the results of a survey of implementation starting later this year. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is aware that the perception of domestic oil pollution risks is changing, and it is considering with the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and the Environment Agency what additional technical guidance may be necessary.

Housing Associations

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish an annual summary for the next three years of planned improvements to housing association stock. [208485]

Keith Hill: The information requested is not held centrally by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. However, Housing Associations supply the Housing Corporation with forecast spend on planned maintenance and major repairs, both of which may include works classed as "improvements." The totals for these two for 2005–06 to 2007–08 are as follows;

	Total £
2005–06	1,921,719
2006–07	1,886,966
2007–08	1,834,596

Housing Benefit

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of (a) council tenants and (b) housing association tenants are on housing benefit, broken down by local authority area. [210622]

Keith Hill: A table showing the percentage of housing association tenants in local authority areas in England who receive housing benefit in 2004 has been made available in the Library of the House.

Data for local authority tenants are not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of tenants of (a) housing associations and (b) local authorities received housing benefit in each of the last five years. [210623]

Keith Hill: The following table gives the percentage of housing association tenants in England who receive housing benefit in the last five years.

Percentage of housing association tenants in receipt of housing benefit 2000–04

	Benefit	No benefit	Unknown
2000	64.5	19.5	16.0
2001	61.9	21.3	16.8
2002	60.4	22.1	17.3
2003	58.1	22.7	19.2
2004	57.6	23.0	19.3

There are no comparable data for local authority tenants.

New Charter

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of whether New Charter are (a) ensuring acceptable behaviour from tenants and (b) evicting tenants who do not behave in an acceptable way in Tameside. [210665]

Keith Hill: The Audit Commission are responsible for assessing New Charter Housing Trusts' performance on antisocial behaviour. Their latest assessment awarded New Charter the highest rating possible on dealing with antisocial behaviour.

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he has taken to verify how far (a) New Charter and (b) Pioneer Homes have fulfilled the undertakings made to tenants in prospectuses issued on taking over council housing in Tameside. [210666]

Keith Hill: New Charter Housing Trust and Ashton Pioneer Homes are regulated by The Housing Corporation.

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what redress tenants of New Charter Housing in Tameside have in the event of failure by New Charter Housing to meet its obligations on Rose Hill estate. [210667]

Keith Hill: Tenants of New Charter Housing are entitled to use the internal complaints procedure of the association. Should tenants be unhappy with the response from the association they have the right to lodge a complaint with the Housing Ombudsman who will investigate and where appropriate make recommendations.

Ultimately, tenants have legal redress against New Charter Housing for any significant failure of service. Where an association fails to meet the requirements of the Regulatory Code, the Housing Corporation will take action. New Charter Housing has also introduced a compensation policy to cover service failure.

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make provision for tenants of New Charter to have a new ballot on (a) moving to a new housing association and (b) returning to Tameside council tenancy. [210668]

Keith Hill: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans to make provision for tenants of New Charter Housing Trust to have a new ballot.

Regional Chambers

David Maclean: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will issue guidance to (a) members of and (b) contributors to unelected regional chambers on where legal liability resides when a law suit is brought against the chamber; and if he will make a statement. [210919]

Mr. Raynsford: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has no plans to issue such guidance.

Social Housing

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the 14,000 social housing units planned to be funded with Transitional Local Authority Social Housing Grant were built in 2003–04; and how many he estimates will be completed in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. [209699]

Keith Hill: In 2003–04 a total of 4,916 homes were completed with funding through Transitional Local Authority Social Housing Grant (LASHG).

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's current estimates for transitional LASHG schemes to complete in 2004–05 and 2005–06 are that 4,800 and 2,200 homes will be provided.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much private capital arm's length housing transfers have contributed to housing since they started; and how much the Government has paid to them to date. [210638]

Keith Hill: Arms length management organisations (ALMOs) set up by local authorities to manage their social housing stock are financed entirely by public funds and receive no private capital. The Government's support for qualifying ALMOs was £56 million in 2002–03 and £321 million in 2003–04, and is forecast to be about £590 million in 2004–05.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many arm's length management organisations (ALMOs) have not been given all the money promised by Government before start up; how much has been held back; from which ALMOs; and for what reasons. [210650]

Keith Hill: All offers of Government funding for Arms Length Management Organisations (ALMOs) are conditional on the local authority receiving approval from the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister to delegate its housing management functions to the ALMO and the ALMO being awarded a two or three star rating from the Housing Inspectorate. No funding has been held back from any ALMOs on the programmes that have fulfilled these conditions.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many registered social landlords have not maintained their guarantees to existing tenants in large scale voluntary transfers not to increase the rents for five years. [210654]

Keith Hill: The Housing Corporation and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister are not aware of any transfer Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) that have been unable to honour the rent guarantees given to tenants when consulted on a housing transfer. Since 2002 any such guarantees have been required to comply with policy for rent restructuring in the local authority and RSL sectors.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) council tenants and (b) former council tenants have transferred to (i) registered social landlords and (ii) arm's length management organisations exercising their right to buy in each year since 1995. [211095]

Keith Hill: Figures for council and registered social landlord right to buy sales for England since 1995–96 are tabled as follows.

Number of right to buy sales

Thousand

	(a) local authority	(b) registered social landlord
1995–96	31.5	2.9
1996–97	33.2	2.4

1998–99	40.3	4.4
1999–2000	54.3	7.2
2000–01	52.4	7.1 (of which 5.2 preserved right to buy)
2001–02	52.0	8.2 (of which 6.7 preserved right to buy)
2002–03	63.4 (of which at least 3.3 from ALMO)	10.5 (of which 8.9 preserved right to buy)
2003–04	69.6 (of which at least 8.9 from ALMO)	14.5 (of which 11.7 preserved right to buy)

Prior to 2002–03, sales from Arms Length Management Organisations (ALMO) are assumed to be nil. Figures on Preserved Right to Buy are not available prior to 2000–01.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average rent levels for (a) housing association tenants and (b) council tenants have been in each of the last four years. [210626]

Keith Hill: The average weekly rents for housing association tenants and local authority tenants in the year to April are tabled as follows:

Average weekly rent for social housing tenants by tenure in

	2001	2002	2003	2004

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list businesses and individuals entertained by him and his Department at public expense in the last 12 months; [209422]

(2) how much money his Department has spent on corporate entertainment in each of the last seven years. [209423]

Mr. Timms: In respect of the Treasury's spending on corporate entertainment, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Osborne) on 15 December 2004, Official Report, column 1084W. The details of the businesses and individuals entertained by the Department could be provided only at disproportionate cost, because this information is not recorded centrally in electronic form. All expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Economic Statistics

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which years since 1975 (a) interest rates and (b) mortgage rates have been lower than the current levels. [211010]

Mr. Timms: The Bank of England repo rate and the average mortgage interest rate reached their lowest points in 2004 and have remained below 1970s levels ever since.

EU Funding

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 9 December 2004, Official Report, column 653W, on EU funding, what the sum total is to date in real terms that has not been signed off by the Court of Auditors, broken down by year; and what the UK percentage share of the total EU budget was for each year. [207112]

Mr. Timms [pursuant to his reply, 11 January 2005, Official Report, c. 440W]: My earlier answer inadvertently contained some incorrect figures, for which I apologise. It should have read as follows:

The figures for the years 1994 onwards (when the annual Statement of Assurance was introduced), showing the total for each year and the sum total to date, and the UK's percentage share, are as follows:

	Total budget not signed off (£ million)[1]	Percentage UK contribution[2] (Post-abatement)
1994	43,903	10.00
1995	51,627	13.64
1996	58,388	11.56
1997	52,055	11.86
1998	51,286	15.24
1999	49,896	13.43
2000	47,952	15.76
2001	46,719	9.59
2002	49,161	13.07
2003	60,854	11.92
Total budget not signed off (1992 to 2003)	511,841

[1] Taken from data published in Table 1A of respective European Community Finances White Papers, less administrative expenditure (also less pre-accession aid expenditure in 2002). Latest White Paper (Cm 6134) (ISBN 0-10-161342-3) was published on 22 April 2004 and the figures for the period 1999 to 2003 have been taken from this.

[2] Calculated from data published in European Commission Reports on the Allocation of EU Operating Expenditure.

It is important to note that the failure of any part of the Community Budget to gain a positive Statement of Assurance does not mean that the whole of that part of the budget was misspent. Rather, it means that the European Court of Auditors found a number of errors in the small sample audited in any particular year.

EU Structural Funding

Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on the net UK contribution to the EU of returning structural fund expenditure to national control for the 2007–13 funding period. [209604]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 18 January 2005]: The UK's proposals for reform of structural and cohesion funds for the period 2007–13 would not "return structural fund expenditure to national control", but rather would focus EC funding on the poorest member states where it would have greatest effect, under an overarching EU framework.

Financial Services Industry

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on Government support for the financial services industry in the last financial year. [210902]

Mr. Timms: The financial services industry is a vital sector for the UK economy, contributing over 5 per cent. of total output and generating a trade surplus of £15.6 billion in 2003. The Government recognise the importance of this sector and take steps to maintain their competitiveness, both domestically and internationally, through a number of different routes; including principally by building and maintaining an effective regulatory model, especially in view of initiatives under the EU's Financial Services Action Plan (FSAP); encouraging a skilled work force; and, by delivering a strong, stable macroeconomic environment. In this context, the Government are committed to a dialogue with the financial services industry to ensure that FSAP and other measures are implemented in an effective, proportionate and consistent way.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2005, Official Report, column 986W, on parliamentary questions, if he will break down the estimated cost of answering a parliamentary question into its component elements; and which costs relate to staff time. [211449]

Mr. Timms: Staff salaries (excluding the costs of Ministers and their private offices) account for 85 per cent. of the estimated cost and other overheads the remaining 15 per cent.

Psychiatric Patient Deaths

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many patients have died in psychiatric hostels in the west midlands in each of the last three years. [210798]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 27 January 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many patients have died in psychiatric hostels in the West Midlands in each of the last three years. (210798)

The latest year for which figures are available is 2003. Figures showing deaths of patients in psychiatric hostels are not separately available. Available figures are for deaths occurring in psychiatric institutions. Figures for the years 2001 to 2003 are given in the attached table.

Deaths in psychiatric institutions[1], West Midlands[2], 2001–03[3]

	Number of deaths
2001	219
2002	215
2003	258

[1] Psychiatric institutions were defined as NHS and non-NHS psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric units and psychiatric security hospitals.
[2] Deaths to residents of West Midlands Government office region.
[3] Figures are for deaths occurring in 2001 to 2003.

Public Spending

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the total levels of spending on (a) the national health service, (b) education and (c) the criminal justice system in (i) 1997 and (ii) the latest period for which figures are available. [211054]

Mr. Boateng: Total UK public spending on the national health service, education and criminal justice system, in 1997–98 and 2003–04, the latest outturn year, is shown as follows in real terms (2003–04 prices).

	1997–98 (£ million)	2003–04 (£ million)	Year-on-year real terms increase (percentage)
National health service	51,848	74,889	6.3
Education	43,391	59,489	5.4
Criminal justice	17,354	22,967	4.8

Red Diesel

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much red diesel was consumed in each month since the fuel duty rate provisions set in the 2003 Budget took effect; and if he will make a statement; [211399]

(2) how much red diesel has been consumed in each month since the introduction of new fuel duty rates on 1 September 2004; and if he will make a statement. [211400]

John Healey: Hydrocarbon oils clearance figures are published by HM Customs and Excise in the Hydrocarbon Oils Bulletin, a copy of which can be found on the UK Trade Information website www.uktradeinfo.com.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his target differential is between the prices of red diesel and road diesel; what further increases in duty levels he expects to make to meet this target; and when he expects that the target will be met; [211401]

(2) what assessment the Government have made of the impact of the recent rise in the duty on red diesel on (a) farmers, (b) the boating industry and (c) the plant industry; and if he will make a statement. [211402]

John Healey: Oils fraud has significant Exchequer costs. The narrowing of the duty differential is one component of a wider fraud strategy and there is no target rate. Decisions on duty rates are taken on a Budget-by-Budget basis by the Chancellor, who takes account of all relevant social, economic and environmental factors when deciding taxation policy. Decisions on duty rates will be set out in the Budget.

Unemployment

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the level of unemployment has been lower in any year since 1975 than the current level of unemployment. [211009]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 27 January 2005:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about levels of unemployment since 1975. (211009)

Consistent series for unemployment since 1971, based on International Labour Organisation definitions, show that since 1975, unemployment has been lower than its current level of 1,400,000 on seven occasions. In date order, these were:

Three months ending	Level
January 1976	1,343,000
February 1976	1,363,000
March 1976	1,379,000
April 1976	1,392,000
August 2004	1,387,000
September 2004	1,380,000
October 2004	1,388,000

Based on the same source, the unemployment rate has been lower than its current level of 4.7 per cent. on only one occasion. This was in the three months ending September 2004, when the rate was 4.6 per cent.

These estimates are based on the Labour Force Survey (LFS). Estimates from 1992 are taken directly from the LFS, whilst figures prior to 1992 are modelled estimates consistent with the post-1992 LFS data. The LFS is a sample survey and, as with any statistical sample survey, results are subject to sampling variability.

Unemployment (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were unemployed in the Nottingham, North constituency (a) in June 1997 and (b) on the last date for which figures are available; and how many of each were young people. [211013]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 27 January 2005:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about unemployment in the Nottingham North Parliamentary Constituency. (211013)

The attached table (1), gives estimates of the total number of unemployed people who were resident in the Nottingham North Parliamentary Constituency, for the twelve month periods ending February 1998 and February 2004, the most recent available period. The table also shows the number of those who were aged 16–24 years old.

These estimates from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) are, as with any statistical sample survey, subject to sampling variability.

The Office for National Statistics also compiles statistics of those claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) for local areas. The attached table (2) gives the total number of claimants and those aged 18 to 24 years old, resident in the Nottingham North Constituency claiming JSA benefits in June 1997 and December 2004.

Table 1: Unemployed people resident in the Nottingham, North parliamentary constituency

12 months ending February	Total (aged 16 and over)	Young people (aged 16–24)
1998	6,000	2,000
2004	2,000	[1]—

[1] Estimates not shown as they are potentially disclosive.

Note:

Some of these estimates are based on very small sample sizes and are subject to a higher degree of sampling variability. They should therefore be treated with caution.

VAT

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was raised from VAT on (a) alcohol and (b) tobacco in each of the last five years. [211286]

John Healey: Tobacco and alcohol duty revenue figures are published by HM Customs and Excise in the Tobacco and alcohol fact sheets, copies of which are available in the Library of the House and from Customs' website at www.uktradeinfo.com

HM Customs and Excise do not collect data on VAT from individual goods or services.

TRANSPORT

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his estimate is of the cost of (a) ministerial cars and drivers and (b) taxis for his Department in each of the last two years. [202412]

Charlotte Atkins: For details of the cost of ministerial travel, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 10 January 2005, Official Report, columns 85–86W, by my hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office.

The cost of taxis used by the Department in 2003 was £87,254.42, and in 2004 was £58,810.33. These figures refer to the central Department only, excluding the Agencies who do not record taxi costs separately. The information for the agencies could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

MOT

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the full rollout of the computerised MOT system began on 29 November 2004 as scheduled; what the projected date of completion of the rollout is; and if he will make a statement on (a) liability to penalties for delay to the rollout of the computerised MOT system incurred by Siemens Business Services (SBS) and (b) penalties issued to SBS by the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency. [211087]

Mr. Jamieson: The MOT computerisation programme did not roll-out as scheduled on 29 November 2004. Following the first phase of trials at MOT stations, the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) and Siemens Business Services have agreed to make further changes to trials and roll-out plans before moving to the final phase of trials at MOT stations. Consequently, the new service will be trialled over a longer period (10 weeks) and installed at a larger number of sites (4,000) before moving to live running. VOSA has always made it clear that the system will only go live when it is satisfied that, in all respects, it will provide a robust and effective service. In this we have the garage trade's full support. The final phase of trials will start on 7 February 2005 and we expect the system to have been installed at all MOT garages by end October 2005.

Liability issues being discussed with Siemens Business Services are commercially confidential.

Railways

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will allow community rail partnerships to have powers to re-open dismantled railway lines and operate the railway; and if he will make a statement. [210678]

Mr. McNulty: I refer my hon. Friend to the response given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Charlotte Atkins) during the Adjournment Debate on the "Colne to Skipton Railway line" on 12 January 2005, Official Report, column 132WH.

Roads

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria he uses to determine whether a road has (a) national and (b) regional significance; [208215]

(2) whether (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have visited Hindhead to assess the proposals for the A3 Tunnel; and what factors led him to decide that the A3 between Portsmouth Harbour and London did not have national significance. [208217]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government's consultation paper—"Devolving Decision Making: A Consultation on Regional Funding Allocations"—set out our proposals to establish regional transport funding allocations. The consultation paper explained that funding decisions on routes of national and international significance would continue to be made on a national basis. To be regarded as such, a route has to satisfy all of the following criteria:

> To have average daily traffic flows, along the length of the route, of more than 60,000 vehicles
> To link at least two of the top 20 English cities by population; or link one of the top 20 cities with an airport/seaport or Wales/Scotland
> To carry heavy goods vehicle traffic equal to or in excess of 15 per cent. as a percentage of all traffic, as an average along the length of the route
> To be represented on the European Union's trans-European transport network

In some marginal cases we applied these criteria with a degree of flexibility. However, the A3 satisfies just one of the criteria: it provides a link between London and the port of Portsmouth. Consequently, for the purposes of future regional decision-making, the consultation paper proposes that it should be regarded as a route of regional significance.

The current ministerial team and I have not visited Hindhead, but we appreciate that improvement of the A3 at this site will deal with a significant bottleneck. We have attached high priority to developing a scheme that will resolve the traffic problems while keeping to a minimum the impact on an area that is environmentally sensitive.

Draft Orders for the A3 Hindhead tunnel scheme together with Notices of Intention to grant exchange land certificates published by ODPM/DEFRA, were first published in October 2003. Revised proposals for part of the scheme were subsequently published in May 2004 and are currently being considered at a public inquiry, which started on 7 September.

The public inquiry has concluded much of its anticipated business but adjourned on 15 December until 15 February 2005 in order that the Inspector can hear reaction to further minor proposals that were republished on 17 December.

It remains our intention to implement the scheme at Hindhead, subject to completion of the necessary statutory procedures including consideration of the Inspector's report and recommendations. However, in view of the cost of the scheme and available resources it has been necessary to programme it for implementation in the period beyond 2007–08.

Staff Vacancies

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on advertising staff vacancies in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [209577]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department for Transport has only been in existence since May 2002.

The Department uses the most appropriate publication for recruitment advertising, be it national, regional, trade magazine or website, depending on the nature of the vacancy.

The following are details of the costs incurred by DfT (Central) for recruitment advertising below senior civil service, and the costs of advertising jobs at senior civil service level for all parts of DfT (i.e. including the Department's Executive Agencies).

Transport Pathfinders

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which local authorities have been selected as transport pathfinders; what the objectives are of such schemes; and what the costs are of implementing them. [211308]

Charlotte Atkins: 10 local authorities have been selected as transport pathfinders, these being the county councils for Devon, Durham, Norfolk, Oxfordshire, Surrey and West Sussex, along with Halton and High Peak borough councils, Nottingham city council and the Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Authority.

The scheme's objectives are to develop and disseminate good practice and innovation related to the shared central/local government priorities for transport—improving public transport and access to jobs and services, while reducing congestion, pollution and road safety problems.

The project is a partnership between the selected local authorities, the Local Government Association and the Department for Transport. The DfT is contributing 100,000, primarily towards disseminating the lessons learnt by the pathfinders.

Uninsured Motorists

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's latest estimate is of the number of uninsured motorists driving on public roads; and what this figure is as a percentage of all drivers. [210142]

Mr. Jamieson: Estimates from the Insurance industry are that about 5 per cent. (approximately 1.25 million) motorists drive while uninsured.

I commissioned Professor David Greenaway of Nottingham University to carry out a review of motor insurance arrangements in the UK to see what could be done to tackle the problem. Publication of his report was on 11 August and we set up an implementation board in September to see that action follows.

Working jointly with the insurance industry we now plan to introduce legislation, improve procedures and design education, publicity and enforcement programmes to drive down uninsured driving.

These build on measures I announced last year to significantly tighten the vehicle registration and licensing system.

The first steps have already begun. Firstly the inclusion of a provision in the Road Safety Bill for improved Police access to the Motor Insurance Database; and secondly provision in the Serious Organised Crime and Police Bill of a power for the Police to seize vehicles being driven uninsured. Both will significantly improve the detection and enforcement capabilities of the police.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's latest estimate is of the cost of the Common Agricultural Policy to the average family per week in grocery prices; and what the cost was in 1997. [204463]

Alun Michael: The consumer cost of the Common Agricultural Policy can be estimated by examining the difference between UK and world prices for agricultural food products. Our latest estimate for 2002 shows a cost of the CAP, to a notional family of four, due to higher food prices, of around £4.75 per week. Using the same methodology we estimate that the cost in 1997 would have been around £5.50.

Emissions Trading Scheme

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the capacity the present economic value attributed to permits under the EU Emissions Trading Scheme has to lead to environmentally beneficial changes of behaviour. [210850]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 January 2005]: Allocations at the EU level are estimated to be approximately 50 million tonnes of CO_2 below the projected emissions during phase 1, on the basis of the national allocation plans agreed by the Commission so far. The prevailing permit price in the market could be interpreted to represent the abatement cost to achieve this level of emission reductions.

For the UK, analysis by the DTI of the power station sector indicates that, during phase 1 of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme (2005 to 2007) reductions of around $4MtCO_2$ per annum could be achieved at a carbon price of around €5 per tonne of CO_2. This price is lower than that which has recently prevailed in the market. It is possible however that there may be physical limitations on the amount of achievable savings in the near term.

It is possible that, in the longer term, emissions could be reduced by around $7MtCO_2$ per annum at a carbon price of €10 per tonne CO_2.

The analysis suggests that the modelled responsiveness is very sensitive to certain background assumptions, including the assumed gas to coal price differential, as well as the price of carbon itself.

A summary of the analysis was published in November 2004 as part of a DTI report on Updated Emissions Projections. Carbon price analysis can be found at annex 7 of the report.

The report is available electronically: http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/sepn/uep2004.pdf.

External Suppliers

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many tenders were let by her Department to external suppliers in the financial year 2003–04; and what the value was. [209100]

Alun Michael: From information held centrally, and for the financial year 2003–04, the Department let 761 tenders to external suppliers with a financial value of £296 million.

Farm Payments

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs from what budget she plans to make good the shortfall between the compensation for the foot and mouth outbreak requested from the EU and the amount received in order to make the necessary compensation payments to farmers. [208106]

Mr. Bradshaw: The control and eradication of foot and mouth disease in 2001 was paid for out of HM Treasury's reserve. The cost of lower than anticipated EU receipts will be borne by the Exchequer.

Flood Prevention

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her officials have undertaken into the preparation and implementation of the 2004 German flood protection legislation. [210852]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 January 2005]: My officials have not undertaken any direct research into the 2004 German Flood Control Act. However the Five-Point Programme, the framework upon which the legislation is based, adopts a similar approach to that taken in England on flood risk management. In particular:

Joint Federal Government/Länder flood defence programme.

This includes measures such as 'letting rivers spread out more' and controlling settlement development. In England we have recently consulted on a new strategy for flood and coastal erosion risk management—'Making Space for Water', and have Planning Policy Guidance (PPG 25) to inform development decisions in flood risk areas.

Transnational Action Plans.

In particular this emphasises the need for flood defence measures to be progressed on a catchment area basis. Catchment Flood Management Plans are already well under way for the whole of England.

Progressing European co-operation.

The UK welcomes closer co-operation with Europe on such things as sharing information and best practice and undertaking joint research. Along with all member states, the UK adopted the European Flood Action Plan in 2004.

Immediate measures to improve flood defences.

The Five Point Programme includes a commitment to increase funding on flood defences, the appraisal of emergency planning arrangements and improved flood warning systems. Following the 2000 floods in England the Government increased funding significantly, from £310 million in 1996–97 up to a provision of £570 million in 2005–06; revised the Lead Department Plan on flooding and tested its effectiveness in June 2004 as part of Exercise Triton; and has recently approved the Environment Agency's new £226 million Flood Warning Strategy.

Growth Antibiotics

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is her policy to seek to ban the use of antibiotics where the object is to promote farm animal growth. [210846]

Mr. Bradshaw: Article 11.2 or Regulation (EC) 1831/2003 introduces a ban on the sale and use of antibiotic growth promoters from 1 January 2006.

Oil Contamination

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many oil-related pollution incidents have occurred in each year since 1995 that were caused by leakage or spillage (a) from domestic oil tanks and (b) on industrial, commercial, agricultural or institutional premises. [210633]

Mr. Morley: A table showing oil pollution incidents by premises type for the years 2001–03 is shown. Data for 2004 is not yet available and it is not possible to provide this breakdown for the period 1995–2000. However, overall figures for all oil pollution incidents show a significant decline since 2000 as follows:

	Number

PM Group plc

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Minister of State for the Environment and Agri-Environment has visited the Bradford-based manufacturing facility of PM Group plc. [211203]

Mr. Morley: In the answer given to the hon. Member on 16 September 2004, Official Report, column 1678W, I noted that I had accepted an invitation to visit the PM Group plc's manufacturing facility. Owing to other commitments, that visit has not taken place. Instead, I will be meeting shortly in London, with representatives of the group for a demonstration of their waste weighing systems.

Recycling

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with (a) local authorities and (b) other stakeholders on how to encourage businesses to recycle their waste. [210089]

Mr. Morley: Ministers hold regular discussions with local authorities and other stakeholders on the whole range of waste issues, including the recycling of business waste.

For example I recently met the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Packaging (a group representing the packaging industry) and representatives from material organisations, trade associations, packaging compliance schemes and individual businesses.

Currently, the Government are consulting on new draft guidance for local authorities on the preparation of municipal waste management strategies. This guidance makes clear that local authorities, in their role as community leaders, may be able to encourage more sustainable management of waste in other sectors and should consider, in drafting their strategy, where there may be benefits from aligning municipal waste management services with the treatment of waste from other sectors.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures her Department has taken to encourage the recycling of commercial waste. [210127]

Mr. Morley: The Government are taking a number of measures to encourage the recycling of commercial waste.

From 2005–06, landfill tax for active waste will increase by a minimum of £3 a tonne, to a medium to long-term rate of £35 per tonne. This will make recycling financially more attractive.

Additional revenue generated from the landfill tax will be redistributed to business through the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) programme to encourage and support resource efficiency, waste minimisation and diversion of waste away from landfill.

The Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended) require producers to recover and recycle specified tonnages of packaging waste each year, so a significant amount of commercial waste is already being recycled to meet packaging targets.

The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) promotes resource efficiency, with a particular focus on creating stable and efficient markets for recycled materials and products and removing the barriers to waste minimisation, re-use and recycling.

The forthcoming batteries directive will require all types of waste batteries, including those in the commercial waste stream, to undergo a recycling process.

Slaughter

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received advocating compulsory pre-stunning before any type of religious slaughter. [209744]

Mr. Bradshaw: This is an issue in respect of which the Department regularly receives representations. Most recently, in response to consultation on the Government's draft response to the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the welfare of red meat animals at slaughter and killing, Defra received 26 responses advocating pre-stunning before all slaughter.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance her Department gives to abattoirs concerning stunning prior to religious slaughter. [209745]

Mr. Bradshaw: The law permits animals to be slaughtered without stunning to provide food for certain religious communities. The Department does not provide specific advice to abattoirs. Guidance to Official Veterinary Surgeons (OVS) advises that, wherever possible, provision for stunning should be encouraged. This may be stunning before slaughter or an immediate post-cut stun. This guidance should be available to abattoirs through the OVS.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many animals slaughtered for (a) halal and (b) kosher meat were not stunned in the latest period for which figures are available. [209746]

Mr. Bradshaw: Information on the number of animals slaughtered for halal and kosher meat is not collected routinely. It has been gathered biennially by the Meat Hygiene Service on behalf of Defra, as part of the Animal Welfare Review.

The latest Animal Welfare Review was published in March 2004. The review reports on one week of slaughtering practices. In the period 1–7 September 2003, the following animals were slaughtered without stunning.

	Kosher	Halal
Cattle	726	—
Calves	16	—
Young lambs	1,704	5,141
Other sheep	—	11,454
Goats	—	62

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what condition each site of special scientific interest (SSSI) was in each year since 1997, broken down by local authority area; and what the total land areas of SSSIs was in each category (a) in England and (b) broken down by local authority area in each year. [208225]

Mr. Bradshaw: The condition of sites of special scientific interest (SSSIs) is assessed not on a site-by-site basis but by each of the more than 22,000 management units into which they are divided. English Nature's first full condition assessment cycle was not completed until March 2003. The condition of SSSI land as recorded by the most recent assessments at that date and in March 2004 is shown as follows. A breakdown by local authority area is not available.

	Area (hectares)
	March 2003	March 2004

Waste Collection (Charging Schemes)

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the work that her Department has undertaken on extending the powers of local authorities to allow the piloting of variable charging schemes for household waste collection and disposal as recommended by the Strategy Unit in the report Waste Not, Want Not. [211202]

Mr. Morley: The Department's work on variable household charging and household incentives for waste recycling and reduction is based on the body of existing, publicly available, research, supplemented by investigation into specific examples of such activity.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Census Records

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 13 January 2005, Official Report, column 632W, on census records, if he will seek (a) the advice of the National Archives, (b) a legal opinion and (c) the advice of the Advisory Council on Public Records and Archives on how the Freedom of Information Act 2000 relates to the closure or release of decennial population census returns for England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [210742]

Mr. Leslie: The Freedom of Information Act 2000 came into effect on 1 January 2005. The Act is still in the early days of implementation, and it is important that requests for access to information should be carefully considered on a case-by-case basis. I do not, therefore, intend to seek advice about its general operation in relation to decennial census returns at this time.

Data Protection (Loyalty Cards)

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs if his Department will make an assessment of the data protection implications of the use made by supermarkets of data collected through loyalty cards. [211115]

Mr. Leslie: The use of personal data obtained by supermarkets in loyalty card schemes is subject to the regulatory framework set out in the Data Protection Act 1998. If any person believes that their data are being used in ways which infringe the framework, they can apply to the Information Commissioner for an assessment to be made of the circumstances.

Divorced/Separated Parents

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs what the reasons were for the decision not to make negotiation compulsory in disputes between divorced or separated parents. [210230]

Mr. Leslie: The Government published "Parental Separation: Children's Needs and Parents' Responsibilities, Next Steps" on 18 January, which sets out plans to implement a range of measures to help separating parents in dispute about future parenting arrangements, reach agreement.

The Government's plans include improvements in the information available to parents and greater use of methods such as the Collaborative Law model, mediation, in-court conciliation and the Family Resolutions Pilot Project. The Government intend strongly to promote these methods as better ways to reach agreement than through contested court hearings. All publicly funded clients will have to show that they have considered mediation. Lawyers will not be funded by legal aid if out of court settlement is not reached under the collaborative law scheme. In addition, the Government, senior judiciary and Rules Committee plan to review court rules and practice directions so that the strongest possible encouragement is given to parties to participate in forms of dispute resolution.

We do not plan to make these schemes compulsory in every case, as an essential part of the process is that people come to them voluntarily and are therefore willing to participate. Further, in some cases, including those where domestic violence has been an issue, it would not always be appropriate to impose mediation on separating parents.

PRIME MINISTER

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of preparations for the forthcoming elections in Iraq. [210906]

The Prime Minister: Both the Independent Electoral Commission of Iraq (IECI) and the UN remain confident that technical preparations are on schedule to meet the 30 January timing for elections. 111 groups, with over 7,000 candidates, are registered to contest the national elections. A further 12,000 candidates will contest the provincial elections.

Recent polling data indicates that the majority of Iraqis want to vote. Security for the elections will of course be vital. The IECI and the Iraqi authorities, with the multi-national forces, are working hard to ensure security in all areas to achieve the broadest possible participation.

To date, the IECI has accredited 12,400 Iraqi election observers to ensure that elections are free and fair. In addition, the International Mission for Iraqi Elections (IMIE), an initiative established by the Canadian Electoral Commission, will carry out a technical assessment of the elections.

Nuclear Proliferation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the (a) Iranian Government and (b) North Korean Government on nuclear weapons. [210698]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 26 January 2005]: I discussed a range of issues with the Iranian Foreign Minister, Dr. Kamal Kharrazi on 22 April 2004 including Iran's nuclear programme. I have had no contact with members of the North Korean Government.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Building Regulations

Mr. Love: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he has taken to ensure that the standard assessment procedure for revised building standards accurately predicts carbon dioxide emissions; and if he will make a statement. [210887]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working with the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs and the Department of Trade and Industry to ensure that the basis of the Standard Assessment Procedure and the data sets it calls for are as accurate as possible.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the compliance of house builders with the 2002 Building Regulations standards concerning energy efficiency. [211084]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister commissioned airtightness tests on 55 new dwellings built in compliance with the 2002 requirements and it subsequently received from The Energy Saving Partnership for Homes the results of a further 99 similar tests on other new dwellings. The results of these tests were unsatisfactory and reinforced more general concerns about compliance with the Building Regulations energy efficiency requirements. These influenced the proposals for further amendments published last July and the ongoing work on better guidance, dissemination and training for house builders and others.

Fire Service

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what amendments have been made to the guidance contained in the Fire Service Circular No. 3/1995 since its publication. [211031]

Mr. Raynsford: No amendments have been made to the Home Office "Guide To Fire Safety Planning And Management For Local Authority Fire Brigades", which accompanied Fire Service Circular No. 3/1995.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) fire certificates have been (i) issued and (ii) amended and (b) exemptions from requirement to hold a fire certificate have been granted under the terms and conditions of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 by each fire and rescue authority in England and Wales in each year since 1999; and how many applications for the (A) issue and (B) amendment of a fire certificate by each fire and rescue authority were outstanding on 31 December 2004. [211032]

Mr. Raynsford: The number of fire certificates issued under the terms and conditions of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 by each fire and rescue authority in England and Wales in each year since 1999 are tabled as follows:

Records are not kept of either amended fire certificates issued or outstanding applications for amended certificates. Any amended certificates issued are counted in with fire certificates issued. In respect of outstanding applications for amended certificates, there is no statutory requirement for owners/occupiers of certificated premises to apply for amended certificates. Section 8 of the Fire Precautions Act requires the owner/occupier to inform the fire authority of any material structural changes to the building. The fire authority then has a duty, if satisfied with the proposals, either to amend the fire certificate or issue a new one. If not satisfied, the fire authority must issue a notice of steps to be taken before amending or issuing a new fire certificate.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2004 to come into force; and what guidance he has given to fire and rescue authorities regarding the proper discharge of their statutory duties to enforce the Fire Precautions Act 1971 and the Fire Precautions (Workplace) Regulations 1997 in the interim period before the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2004 comes into force. [211033]

Mr. Raynsford: The decision on an appropriate date for the coming into force of the proposed Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order has not yet been taken.

The suite of guidance contained in Fire Precautions Act circulars stands good for the interim period. Supplementary advice on handling of applications for fire certificates has been issued, by the Chief Fire Officer's Association.

Five-year Plan

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to publish his Department's five-year plan. [210634]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, published on 24 January 2005, Official Report, columns 22–40, the Government's five-year housing plan "Sustainable Communities: Homes for All".

Next week my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister will also publish a partner five-year plan "Sustainable Communities: People, Places and Prosperity".

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his Department in the last three years. [207827]

Yvette Cooper: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Leslie), on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W.

Licensing Act

Ross Cranston: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 on local authority street cleaning costs; what representations his Department has received on the subject; and whether new money will be provided to meet additional costs for local street cleaning services resulting from the implementation of the Act. [210687]

Mr. Raynsford: In response to concerns raised by a number of local authorities, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister undertook an assessment of the potential knock on effects of the then Licensing Bill, including additional street cleansing costs, in 2003. Despite consulting 18 local authorities, the Local Government Association and the Improvement and Development Agency for Local Government, it proved impossible to produce robust evidence of any additional street cleansing costs. The available evidence was inconclusive on whether there would be an overall cost to local government. We continue to examine and monitor the situation.

During the recent discussions about the 2005–06 Local Government Finance Settlement, of the 233 representations received from local authorities, 21 made some reference to the impact of the Licensing Act. Representations about the costs to local authorities of the Licensing Act were also made during the Department of Media Culture and Sports consultation on licensing fees.

Funding for street cleaning is provided through the local government finance settlement. Total support from Government grant and business rates in 2005–06 will be £60.1 billion. That is £3.5 billion, or 6.3 per cent., more than in 2004–05. We believe that this substantial investment in local government and the scope for efficiency gains addresses the pressures faced by local government. There is no excuse for excessive increases in council tax.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the best value performance indicators (BVPIs) for each local education authority for 2003–04 will be published on the BVPI website. [211306]

Mr. Raynsford: The best value performance indicators (BVPIs) results for each local education authority for 2003–04 will be published on the BVPI website in early February.

New Charter

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of whether New Charter is providing an adequate service as agents for homeless people for Tameside Council. [210664]

Yvette Cooper: New Charter is providing services for homeless people as agents for Tameside Council, who are responsible for monitoring the contract. I understand that the Council is satisfied that all the main aspects of the service specification are being achieved.

Social Housing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received from (a) registered social landlords and (b) those who fund them for greater freedom to raise rents. [210645]

Keith Hill: In response to its three-year review of rent restructuring the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received a number of representations from registered social landlords and others such as the National Housing Federation. A summary of responses will be made available shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many tenants in each local authority area have exercised their right to buy in each of the last three years; what revenue has thereby accrued to each local authority; and what proportion of the total in each year was used for (a) repairing and (b) building council housing. [210755]

Keith Hill: Annual figures for council right to buy activity for 1999–2000 to 2002–03 by local authority are available from the Housing Statistics section on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's internet site. These tables show the number of right to buy sales and the average selling price excluding discount for each reporting local authority.

It is a matter for individual authorities to decide how to use the receipts they retain from right to buy sales in the light of local needs and priorities. Information on how local authorities chose to use the retained receipts from right to buy sales is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour Documents

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of (a) drafting, (b) publishing and (c) circulating (i) Working together—tackling not tolerating antisocial behaviour, (ii) One Year On—together tackling anti-social behaviour and (iii) central Government funding of voluntary and community organisations. [201038]

Ms Blears: Officials from the Government's Antisocial Behaviour Unit drafted the two "Together" reports published on 28 October 2004 as part of their daily duties. An estimate of £59,499 has been made for the drafting, publication and circulation for both reports.

The One Year On and Practitioners' reports have been distributed widely to key stakeholder groups and individuals throughout England and Wales. They were initially distributed at the One Year On event held on 28 October to an audience in excess of 600 people drawn from local authorities, community groups, members of the public, police, MPs, and antisocial behaviour practitioners. Since this time the reports have also been available online and downloadable from the website and have received over 1,270 individual hits.

Distribution to 6,000 individuals and groups from the range of key stakeholder groups including CDRP chairs, ASB Co-ordinators, Action Areas and Trailblazer representatives, and Together Academy attendees has also occurred along with individual mailouts upon request.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what target time has been set for reaching an initial decision on (a) asylum and (b) non-asylum applications; and what percentage of cases were processed within these target periods in the last period for which figures are available. [206248]

Mr. Browne: The information is as follows:

(a) The Home Office's Public Service Agreement (PSA) target for 2003–04 was to ensure that 75 per cent. of new substantive asylum applications (excluding withdrawals and 3rd country cases) were decided within two months. This was an increase from the 65 per cent. and 60 per cent. targets met in 2002–03 and 2001–02 respectively.

The 2003–04 target was exceeded, with 82 per cent. of new substantive applications having an initial decision reached and served within two months. The speed of initial decisions continues to improve with 84 per cent. of substantive applications received in Q2 (April to June) 2004 having an initial decision reached and served within two months, and reflects the Governments commitment to, and continued success in, speeding up the initial decision-making process.

Information on the number of asylum applications outstanding, and the timeliness of initial decisions are published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

(b) The internal target times for processing non-asylum applications have been revised in the light of the top to bottom review of managed migration routes announced on 27 April 2004.

The internal targets that have been set are for the whole period from 1 October 2004 to 31 March 2005 and are summarised in the table. The table includes provisional management information currently available on performance so far against those targets.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of Zimbabwean asylum seekers received (a) refugee status and (b) another form of protection from the UK Government in each quarter since 1997. [210513]

Mr. Browne: The tables show initial decision and appeal determinations by quarter, where available, for Zimbabwean asylum applicants, 1997 to Q3 2004. Decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in the same period and appeal outcomes do not necessarily relate to initial decisions made in the same period.

Information on asylum applications is published quarterly. The next publication covering the fourth quarter of 2004 will be available on 22 February 2005 on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice his Department provides to its asylum officials regarding the grounds for granting refugee status to applicants who have fled persecution because of their homosexuality. [210708]

Mr. Browne: All caseworkers in the immigration and nationality directorate, who are responsible for considering asylum claims, are trained in the proper application of the 1951 UN convention relating to the status of refugees and the need to apply those principles to the circumstances of the particular case. All caseworkers have access to the Home Office asylum policy instructions, which are published on the Home Office website. Additional support is provided by senior caseworkers, who are on hand to give advice and to ensure that consistently high standards of decision making are maintained.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training in sexuality issues his Department provides to officials who handle asylum applications based on persecution on the grounds of sexual orientation. [210709]

Mr. Browne: Asylum caseworkers undergo extensive training in the assessment of asylum claims made under the 1951 convention relating to the status of refugees. This includes training in the interpretation of the five convention reasons, and specifically the definition of "membership of a particular social group", which is relevant to many claims involving sexual orientation. Guidance on "Membership of a Particular Social Group" and instructions on "Assessing the Claim" are available to caseworkers in the form of the asylum policy instructions, which are published on the Home Office website.

Class A Drug Arrests

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the proportion of crime in Hartlepool linked to the need to support a Class A drug habit. [210643]

Caroline Flint: Recorded crime figures, which are used to measure the extent of crime in local areas, include statistics on drugs offences, such as possession, and on property crimes, such as burglary, but do not contain information on the offender's drug habits. It is therefore not possible to estimate the proportion of all crime in Hartlepool which is linked to the need to support a drug habit.

However, since April 2004 offenders in Hartlepool charged with certain trigger offences known to be commonly committed by drug users have been tested for opiates and cocaine/crack as part of the Drug Interventions Programme. Between April and December 2004 a total of 588 offenders were tested and just over half (55 per cent.) of them tested positive for opiates or cocaine/crack. This gives some indication of the proportion of property crime that may be linked to drug use, although it should be noted that not all crime by drug users is necessarily committed to support their habit.

Conditional Cautions

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many conditional cautions have been issued to first-time offenders in (a) Hartlepool and (b) other drugs intervention programme areas since the programme was introduced. [210644]

Caroline Flint: There are eight early implementation areas for Conditional Cautioning. Two areas are currently operational (Lancashire and Redditch). Four conditional cautions have been issued, three of which were issued to first time offenders.

Hartlepool is not within an early implementation area for Conditional Cautioning, so no conditional cautions can be issued in Hartlepool.

The Drug Interventions Programme "intensive" Early Implementation Areas for Conditional Cautioning which are aimed at drug misusing offenders, will become operational late January to March 2005. They do not include Hartlepool.

Dartmoor Prison

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of contracts or agreements relating to the provision of offending behaviour courses by faith-based organisations at Dartmoor Prison. [206879]

Paul Goggins: The only faith-based offending related course under development at Dartmoor prison is the Innerchange Freedom Initiative (IFI). The course is expected to start in February 2005. The IFI project leader has just completed a quality assurance document with the prison's Head of Resettlement to submit to the Area Manager for approval under Prison Service Order 4350 on Effective Regime Interventions. There is also an agreement that is currently being negotiated which is now in its final draft. As and when approval has been given and the documents finalised they will be placed in the House Library.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which countries the UK does not require to provide prima facie evidence before complying with a request to extradite an individual. [210482]

Caroline Flint: The United Kingdom does not require the provision of prima facie evidence, in support of an extradition request, from the following countries: Albania, Andorra, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Malta, Moldova, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, the Russian Federation, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, South Africa, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Ukraine and the United States of America.

For the purposes of this answer, the following definitions have been used. "Conference" means an event organised by an external organisation where a member of the Programme Team has been invited to participate or attend. "Seminar" means an event which was arranged by the Programme or by an external organisation where identity cards was the only or principal item of discussion. "Meeting" means any other meeting which involved a private organisation, where identity cards were the primary subject. Meetings with organisations which are currently providing services to the Programme team or with organisations which at the time were bidding to provide services to the Programme Team have been excluded.

Identity Cards and Passports (Forgery)

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals deported from this country have been found to be in possession of forged identity cards in the last 12 months. [207328]

Mr. Browne: We do not record centrally whether individuals removed or deported from the UK possessed forged identity cards on arrival or when detected.

The total number of individuals in the UK found to be in possession of forged identity documents in the 12 months leading up to the end of November 2004, is approximately 10,700, of whom approximately 1,600 were in possession of forged European identity cards. These statistics are based on internal management information, as such information is not published routinely within the official statistics.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals with forged passports have been arrested or detained in the last three years by (a) Customs and Immigration officers and (b) the police. [207485]

Mr. Browne: The border agencies take the abuse of travel documents seriously and pursue prosecutions whenever possible.

Individuals who provide forged documents can be arrested and detained either by the UK Immigration Service or the police.

Unfortunately the collation of the recorded crime statistics means that it is not possible to separately identify these specific offences which are recorded together with other forgery offences.

Locally collated management information indicates that 215 people were arrested at Heathrow and Gatwick in 2004 for forgery and counterfeiting offences.

Immigration

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances would individuals, who are not British citizens, who have received custodial sentences for crimes committed in the UK, not be deported; and if he will make a statement. [208943]

Mr. Browne: Each case is decided on its individual merits. Where there has been a recommendation by the Court for deportation, there is a presumption that, save in the most exceptional circumstances, the recommendation will be enforced. All cases, including those whose deportation is considered to be conducive to the public good, are considered under the provisions of paragraph 364 of HC 395 "Statement of Changes in Immigration Rules". This includes age, length of residence and strength of connections in the United Kingdom, personal history, domestic circumstances, previous criminal record, compassionate circumstances and any representations received. Should any one or a combination of these factors outweigh the public interest, deportation would not proceed.

Justice and Home Affairs Council

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Government's priorities for the Justice and Home Affairs Council during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the European Union will be; and if he will make a statement. [209560]

Caroline Flint: During 2005 the UK will work closely with Luxembourg as current Presidency and with Austria and Finland (whose Presidencies follow ours) to take forward the inherited agenda and handle any new proposals that may be introduced by the Commission or Member States in the JHA Council. Work will continue on the implementation and evaluation of the Tampere agenda, and begin on the new multi-annual work programme (the "Hague Programme") which will take forward the development of an area of freedom, security and justice. In line with the Hague Programme, priority will also be given to developing a coherent external dimension of this work through enhanced cooperation with third countries, groups of countries and regions. The Council is expected to receive proposals on the instruments for Freedom, Security and Justice in the context of the Financial Perspective 2007–2013.

A copy of the "UK—Luxembourg Operational Programme" (AOP), with details on JHA priorities during 2005 can be found in the Library of the House.

We will work to deliver on the commitments contained in the Action plan on Combating Terrorism, and on the new EU Action Plan on Drugs for the period 2005–2007 (likely to be adopted during the Luxembourg Presidency). We will also continue to develop judicial co-operation in both criminal and civil areas.

On asylum and immigration, key priorities include strengthening the external border; improving the security of travel documents, including the incorporation of biometricidentifiers; improving the EU's performance on readmission agreements; helping countries or origin and transit improve their capacity for migration and refugee protection; and developing best practice in the area of integration.

On law enforcement, key priorities will be to maximise practical, operationally focused criminal intelligence exchange between Member States, including through Europol, and to step up the co-ordination of investigation and prosecution by Member States of serious crime, making best use of Eurojust. The Council will also focus its work on further measures to be taken in the implementation of the EU Millennium Strategy to combat organised crime, and the fight against organised crime in general.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the blueprint for the National Offender Management Service was approved by the National Offender Management Service Board before it was presented to the Prime Minister on 18 November. [209386]

Paul Goggins: The proposals for the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) and how they would lead to a reduction in re-offending was agreed across Government, including with the Prime Minister.

Parliamentary Questions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what target his Department sets for the maximum acceptable time to respond in full to a parliamentary question; and what percentage of answers given by his Department failed to meet this target in each parliamentary session from 1997–98 to 2003–04. [202563]

Fiona Mactaggart: Departments aim to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the named day and to endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. Unfortunately, this is not always possible but this Department makes every effort to achieve these timescales.

The Home Office does not maintain historic records in a way that enables it to provide all the information in the format requested. The Department has recently introduced a new PQ system, the electronic parliamentary Questions System (ePQS) to better monitor and manage the Department's performance.

Figures obtained from the Home Office Annual reports show that the number of questions answered that failed to meet Departmental targets were 54 per cent. in 2000–01, 61 per cent. in 2001–02 and 63 per cent. in 2002–03. Figures prior to this are not available.

Passports

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what forms passport applicants receive in application packs as part of the UK Passport Service's Personal Identification Project; and what forms applicants are required to complete as part of their application. [209447]

Mr. Browne: A copy of the forms were dispatched to the right hon. Member on 19 January. Two forms are issued as part of the Personal Identification Project (PIP) the main standard form and the PIP discretionary supplementary form.

Police Equipment (Tetra)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether it is his Department's policy to use the precautionary principle with reference to the use of Tetra-based equipment by police officers; and if he will make a statement. [210269]

Caroline Flint: No hazard to health associated with the use of Tetra- based equipment has been identified. However, as recommended by the 2000 Stewart Report (Mobile Phones and Health,), we have taken a precautionary approach to the use of Tetra technology. A report by independent experts was commissioned, and we have taken forward their recommendations. We have stipulated that low power equipment is used. We have also put in place a comprehensive programme of research as part of our continuing commitment to providing the police service with a modern communication system that is safe, secure, efficient and effective.

Prisoners (Sexual Harassment)

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place in prisons in England and Wales to protect prisoners from sexual harassment; and if he will make a statement. [209928]

Paul Goggins: The Prison Service has a range of policies designed to promote a prison environment in which prisoners feel safe.

The Prison Service's Violence Reduction Strategy was launched in May 2004 and requires that each establishment has in place a local violence reduction strategy appropriate to needs. The Prison Service's definition of violence is: "any incident where a person is abused, threatened or assaulted. This includes any explicit or implicit challenge to their safety where the resulting harm may be physical, emotional or psychological." This covers all forms of harassment.

An intranet toolkit is helping establishments to develop practical solutions, including environmental and physical measures as well as alternatives for behaviour management. A whole prison approach is encouraged, with the aim of reducing violence and fear of violence. A focus on personal safety, supporting victims, and repairing the physical and emotional harm caused by violence or abuse, links closely with the suicide prevention strategy.

Prisoners also have access to a comprehensive complaint system.

Following any complaint, including harassment, the Governor is required to investigate the complaint fully and take any necessary and appropriate action in order to safeguard the prisoner in his/her care.

Prisons

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what overspend of the Prison Service budget for 2004–05 was forecast on 7 December 2004. [210940]

Paul Goggins: The overspend forecast on 7 December 2004 was £31.1 million, which related to the forecast outturn as shown in the management accounts up to the end of October 2004. We expect the final outturn for the financial year to be within the delegated budget.

Probation

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation areas in England and Wales exceeded their targets for victim contact during (a) 2003–04 and (b) the first six months of 2004–05. [203827]

Paul Goggins: The performance of probation areas in meeting their targets for victims contacted in 2003–04 and April to June 2004 (the latest available figures) is set out in the following table. In the first quarter of 2004–05, 39 of the 42 areas met or exceeded their target and only one area was more than 5 per cent. short of the target. In 2003–04, 38 areas met or exceeded the target with three areas falling more than 5 per cent. short.

Percentage of victims contacted in accordance with national standards—target = 85 per cent.

The National Standard for victim contact work is that probation areas should offer face-to-face contact between the victim (or family) and a member of the probation service (or agent) within eight weeks of the offender being sentenced. The NPS target is to make initial contact within that time scale in 85 per cent. of all eligible cases. This was exceeded in 2003–04 and performance continues to improve in 2004–05 with 93 per cent. of victims contacted in accordance with the national standard. Due to the eight-week wait to record the data, data for 2004–05 cover just the first quarter, ie, April to June 2004.

There has been good, steady improvement in performance since April 2001.

Religious Hatred Legislation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what views have been advanced in representations which he has received from religious groups (a) supporting and (b) opposing the adoption of a law on incitement of religious hatred. [210409]

Fiona Mactaggart: A joint statement issued in April 2004 by representatives of many important faith communities in Britain urged the Government to legislate against incitement to religious hatred as soon as possible. An updated version of this statement with additional signatories was issued in January 2005. The statement reaffirms the belief of the bodies represented that the measure is necessary to remedy an unjust and anomalous gap in the present law whereby racial groups are protected from incited hatred whereas religious groups are not.

The Home Office has received representations from a number of religious groups who have concerns about aspects of the proposed measure. These concerns have focused around the extent to which the legislation might in certain circumstances inhibit the freedom to worship and to proselytise. There have also been concerns expressed by groups such as humanists and secularists that the law would not catch incited hatred against groups holding non-religious beliefs. The Home Office has met representatives of these groups and will continue to work to allay their concerns.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of laws concerning the incitement of religious hatred in other countries. [210465]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information published by the European Commission against Racism and Intolerance indicates that countries with legislation of this kind include Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France Germany, Greece and Italy. The state of Victoria in Australia also has legislation on this subject. The details of legislation vary, as one would expect. For example, the offence in Victoria has a lower threshold and wider scope than the Government are proposing for this country.

As regards effectiveness, while it is useful to look for similar provisions in other jurisdictions, we share the view of the House of Lords Select Committee which in its Report on Religious Offences in England and Wales (April 2003) concluded that "Whilst it is possible to describe the offences that exist in different jurisdictions with some accuracy assessing their efficacy is much more difficult.'

Right of Establishment in Business

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for the right of establishment in business under EU association agreements were received by his Department between 1 June 2003 and 30 April 2004, broken down by nationality of the applicant; and how many were (a) granted, (b) granted in error, (c) refused, (d) refused in error, (e) withdrawn and (f) otherwise disposed of, broken down by nationality. [207534]

Mr. Browne: Between 1 June 2003 and 30 April 2004 there were 31,812 applications for the right of establishment in business under EC Association Agreements received by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND). The table shows this total figure broken down by nationality and by the outcome of the case.

There is no facility on the General Casework Information Database to record applications granted or refused in error.

This includes applications received in the specified period against which no outcome is yet recorded, and applications received in the specified period against which an outcome was recorded after 30 September 2004. Due to limitations of the Management Information System it is not possible to break down these particular cases by nationality.

Note:

1 Numbers of applications granted, refused, withdrawn by applicant or "other" relate only to applications received by IND between 01 June 2003 and 30 April 2004.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will break down the number of applications between 1 June 2003 and 30 April 2004 for the right of establishment in business under EU Association Agreements refused by grounds for refusal and nationality. [207537]

Mr. Browne: Between 1 June 2003 and 30 April 2004 there were 1,159 applications for the right of establishment in business under EC Association Agreements refused by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate. The table shows this total figure broken down by nationality of the applicant.

There is no facility on the Management Information System to break down applications refused by grounds of refusal.

[207538]

Mr. Browne: The table sets out the mean, minimum and maximum number of days between receipt of an application for the right of establishment in business under EC Association Agreements and the date of posting the refusal notice to the applicant. The information refers to applications refused between 1 June 2003 and 30 April 2004.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions between 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003 his special advisers travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [207179]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the former Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) gave on 1 September 2003, Official Report, column 1000W.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Asian Tsunami

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will give details of the first warning the UK Government received about the impending tsunami on 26 December 2004; and if he will make a statement. [207796]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member to my reply given on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 28W, to my hon. Friend for Blaenau Gwent (Llew Smith).

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the priorities are for the help that his Department is giving to those countries affected by the Boxing Day tsunami. [210584]

Hilary Benn: In the days immediately following the disaster, DFID's priorities were to ensure that basic emergency assistance such as food, shelter, water and sanitation and medical support reached those most in need. DFID also prioritised supporting the overall co-ordination and capacity of the international response through the United Nations, including the gathering of information on needs.

As most of the affected countries are moving into a recovery stage, DFID's present priorities are to continue to ensure that assistance is reaching all affected people, push to get coordination mechanisms fully operational, unblock remaining logistic bottlenecks, ensure the right key personnel are in place and provide assistance where requested by DFID's field teams or through direct requests from the affected governments or the United Nations.

CDC/Actis Capital

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what minimum percentage return the Government expects on investments by CDC/Actis Capital. [210518]

Hilary Benn: DFID has agreed with the Treasury, a target overall rate of return of 5 per cent. per annum on the capital that the Government have invested in CDC. The individual Funds in which CDC's capital is invested have differing target rates of return depending on their particular objectives and the markets in which they are working.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the rate of return on investments by CDC/Actis Capital was in (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003 and (d) 2004. [210519]

Hilary Benn: The rate of return on investments made by CDC were as follows for the following periods:

	Percentage
(a) 2001	-11.1
(b) 2002	6.5
(c) 2003	9.6
(d) 2004	[1]14.6

[1] Estimated—figures only available to 30 September

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if he will list investments by CDC/Actis Capital in the energy sector in (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003 and (d) 2004 broken down by (i) amount and (ii) percentage of the total CDC/Actis Capital portfolio; [210520]

(2) how much CDC/Actis Capital has invested in renewable energy; and what percentage of its total energy portfolio this figure represents; [210521]

(3) what discussions his Department has had with CDC/Actis Capital about targets for their investment in renewable energy. [210522]

Hilary Benn: CDC made 27 investments in the energy sector in the period between 2001 and 2004. The investments were in the following companies:

Ace Power Generation Anuradhapura (Pvt) Ltd.
Ace Power Generation Matara (Pvt) Ltd.
Asia Power Co.
Azito
Caribbean Basin Power Fund
Compania Boliviana de Energia Electrica
Compania de Electricidad de Puerto Plata
DHL Trust

Sidi Krir
St. Lucia Electricity Services Ltd.
Orzunil
Lanco Kondapalli
Puerto Quetzal Power Ltd. Liability Co.
Songas Company Ltd.
Southern Cone Power Ltd.
Tsavo Power Co. Ltd.

Amounts invested in each company are commercially confidential. Total annual investments by CDC in the energy sector and their percentage of total investments were as follows:

	Amount (£ million)	Percentage
2001	147	11
2002	203	15
2003	343	26
2004	317	27

CDC has invested US$104 million in renewable energy projects, which represents some 17 per cent. of its total energy portfolio. These figures are based on 31 December 2004 valuations.

DFID has had no discussions with CDC about targets for their investment in renewable energy. However, we understand that CDC is exploring the possibilities of further investment in renewable energy with Actis, its main investment manager.

Congolese Refugees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate his Department has made of the number of people leaving the Democratic Republic of Congo since the beginning of 2005 to seek refuge in each of the neighbouring countries; and if he will make a statement. [210713]

Hilary Benn: Through reporting from the office United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and maintenance of contact with other humanitarian agencies DFID continues to monitor the recent increased movement of Congolese refugees across the Democratic Republic of Congo/Uganda border.

(i) 5,000–7,000 refugees crossed into Uganda between 2 and 8 January, fleeing fighting between Hema and Lendu groups in Ituri. They crossed Lake Albert and are encamped at Nkondo in Hoima District, western Uganda. These are mostly women and children. The area where they are camped is difficult to access. UNHCR would like them to move to an established refugee camp (Kyaka II) in Kyenjojo district, but the refugees are reluctant to move without their menfolk. To date only a few have agreed to do so.

(ii) 10,100 refugees, mainly women and children, arrived in Ishasha in Kanungu district near Lake Edward, between 9 and 15 January. This movement was in response to fighting between Mai-Mai and Rally for Congolese Democracy groups in North Kivu, eastern Democratic Republic of Congo. There are reports that up to 7000 of these people have now returned to the DRC. There are also reports that continued fighting might result in the arrival of more refugees from the DRC in the near future. Assessments are ongoing and the refugees are receiving support from UNHCR, UNICEF, the World Food Programme (WFP), and Medecins Sans Frontieres.

DFID remains in close contact with the UNHCR and other humanitarian agencies and will continue to monitor developments.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) information his Department has received and (b) assessment his Department has made of the (i) size and (ii) nature of the two groups of Congolese refugees reported by the UN refugee agency on 18 January to have crossed into Uganda during the weeks of 10 and 17 January; and if he will make a statement. [210714]

Hilary Benn: DFID continues to monitor the recent increased movement of Congolese refugees across the border of Democratic Republic of Congo and Uganda through reporting from the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and by maintaining contact with other humanitarian agencies.

DFID has information covering the period since 1 January 2005, and we know, that:

(i) Between 5,000 and 7,000 refugees crossed into Uganda over the period of 2–8 January, fleeing fighting between Hema and Lendu groups in Ituri. They crossed Lake Albert and are encamped at Nkondo in Hoima District, western Uganda. These are mostly women and children. The area where they are camped is difficult to access. The UNHCR would like them to move to an established refugee camp (Kyaka II) in the Kyenjojo district.

(ii) 10,100 refugees, mainly women and children, arrived in Ishasha in Kanungu district near Lake Edward, between 9 and 15 January. This movement was in response to fighting between Mai-Mai and Rassemblement Congolais pour la Democratie (RDC) groups in North Kivu, eastern Democratic Republic of Congo. There are reports that up to 7,000 of these people have now returned to the DRC, while approximately 1,000 have been transferred to Kyaka II. There are also reports that continued fighting might result in the arrival of more refugees from DRC in the near future. The refugees are receiving support from the UNHCR, UNICEF, the World Food Programme (WFP), and Medecins Sans Frontieres.

DFID remains in close contact with the UNHCR and other humanitarian agencies, and will continue to monitor developments.

Departmental Spending

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of his Department's spending in each less developed country in each of the last five years was directed to (a) direct budgetary support, (b) non-governmental organisations and (c) debt relief. [210318]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member to the DFID annual report "Statistics in International Development" (SID) which contains some of the information requested. The latest (2004) edition is available in the House of Commons Library and on-line at: http://www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/sid2004/sid2004.asp

(a) The following table (drawn largely from SID Table 10.1) shows spending on direct budgetary support, now more commonly termed "Poverty Reduction Budget Support" or PRBS. The table shows actual spend, and spend as a proportion of DFID's total bilateral programme aid to the relevant countries. This table includes data for the last four years. Data for 1999–2000 could only be provided at a disproportionate cost. Countries not included in the table have not received PRBS. Note, DFID spends some of its funds through multilateral agencies, some of which also distribute direct budget support. While we impute a notional "share" of money we give to the EC, World Bank or other agencies as being spent in individual countries, we are not able to split this down further to show how much is spent as direct budget support.

(b) DFID is not able to distinguish the total amount of bilateral aid channelled through non-governmental organisations in individual countries, as this information is not held centrally. Table 7 of SID contains a column showing for each country, the amount of funds spent as "Grants and other aid in kind". These will include sums dispersed via non-governmental organisations.

(c) Debt relief to individual countries in each of the last five years is shown in SID. Table 7 is split into 7.1 which contains data on African countries, 7.2 with data on the Americas, 7.3-Asia, 7.4-Europe and 7.5-Pacific.

EU Development Aid

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which countries are the top 10 recipients of EU development aid; how much aid was given to each in the last year for which figures are available; and what the average annual income was in each country in that year. [211424]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In 2003, the most recent year for which figures are available, the top ten recipients of European Commission (EC) Official Development Assistance (ODA) were:

Country	EC ODA (US$ million)	Gross national income (GNI) per capita (US$)
Serbia and Montenegro	314.76	1,910
Sudan	247.05	460
Afghanistan	208.03	[1]—

Afghanistan is estimated to be low income (less than $765).

Ghana

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what (a) consultancy and (b) equipment was provided under his Department's Integrated Personnel and Payroll Database Project in Ghana in 1999–2000. [210333]

Hilary Benn: In 1999–2000, DFID provided one consultancy for project management services under the Government of Ghana's Integrated Personnel and Payroll Database (IPPD). The role of the project team was to: draw up technical and procurement specifications for the replacement payroll system; improve the quality of payroll data; provide advice and training in payroll implementation; and provide technical support to keep the old payroll system running. DFID also funded a separate two-week procurement mission prior to the purchase of equipment for the project.

DFID procured equipment for IPPD both in the UK and in Ghana. This comprised: hardware to upgrade the existing mainframe computers at the Controller and Accountant General's office; the installation of a local area network; and personal computers on which to run the new payroll and train staff. DFID also provided office equipment (such as desks and computer printers) for the project team within the Controller and Accountant General's office, and two office vehicles.

The Government of Ghana used financial aid from DFID to procure the principal (Oracle) software for the project, which was customised to perform the payroll function. The Government of Ghana also engaged the consultancy services of Provison, Oracle's local agent, to implement the project.

Guinea

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the impact an improved educational system would have on the social and economic situation in Guinea; how much (a) UK and (b) EU financial aid is earmarked for improving the education system; and if he will make a statement. [210717]

Hilary Benn: The UK does not have a bilateral development programme with Guinea. DFID has made no assessment of the education system. EU aid to Guinea is currently subject to consultations between the European Commission and the Government of Guinea, under the provisions of Article 96 of the Cotonou Treaty, due to concerns over political and governance issues. An EU Co-operation Strategy and Programme paper has been agreed but not yet signed; it does not envisage major support for education. The World Bank and the USA are the largest education sector donors to Guinea in the period 2001–06. The estimated EC share of support to the education sector in the same period is 8.6 per cent. (€15.6 million).

HIV/AIDS Orphans

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government will take to encourage other G8 and EU member states to endorse and commit resources to implement the framework for the protection, care and support of orphans and vulnerable children living with HIV and Aids. [211000]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In July this year, DFID was one of the first bilateral development agencies, along with Danish International Development Agency (DANIDA) and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), to endorse the UNAIDS/UNICEF Framework for the protection, care and support of orphans and vulnerable children living in a world with HIV/AIDS. Since then we have taken every opportunity to promote its use with governments and other organisations working to provide protection, care and support to children affected by AIDS. This includes children living with HIV and AIDS.

Along with other member states we are engaging in the consultation process towards a new Programme for Action on HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis which the EC expects to adopt in 2006. The current Programme for Action does not address orphans and vulnerable children and we will consider how best to address this gap in the forthcoming consultations.

We will use our presidencies of the G8 and the EU to increase action on AIDS and will encourage those member states who have not yet endorsed the framework to do so. Committing resources to implement the framework for the protection, care and support of orphans and vulnerable children through national plans is key to this. We have announced our £150 million spending commitment over three years and will be encouraging other G8 and EU member states to increase their support to national programmes. The USA has, like us, already earmarked funding. Canada and France see it as a priority issue, while others have yet to follow this line.

The UK is discussing with UNICEF the possibility of hosting the 2005 Global Partners Forum in London in December. This event would present a significant opportunity for G8 and EU members to increase their action in this area.

Responding to the needs of orphans and vulnerable children needs to be part of the larger picture of the AIDS response. By the end of 2005, we want to have agreement among donors and the international system on a well co-ordinated and funded plan to tackle AIDS which will include support for the protection, care and support of orphans and vulnerable children.

Iraq

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of money spent on services provided by Adam Smith International Ltd. in connection with the reconstruction of Iraq; what additional contracts they have secured since September 2004; what expenditure his Department has allocated to the organisation for future spending; and if he will make a statement. [210499]

Hilary Benn: Adam Smith International Ltd. won an open competition to implement the Emergency Public Administration Programme in Iraq. A Review was recently conducted on progress of the project. The review concluded that, despite the difficult security environment, Adam Smith International Ltd. has been effective in helping the Iraqi Interim Government set up structures at the centre of Government and in supporting Public Financial Management.

Adam Smith International Ltd. has secured no additional contracts in Iraq since September 2004.

No additional funds have been allocated for future spending specifically with Adam Smith International Ltd. Any future business will be subject to the European Union Directives. These ensure contracts are awarded through transparently fair and open processes.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate has been made of the amount of wheat required to feed the Iraqi population in a year; how much wheat it is estimated was produced within Iraq in each of the last five years; how much wheat it is estimated has been imported into Iraq in each of the last five years; at what estimated cost; what the price of wheat on the Iraqi market is; and if he will make a statement. [210661]

Hilary Benn: Based on current consumption patterns, the amount of wheat required to feed the Iraqi population annually is around 5 million metric tonnes (MT). Actual demand over the medium term will depend on food consumption preferences, the relative prices of substitutes for and complements to wheat-based products, and other factors such as population growth.

Domestic wheat production over the last five years was as follows:

	Million metric tonne
2004	2.2
2003	2.0
2002	1.8
2001	0.7
2000	0.5

Average annual wheat production over the 10 years before 2003 was around 1.1 million MT.

Imports of wheat into Iraq over the last five years, and their estimated market costs (in 2004 prices) were as follows:

	Million metric tonne	US$ million
2004	3.3	768
2003	1.8	419
2002	1.6	368
2001	2.8	652
2000	3.2	745

The price of wheat in the Iraqi market is estimated to be about 120 Iraqi Dinars (c. 8 US cents) per kilo for domestically grown wheat, and about 340 Iraqi Dinars (c. 23 US cents) for imported wheat. This differential reflects Iraqi consumers' preference for imported over domestically produced wheat.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment he has made of the provision of (a) water, (b) hospital care and (c) schools for residents who have returned to Fallujah; and what assessment he has made of educational provision for the children of residents who have not returned; [210935]

(2) what assessment he has made of the number of internally displaced persons from Fallujah who are planning to settle out of Fallujah for an extended period; [210936]

(3) what assessment he has made of the number of homes in Fallujah which (a) sustained damage and (b) sustained damage such as to render them unfit for habitation since the commencement of military operations against insurgents in November 2004. [210937]

Hilary Benn: The Interim Iraqi Government (IIG), with support from Multi-National Forces (MNF), has ensured that adequate supplies of food, water, shelter, fuel and health care are available to meet the essential needs of residents returning to Fallujah. Repairs to the water network have begun, and piped water is now available in a number of districts. In other districts, supplies are provided by tanker. Two hospitals and several health clinics are open in Fallujah to provide medical care. Preparations are being made to re-open schools in Fallujah, with five due to be opened by early February. 125 schools in the areas around Fallujah have re-opened to help cater for the children of residents and displaced people who are living there.

No assessment has been made of the number of people displaced from Fallujah who are planning to settle elsewhere for an extended period.

The IIG is planning to undertake a detailed assessment of damage to housing in Fallujah shortly. Preliminary estimates suggest that up to half the buildings in the city may have sustained substantial damage, with many of these rendered unfit for habitation, and that over 75 per cent. suffered some damage.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations he has received from UK non-governmental organisations relating to the state of the infrastructure in Fallujah; and if he will make a statement. [211052]

Hilary Benn: I have not received any such representations; however DFID staff have briefed Amman-based NGOs on the situation in Fallujah.

Millennium Development Goals

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate he has made of the percentage of the total UK (a) bilateral aid budget and (b) multilateral aid budget that is available on the ground for Millennium Development Goal projects. [210198]

Hilary Benn: All DFID's development assistance is directed towards achieving the MDGs. Table 20 of the 2004 edition of DFID's annual volume "Statistics in International Development" (SID) shows the allocation of bilateral funds to individual MDGs for 2003–04. Funds can be legitimately scored against more than one MDG—for example, HIV/AIDS and maternal mortality. A copy of this report is available in the House of Commons Library and on line at: http://www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/sid2004/sid2004.asp.

DFID is working closely with multilateral organisations to ensure that they too prioritise MDG delivery, and that DFID provided funds are used effectively to deliver results on the ground.

Ugandan Refugees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of (a) the number of refugees in Uganda from neighbouring countries and (b) the number of repatriations and new arrivals per month since July 2004; how much humanitarian assistance has been delivered to Uganda for the corresponding months by (i) the UK, (ii) the EU and (iii) the UN; and if he will make a statement. [210716]

Hilary Benn: Uganda currently hosts 230,194 refugees. These are drawn mainly from Sudan, Rwanda and the Congo. The largest number, approximately 130,000, are Sudanese. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) is unable to provide a monthly break down of the number of repatriations and new arrivals. Since January 2004, 2,449 refugees have been repatriated and there have been approximately 19,027 new arrivals.

In 2004, humanitarian assistance to Uganda totalled £81 million. During this period, the UK provided over £10 million, which was channelled through the UN system and the Red Cross. Other EU member states and the European Commission provided £14.1 million and £18.4 million respectively. In both cases this support was channelled through the UN system, the Red Cross and NGOs. In total the United Nations Consolidated Appeal received funding of £66.8 million, which represented 100 per cent. of its requested requirements.

The UK was the third largest humanitarian donor to Uganda in 2004. Addressing humanitarian needs will remain an important objective for our Uganda programme.

Vietnam

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans he has to help the Vietnamese Government in tackling HIV/AIDS. [210528]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has approved £16.4 million to help the Government of Vietnam prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS in Vietnam. This support began in January 2004 and will, over a 5-year period, seek to raise the level of protection of high-risk groups by promoting condom use, and use advertising campaigns to get HIV/AIDS prevention messages across to the country at large. It is too early to gauge results a year in, but around 40 million condoms were distributed to selected sites in 2004 which is expected to help reduce the prevalence rate of HIV/AIDS among high-risk groups. This support is co-financed with the Norwegian Government and managed by the World Health Organisation and the Vietnamese Ministry of Health.

DFID, together with other key donors has established a co-ordination mechanism to help promote the UNAIDS "Three Ones" approach to tackling HIV/AIDS (that is "One" action framework, "One" national coordinating authority, and "One" national monitoring and evaluation system. This will reduce the fragmentation of donor support and maximise the capacity of Government to respond to HIV/AIDS.

DFID is planning to double its contribution to the HIV/AIDS Global Fund. Vietnam has received US$12 million from this fund over the period 2002 to 2005. US$7 million of this amount for HIV/AIDS.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Access to Work Programme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Coventry, South have received (a) full and (b) partial grants from the Access to Work programme in each year since its introduction. [210702]

Maria Eagle: Access to Work is a specialist disability programme, which provides practical advice and support to help disabled people enter or stay in paid employment. The support is aimed at overcoming work related obstacles resulting from disability. It does this through a system of grants towards the cost of providing support. The amount of support available to any individual will depend on their work related needs resulting from disability.

Information is not available at constituency level. The available information for the west midlands region is in the table.

Number of people helped by the Access to Work programme in the West Midlands region

	2002–03	2003–04
New beneficiaries	1,492	1,279
Existing beneficiaries	1,679	1,426
Total beneficiaries	3,171	2,705

Notes:
1. Figures broken down by region are not available for earlier years.
2. New beneficiaries are people who receive access to work assistance for the first time ever within the financial year. Existing beneficiaries are people who received access to work assistance in a previous financial year, and continue to receive financial support.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have died from carbon monoxide poisoning in the UK in each year since 1997. [210083]

Jane Kennedy: The following table provides information for gas related carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning fatalities:

Number of fatal injuries relating to the supply and use of flammable gas[1]

	CO poisoning
1996–97	31
1997–98	28
1998–99	37
1999–2000	26
2000–01	25
2001–02	22
2002–03	20
2003–04[2]	12

[1] The table shows the number of fatalities reported to the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations (RIDDOR) 1995 in Great Britain.

[2] Provisional.

Notes:
1. Mainly piped gas but also includes bottled liquid petroleum gas (LPG).
2. The figure for CO deaths in 2003–04 is the lowest on record.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that householders (a) obtain and (b) use certified carbon monoxide detectors. [210085]

Jane Kennedy: HSE provides the public with free information regarding the advantages of carbon monoxide (CO) detectors through publications and a telephone helpline. The gas industry has also advised householders of the advantages of CO detectors.

CO alarms conforming to British Standards are a useful supplementary precaution but cannot be regarded as a substitute for the safe installation and maintenance of gas equipment by competent installers registered with the Council for Registered Gas Installers(CORGI.

British Gas is currently developing a programme for supplying vulnerable groups with free CO detectors.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with gas suppliers on (a) the need for regular gas checks and (b) the efficient operations of gas appliances in domestic homes. [210086]

Jane Kennedy: The Health and Safety Executive met with the Energy Retail Association on 18 January 2005 about these matters. The Association is developing a national gas safety strategy that includes publicity about the need for regular maintenance of gas appliances. Regular maintenance and checks for safety assist the efficient functioning of gas appliances and systems.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many prosecutions there have been in each of the last 10 years of landlords whose neglect of gas appliances caused the death of their tenants. [210087]

Jane Kennedy: The information is not available in the format requested. The following table provides information about the number of prosecutions of landlords instituted by HSE following deaths related to the supply and use of flammable gas.

	Number of cases
1996–97	0
1997–98	4
1998–99	3
1999–2000	5
2000–01	2
2001–02	1
2003–04 (Provisional)	0

Data relates to cases under (i) Section 3 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 relating to duties owed by employers and the self employed to persons who are not their employees and under (ii) regulations 35 and 36 of the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994 and 1998 respectively that place specific duties on landlords and regulation 3(1) of both that relates to the competence of people carrying out gas work. Information from earlier years is not readily available.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether it is possible to trace cases by (a) name and (b) address on the new Child Support Agency computer. [209368]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 26 January 2005:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, whether it is possible to trace cases by name and address on the new Child Support Agency computer.

Cases can be traced on the new computer system by searching with either:

The client's national insurance number or child support reference number; or

The client's full surname, forename(s) and gender (with date of birth being an optional additional criteria).

It is currently not possible to search using a client's address.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of its budget the Independent Living Funds made available to (a) people with severe learning impairments and (b) families or carers with caring responsibilities for people with severe learning impairments in each year since 2001. [211244]

Maria Eagle: The Independent Living Funds (ILFs) make payments direct to the disabled client, they do not make payments to families or carers. However, some users may have third parties who provide assistance with managing personal assistance (PA) support and finances, but the ILFs database does not contain sufficient information to analyse payments according to who manages the money. The following table shows the percentage of the ILFs budget that has been paid directly to clients with severe learning impairments, since financial year 2001–02 to financial year 2003–04.

	Total ILFs budget (£ million)	Proportion paid to clients with severe learning impairments (percentage)
2001–02	155.9	17.3
2002–03	178.0	18.5
2003–04	194.0	20.9

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Independent Living Fund is required to explain the reasons for alterations in its funding arrangements to parties affected by such alterations. [211245]

Maria Eagle: Awards from the Independent Living Funds (ILFs) depend on the extent to which a person requires help towards personal care and domestic support. The ILFs conduct review visits of each client every two years and if it is apparent that clients' circumstances have changed, alterations to their awards would be made and clients would be made fully aware of the change and the reasons for the change.

Where the ILFs make policy alterations that may have a potential impact on clients' awards, they also notify clients of these changes and the reasons associated with these changes.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the budget of the Independent Living Fund was for each year since 2001. [211246]

Maria Eagle: There are two Independent Living Funds—the Independent Living (Extension) Fund and the Independent Living (1993) Fund.

The budget for both funds since 2001 is as follows:

	Budget (£ million)
2001–02	155.9
2002–03	178.0
2003–04	194.0
2004–05	214.3

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 13 January 2005, Official Report, columns 624–25W, on pensions, how many (a) men and (b) women aged 54 years and over are contracted out with an appropriate personal pension or stakeholder pension. [211456]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Number of men and women aged 54 and over contracted out with an appropriate personal pension or stakeholder pension

Gender	Appropriate personal pension	Stakeholder pension
Men	213,000	[1]1,000
Women	28,000	[1]1,000

[1] Figures for stakeholder pensions are subject to a high degree of sampling error and should be used only as a guide.

Note:

1. Figures are based on scheme membership at the end of the 2002–03 tax year, the latest year for which the information is available.
2. They include those with earnings below the LEL (for example people on a career break or who are unemployed) who would not qualify for an age-related rebate for the 2002–03 tax year.
3. Figures for appropriate personal pensions do not include those for stakeholder pensions.

Adoptions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many adoptions have taken place in each of the last five years of children in care for (a) less than and (b) more than six months. [210258]

Margaret Hodge: The following table shows the number of looked after children adopted for the last five years by duration of care.

Under 6 months	10	20	10	10	10
Over 6 months	2,700	3,000	3,400	3,500	3,700

[1] Period of care refers to a continuous period of being looked after, which may include more than one placement or legal status.

Note: Figures over 1,000 have been rounded to the nearest 100. All other figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

A-levels

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many GCE A-level entries of 16 to 18-year-old students there have been in (a) biological sciences, (b) chemistry, (c) physics, (d) mathematics, (e) French, (f) German, (g) Spanish and (h) media studies in each year since 1997; and what the mark required for an A grade has been in each subject by each of the examination boards offering them in each year. [209810]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested on GCE A-levels entries for 16 to 18-year-olds in all schools and colleges between 1997 and 2004 is given in the table:

Males and Females	2004	2003	2002	2001	2000	1999	1998	1997

Since 2002 the A-level standard has been set and maintained year on year through the setting of grade boundaries for assessment. These grade boundaries are then translated into fixed points on a uniform mark scale (UMS). For A-level the maximum total UMS score is always 600. An A grade is awarded for a score of 480+ UMS marks.

The information for pre-2002 boundaries will be placed in the House of Commons Library when available.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to develop a Graduate Apprenticeship Scheme. [211224]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Following the launch of the Learning Age Green Paper (DfEE 1998) we did pump prime an initiative known as the Graduate Apprenticeship. These combined a higher education qualification (honours degree or higher) with structured work based learning underpinned by key skills and national vocational qualifications units. This early work provided a useful platform for developing foundation degrees which are now the main vehicle we have for expanding vocational higher education opportunities. They are designed with employers and combine work based learning with academic study. Since they were introduced in 2001 they have grown in popularity and there are currently 37,000 students on these programmes studying either full time or part time, including those studying with the backing of their employer. We are also working with HEFCE, the LSC and Sector Skills Councils at ways of strengthening progression for apprenticeships into higher education, including through foundation degrees, and we're still working with those sectors who feel there is still scope for a level 4 apprenticeship.

Artisan Shortfalls

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the shortfall in the London area of trained (a) plumbers, (b) construction workers and (c) electricians. [210477]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Research carried out by CITB-Construction Skills in 2003, estimates the average annual requirement for plumbers, construction workers and electricians over the period 2003–2007 as:

CITB-construction skills in 2003

	Average annual requirement
Electrical	1,090
Plumbing[1]	680
Construction[2]	7,030

[1] Including HV (Heating and Ventilation) RAC (Refrigeration and Air Conditioning)

[2] Less plumbing and electrical

CITB-Construction Skills are one of the first four Sector Skills Councils (SSCs) to develop and publish a draft Sector Skills Agreement which articulates proposed action to address the construction sectors skill needs. Their proposals include setting specific industry targets for increasing the number of companies investing in training and increasing the number of workers completing apprenticeships.

Child Abuse (School Staff)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many formal references to her Department by heads of schools with suspicions about child abuse activities by members of staff have been made in each of the last 10 years. [210233]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is not collected in a format to allow an answer to the question as asked. However, figures representing the total number of referrals to the Department in each of the last three years are set out in the following table. These include both child abuse and non child abuse issues from all sources that are required to report concerns to the Secretary of State, including local education authorities, supply agencies, school governors, the police and headteachers.

Education Provision (Northamptonshire)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the capital expenditure on schools was in Northampton in each year from 1985 to 2004. [211285]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The capital allocations to Northamptonshire in respect of schools, for which information is available centrally, are set out in the following table.

	£000
1996–97	7,524
1997–98	8,453
1998–99	15,394
1999–2000	12,308
2000–01	26,802
2001–02	22,935
2002–03	56,011
2003–04	130,466
2004–05	36,015

The figures include £23,700,000 and £100,700,000 Private finance initiative credits in 2002–03 and 2003–04 respectively. Capital expenditure on schools in a particular year will differ from the above due to timing differences, the level of resources available locally, and priorities in the local asset management plan.

Europass Initiative

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on her Department's policy towards UK participation in the Europass initiative. [211364]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The UK intends to participate fully in the new Europass initiative for the benefit it will bring to people wanting to explain their qualifications and competences when moving throughout Europe. We are now in the process of appointing a National Europass Centre to coordinate activities.

European Youth Initiatives

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on European Communities planned actions in the field of youth, with particular reference to projects arising from COM (2004) 337 and from the New Impetus for European Youth White Paper. [211378]

Dr. Howells: In July 2004, the European Commission published its proposal for a decision to create a "Youth In Action programme for the period 2007–13". This is the only planned action involving projects in the field of youth. The proposal is currently being negotiated in Council Working Party and the timetable for the completion of this negotiation is at present uncertain.

The 2001 Commission White Paper "A New Impetus for European Youth" identified four priority areas for policy cooperation and development:

Participation

Information

Voluntary Activities

Greater Understanding of Youth

Since then, EU Youth Ministers have agreed common objectives for all four policy areas in the form of Council Resolutions. Document COM (2004) 337 contained the proposals for common objectives for voluntary activities.

The Commission will invite member states to report on their progress towards meeting these objectives by the end of 2005 (participation and information); by the end of 2006 (voluntary activities) and by the end of 2008 (a greater understanding and knowledge of youth).

GCSEs

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children left school in the latest year for which figures are available without a GCSE qualification. [211029]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The number of children that failed to achieve a GCSE or equivalent qualification in 2003/04 was 26,652, which represents 4.1 per cent. of the total number of 15-year-old pupils.

Higher Education (Manchester)

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of 18 year-olds who were (a) resident in the City of Manchester and (b) resident in the Manchester, Withington constituency, entered higher education in the academic year 2002–03. [209843]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 January 2005]: Participation rates at constituency level are not calculated by the department. The available information for 2002–03 is taken from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) and covers 18-year-old applicants from Manchester LEA accepted through UCAS to full time first degree and HMD courses.

The participation rates calculated are based upon all 18-year-olds, not just those who have been in secondary education. The population numbers are estimates and can be volatile from year to year, hence participation rates should be used only as a guide to the long term trend in participation in a particular area.

Proportion of students aged 18 accepted through UCAS to full-time undergraduate courses in the UK, by LEA of domicile, 2002–03

Domicile	Accepted applicants aged 18	Percentage of 18-year-olds
Manchester LEA[1]	762	12.1
England	134,785	22.0

[1] The figures are derived from information collected on the UCAS application form. UCAS allocates an Area of Permanent Residence (APR) to each applicant, based upon their correspondence address, which is believed to largely correspond to LEAs, however, there may be some small differences between the postcodes coded under UCAS's APR classification and those coded under the Office of National Statistics (ONS) classifications.

The recent HEFCE publication "Young participation in higher education" (HEFCE 2005/03) does look at the proportion of young people who enter higher education at age 18 or 19 by parliamentary constituency. A discussion of the participation divisions and trends (18-year-olds in 1994 to 18 year-olds in 2000) for constituencies is contained in the report [sections 2.12, 3.8 and 4.1].

In addition participation rates for parliamentary constituencies based on this work are given on the supporting POLAR website (www.hefce.ac.uk/polar). These indicate that, for the cohorts reaching 18 between 1997 and 1999, 18 per cent. of young people living in Manchester LEA and 34 per cent. of young people living in the Manchester, Withington constituency entered higher education at age 18 or 19 (the English average for these cohorts is 29 per cent.).

Language Teachers

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment she has made of the increase in the number of language teachers that would be needed to implement the recommendations of the Tomlinson Report; [211237]

(2) what assessment she has made of the workforce training requirements of the implementation of the recommendation of the Tomlinson Report that languages should be either an elective or compulsory component in other specialisations. [211238]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: We are currently preparing a White Paper on the 14–19 phase, including our response to the recommendations of the final report of the Working Group on 14–19 Reform chaired by Mike Tomlinson. Our White Paper, which will be published soon, will include an assessment of the impact of our recommendations on work force; training; and teaching and learning in the 14–19 phase.

Medical Students

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students were at medical schools in the United Kingdom at 1 December 2004. [209407]

Dr. Howells: The most recent information from the Higher Education Statistics (HESA) showing total student enrolments is for 1 December 2003 and is shown in the table. Comparable figures for 2004 will be available in December 2005.

However, provisional information collected by the Higher Education Funding Council for England

(HEFCE) shows that the number of entrants to undergraduate medical courses in England in 2004/05 rose by 4 per cent. compared with 2003/04.

Enrolments on clinical and pre-clinical medical courses at UK HEIs: 2003/04

Per Capita Funding

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the spending per head on pupils in Nottingham, North constituency was in (a) 1997 and (b) the latest period for which figures are available. [211018]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is submitted to the Department according to local education authority areas, rather than districts within an LEA. Nottingham, North forms part of City of Nottingham LEA. The information is contained within the following table:

Combined LEA and school based expenditure[1, 2] per pupil[3], cash terms[6], provisional data[2] as reported by City of Nottingham LEA[5]

	£ per pupil
1997–98[2, 4, 5]	2,570
2003–04[2, 4]	4,910

[1] The combined LEA and school based expenditure includes all expenditure on the education of children in LEA maintained establishments and pupils educated by the LEA other than in maintained establishments. This includes both school based expenditure and all elements of central LEA expenditure except youth and community and capital expenditure from revenue (CERA).

[2] 1997–98 financial data are taken from (pre local government reorganisation) Nottinghamshire LEA's Revenue Outturn spending return submitted to the Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions. 2003–04 financial data are taken from City of Nottingham LEA's Section 52 Outturn Statement (Table A) submitted to the Department for Education and Skills. 2003–04 data remains provisional and is subject to change by the LEA.

[3] Pupil figures include all pre-primary pupils, including these under fives funded by the LEA and being educated in private settings, pupils educated in maintained mainstream schools and other LEA maintained pupils. The pupil data for pupils attending maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools are taken from the DfES Annual Schools Census. Private voluntary and independent (PVI) under five pupil numbers are taken from the Early Years census but are only included in the 2003–04 pupil count. Other LEA maintained pupils includes ail pupils attending schools not maintained by the authority for whom the authority is paying full tuition fees, or educated otherwise than in schools and pupil referral units under arrangements made by the authority drawn from the form 8b submitted to the DfES. Also included as other LEA maintained pupils are all pupils attending pupil referral units who are not registered at a maintained mainstream school drawn from the DfES Annual Schools Census. All pupil numbers are adjusted to be on a financial year basis.

[4] Financial data is collected at local authority level and not constituency level and as such the figures provided are for City of Nottingham LEA. Local government reorganisation (LGR) took place on the 1 April 1998 where pre-LGR Nottinghamshire LEA was split into City of Nottingham LEA and Nottinghamshire LEA As a result, the 1997–98 data is for pre-LGR Nottinghamshire LEA and the 2003–04 data is for City of Nottingham LEA.

[5] Spending in 1997–98 reflects the transfer of monies from local government to central Government for the nursery vouchers scheme. These were returned to local government from 1998–99.

[6] Figures are rounded to the nearest 10 as at 24 January 2004.

Private Children's Homes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many private children's homes have been de-registered (a) due to voluntary closure and (b) under direction from her inspectors in each of the last five years. [210208]

Information provided by the Commission on the total number of private children's homes that have been de-registered from 1 April 2002 to 19 January 2005 is shown in the following table. Information is not available prior to 1 April 2002, the date when the National Care Standards Commission was created.

2001–02	7,826
2002–03	13,665
2003–04	11,741
2004–05	10,371

Ulster Community Hospital	554
Down Lisburn	422
Causeway	558
Homefirst	1,291
Foyle	506
Sperrin Lakeland	1,289

Notes:

The information shown is for trusts where data is available. All figures are as at 31 December 2004, except Homefirst Community Health and Social Services Trust, which shows the position at 30 November 2004.

Information relating to Foyle Community Health and Social Services Trust and Sperrin Lakeland Health and Social Services Trust are based on numbers of persons waiting for treatment, as opposed to initial assessment, by a podiatrist, although in most cases assessment and treatment take place on the same day.

Southern Health and Social Services Board area Trusts do not hold official waiting list figures, although in some trusts this information is recorded by professional staff. Any data collected are held on manual systems and could be provided only at disproportionate cost because of the time required to extract the information.

Costello Report

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what he expects the costs to be of implementing the recommendations of the Costello Report in the Province. [210761]

Mr. Gardiner: Additional resources of some £20 million have been secured over the next three years for the implementation of the new arrangements for post-primary education. As these new arrangements will largely be developed at local level, decisions on the distribution of the resources available have yet to be taken. I anticipate, however, that they will enable us to support the phased introduction of key elements of the new arrangements, including the Pupil Profile, the Entitlement Framework and the development of co-operation and collaboration between schools and between schools and FE colleges.

Dilutional Hyponatraemia

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dilutional hyponatraemia-related deaths occurred in the Province in each of the last 20 years. [210022]

Early Years Development Fund

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been spent on the Early Years Development Fund in each constituency in Northern Ireland in each year since its introduction. [211181]

Angela Smith: Information regarding allocations Early Years Development Fund (EYDF) broken down by parliamentary constituency is not available. EYDF provides a degree of infrastructural support to the Childcare Partnerships. The Department provides the Childcare Partnerships with a percentage allocation of the annual EYDF budget available, which can then be targeted to provide support for suitable projects/activities in the Partnership area. In addition, the Department also uses a portion of EYDF to support a range of diverse organisations and activities across Northern Ireland.

The following table shows the overall level of investment in the Early Years Development Fund at Northern Ireland and Childcare Partnership level since 1999.

(iii) Since 1 November 2004, there have been a total of 28 laboratory-confirmed influenza infections in Northern Ireland. All are influenza A: four have been typed as influenza A H3, 12 have been typed as influenza A HI. The remaining 12 viruses have not been sub-typed.

Juvenile Justice Centre

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) young people and (b) staff have been injured in the past (i) six and (ii) 12 months while using restraining methods at the Juvenile Justice Centre; and whether any review was carried out following each incident. [210942]

Mr. Spellar: This is an operational responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Youth Justice Agency of Northern Ireland (Bill Lockhart). He has reported the figures in the table and advised me that the majority of the injuries can be classed as minor and includes red marks, bruises and superficial scratches.

	Number
Injuries in past 6 months (July to December 2004)
Young people	27
Staff	21
Injuries in past 12 months (January to December 2004)
Young people	44

Every incident involving the use of physical restraint is recorded in the appropriate log book and signed off by the Unit Manager or Duty Manager in his/her absence. These log books are subject to regular scrutiny by Senior Managers. Every incident of physical restraint is subject to review at the daily Information Meeting attended by Senior and Duty Managers.

National Assets

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a list of assets held by (a) each Northern Ireland Department and (b) the Northern Ireland Office since publication of the National Assets Register; what the value of the asset at the time of the compilation of the register was; what its current value is; and in the case of assets acquired or disposed of since the publication of the register, what the acquisition or disposal price was in each case. [210641]

Mr. Pearson: The resource accounts for each Northern Ireland Department have been laid in the House and show, in summary form, the assets held together with the acquisitions and disposals during the year. It is intended to publish an updated version of the National Asset Register to inform the next spending review which is expected to be in 2006. Producing the information in the form requested would incur disproportionate cost.

Peace Funding

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money he has allocated towards core funding for the victims sector in Northern Ireland for the next financial year; and if he will make a statement. [210886]

Angela Smith: The current core funding scheme for victims and survivors groups, due to end on 31 March 2005, is to be extended for a further year until 31 March 2006 and core funded groups have recently been advised of this by the Intermediary Funding Body, the Community Relations Council. Approximately £1.8 million will be allocated to cover this extended period enabling groups to continue their important work.

The existing scheme has been subject to an independent evaluation which is in the process of completion and its recommendations will inform future funding arrangements for the sector. In addition work by the Victims Unit of the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister is in hand on the next phase of policy in relation to victims and survivors. This will be the subject of consultation and it is considered that an extension to the existing Scheme will allow everyone sufficient time, not only to respond to the consultation, but also to prepare for any new arrangements which may emerge.

Physiotherapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals in each of the Province's health board areas are awaiting an initial assessment by a physiotherapist. [210027]

Angela Smith: Information on the number of individuals awaiting an initial assessment by a physiotherapist is not collected centrally. Waiting list information is not recorded by all Boards and is not recorded on a consistent basis by those Boards, which do collect the information. The information that Boards were able to provide in relation to the number of people waiting for an initial physiotherapist assessment is shown in the table.

All figures are as at 31 December 2004, except Causeway Health and Social Services Trust within the Northern Board area, which shows the position at: 30 November 2004 and Altnagelvin Health and Social Services Trust within the Western Board area, which shows the position at 1 December 2004.

Health and Social Services Boards

Information relating to Altnagelvin Health and Social Services Trust and Sperrin Lakeland Health and Social Services Trust (WHSSB) is based on the number of people waiting for treatment, as opposed to waiting for initial assessment, by a physiotherapist, although in most cases assessment and treatment take place on the same day.

Southern Board area Trusts do not hold official waiting list figures, although in some Trusts this information is recorded by professional staff. Any data collected are held on manual systems and could only be provided at disproportionate cost due to the time that would be required to extract the information.

Planning Applications

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria the Planning Service in Northern Ireland uses in its consultation process with local councils regarding decisions on whether to discuss deferred planning applications (a) on site and (b) in office. [210345]

Angela Smith: The Planning Service does not apply any specific criteria when deciding whether a site or office meeting is required following deferral of an application for a meeting by a local council. Each request is considered on its particular merits.

Post-primary School Admissions Criteria

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to publish the consultation document on alternative admissions criteria to post-primary schools. [210770]

Mr. Gardiner: I will publish a consultation document on new admissions arrangements for post-primary schools on Friday 28 January. The document will include consideration of admissions criteria to be used by post-primary schools if they have more applications than places available.

This is an open consultation and everyone is invited to submit their views. The closing date for the consultation is 30 June 2005 and I will consider all of the views expressed in the consultation before decisions are taken on new admissions arrangements.

Public Sector Holiday

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he intends that 13 July should cease to be a public sector holiday in the Province. [210036]

Mr. Pearson: There are no plans to alter the observance of 13 July as a privilege holiday for the staff of the 11 Departments of the Northern Ireland Administration and also those staff of the Northern Ireland Office who are located in Northern Ireland.

While holidays for the staff in the wider public sector are a matter for the relevant employer, prior to December 2004, Health and Personal Social Services staff had 10 public holidays and two additional privilege days, historically taken on 13 July and a third day at Christmas. Under the UK-wide pay modernisation "Agenda for Change", implemented on 1 December 2004, the two additional privilege holidays were converted to annual leave for Health and Personal Social Services staff.

Sex Offenders

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether the person convicted of a sexual offence and added to the Sex Offenders Register in the Republic of Ireland, whose name has been communicated to him, has been added to the Northern Ireland Sex Offenders Register since his release from HMP Magilligan in November 2004; [209044]

(2) for what reasons there has been a delay in the addition of the person convicted of a sexual offence and added to the Sex Offenders Register in the Republic of Ireland, whose name has been communicated to him, to the Northern Ireland Sex Offenders Register since the coming into force of the relevant provisions of the Sexual Offences Act 2004. [209045]

Mr. Spellar: I understand that, on 30 November, the court, in the jurisdiction in which the person now resides, granted an order which made the person subject to the notification requirements of Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003.

While the person is not residing in Northern Ireland he is not required to notify his details to the PSNI.

Speech and Language Therapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals in each of the Province's health board areas are awaiting an initial assessment by a speech and language therapist. [210033]

Angela Smith: Information on the number of individuals awaiting an initial assessment by a speech and language therapist is not collected centrally. Waiting list information is not recorded by all Boards and is not recorded on a consistent basis by those Boards, which do collect the information. The information that Boards were able to provide in relation to the number of people waiting for initial speech and language assessment is shown in the table.

Information relating to Foyle Community Health and Social Services Trust and Sperrin Lakeland Health Social Service Trust (Western Health ad Social Services Board) is based on the number of people waiting for treatment, as opposed to waiting for initial assessment, by a speech therapist, although in most cases assessment and treatment take place on the same day.

Southern Health and Social Services Board area Trusts do not hold official waiting list figures, although in some Trusts this information is recorded by professional staff. Any data collected are held on manual systems and could only be provided at disproportionate cost due to the time that would be required to extract the information.

Sure Start

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent in Northern Ireland on the Sure Start Programme in each year since its introduction, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [211180]

Angela Smith: When Sure Start was introduced in July 2000, investment stood at £4 million full-year cost (£2 million in-year cost). Information regarding Sure Start allocations by parliamentary constituency is not available but the following table shows the overall investment in Sure Start at Northern Ireland and Childcare Partnership level since the programme was introduced in July 2000:

£ million

	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Northern Ireland	2	5.8	6.6	8.5	8.8

Southern childcare partnership	0.40	1.16	1.27	1.64	1.69

Water Industry

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been paid to date to the European Commission as a result of the failure of Northern Ireland's Water Service to meet EC Water Directive standards. [208415]

Angela Smith: To date, no money has been paid out on fines.

If the Commission considers that there may be an infringement of EU law that warrants the opening of an infringement procedure under Article 226 of the EC treaty, it addresses a "Letter of Formal Notice" (first written warning) to the member state concerned, requesting it to submit its observation by a specified date, usually two months.

In light of the reply or absence of a reply from the member state concerned, the Commission may decide to address a "Reasoned Opinion" (final written warning) to the member state. This clearly and definitively sets out the reasons why it considers there to have been an infringement of EU law and calls upon the member state to comply within a specified period, normally two months.

If a member state fails to comply with the Reasoned Opinion, the Commission may decide to bring the case before the European Court of Justice. The Court can make a judgment confirming that the member state is in breach of its obligations. The member state must then take steps to comply with the judgment as soon as possible.

Once a judgment has been reached, the Commission may progress the case to Article 228 proceedings. This also involves "Letters of Formal Notice" and "Reasoned Opinion" stages. Article 228 also allows the Commission to ask the Court to impose a financial penalty on the member state concerned.

Youth Unemployment

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of young people in Northern Ireland were (a) unemployed and not in full-time education and (b) economically inactive and not in full-time education (i) at 31 March of each year since 1997 and (ii) for the most recent month for which figures are available. [210609]

Mr. Gardiner: The Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey (LFS) can provide the information requested, but only on a quarterly basis. Estimates for the spring quarters (March-May) from 1997 to 2004, along with the latest estimates from autumn (September-November) 2004 are provided in the following table.

Number and proportion of 16 to 24-year-olds, not in full-time education that are unemployed or economically inactive

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the Burmese army's commencement of construction in Northern Nyaunglebin District of Mon Township of a new camp using forced labour; [209751]

(2) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about the use of forced labour in the construction by the Burma army of four new camps in Nyaunglebin District, Western Karen State. [209771]

Mr. Alexander: We have not made representations to the State Peace and Development Council about these specific cases.

The Burmese Government have still to address the international community's concerns over the use of forced labour in Burma. We fully support the efforts of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and other agencies to end permanently the use of forced labour. Our embassy is in close touch with the ILO office in Rangoon.

Burma's General System of Preferences trade privileges were suspended by the EC in 1997 in response to our concerns over forced labour in the country. Targeted restrictive measures against Burma have been steadily strengthened through the EU's Common Position, most recently in October 2004, to reflect the lack of progress on this and other issues.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will urge the Government of Burma to ensure that former prisoners, political activists and their families are not subjected to arbitrary detention, discrimination or harassment; [209752]

(2) if he will urge the Government of Burma to initiate a moratorium on the use of laws restricting the rights to freedom of expression and assembly, with particular reference to (a) the 1975 State Protection Law, (b) the 1950 Emergency Provisions Law, (c) the 1962 Printers and Publishers Law and [illegible] the 1908 Illegal Associations Law; [209760]

(3) if he will urge the Government of Burma (a) to consider an amnesty for all political prisoners and (b) to make public full information on all political detainees; [209763]

(4) if he will urge the Government of Burma immediately and unconditionally (a) to release all prisoners of conscience held on account of their peaceful exercise of the rights to freedom of association and expression and (b) not to penalise anyone for his or her peaceful exercise of those rights. [209764]

Mr. Alexander: We have highlighted our concerns over freedom of expression and assembly in Burma in successive UK and EU co-sponsored UN resolutions, most recently at the UN General Assembly on 23 December. These resolutions emphasise that the Burmese regime should fully respect all human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the freedom of expression and association. We, and our international partners, have consistently called on the Burmese authorities to release immediately and unconditionally all detained or imprisoned political prisoners; I most recently did so in my statement of 30 November 2004. A copy of the statement is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website: www.fco.gov.uk/uk/policy/news/press-releases.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will urge the Government of Burma to allow all political prisoners to stay in prisons which are close to their families; [209753]

(2) if he will urge the Government of Burma to investigate all reports of deaths in custody; [209754]

(3) if he will urge the Government of Burma to ensure that punishments in prisons do not constitute torture or other forms of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment; [209755]

(4) if he will urge the Government of Burma to ensure that prisoners are (a) held in conditions which meet international standards, (b) provided with proper medical care on a timely basis and an adequate diet and (c) supplied with mosquito nets; [209756]

(5) if he will urge the Government of Burma to ensure that prisoners in every (a) prison, (b) labour camp and (c) other detention facility in Burma have (i) opportunities to socialise with one another and (ii) access to reading and writing materials of their choice; [209757]

(6) if he will urge the Government of Burma (a) to investigate all allegations of incommunicado detention and torture (i) in interrogation and (ii) in prison, (b) to take steps to bring those responsible to justice and (c) to take immediate steps to put an end to these practices; [209762]

(7) what discussions he has had with the Government of Burma about deaths in custody in Burma in 2004. [209767]

Mr. Alexander: We remain concerned about reported prison conditions in Burma and call on the Burmese regime to implement fully its international human rights obligations, including the humane treatment of prisoners.

We maintain that all prisoners should be held in accordance with international standards. There can be no excuse for the deliberate mistreatment or neglect of prisoners. Our embassy in Rangoon keeps in close contact with the International Committee of the Red Cross and Amnesty International, which have been able to visit prisons in Burma, in order to monitor conditions in which prisoners are kept. We are fully supportive of their efforts to improve such conditions.

We regularly raise our concerns on human rights issues with the Burmese authorities, most recently when I met the Burmese ambassador on 29 November.

We fully support the efforts of UN Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in Burma, Professor Sergio Pinheiro and urge the regime to co-operate fully with him and allow him to visit Burma. He has a crucial role to play, including in these areas.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will urge the Government of Burma to review all trials of political prisoners which have fallen short of appropriate international standards; [209758]

(2) if he will urge the Government of Burma to ensure that fair trial standards are upheld in political cases including (a) the right to legal counsel, (b) the right to presumption of innocence, (c) the right to a public trial, (d) the right to defend oneself and (e) the right to adequate time and resources to prepare a defence; [209759]

(3) if he will urge the Government of Burma (a) to ensure that juveniles are deprived of their liberty only as a last resort, (b) to guarantee that juveniles are not held in detention with adults and (c) to promote alternatives to judicial proceedings and institutional care where appropriate to the child's well-being; [209761]

(4) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about its misuse of detention and security legislation; [209769]

(5) what representations he has made to the Government of Burma about ensuring due process in trials of persons accused of subversive political activities. [209770]

Mr. Alexander: We believe that the Burmese justice system continues to fall short of international fair trial standards. Our concerns over human rights and the rule of law in Burma are well known and have regularly been made clear to the Burmese authorities, most recently when I met the Burmese ambassador on 29 November.

We maintain that all prisoners should be tried fairly in accordance with international standards.

We fully support the efforts of UN special rapporteur for human rights in Burma, Professor Sergio Pinheiro and urge the regime to co-operate fully with him and allow him to visit Burma. He has a crucial role to play, including in these areas.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether U Win Tin, imprisoned in Burma since 1989, has been released. [209765]

Mr. Alexander: As far as we are aware, U Win Tin remains in Insein Prison. We have repeatedly called on the Burmese regime to release immediately and unconditionally all political prisoners so as to allow them to play an active role in national reconciliation in Burma. We shall continue to do so. Their plight was most recently raised in December's UK co-sponsored UN General Assembly resolution. U Win Tin is on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) freedom of expression panel list of imprisoned journalists. His case was highlighted in the FCO's Annual Human Rights Report, launched last November.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent inquiries he has made of the Government of Burma about the health of (a) Soe Myint, (b) Lin Lin Tun, (c) Aye Myintthan and (d) Hnin May Aung, imprisoned in Burma for their activities in political opposition to the ruling military junta. [209766]

Mr. Alexander: We have not made representations about these particular cases.

I met the Burmese ambassador on 29 November and called for the release of all political prisoners in Burma. My statement on 30 November also called for the release of all political prisoners. A copy of the statement is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website: www.fco.gov.uk/policy/news/press-releases.

We hold the Burmese regime responsible for the health of all political prisoners in Burma.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent actions by the military regime in Burma. [210582]

Mr. Alexander: We remain deeply concerned by developments in Burma in particular the news that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi is now formally detained under Section 10*(b)* of the State Protection Law and that her house arrest has been extended until November 2005.

We fully support the UN Secretary-General's statement of 16 December 2004 reminding the Burmese authorities of their responsibility to ensure Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's security and well-being.

The Burmese regime has committed itself

> "to build a modern, prosperous, democratic nation".

For this to happen, it is essential that the National Convention (to draw up a new constitution) which reconvenes on February 17 is an inclusive and transparent process, involving all political parties and ethnic groups in Burma. Without their participation, it lacks all credibility.

The UK remains committed to helping Burma achieve national reconciliation and we will respond positively to tangible progress.

Equatorial Guinea

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) the UK Government and (b) UK banks are assisting the government of Equatorial Guinea with its investigation into the alleged coup attempt. [210072]

Mr. Mullin: The Equatorial Guinean Government have sought assistance from the British Government in relation to their investigations following the alleged attempted coup in March 2004. We have made clear that within the framework of UK law we will offer every assistance to help them bring to justice those who may have sought to overthrow a sovereign government. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has acted as a channel of communication between the Equatorial Guinean government and the Home Office in respect of the request for mutual legal assistance. It is now for the Police and Crown Prosecution Service, on the basis of evidence provided, to decide whether to launch a domestic investigation and/or prosecution.

Mr. Alexander: Our embassy in Tbilisi maintain a close interest in issues relating to freedom of religion in Georgia. We are aware that a draft amendment to the law has been submitted to enable the registration of non-orthodox faiths and that the Liberty Institute has lodged a suit with the Constitutional Court to remove the article in the existing law which prohibits the registration of non-orthodox faiths. We will continue to closely monitor the situation and keep in close touch with our EU, Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe and Council of Europe partners.

Parliamentary Questions

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when he will reply substantively to the question tabled by the hon. Member for Thurrock for named day answer on 16 December 2004, question 205526; [209187]

(2) when he will reply to question 205526, tabled by the hon. Member for Thurrock on 13 December 2004; what the reasons for the delay in replying are; and if he will make a statement. [211201]

Mr. Rammell: I apologise for the delay in replying, this is due in part to the need to consult a large number of overseas missions and partly due to errors by officials. I will reply shortly.

Proof of Death

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the review of the criteria necessary for proof of death abroad in exceptional circumstances following the Asian tsunami disaster will apply also to victims of other disasters. [210102]

Mr. Mullin [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The Government are carrying out a review of the response to the Asian tsunami disaster, to identify lessons that we can learn for dealing with other disasters. It would be wrong to pre-judge the conclusions of that review.

Sudan

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political situation in Sudan. [210585]

Mr. Mullin: We welcome the signature of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) on 9 January. This offers the prospect of ending Africa's longest running civil war, and can pave the way for peace in the whole of Sudan, including Darfur. A challenging period of implementation, including drafting a new constitution and forming a government of national unity, now faces the parties. We stand ready to support them in doing so. The United Nations is currently preparing for the deployment of a Peace Support Operation in support of the CPA.

Peace talks between the Government of Sudan and the rebels in Darfur are expected to resume in Abuja in the next few weeks. We will continue to press both sides to engage in good faith to find a lasting solution to the conflict in Darfur.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Sudanese authorities on the reports of a combined attack by the Government of Sudan airforce and the Janjaweed militas upon the village of Hamada, in Southern Darfur, on 16 January. [211457]

Mr. Alexander: We have repeatedly made clear to the Government of Sudan and the rebels that they must respect the ceasefire and abide by the Abuja Protocols, including the Government's commitment to refrain from military overflights of Darfur.

The African Union is currently investigating the alleged Arab militia attack on the village of Hamadah. We await the result of its investigation.

Syria

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions his Department has had with the Syrian Government on Hezbollah and Hamas. [210699]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 26 January 2005]: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed these organisations with the Syrian Foreign Minister Shara'a on 18 October 2004 during his visit to London. During this and other discussions with the Syrian Government, we have urged Syria to use its influence with Hezbollah, Hamas and other groups such as Palestinian Islamic Jihad, to call on these groups to reject the use of violence.

UNHCR Staff (Nepal)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the 2002 report by the Inspector General's Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) into alleged rape and child abuse by UNHCR staff in Nepal. [209719]

Mr. Alexander: The 2002 report made allegations of sexual abuse by 18 people, including 16 Bhutanese refugees and two Nepalese officials. None of the 18 worked for UNHCR. But three UNHCR staff were accused in the report of gross negligence for failing to respond adequately to the abuse. Following a rebuttal of these allegations by the three UNHCR staff as well as a legal analysis of the case, a final review in 2004 concluded that there had been no wrongdoing by UNHCR staff, that no instructions had been wilfully disregarded, and that the conduct of the staff did not justify disciplinary action. The Government take any such allegations very seriously. We welcome the steps UNHCR has taken since 2002 to review its staff code of conduct, reinforcing the need for a zero tolerance approach to sexual abuse.

Vietnam

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what steps are being taken to encourage the removal of the death penalty in Vietnam; [210523]

(2) what recent assessment has been made of the number of state executions in Vietnam; and if he will make a statement. [210525]

Mr. Alexander: The first EU-Vietnam Seminar on the Death Penalty, partly funded by the UK, took place in Hanoi on 24–26 November 2004. We are encouraged by Vietnamese willingness to enter into a dialogue on this issue and hope to build on this progress.

Total abolition of the death penalty is unlikely in the near future. But we welcome Vietnam's willingness to debate the issue, and to consider narrowing the use of the death penalty in the next two-three years.

We regret that the death penalty is still widely used in Vietnam. It has one of the highest rates of death sentences and executions. 29 different offences, including non-violent ones, are capital crimes. More than 60 people are believed to have been executed in 2003, double that of 2002. On 5 January 2004, the Prime Minister of Vietnam declared death penalty statistics "state secrets".

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is being given to Vietnam to (a) strengthen the Civil Service and (b) eliminate corruption. [210524]

Mr. Alexander: Public administration reform and corruption are key areas for UK assistance to Vietnam.

The Department for International Development's (DFID) support to Vietnam is one of the fastest growing UK aid programmes in the world. DFID programme resources are projected to reach £55 million in 2005–06. This support includes helping the National Assembly to strengthen its oversight function. Recent results include the scrutiny of the draft Audit Law which has led to the State Audit department reporting to the National Assembly as opposed to the Government, and on-going revisions to the new law on anti-corruption. DFID is financing the Ministry of Planning and Investment's Inspectorate which has provided three pilot inspection reports to the Minister of Planning and Investment to review and take appropriate action. DFID also financed technical training in performance auditing for 30 people, and awareness training in planning and investment inspection for 140 officials.

DFID is contributing to a multi-donor effort to improve public financial management. This support has helped design a budgetary yearbook which will be made available to the public, and financed the recent public expenditure review which will be endorsed by the Government and made public at the end of January 2005. DFID is also supporting the introduction of a Treasury and Budget Management Information System to comply with international best practice in budget execution and reporting.

We took part in the Vietnam Consultative Group's (CG) main annual stock take on 1–2 December, together with representatives of the Government of Vietnam, donors, international agencies, international NGOs and the private sector. Corruption was one of the key challenges identified; and we welcome Vietnam's increasing openness in this respect.

This was the first such dialogue with donors. We will continue to support Vietnam's efforts to combat corruption and to strengthen its civil service.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on human rights violations in Vietnam. [210526]

Mr. Alexander: The Vietnamese Government are well aware of the importance we attach to human rights. We raise our concerns over the human rights situation in Vietnam at every possible opportunity.

We have an increasingly open dialogue with the Vietnam Government on human rights issues. The EU-Vietnam Death Penalty Seminar that took place in Hanoi on 24–26 November 2004 is an example of increasing Vietnamese willingness to discuss human rights issues.

The regular EU-Vietnam human rights dialogue meetings, the latest of which was in December, help improve mutual understanding and identify areas for co-operation; we hope this will lead to concrete progress.

We will continue to press the Vietnamese Government to adhere to its international human rights obligations at every suitable opportunity.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

China (Cashmere Imports)

11. Sir Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she plans to take to increase the level of monitoring of the importation of cashmere knitted garments from China. [211122]

Mr. Alexander: Surveillance licensing of EU imports from China on a range of textiles and clothing products, including cashmere knitted garments, was introduced by the EU and implemented by the UK on 1 January 2005.

Postal Services

12. Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the standard of postal services in inner London. [211123]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Improving the quality of postal services throughout the country is an operational matter for the Royal Mail Board. I have been assured by Allan Leighton that this is the Board's top priority and Adam Crazier, Chief Executive of Royal Mail, has taken personal responsibility for this improvement.

Energy Supply

13. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the UK's future energy generation capability. [211124]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government's assessment, prepared jointly with Ofgem and National Grid Transco, is set out in reports of the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group. The latest version was published in November 2004 and copies are in the House Library.

The Secretary of State will also report to Parliament on security of energy supply this year as required under section 172 of the Energy Act 2004.

Employment during Pregnancy

14. Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research she has commissioned on pregnant women's experience of employment and employers' attitudes towards them during pregnancy. [211125]

Jacqui Smith: In 2001, DTI and DWP jointly commissioned a survey of new mothers and fathers to evaluate the provision, awareness, take-up, experiences and views of maternity and paternity rights and benefits in Britain. The mothers' survey explored how women who had worked as employees during pregnancy had been treated at work prior to taking maternity leave.

The report—Hudson et al, (2004), Maternity and Paternity Rights in Britain 2002: Survey of Parents, DWP Research Report No 131—is available at http:www.dwp.gov.uk/asd and has been placed in the Library.

The DTI is currently in the process of tendering for an interim survey of maternity and paternity rights, to be carried out in summer 2005. This survey will update the findings of the 2002 survey. Initial findings will be available in June 2005 and the final report in November 2005.

EU Structural Funds

15. Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the future of European Union structural funds. [211126]

Mr. Alexander: The Government have already set out in great detail its position on the future of the Structural and Cohesion Funds. We put forward reform proposals in a consultation document of 2003 and confirmed the Government's approach in two written statements to Parliament on 17 September and 11 December 2003.

In short, the Government is proposing that the funds should in future be focused on the poorest EU member states. If our proposals are accepted, we have guaranteed to increase domestic spending on regional policy in the UK.

Avient

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry with regard to the recent statement by the National Contact Point for the OECD Guidelines on Avient, how many (a) meetings, (b) telephone calls and (c) other types of communication took place between (i) the UK National Contact Point and (ii) other UK Government officials and Avient's representatives; on what dates each such communication took place; and whether Avient was allowed to comment on the statement before it was made public. [200493]

Mr. Alexander: Dialogue with the company is covered by the confidentiality provisions of the OECD Guidelines. Avient did see the statement in draft form before it was published and submitted some factual comments, a number of which were accepted.

Business Registrations (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many businesses have registered for VAT in Coventry, South in each year since 1997. [211110]

Nigel Griffiths: The latest official figures based on VAT registrations show 690 businesses being registered for VAT in Coventry in 2003, which is a 16 per cent. increase on the year before. Data for 2004 will be available in autumn 2005.

VAT registrations in each calendar year in Coventry

	Number
1997	615
1998	640
1999	650
2000	620
2001	655
2002	595
2003	690

Note:

Data are not available for constituencies such as Coventry, South.

Concorde

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the benefit of maintaining an airworthy example of Concorde for research and development purposes; and if he will make a statement. [207124]

Jacqui Smith: Supersonic aircraft were not identified as a priority of the Aerospace Innovation and Growth Team.

No assessment has been made.

Energy Billing

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions Ofgem has had with energy suppliers on the (a) accuracy, (b) comprehensibility and (c) timeliness of their billing procedures. [210439]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: These are matters for the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (Ofgem). I understand that the Chairman of Ofgem will write to the hon. Member about the matters he has raised.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions her Department has had with Ofgem in relation to problems with energy bills. [210503]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My Department has regular discussions with the Office of Gas and Electricity Markets (Ofgem) about a range of consumer issues, including billing. My officials are working with the industry, Ofgem and Energywatch on establishing industry- wide standards that address billing problems.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the percentage of (a) gas and (b) electricity bills sent out each year which are estimated bills. [210595]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Neither. OFGEM nor Energywatch routinely collects this information. The rules governing meter-readings are the responsibility of OFGEM. Gas and electricity suppliers are obliged to ensure that customers' meters are physically read and inspected once every two years, although suppliers will seek to read meters more frequently. Customers may provide their own meter readings instead of accepting an estimated bill. The supplier must accept that reading or arrange to read the meter itself.

EU Constitution

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 15 December 2004, Official Report, column 1124W, on the EU constitution, whether such a legal basis exists within the European Communities treaties. [207140]

Mr. Alexander: Article III-122 of the proposed constitutional treaty would provide a legal basis for European laws defining the principles and conditions enabling services of general economic interest to fulfil their missions, without prejudice to the competence of member states, in compliance with the constitution, to provide, to commission and to fund such services. There is presently EC competence to legislate on services of general economic interest within the current European community treaty, for example, in Articles 71 and 80(2) (transport), 95 (internal market approximation measures) and 156 (trans-European networks). A measure under Article III-122 could deal with the principles and conditions referred to above across a range of services of general economic interest; to do this under the current European community treaty would require assembling sectoral legal bases or restricting the measure to approximation provisions. Any new law made under Article III-122 would be adopted on the basis of qualified majority voting and co-decision with the European Parliament. Article III-122 explicitly maintains the competence of member states in the key areas of providing, commissioning and funding services of general economic interest.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her Answer of 15 December 2004, Official Report, column 1124W, on the EU Constitution, what the definition is of services of general economic interest; and if she will make a statement on the effect of the provisions of the EU Constitutional Treaty on the competence of (a) member states and (b) the European Commission in respect of such services. [207284]

Mr. Alexander: There is neither a UK- nor EU- level legal definition of services of general economic interest (SGEIs), although the term "services of general economic interest" can be found in Articles 16 and 86 of the EC Treaty. However, the European Commission states in its White Paper on Services of General Interest (COM (2004) 374 final) that there is broad agreement that the term SGEIs "refers to services of an economic nature which the member states or the Community subject to specific public service obligations by virtue of a general interest criterion". In ECJ case C-179/90, the court said that SGEIs "were services which exhibited a general economic interest with special characteristics compared with those offered by other economic activities".

The EC Treaty presently gives the European Commission competence to bring forward proposals for EC legislation on SGEIs under sectoral legal bases, for example Articles 71 and 80(2) (transport) or 156 (trans-european networks), or under Article 95 (internal market approximation measures). Such proposals could define the principles and conditions enabling SGEIs to fulfil their missions. A Commission proposal for legislation on SGEIs would have to be compliant with the EC Treaty's provisions, such as internal market requirements, and could not infringe on member states' competence to provide, to commission and to fund these services.

The Constitutional Treaty would give the Commission an additional legal basis under which the Commission could bring forward a proposal for legislation on SGEIs at a horizontal level. However, a commission proposal on SGEIs under this legal base would also have to be compliant with the EC Treaty's provision, such as internal market requirements, and Article III-122 explicitly maintains the competence of member states in the key areas of providing, commissioning and funding services of general economic interest.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what constraints apply to the requirement to promote scientific and technological advance as set out in Article I-3(3) of the proposed EU Constitution. [208252]

Ms Hewitt: The detailed provisions relating to this objective are contained in Articles III-248–255 of the Treaty. These largely reflect the existing EC competence in this area, with the addition of an explicit reference to space policy. The Article's set out the European Union's aim to achieve a European Research Area, improve the EU's competitiveness in science and technology and ensure EU policies are properly supported by research. They also outline a list of activities to support these aims. As with the rest of the Treaty, any action in this area is also subject to the application of the principles of proportionality and subsidiarity. In addition, any action would be subject to the constraints of the EU budget.

Fast Patrol Vessel Defender

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether grant funding, other than the European Regional Development Fund grant to the Maritime Defence Museum (Lowestoft) Ltd. for restoration of the Fast Patrol Vessel Defender, was provided by (a) the Government and (b) the European Regional Development Fund for the acquisition, voyage, maintenance and use of the vessel. [207720]

Mr. Alexander: The only ERDF funding provided was the grant of £58,728 for the project to restore the vessel. There is no indication of Government funding having been provided to the Maritime Defence Museum (Lowestoft) Ltd.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 142W, on the Freedom of Information Act, whether private companies are protected from being compelled under the Act to divulge commercial-in-confidence information provided to them by public bodies; and under what circumstances the non-absolute exemption at section 43 can be invoked. [209550]

Jacqui Smith: The Freedom of Information Act applies to public authorities only, as listed in Schedule 1, specified in section 6, or designated under section 5 of the Act. No Orders have yet been made under section 5. The Department of Constitutional Affairs will shortly hold a public consultation on the scope and use of section 5.

Where a request is received for information which constitutes a trade, secret or the disclosure of which would prejudice, or be likely to. prejudice, the commercial interests of any person, and the balance of the public interest is in favour of maintaining the exemption, section 43 can be applied.

I am placing a copy of the Government's guidance on applying this exemption in the Library of the House.

Inward Investors

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what statutory obligations exist on inward investors to notify her Department of their intention to withdraw from the UK. [211111]

Nigel Griffiths: Companies, be they foreign or UK owned, have no statutory obligation to notify the Department of their plans to disinvest unless they have been the recipient of regional grant assistance.

Such companies are required to maintain the investment for a period of time after the assistance has been paid. If the project were to close within that time, the conditions of the offer require the grant recipient to inform my Department.

All offers of assistance contain provisions for withholding or recovery of grant if a firm withdraws from an investment.

Wave Power

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to promote wave power. [211119]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 2 August 2004 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced a £50 million Marine Renewables Deployment Fund that will provide continued support to wave and tidal stream power technologies.

This builds on the £15 million of support for Research and Development provided to the sector since 1999. My Department has also provided £1.2 million towards the European Marine Energy Centre in Orkney.

Additionally, the Carbon Trust has invested over £6 million in marine energy projects and the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council has a £2.6 million Supergen Marine Programme.

Wind Farms

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the development of offshore wind farms. [211116]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK has some of the best wind resources in the world. It is important that these resources are properly utilised to ensure that the United Kingdom's targets for generating electricity from renewable energy sources can be met. The development of offshore wind farms can potentially provide a major contribution to those targets and the Government is committed to ensuring that the right framework is in place to enable projects to proceed where an assessment of their impacts indicates they are acceptable.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Publications

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many copies of the booklet "What the Pre-Budget Report Means for Scotland" have been produced; and at what cost. [210652]

Mrs. McGuire: H.M. Treasury produced 750 copies of the leaflet on "What the Pre-Budget Report Means for Scotland" at a cost of £264, or 35 pence each. The total cost for all the twelve regions and countries was £3,172.

Electronic Devices

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many electronic devices are owned by the Department, broken down by type. [207686]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office does not maintain a central record of all the electronic devices in use. The information requested therefore could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his Department in the last three years. [207816]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs, on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W.

Newspapers/Periodicals

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) newspapers and (b) periodicals taken by his Department in each year since 1997; and how much the Department spent on each in each year. [207647]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999. Detailed records of newspapers and periodicals ordered by the Office each year are not held centrally: some publications may be cancelled and others added to the list.

Special Advisers

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many special advisers there are in the Department, broken down by Civil Service pay grade. [206505]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Minister for the Cabinet Office, on 21 December 2004, Official Report, column 1640W.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the contracts signed by his special advisers differ from the Model Contract for Special Advisers. [207233]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 January 2005, Official Report, column 753W.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Equal Pay

19. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women what assessment she has made of progress towards equal pay for equal work for women. [211132]

Ms Hewitt: The pay gap is at its lowest ever, 14.4 per cent. Its causes are complex; so we asked the Women and Work Commission to investigate.

We promote voluntary pay reviews to progress equal pay for equal work. 45 per cent. of organisations have undertaken or are to undertake reviews, including all Government Departments; the largest employer—the NHS; and companies like Lloyds-TSB.

Women in Politics

20. Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister for Women what steps she is taking to encourage women's representation in politics. [211133]

Ms Hewitt: In 2002 we introduced the Sex Discrimination (Election Candidates) Act allowing positive measures towards women's increased participation. I am proud to say that the Labour Party is taking every opportunity to increase the number of women standing for election for our party.

We now have 119 women MPs (94 of which are Labour). 29 per cent. of the Cabinet, 50 per cent. of AMs, and 40 per cent. of MSPs are women.

Maternity Allowance

21. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Minister for Women what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions regarding maternity allowance. [211134]

Jacqui Smith: I work closely with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions.

The Government's 10 year strategy for child care set out our intention to extend maternity allowance as well as statutory maternity pay and statutory adoption pay to 39 weeks from April 2007 and our goal of 12 months' paid maternity leave by the end of the next Parliament. We will be publishing a further paper on these and other proposals set out in the child care strategy shortly.

We will continue to work closely on this.

Equal Pay (Wirral, South)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister for Women if she will make a statement on relative rates of pay for women and men in Wirral, South. [211127]

Jacqui Smith: The median hourly wage for female workers residing in my hon. Friend's constituency is £8.80, 11 per cent. above the national female hourly wage.

The median hourly wage for male workers is £10.82, 2 per cent. above the national male hourly wage.

The gender pay gap for Wirral, South is 18.1 per cent. which is above the national 14.4 per cent.

Pension Equality

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Minister for Women what steps she is taking to promote pension equality for women. [211128]

Ms Hewitt: Two thirds of those benefiting from pension credit are women. For future pensioners, the state second pension extends second-tier pension rights for the first time to people with caring responsibilities and those on low earnings—the majority of whom are women.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Iraq

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the Foreign Secretary about the protection of Iraqi heritage in (a) Babylon and (b) Baghdad. [210112]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 24 January 2005]: I have had a number of discussions with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, concerning the protection of Babylon and of Iraq's archaeological heritage in general.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what reports she has received on damage done to historic sites in Iraq. [210870]

Tessa Jowell: I have studied the report written by John Curtis of the British Museum and have been in regular contact with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office concerning the protection of Iraq's archaeological heritage.

Millennium Dome

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much financial support was provided to the Millennium Dome by the National Lottery in each year from 1997–98. [211138]

Estelle Morris: Grants were made by the Millennium Commission to the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) as follows.

1997–98	449
1998–99	0
1999–2000	60
2000–01	119
2001–02	0
2002–03	0
2003–04	0
2004–05	[1]—

[1] -£24 million (unrequired funds decommitted from NMEC by Millennium Commission for use on other projects)

National Lottery

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the National Lottery board about their reasons for refusing grants to organisations engaged in (a) public safety and (b) search and rescue; and if she will make a statement. [211534]

Estelle Morris: I have had no such discussions. The distributing bodies for Lottery grants make their funding decisions independently of Government and consider each application on its own merits and against their published criteria. Rescue organisations are not precluded from receiving Lottery funding. 37 such organisations have received grants of nearly £1.8 million.

CABINET OFFICE

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the occasions between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004 when special advisers attended meetings with external representatives at which Ministers were not present. [210532]

Mr. Miliband: As my predecessors' answer of Wednesday 15 December 2004, Official Report, column 1148W, made clear, special advisers hold meetings with a wide range of external representatives in their official capacity. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers. The detailed information required is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will list the speeches his special advisers made in an official capacity between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004, broken down by date. [210554]

Mr. Miliband: I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided by my predecessor on Wednesday 15 December 2004, Official Report, column 1148W. Special advisers are aware of the requirements of the "Code of Conduct for Special Advisers". For the period 31 March 2003 to 31 March 2004, no special advisers working in the Cabinet Office made speeches in their official capacity.

DEFENCE

BAE Systems

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts were entered into with BAE Systems at RAF Marham in (a) 2003 and (b) 2004. [209516]

Mr. Ingram: No contracts were awarded to BAE Systems during 2003 and 2004 specifically for the support of the Tornado fleet at RAF Marham.

Citizenship Applications

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the Royal Navy sponsors applications from UK armed forces personnel from elsewhere in the Commonwealth who wish to apply for dual or full British citizenship. [208859]

Mr. Ingram: As a result of an internal Royal Navy nationality survey, commenced in 2002, it was established that for some serving Commonwealth personnel there was a job-related requirement for dual or full British citizenship. In the interest of the service and of their careers, a small number of Commonwealth personnel opted to apply for either dual or full British citizenship. For a limited period only, and on a case by case basis, the Royal Navy is sponsoring these applications through an agreed fast track scheme with the Home Office.

Defence Munitions Site

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the housing sold at the Defence Munitions Dean site were sold to the existing occupants; and how many tenants did not choose to buy. [209546]

Mr. Caplin: Of the 35 Dean Hill houses, 18 were vacant with the remaining 17 being tenanted. Ten accepted the opportunity to buy and seven tenants chose not to.

These properties will be transferred to Testway Housing Association subject to their existing tenancies, with a stipulation that the tenancies are protected and provide security of tenure.

Eurocorps

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the classification level is of reports from UK liaison officers to Eurocorps pertaining to the viability of UK co-operation with Eurocorps; and whether such reports will be accessible under Freedom of Information rules. [207094]

Mr. Hoon: The United Kingdom co-operates with Eurocorps as a NATO Graduated Readiness Force Headquarters which is offered to the Alliance by its sponsor nations (Belgium, France, Germany, Luxembourg and Spain). Headquarters Eurocorps is currently in Afghanistan, providing the headquarters for the International Stabilisation and Assistance Force. The United Kingdom had a liaison team, led by a Colonel, with HQ Eurocorps from 2000 until March 2004, when the post was withdrawn following a review of our commitments to NATO HQs. The reports from liaison officers before that date vary in classification. All recorded information held by MOD is subject to the Freedom of Information Act 2000. We would consider on a case by case basis any requests for such information to be disclosed under the Act.

Iraq

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the estimates of Iraqi casualties contained in contact reports compiled by UK armed forces serving in Iraq since 20 March 2003. [209235]

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will release civilian casualty estimates contained in British military contact reports from Iraq. [209316]

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish Iraq casualty estimates contained in British military contact reports filed since the invasion of Iraq in March 2003. [209456]

Mr. Ingram: Between 1 May 2003 and 26 November 2004, Significant Incident reports and Significant Action reports indicate that United Kingdom forces in Iraq encountered a number of Iraqi casualties. The figures drawn from those reports are not an accurate estimate of Iraqi casualties, either those caused by UK forces or those caused by insurgent activities, and should not be taken as such. They apply only to casualties which were witnessed or discovered by UK forces, and give no indication of casualties outside the UK's areas of operations in South East Iraq, although they also cover the Black Watch deployment to the North Babil area in November 2004. UK forces are not always present at all incidents which result in Iraqi civilian casualties, and following hostile contacts they are not always able to make an accurate count of Iraqi casualties, either because they have withdrawn from the area, or because such casualties have been removed.

These reports indicate that 200 Iraqis believed to have been enemy combatants have died, and 80 have been injured, in incidents where military force was deliberately applied by UK forces. Five Iraqis believed not to have been enemy combatants have died, and a further 13 have been injured, in incidents during the course of which military force was deliberately applied by UK forces. These figures do not necessarily indicate that UK forces caused the casualties, but merely that they recorded them during the course of incidents in which deliberate military force was applied.

Reports indicate that 17 Iraqis believed to have been enemy combatants have died, and 22 have been injured, during the course of other incidents, 144 Iraqis believed not to have been enemy combatants have died, and 192 have been injured, during the course of other incidents. This includes the full range of incidents in which UK forces have been involved, or to which UK forces have been called, but where no deliberate military force was applied. This includes improvised explosive device attacks by insurgent forces on civilian targets, road traffic accidents and in one case the discovery in May 2003 of a mass grave, thought to date back to 1991, containing 32 dead. Iraqi Security Force casualties are not included.

These figures do not include the warfighting phase of Operation TELIC, prior to 1 May 2003, for which incident reports were not routinely submitted whenever casualties were discovered.

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms the Government are using to assess their responsibility towards Iraqi civilians under the Geneva conventions in the absence of a reliable estimate of Iraqi casualties. [209459]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom takes seriously its responsibilities and obligations under Geneva Conventions which identify civilians as "protected persons". The Ministry of Defence has not previously published estimates of civilian casualties because there are no reliable means of producing such estimates. There is no specific requirement under the Geneva Conventions to produce estimates of civilian casualties.

We take great care to ensure that civilians are protected and that our obligations under the Geneva Conventions are met. All personnel serving in Iraq are fully briefed on the Law of Armed Conflict and appropriate measures are taken to avoid loss of civilian life or property. We always evaluate planned operations to ensure that they do not carry an unacceptable risk of causing unintended civilian casualties.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons statistics on the numbers of Armed Service Personnel injured in action in Iraq each month were not collected before August 2004. [211024]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 January 2005]: The Ministry of Defence statistics held centrally on personnel medically evacuated since the beginning of Operation Telic are not broken down into combat and non-combat injuries prior to August 2004. That information was only recorded by individual units, and it is not available in electronic format. The information that was collected centrally was clinical information, in the form of a database of all those medically evacuated, which does not provide a breakdown by cause.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many formed units of UK forces are deployed outside the boundaries of the multi-national division (SE) in Iraq. [210378]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 24 January 2005]: There are no formed units of the United Kingdom forces deployed in Iraq outside the boundaries of the multinational division (south east).

Wounded British Soldiers

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops have been (a) killed and (b) wounded in (i) Afghanistan and (ii) Iraq in the last 12 months. [210196]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 21 January 2005]: Over the last 12 months, in Afghanistan one British soldier has been killed and 35 have been medically evacuated from theatre for health reasons (including injuries resulting from hostile action as well as from accidents, other incidents and illnesses).

In Iraq, over the last 12 months, the equivalent figures are 20 killed and 794 medically evacuated.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Advocate-General what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by her Department in the last three years. [207821]

The Advocate-General: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Department for Constitutional Affairs, on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W.

HEALTH

Adverse Drug Reactions

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to make it mandatory that doctors and nurses (a) ask their patients about suspected adverse drug reactions and (b) report suspected adverse drug reactions to the Medicine and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency and the Committee on Safety of Medicines. [210115]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The yellow card scheme is the United Kingdom system for collecting and monitoring information on suspected adverse drug reactions (ADRs) and currently relies on voluntary reporting of suspected ADRs by health care professionals. The independent review of the yellow card scheme, published in May 2004 considered whether reporting of suspected ADRs by health care professionals should be made mandatory.

There is no evidence from countries where reporting of suspected adverse reactions is mandatory that rates of reporting are higher. The independent review made no recommendation about mandatory reporting, but recommended that steps should be taken to strengthen the scheme and to raise awareness among health professionals and the public. Proposals are being developed to take this forward.

Patients may now report suspected adverse drug reactions directly to the committee on safety of medicines and/or the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency. My noble Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health, the Lord Warner, announced on 17 January 2005 that two pilots (paper based and electronic reporting via www.yellowcard.gov.uk) to enable direct patient reporting have been launched.

It is good clinical practice that health care professionals discuss with patients the benefits and risks of medicines including the possibility of side effects. Patient information leaflets which accompany medicines encourage patients to discuss with their health care professional any side effects they have experienced while taking their medication.

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time was for ambulances in the East Kent Hospitals Trust area summoned to transfer patients to acute sites for (a) paediatric and (b) obstetric patients in the latest period for which figures are available; and how many obstetric patients in the area gave birth en route to an acute site in each quarter of (i) 2003 and (ii) 2004. [210370]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response times of ambulance crews in (a) Romford, (b) the London borough of Havering, (c) Greater London, (d) Essex and (e) England were in each of the last seven years. [210592]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally in the format requested. Data on response times for Essex and London Ambulance Services and for all ambulance services in England is shown in the table.

Data is only available from the date trusts introduced call prioritisation. Essex Ambulance Service introduced call prioritisation in 1997–98 and London Ambulance Service in 2000–01. All ambulance services in England had introduced call prioritisation by 2001–02.

Further information can be found in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2003–04". A copy is available in the Library and at www.publications.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0411.htm

Anti-psychotic Drugs

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescription items were dispensed in the community in England for (a) atypical, (b) traditional and (c) all anti-psychotic drugs in each (i) health authority and (ii) primary care trust in each year since 1999, broken down by age; and what the percentage change was (A) from year to year and (B) from 1999 to the last year for which figures are available. [208120]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the requested format.

Information on the number of prescription items for atypical, traditional and all anti-psychotic drugs dispensed in the community in each strategic health authority and primary care trust in England since 2001 has been placed in the Library. Data is not available for 1999 and 2000. The information has been broken down by age groups where possible and the year-on-year percentage changes recorded.

The information does not include prescriptions dispensed in hospitals or mental health trusts. Given that a large proportion of anti-psychotic medication is dispensed in hospitals and mental health trusts, this data should not be used to compare primary care trusts' prescribing practices.

Brazilian Beef

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received on concerns about the effects on health of imported beef from Brazil. [210363]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 24 January 2005]: No representations have been received by the Department or the Food Standards Agency about the human health implications of imported beef from Brazil.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients at (a) West Suffolk Hospital NHS Trust and (b) Addenbrookes hospital had their operations cancelled at the last minute in each of the last four years. [210694]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of cancelled operations for West Suffolk Hospitals National Health Service Trust and for Addenbrookes Hospital NHS Trust, now known as Cambridge University Hospital NHS Foundation Trust, are shown in the table.

Prior to 2001–02, the data was collected by health authority and is therefore not comparable.

Cancer Treatment (Children)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) tumour and (b) leukaemia cases in children were treated in the NHS in each of the last eight years. [210214]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the number of finished in-year admission episodes for children (0–17) is shown in the table.

[1] Finished in-year admissions:

A finished in-year admission is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider, excluding admissions beginning before 1 April at the start of the datayear. Please note that admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

Care Standards

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether an individual applying for approval under the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 is required to undergo separate Criminal Records Bureau checks in respect of applications to different offices of the Care Standards Commission. [206639]

Dr. Ladyman: Where people who have already obtained a satisfactory Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) disclosure move to a new position which involves contact with adult service users, they are required to obtain another CRB check. Similar provisions apply in relation to working with children. The Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) office which deals with relevant applications depends on the location of the service where the individual will work.

When an existing registered provider wants to open a similar service in another part of England, they will need to register this with the CSCI. This means that they will be subject to the registration regulations and as part of these requirements would require a new CRB check.

The way in which CRB applications are dealt with by the CSCI should be consistent across England.

Carers

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the saving to public funds made as a result of the work of private carers. [211312]

Dr. Ladyman: This Government recognise the valuable and vital role played by the estimated 6,000,000 carers in the United Kingdom. The Government have made no estimate of the savings to public funds resulting from the activities of people who provide care on a voluntary basis.

Criminal Record Bureau Checks

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what system is in place for the transfer of Criminal Record Bureau checks on NHS employees between NHS organisations. [209031]

Mr. Hutton: Guidance is in place for the transfer of employee Criminal Record Bureau checks between national health service organisations. Detailed implementation issues are the responsibility of the NHS Employers Organisation, from which further information can be sought. Details of the organisation and its responsibilities are available from its website at www.nhsemployer.uk.

Dentistry

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department expects to publish its review of patient dental charges. [204269]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are considering the report from Harry Cayton's Working Group and hope to publish it later this year as part of a consultation on the new charging system.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his reply of 9 December 2004, Official Report, column 752W, on dentistry, if he will make a statement on the reasons evinced by the British Dental Association for not attending the meetings of 8 and 12 December 2004; and what follow-up action the Department plans to take. [207770]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The British Dental Association (BDA) has stressed the need to ensure that dental practices and primary care trusts (PCTs) have sufficient time to prepare for implementation of the new contractual arrangements. They have welcomed our decision that full implementation of the reforms will now take place to a longer time scale, with the new arrangements to be introduced no later than April 2006. Our new timetable will allow more dentists to move to new ways of working through the personal dental services scheme, enable public consultation on key aspects of the new contract and allow more time for PCTs to prepare for their new roles. If the BDA wishes, we would be happy to resume discussions with it within this new time scale.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 16 December 2004, Official Report, column 1311W, on dentistry, how many dentists were on the register at 24 November 2004 including those who were not accepting any new patients for registration or occasional treatment. [208312]

Ms Winterton: On 24 November 2004, there were 19,840 dentists in the general and personal dental service. This is the number of dentists recorded by the Dental Practice Board as principal dentists in the general dental service on primary care trusts lists and their assistants and personal dental service dentists.

My reply to the hon. Member of 16 December referred to dental practices rather than individual dentists. The source was nhs.uk.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the total costs to his Department of consultancy and professional services in each year since 1997. [200606]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost to his Department was for the use of external consultants in each of the last two years. [200778]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Expenditure by the Department on external consultancy and professional services in each year since 1997 is shown in the following table.

£ million

Financial year	Expenditure
1996–97	14.699
1997–98	12.694
1998–99	7.332
1999–2000	8.132
2000–01	6.531
2001–02	6.800
2002–03	7.266

Departmental Policy (Portsmouth, North)

Syd Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to Portsmouth, North constituency, the effects of changes to departmental policy since 1997 on Portsmouth, North constituency. [207973]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government have put in place a programme of national health service investment and reform since 1997 to improve service delivery in all parts of the United Kingdom. There is significant evidence that these policies have yielded considerable benefits for the Portsmouth, North constituency.

For example:

At the end of November 2004, the number of people waiting more than nine months for inpatient treatment within Portsmouth City Primary Care Trust (PCT) has fallen to zero from 445 in June 2002.

At the end of September 2004, the number of patients waiting over 13 weeks for out-patient treatment within Portsmouth City PCT has fallen to 61 from 1,320 in June 2002.

In 2003, at the Portsmouth Hospitals NHS Trust, 86.2 per cent. of patients spent less than four hours in accident and emergency from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. Figures for September 2004 show an improvement to 96.8 per cent.

Between September 1997 and June 2004, the number of consultants at the Portsmouth Hospitals NHS Trust has increased from 140 to 261. The number of nurses increased from 1,517 in September 1997 to 2,116 in September 2003.

Figures for December 2004 show that 100 per cent. of patients within Portsmouth City PCT are able to be offered an appointment with a primary care professional within two working days.

In the Portsmouth unitary authority area, death rates from cancer per 100,000 population have fallen from 221.22 in 1997 to 188.43 in 2002.

In the Portsmouth unitary authority area, death rates from coronary heart disease per 100,000 population have fallen from 164.84 in 1997 to 124.89 in 2002.

Portsmouth City PCT allocation has risen to £179.8 million for 2004–05, a cash increase of 9.5 per cent.

Depression

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated for depression in each of the last five years. [210216]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information is not available in the requested format.

The Department provides hospital episode statistics (HES) data which relates to diagnostic information for in-patients in national health service hospitals. During their course of treatment over a period of time, patients may have a number of episodes of care which are counted each time they have a stay in hospital. Information relating to diagnosis where a patient is still under the care of a hospital consultant is not recorded.

Information on the number of finished consultant episodes for patients with a primary diagnosis of depression or recurrent depression in each of the last five years in NHS hospitals in England is shown in the table.

The data excludes people treated on an outpatient basis and patients who have received treatment solely in primary care.

Finished consultant episodes (FCEs) for patients with a primary diagnosis of depression (F32), or recurrent depression (F33) broken down by age in NHS hospitals in England

	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03[1]	2003–04[1]
Children (0 to 15)	260	210	240	250	280
Adolescents (16 to 18)	560	520	510	510	510
Adult	44,550	42,530	41,230	33,570	31,860
Not known	30	90	80	50	10
Total	45,400	43,360	42,060	34,380	32,650

[1] Figures are grossed for both coverage and missing/invalid clinical data, except for 2002–03 and 2003–04, which have not yet been adjusted for shortfalls in data.

Notes:

1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

2. A FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. The figures do not represent the number of patients as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

3. The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002–03) diagnosis fields in the HES dataset and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.

Diamorphine

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners are licensed to prescribe diamorphine; and how many there were in 1997. [209618]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All general practitioners can prescribe diamorphine for pain relief. The number of registered general practitioners in 1997 was 29,389, compared to the latest available figure, for June 2004, which was 33,626. However, only doctors who hold a special licence issued by the Home Secretary may prescribe diamorphine for the treatment of drug addiction. As such prescribing is recognised as a highly specialised area of practice. Only a very small number of general practitioners, who work in the specialist area of drug dependency, hold such a licence.

Digital Hearing Aids

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the overall costs of (a) supplying and (b) fitting digital hearing aids by (i) the NHS and (ii) independent providers. [210239]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) today.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many digital hearing aids have been commissioned to be supplied and fitted by independent providers for NHS patients in the last year for which figures are available; and what the cost was. [210241]

Dr. Ladyman: The modernising hearing aid services (MHAS) programme estimates that, by March 2006, approximately 74,000 digital hearing aids will have been supplied and fitted by independent providers for national health service patients since 2003.

The costs of the service are commercially confidential, but are available from the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency for any NHS trust which wishes to take advantage of this initiative.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which areas of England are not yet covered by the Digital Hearing Aid Roll Out programme; when the programme will be completed; and if he will make a statement. [210963]

Dr. Ladyman: All areas will be covered by the end of March 2005. From April 2005, the 164 national health service audiology departments providing hearing aid services across England will be fitting digital hearing aids.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds of supplying and fitting digital hearing aids in (a) the NHS and (b) the private sector; and if he will make a statement. [210964]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department collects unit cost and activity data from all National Health Service providers in England each financial year.

This information is available in the document, in "Payment by Results, Core Tools, 2004", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Data from financial year 2002–03, the most current available, shows that:

> A total of 57,687 digital hearing aids were provided by NHS and primary care trusts at an average unit cost of £140 per aid.
> Total expenditure for this level of activity therefore equates to approximately £8.1 million.

No NHS organisation reported data for sub-contracting or directly commissioning this activity from non-NHS providers.

Dudley, North

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out, with statistical evidence relating as closely as possible to the constituency, the effects of his Department's policy since 1997 on the Dudley, North constituency. [210743]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government have put in place a programme of National health service investment and reform since 1997 to improve service delivery in all parts of the United Kingdom. There is significant evidence that these policies have yielded considerable benefits for the Dudley constituency.

For example:

> At the end of June 2004, the number of people waiting more than nine months for inpatient treatment within the Dudley Beacon and Castle Primary Care Trust (PCT) has fallen to zero.
> At the end of June 2004, the number of patients waiting over 13 weeks for Out-patient treatment within Dudley Beacon and Castle has fallen to zero.
> In September 2002, at the Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Trust, 85.5 per cent. of patients spent less than four hours in accident and emergency from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. Figures for September 2004 show an improvement to 96.1 per cent.
> Between September 1997 and June 2004, the number of consultants at the Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Trust has increased from 84 to 105. Between September 1997 and September 2003, the number of nurses has increased from 1,087 to 1,112.
> Between September 2001 and June 2004, the number of general medical practitioners within Dudley Beacon and Castle PCT has increased from 59 to 60.

Elderly People

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged over (a) 90 and (b) 95 years are living in (i) residential and (ii) nursing homes. [211071]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 25 January 2005]: This information is not collected routinely. However, from the 2001 Census there were about 50,200 people aged 90 and over who were reported to be living in a residential home in England and 30,500 people reported living in a nursing home, including psychiatric homes.

Data is not available for the age group 95 and over.

Food Consumption

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average per capita consumption of (a) meat, (b) fish, (c) fruit, (d) vegetables and (e) confectionery has been in each year since 1990. [210844]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested on the average per capita consumption of meat, fish, fruit, vegetables and confectionery each year since 1990 is shown in the table. The data for 1990 to 2000 have been taken from the national food survey (NFS). The data for 2001–02 to 2002–03 have been taken from the expenditure and food survey (EFS), which replaced the NFS on 1 April 2001. These consumption data are based on household food purchases only and excludes foods eaten away from home.

GP Contract

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for (a) negotiating and (b) concluding the general practitioner contract, including the time when a draft contract was made available to the general practitioner representatives. [209039]

Mr. Hutton: Negotiations on a new general medical services (GMS) contract began in October 2001 and concluded in February 2003 with the agreement of the profession to proceed with implementation. Phased implementation began from April 2003 and the standard GMS contract, that was to be entered into by primary care trusts and GMS providers from 1 April 2004, was first shared with lawyers of general practitioner representatives in October 2003.

GPs and Dentists

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) NHS dentists and (b) general practitioners were practising in the West Suffolk parliamentary constituency at 31 December (i) 2004 and (ii) 1997; and if he will make a statement. [210695]

Dr. Ladyman: The data for national health service dentists and general practitioners practicing in Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire strategic health authority area and within Suffolk West primary care trust (PCT) area are shown in the two tables.

The data shown is for the number of GPs as at 30 June 2004, which is the latest data available, the December census has not yet been published. The data for GPs within the Suffolk West PCT area is from 2001 as this is the earliest data available.

GP data as at 1 October 1997, 30 September 2001 and 30 June 2004.

[2] The figures are based on the numbers of dentists with open general dental services (CDS) and personal dental services contracts. The dentists include principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have not been included in this analysis. The areas have been defined using practice postcodes within the PCT. The figures provide a snapshot of the number of individual dentists with an open contract at 31 December. A dentist with a GDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses. The Dental Practice Board has no information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual dentists. The figures provide an accurate figure taking into account any notifications received up to 22 January 2005. The Dental data as at 31 December each year.

Infection Control Training

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will establish infection control training as a mandatory core competency in undergraduate training for (a) nurses and (b) doctors. [208081]

Mr. Hutton: Curriculum content for undergraduate education and training for health care professionals is determined by higher education institutions (HEIs) in the light of recommendations of the relevant regulatory bodies. However, we share a commitment with those regulatory bodies that all health professionals are trained so that they have the skills and knowledge to deliver a high quality health service to all groups of the population with whom they deal, including infection control. HEIs are autonomous bodies and Ministers are precluded by legislation from intervening in their internal affairs, including curriculum content.

Healthcare Commission

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason delays have occurred in appointing case managers to review health service complaints referred to the Healthcare Commission; how many such cases are outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [199936]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 29 November 2004]: The Healthcare Commission took on its role in handling the independent review stage of the national health service complaints process at the end of July 2004. I understand from the chairman of the commission that since then it has received significantly more requests for independent review than planned for. The commission is therefore increasing its capacity to deal with the increased level of referrals. I understand that there are currently some 2,600 cases outstanding.

Hepatitis C

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding primary care trusts plan to devote to prison populations for the treatment of hepatitis C. [210248]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This information is not held centrally.

Hospital Infections

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recommendations (a) his Department and (b) the National Patient Safety Agency has made to the NHS on hand infection control against the spread of norovirus. [209002]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Maintaining a high standard of hand hygiene is one of the key points in the guidelines produced on the "Management of hospital outbreaks of gastroenteritis" by the Public Health Laboratory Service, which is now part of the Health Protection Agency. These guidelines were published in the "Journal of Hospital Infection" in 2000. In February 2003, following high levels of norovirus activity, the Department reminded medical directors of national health service trusts about the guidelines.

The "cleanyourhands" campaign, developed by the National Patient Safety Agency, will help improve hand hygiene and hence will contribute to reducing the spread of gastroenteritis infections.

IT (Disciplinary Procedures)

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff in his Department have (a) received official warnings and (b) faced disciplinary procedures following breaches of IT policy in each year since 1997. [205809]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following table provides information held by the Department's security unit from 1998–2004, which sets out the number of cases where disciplinary action was taken due to computer misuse within the whole of the Department. Information on official warnings is not available.

	Disciplinary action
1998	22
1999	22
2000	26
2001	4
2002	11
2003	9
2004	23
Total	117

The Department takes very seriously any misuse of its information technology (IT) systems. All staff are regularly reminded of the Department's misuse of IT with detailed guidance contained in the document "Acceptable Use of Information Technology" available on the Department's intranet.

Maternity Care

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many midwife-led maternity units have closed since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [210658]

(2) how many maternity units have (a) opened and (b) closed since 1997. [210663]

Dr. Ladyman: Decisions about patterns of service delivery are a matter for individual health authorities and trusts to determine locally, taking into account local population needs, priorities and resources. We do not therefore collect information on this centrally.

However, the Government, in the maternity standard of the national service framework (NSF) for children, young people and maternity, published in September 2004, has set out its 10-year vision for maternity services. The standard advocates that national health service maternity care providers and primary care trusts, which will be at the centre of service delivery, should plan and provide maternity services based upon an up-to-date assessment of the needs of the local population and by involving service user groups.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many registered midwives there were in each year since 1996 by (a) headcount and (b) whole-time equivalent. [209547]

Mr. Hutton: The Nursing and Midwifery Council holds information on the number of registered midwives. This information can be found at www.nmc-uk.org.

Mental Health

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of winding up the Mind Out for Mental Health campaign; and what plans he has for establishing a follow-up campaign. [209800]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No costs were incurred were in winding up the Mind Out for Mental Health campaign.

The National Institute for Mental Health in England (NIMHE) launched a new five-year initiative on 11 October 2004 called "Shift" designed to tackle the stigma and discrimination surrounding mental health issues. This new initiative is building on the work carried out under the Mind Out for Mental Health banner. In addition, NIMHE has commissioned a scoping review of what works in anti stigma and discrimination and is moving forward on the basis of a five-year strategic plan launched last June called "From Here To Equality".

MRSA

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 105W, on MRSA, how many of the babies who contracted MRSA in 2002 died from their infections. [209250]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The voluntary reporting scheme, used by the Health Protection Agency to provide the data previously given, is based on aggregated data and cannot be used to investigate the outcome.

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress towards developing a vaccine against methicillin resistant staphyloccus aureus; and what steps his Department is taking to support this work. [209929]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Reducing the risk of "Staphylococcus aureus" infection in those undergoing surgery would be of great benefit and an important step in preventing methicillin resistant "Staphyloccus aureus" infections. The Department is currently part-funding work through the national vaccine evaluation consortium on the use of a vaccine against "Staphylococcus aureus" prior to elective surgery.

NHS Bank

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) the NHS bank has lent to each NHS organisation and (b) has been repaid in each year since the bank's inception. [209036]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS bank provides special assistance to support the most financially challenged strategic health authorities (SHAs). The amounts are shown in the table.

The amount allocated in 2002–03 is not repayable. The allocations in 2003–04 and 2004–05 are repayable, subject to abatements, as either capital or revenue beginning 2006–07. However, Kent and Medway SHA plans to make a repayment of £7.7 million from its capital allocations in this financial year.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the budget of the NHS bank is for (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; what loans were made by the bank in 2004–05; and what loans are expected to be made in 2005–06. [210358]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The overall budget managed by the NHS bank on behalf of the Department in 2004–05 is £732 million. The budget for 2005–06 has not yet been agreed. The special assistance allocations in 2004–05 are shown in the table. Health Services (Nottingham, North)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have been made available in local health services in Nottingham North constituency since June 1997. [211017]

Dr. Ladyman: The following changes have been made available in local health services in Nottingham North constituency since June 1997.

Trent Strategic Health Authority (SHA)—Trent Access and Choice Pilot (TRAC):

Trent SHA is a pilot site for introducing choice ahead of national time scales.

TRAC is working with three general practitioner practices, including one in Nottingham. From July 2003, the pilots have been offering a choice to patients on the waiting list for cataract operations. Initially this is a choice of national health service trusts and agreements are being reached with local trusts to provide extra clinics on a trial basis for TRAC.

The cost of TRAC is as follows: £10.8 million in 2004–04 and £1.8 million in 2004–05. This covers all 19 primary care trusts (PCTs) in the Trent SHA area. Nottingham PCTs received £1,890,234 in 2003–04 and £541,000 in 2004–05.

Queens Medical Centre, Nottingham University Hospital NHS Trust:

Modernise and refurbishment of hospital laundry—opened in 2002 (£1 million).

Two cardiac catheter labs—one temporary—opened in 2002 and 2003 at a combined cost of £1.5 million.

Extension to the dialysis unit opened 2003 (£900,000).

Upgrade and expansion of the hospital kitchen opened in 2003 (just under £1 million).

New clinical haematology wards opened in 2003 (£1.8 million). New clinical haematology unit to replace and combine existing adult services located across two hospitals. Due to open January 2006 (£9.2 million).

Three linear accelerator machines (£850,000 each). Two were funded by the new opportunities fund money and the third by central funds. Two machines were replacements for existing facilities and one was an additional machine.

New coronary heart disease unit to replace existing facilities due to open July 2005 (£20.8 million).

New urology unit to replace existing facilities due to open July 2005 (£8.2 million).

Nottinghamshire Healthcare Trust:

Demolition of Strelley Ward due to start at the beginning of February, and new build over the next few years will see the provision of new mental health services. This is a £20 million project due for completion in early 2009.

Broxtowe and Hucknall PCT:

Choice at the point of referral has been offered to patients for ophthalmology and orthopaedics since autumn 2004. Choice will be rolled out to other specialities over the course of 2005 in line with national targets.

In the autumn of 2004, a new community based echo service was launched (joint effort by four Greater Nottingham PCTs—Broxtowe and Hucknall PCT, Gedling PCT, Nottingham City PCT and Rushcliffe PCT).

June 2004, a pilot service began for patients who presented at hospital with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease—admissions are being prevented as early nurse assessments are leading to discharge and receipt of a community based pulmonary rehabilitation service.

Walk in Centre:

Nottingham walk-in centre opened in June 2000. (£1.2 million annual budget—includes all staffing, service provision costs, and patient care).

Dental Access Centre (DAC):

A DAC was opened in Nottingham City PCT in 2001. (This cost comes under the walk-in centre figure above).

Personal dental services (PDS)—field sites:

Independent Sector Treatment Centre:

Based at Barlborough (junction 30 of the M1). An interim service is being provided from Bassetlaw and Ilkeston Hospital, which commenced in April 2004. The full service from the new facility is due to commence in May 2005. (£90 million over a five year contract period).

Pharmacy Information:

Since 1997–98, five pharmacies have opened in the Nottingham area (local information at this level is not available centrally).

Nurses (Neonatal Intensive Care)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many experienced nurses there were in the neonatal intensive care units in East Kent Hospitals Trust (a) on the latest date for which figures are available and (b) 12 months prior to that date. [210367]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally. It is for local hospitals and health economies to decide how to deploy staff in ways that will best meet the needs of the population.

Nut Allergy

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice is given to primary care trusts on dealing with prevention and treatment of nut allergy; [210511]

(2) whether his Department is financing research into nut allergy. [210512]

Dr. Ladyman: The Medical Research Council is not currently funding any research specifically on nut allergy, although they are undertaking some more general research on allergy, which may be of some relevance.

Determining and meeting local health care needs is the responsibility of primary care trusts. However, we are committed to ensuring the national health service develops allergy services that offer high quality and personalised care to patients and will be drawing to their attention the Health Select Committee's report on the provision of allergy services and the Government's response.

Paediatric Nursing Staff (East Kent)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the ratio of trained paediatric nursing staff to patients is in hospitals in the East Kent Hospitals Trust (a) during the day and (b) during the night. [210371]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department collects information on the number of qualified paediatric nurses by individual trusts. The latest figures available for the number of qualified paediatric nurses at the East Kent Hospitals National Health Service Trust is shown in the table. It is not possible to determine the ratio of trained paediatric nursing staff to patients as the Department does not collect statistics on the number of patients seen.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on behalf of how many patients legal action has been taken against (a) individuals and (b) institutions under the remit of his Department in (i) Romford, (ii) the London borough of Havering, (iii) Greater London, (iv) Essex and (v) England in each of the last seven years; [210594]

(2) how many patients have suffered from medical negligence by NHS staff in (a) Romford, (b) the London borough of Havering, (c) Greater London, (d) Essex and (e) England in each of the last seven years. [210596]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The National Health Service Litigation Authority (NHSLA) records the number of clinical negligence claims made against NHS institutions and bodies, which are vicariously liable for the negligent acts and omissions of their employees.

Table 1 shows the number of clinical negligence claims made in each year, from 1997–98 to 2003–04, in Romford, Havering, London, Essex and England.

Table 2 shows the number of clinical negligence claims in which damages were awarded for the same years and areas.

Notes:

1. Information is not held on claims made against individuals outside of the NHSLA arrangements. For example, where individuals, such as general practitioners, are covered by private indemnity arrangements.
2. The NHSLA does not record whether non-clinical negligence claims are made by patients. Information can only be provided on the basis of claims by patients for clinical negligence.
3. Figures for Romford are for claims attributed to Harold Wood hospital and Old Church hospital. Figures for Havering are for claims attributed to Harold Wood Hospital, Old Church hospital and Havering primary care trust. Figures for Essex cover bodies and institutions under Essex Strategic Health Authority (SHA). Figures for London cover bodies and institutions under the five London SHAs. Figures for England cover all bodies and institutions in England.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the limits for exemption from prescription charges under the NHS low income scheme based on capital assets were last reviewed. [208124]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The capital assets limits for exemption from prescription charges and other health costs under the national health service low income scheme are based on the Department of Work and Pensions income support arrangements for people of all ages, except that limit which applies to people who live permanently in a care home. This limit is based on local authority care home charging arrangements.

The income support capital limits are kept under continual review. The capital limit amounts for those people under 60 have been unchanged since April 1988 and for those for people over aged 60 since April 2001.

The capital limit for people living permanently in a care home is reviewed annually and last changed in April 2004.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many prescription items were dispensed and paid for by the patient on a per item basis in England in 2003–04; [208125]

(2) how many prescription items were dispensed in England in 2003–04; [208127]

(3) what (a) the average cost per prescription item and (b) the dispensing fee in the NHS in England was in 2003–04. [208129]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the financial year 2003–04, 659.4 million prescription items were dispensed in the community in England. Of these, 58.5 million, were for patients who paid a charge at the point of dispensing.

The average net ingredient cost per prescription item in 2003–04 was £11.62. The dispensing fee is 96.4 pence.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total income from prescription charge pre-payment certificates in England was in 2003–04. [208126]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2003–04 the total income from prescription charge pre-payment certificates in England was £62.4 million.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of requiring patients to pay a single prescription charge when their medical condition requires two or more medicines or treatments; and if he will estimate the cost in terms of (a) revenue foregone and (b) administrative costs incurred. [208128]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is not possible to estimate the cost of requiring patients to pay a single prescription charge when their medical condition requires two or more medicines or treatments, as information about the relevant medical conditions is not available.

It is possible to estimate the cost if patients were to only pay one prescription charge per prescription form (regardless of how many items are on the form). In 2003–04, it is estimated that the potential prescription charge income, if only one prescription charge per prescription form was incurred, would be around £290 million. This would mean a loss in prescription charge revenue of around £76 million, based on the current practice of a prescription charge being incurred for each prescription item on a form.

It is not possible to estimate the administrative costs incurred, because the necessary information is not separately identified.

School Nurses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his Answer of 4 December 2004, Official Report, column 1080W, to the hon. Member for East Worthing and Shoreham (Tim Loughton) on school nurses, what information he collects on the recruitment and retention of school nurses; and whether he plans to set a baseline for numbers of school nurses. [209799]

Mr. Hutton: The Government collected information on the school nursing workforce in the September 2003 non-medical workforce census but this information was incomplete. Information on the number of school nurses employed in the national health service will be available from the September 2004 non-medical workforce census, expected to be published in March 2005.

We are providing new funding so that by 2010 every primary care trust (PCT) will be resourced to have at least one, full-time, year round, qualified school nurse working with each cluster or group of primary schools and the related secondary school, taking account of health needs and school populations. School nurses and their teams will be part of the wider health improvement workforce. Roll-out will start from 2006–07 in the 20 per cent., of PCTs with the worst health and deprivation indicators.

Secure Psychiatric Beds

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many secure psychiatric beds have been available in each of the last eight years. [210218]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the average daily number of available beds and their occupancy levels in secure mental illness wards in England in each of the last eight years is shown in the following table.

Average daily number of available and occupied beds, open overnight in secure mental illness wards in England

	Available beds	Occupied beds	Percentage of occupancy
1996–97	1,575	1,414	89.8
1997–98	1,921	1,566	81.5
1998–99	1,747	1,578	90.3
1999–2000	1,882	1,750	92.9
2001–02	1,848	1,699	92.0
2002–03	2,064	1,867	90.5
2003–04	2,557	2,368	92.6

Smoking Ban

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the percentage of pubs in the (a) Northern region and (b) Tees Valley area which serve food which will cease to do so when the smoking ban is implemented. [201503]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In the White Paper we estimated that 10 to 30 per cent. of pubs in England might fall into the category of "do not prepare food". A regional breakdown of this figure has not been made. We believe that with food providing an increasing proportion of most pubs' turnovers, it is reasonable for the Government to proceed on the assumption that it makes good business sense for pub owners to continue to serve food. We will consult widely on this area in drawing up the detailed legislation.

Specialised Burns Unit

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has for the (a) budget, (b) location and (c) planned commencement of activities of the specialised burns services unit in the south west region; [209197]

(2) when the final decisions on a specialised burns services unit in the south west will be taken; [209198]

(3) what criteria his Department is using to determine the location of a specialist burns services unit in the south west; [209199]

(4) what plans he has for the reconfiguration of specialist burns services. [209200]

Mr. Hutton: The national burn care group, which is considering options for reconfiguration of specialist burns services across England and Wales, is being led by the national health service. Decisions have not yet been made regarding the development of burn care centres; any proposals for change will be submitted to a full public consultation process, probably in the summer of 2005.

Stourcare Call Centre (Paediatric Training)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the staff at the Stourcare Call Centre have paediatric training, broken down by (a) staff grade and (b) register grade. [210369]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 21 December 2004, Official Report, column 1688W, on strategic health authorities, if he will publish the most recent in-year financial forecasts of all (a) strategic health authorities, (b) primary care trusts and (c) national health service trusts in England where this information is available locally. [208797]

Mr. Hutton: The Department does not routinely collect information, which may form part of local reporting arrangements by individual organisations. In providing answers to parliamentary correspondence about specific organisations the Department may request the managing strategic health authority to provide this information where relevant.

Temporary Medical Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 16 December 2004, Official Report, column 1329W, on temporary medical staff, what the figures are for each NHS trust for the equivalent period. [209090]

Mr. Hutton: Information relating to the total cost of temporary nurses, doctors and all staff in each national health service trust in England in each year since 1997 has been placed in the Library.

Waiting Times

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to monitor waiting times for follow-up appointments for patients following completion of their in-patient procedure; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of the maximum 18-week waiting target, as described in the NHS Improvement Plan, column 6268, paragraph 2.11, on waiting-times for follow-up appointments; [209634]

(2) what mechanisms he plans to use to monitor progress towards meeting the 18-week maximum waiting target by 2008, as described in the NHS Improvement Plan, column 6268, paragraph 2.11; [209635]

(3) what elements of the patient journey are monitored for the purposes of assessing waiting times; what plans he has to measure waiting times for diagnostic tests; and what plans he has to introduce monitoring for all other elements of the patient journey. [209636]

Mr. Hutton: The Department currently monitors waiting times from general practitioner referral to first out-patient appointment and from consultant referral to in-patient or day case treatment. However, by the end of 2008, waiting times will be measured from GP referral to start of treatment. This will include any necessary diagnostic tests or procedures.

Progress towards meeting the 18-week target from GP referral to start of treatment will be monitored against local delivery plans. Strategic health authorities and primary care trusts are currently developing their plans and these will be agreed with the Department in the spring.

There are no plans nationally to monitor waiting times for follow-up appointments after in-patient treatment. Trusts are expected to continue to offer follow up appointments as clinically appropriate.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 31 January 2005

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Solicitor-General what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by her Department in the last three years. [207812]

The Solicitor-General: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W by the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list the occasions between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004 when special advisers attended meetings with external representatives at which Ministers were not present. [210546]

Mr. Hain: Special advisers hold meetings with a wide range of external representatives in their official capacity. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the "Code of Conduct for Special Advisers".

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Leader of the House if he will list the speeches his special advisers made in an official capacity between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004, broken down by date. [210552]

Mr. Hain: None.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Burundi

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State, Department for International Development, what assessment his Department has made of the (a) humanitarian and (b) security situation of Banyamulenge refugees in Burundi; and if he will make a statement. [211395]

Hilary Benn: DFID and other members of the international community are paying close attention to the situation of the Banyamulenge refugees in Burundi.

Through its spokesman, the Burundian army has stated publicly that recent threats against the Banyamulenge should be taken seriously and that it is taking additional measures to protect the Banyamulenge refugees living in Burundi. The UK, United Nations and international partners continue to remind the Burundi authorities of their responsibilities in this area.

There are around 3,000 refugees in official sites in Mwaro and Muyinga provinces. The UN Mission in Burundi (ONUB) has increased its patrols in the area where Banyamulenge are known to be living and will monitor protection arrangements efforts promised by the Burundi authorities. The United Nations Mission in Burundi (ONUB) Force Commander is in close contact with the commander of the Burundian First Military Region. The United Nations High Commission for Refugees is closely monitoring the situation in those camps and humanitarian assistance is being provided.

In addition, another 80 Banyamulenge families are living in a former transit site at Ngagara in Bujumbura town, living and working among the local community. Their security is the responsibility of the Burundi Government, but ONUB is also monitoring the situation closely.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the current drought in Kirundo Province in Burundi on the (a) economic and (b) humanitarian situation in (i) Busoni, (ii) Bugabira, (iii) Ntega, (iv) Kirundo and (v) Burundi as a whole; and if he will make a statement. [211396]

Hilary Benn: Cyclical periods of drought and cassava pest (manioc mosaic) are having an adverse impact on the availability of food and on households' capacity to produce food in the northern provinces of Burundi. The World Food Programme (WFP) has said it will assist 520,000 people in the provinces of Kirundo and Muyinga for the next two months. This month it delivered 1,485 metric tonnes of food aid to 176,000 people in the communes of Busoni, Bugabira and Kirundo.

Distribution of food aid and emergency agricultural inputs (seeds and tools) have been increased since July 2004, but these have had a limited impact because of poor rains, extremely low productivity of the land, reduced arable land by household and the poor health status of the population. The negative impact of these combined factors on food security and nutrition show the widespread and extreme fragility of an average Burundian household.

DFID has contributed £750,000 to the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) through the UN Consolidated Appeal for emergency agriculture activities in an effort to improve the food security situation. The WFP has said it has enough funding for food aid for the next five months. We are concentrating our efforts on food security through the FAO and looking at other support in an effort to prevent a recurrence of the present situation.

Civil Society Challenge Fund

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the amounts paid over the last two years from the Civil Society Fund, broken down by (a) the recipient, (b) the country they are operating in and (c) the purpose of the grant. [211100]

Hilary Benn: For fiscal years 2002–03 and 2003–04, the Civil Society Challenge Fund (CSCF) funded 202 projects. Those projects were implemented and administered by 98 different United Kingdom Civil Society Organisations (CSOs).

I have arranged for the document entitled "Projects funded under DFID's Civil Society Challenge Fund—2002–03 and 2003–04" to be deposited in the Libraries of the House, which shows each of the individual projects together with the CSOs, the country in which they worked, the name of each project and the amounts spent by them on each project for the fiscal years 2002–03 and 2003–04.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make it his policy to give direct grants to Iraqi non-governmental organisations that operate in accordance with his Department's humanitarian objectives; and if he will make a statement. [211316]

Hilary Benn: The last 18 months has seen the formation of many new Iraqi Civil Society Organisations (CSOs) seeking to address and articulate the rights of ordinary Iraqis. CSOs include such bodies as non-governmental organisations, professional unions and associations, faith-based organisations, government and legislative bodies. With little history of independent civil society in Iraq, many of these CSOs lack capacity. DFID's Civil Society Fund (CSF), a two-year programme with a budget of £5 million, seeks to strengthen the capacity of Iraqi CSOs better to address the needs of poor, vulnerable and socially excluded groups, especially women and young people. Much of the fund is aimed at building links between Iraqi and international CSOs. However, direct funding for Iraqi CSOs is also available.

Mr. Alan Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 25W, on Iraq, if he will list the multilateral organisations to which the UK Government has contributed since April 2003; in what month each contribution was made; and how much was contributed to each organisation. [211830]

Hilary Benn: Since April 2003, monthly DFID expenditure to multilateral organisations for Iraq has been:

	United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM)	500,000

Total since April 2003: £156,275,224.

In May 2003, DFID also contributed £16,000,000 to the Red Cross/Red Crescent movement for its work in Iraq.

Political Participation Fund

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the amounts paid over the last two years from the Political Participation Fund, indicating the recipient, the country they are operating in and the purpose of the grant in each case. [211101]

Hilary Benn: DFID's Political Participation Fund (PPF) for Iraq aims to maximise citizen participation and representation in the political process, particularly the poor and vulnerable. Following the signing of the contract with the project managers, the British Council, in August 2004, the PPF has so far committed £1.24 million to 29 projects.

The PPF provides funds to a wide range of Iraqi partners for political awareness and voter education programmes. Activities include journalist training, radio programmes, the production of posters and brochures, workshops, symposiums, seminars and research. I regret that I am unable to provide a list of the organisations receiving funding from the PPF, as known links between Iraqi organisations and DFID or the UK Government could inhibit their work or threaten their security.

Rapid Assessment Analysis Action Planning

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how his Department plans to be involved in the implementation of the existing national plans of action resulting from the UNICEF-led Rapid Assessment Analysis Action Planning process. [211152]

Hilary Benn: At the Global Partners Forum on orphans and vulnerable children in Washington DC in December 2004, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State announced how DFID would be meeting its spending target of at least £150 million on orphans and vulnerable children over the next three years. This included £38 million to be delivered through UNICEF for work in Africa.

DFID plans to work very closely with UNICEF to support elements of the Rapid Assessment Analysis Action Planning Process (RAAAP) plans in some of the countries in Africa which are most affected by AIDS—this includes six Southern African countries: Angola, Botswana, Swaziland, Namibia, Lesotho and South Africa under a regional programme estimated at £18 million over three years, and in a separate programme of support in Zimbabwe.

The support DFID provides will be based upon the UNICEF Framework for the protection, care and support of orphans and vulnerable children living in a world with HIV/AIDS, which aims to: strengthen families' ability to cope, through such things as financial credits, child care and developing skills; start and support community-based responses, largely through involving local leaders; ensure that vulnerable children have access to essential services, such as education and health care; ensure that governments protect the children that are the most vulnerable; and, finally, raise awareness to create an environment that understands and supports those children.

DFID is also planning to work with UNICEF and provide assistance to strengthen the capacity and competence of UNICEF's Eastern and Southern Africa Regional Office (ESARO). This is in order that RAAAP plans can be built into wider planning and implementation processes and interventions are based on firm evidence about their effectiveness. We are also developing a programme of support to UNICEF in New York so that they can provide global oversight and develop country commitment and the means to monitor and track the international response to meeting the needs of vulnerable children.

We are working though our bilateral programmes in DFID's target countries in Africa, with Government, and civil society organisations to address the needs of vulnerable children. Where countries have their own Poverty Reduction Strategies, DFID is pressing for "children and AIDS" issues to be included in budget planning, allocation and expenditure. This is being done in close consultation with UNICEF.

Rwanda

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether it is his Department's policy to continue adherence to the Memorandum of Understanding signed with Rwanda with the intention of providing long-term stable funding to support Rwanda's development and recovery from genocide. [213100]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government are Rwanda's major bilateral development partner. Our relationship with the Government of Rwanda is based on the UK/Rwanda Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) which provides a basis for dialogue and assessment of progress.

The MoU describes the Government of Rwanda's commitments to the Rwandan people on poverty reduction, promoting regional stability, creating a democratic and inclusive state, and progressively securing human rights, and confirms that the UK's support depends on continuing, specific progress in these areas.

The MoU also describes the UK's commitments to the Government of Rwanda, in particular their commitment to reducing poverty in Rwanda through predictable, flexible support over the long-term and to continue to develop the UK's engagement in a transparent and inclusive manner. UK development assistance allocated to Rwanda is £42 million in 2004–05, rising to £46 million in 2005–06.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development with which non-governmental organisation his Department is working to provide relief and reconstruction to tsunami victims in Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement. [211300]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development's humanitarian response to the tsunami disaster in Sri Lanka has been channelled through United Nations agencies, the Red Cross movement, and non-governmental organisations and in direct in-kind interventions aimed at addressing immediate needs. DFID is providing financial support to five NGOs: Save the Children Fund UK, HelpAge International, World Vision UK, Basic Needs and ZOA Refugee Care. We are also considering proposals from 12 other NGOs regarding transitional shelter, water and sanitation and livelihoods support. The assistance that DFID has provided, and is supporting, is geographically spread throughout the country. This includes substantial support to Tamil communities in proportion to needs across the country.

DFID's focus for longer-term reconstruction in Sri Lanka is likely to be on providing support to the rebuilding of livelihoods and services for poor people in affected regions. The Sri Lankan Government are putting together a needs assessment with the support of the World Bank and others and DFID will consider how we can best channel our support when we receive the completed assessments.

Tsunami Relief

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State, Department for International Development what representations he has received about the cost of transporting food to the Asian disaster zone; and delays in its despatch. [210505]

Hilary Benn: I have received no representations on the cost of transporting food to the Asian disaster zone, nor have I heard reports to suggest wide-scale problems relating to food availability in the region, but DFID continues to monitor the situation closely to ensure appropriate coverage in meeting clearly identified needs. DFID is maintaining close contact with the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP) on these issues. Non-governmental organisations have commented that the WFP has done a very good job at short notice in distributing food but are concerned about medium-term implications of distributing large quantities of food. DFID will remain in contact with the WFP on discussions about potential longer-term food aid requirements to ensure these are both appropriate and cost effective.

DFID has provided £3.5 million to the WFP's Emergency and Special Operations for food distributions in Sri Lanka and Indonesia and in support of their regional logistics role. In addition, DFID has provided £600,000 to the Food and Agriculture Organisation and our support to Christian Aid, Help Age International, Save the Children Fund and World Vision each contain food assistance as part of their relief programmes.

Ugandan Refugees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will estimate the number of (a) internally displaced people in Uganda and (b) refugees from Uganda in neighbouring countries; what assessment his Department has made of the (i) amount and (ii) nature of the humanitarian assistance dedicated to these individuals; how these humanitarian efforts have changed since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [210715]

Hilary Benn: The number of displaced people in Uganda in 1997 was approximately 400,000. Currently, there are 1.6 million internally displaced people. The number of Ugandans living as refugees in neighbouring countries in 1997 was 296,700. Up-to-date figures are not currently available, but are known to be far less. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner in Geneva is working on its detailed 2004 Statistical Report, which should be made available publicly later this year.

It is not possible to provide accurate figures for overall humanitarian assistance to displaced people in Uganda in 1997. In 2004 humanitarian assistance for displaced people in Uganda was approximately £81 million, aimed principally at meeting basic needs. Information is not held about the proportion or nature of humanitarian assistance provided to Ugandans living as refugees in neighbouring countries, as the provision of this assistance is not determined by ethnicity.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what his strategy is for assisting the Zimbabwean veterans who served in the Second World War for pre-Zimbabwe organisations and their widows; and if he will make a statement; [210983]

(2) what recent meetings he has held with (a) ZANE and (b) others concerning service veterans, and their widows, living in Zimbabwe. [210984]

Mr. Mullin: I have been asked to reply.

Our Consul in Harare provides advice and assistance to British citizens in Zimbabwe including veterans and their widows. He recently met representatives of Zimbabwe A National Emergency (ZANE) to discuss the situation facing veterans in Zimbabwe. We sympathise with the suffering of veterans and widows who are Zimbabwean citizens. But it is incumbent on the Government of Zimbabwe to provide for their welfare. We continue to press the Government of Zimbabwe to provide for the welfare of its citizens.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Mid-term Review

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will make an announcement on the conclusions of the mid-term review with reference to (a) permanent pasture, (b) the 10-month rule, (c) entry and higher level agri-environment schemes and (d) three metre margins. [211077]

Alun Michael: All the main policy decisions on the single payment scheme have now been announced. In support of this, six scheme brochures containing details about the scheme have been published. Furthermore, a detailed explanatory booklet of all the relevant scheme rules is currently being prepared and will be discussed with stakeholders during its development.

Following Commission approval of proposals on a new Environmental Stewardship Scheme, officials are currently preparing a statutory instrument to lay before the House. The intention is to distribute an information leaflet to all farmers with holdings of over 10 hectares during February with a view to launching the scheme in March.

Agriculture and Fisheries Council

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the outcome was of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council on 24 January; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [211477]

Margaret Beckett: I represented the United Kingdom at a meeting of the Agriculture and Fisheries Council in Brussels on 24 January 2005.

It being the first Council of their Presidency, Luxembourg presented their work programme for the next six months. Among their top priorities would be to reach agreement on the new Rural Development Regulation and to progress work on reform of the sugar regime. They also hoped to take forward work on rice, wine, tobacco, bananas, potato starch, organic farming, risk management for agriculture, international forestry and timber imports, avian influenza, aquatic animal diseases, chicken welfare, control of TSEs, potato nematode disease, Mediterranean fisheries and the EU Fisheries Fund.

The Commission set out its plans for assisting the reconstruction of the fisheries industry in those countries affected by the tsunami and for the co-ordination of EU and member state initiatives in this sector. This would include Council legislation enabling decommissioned EU fishing vessels to be sent to the affected countries. I expressed support for the Commission approach, explained what action Britain had been taking and urged the Commission to speed up the adoption of the new Generalised System of Preferences scheme and to improve the rules of origin to help the affected countries export to the EU more effectively.

Under any other business, Latvia and Sweden requested Community financial support following storms at the beginning of the month which had caused extensive damage to the forestry and agriculture sectors. Estonia, Lithuania and Denmark said they might also seek funding. The Commission would examine actions to help through EU programmes.

Austria and Greece, supported by a number of other member states, called for assistance in exporting cereal and maize surpluses where bumper crops had led to storage problems and low prices. The Commission drew attention to action already taken on exports but would consider further intervention action.

In response to a request from Poland, the Commission said it would keep up the pressure on Russia to speed up its inspection of EU export establishments for animal products in order to enable trade to re-start. It would also address problems created by Russia's insistence that export certification for plant and animal products be done at EU not member state level.

After the Council, I attended a presentation by ministers from African, Caribbean and Pacific countries and Least Developed Countries on the impacts of EU sugar reform for their economies. The meeting was attended by the three Commissioners with responsibility for agriculture, trade and development who drew attention to their work on an action plan to address the potential negative impact of reform on those developing countries which currently enjoyed preferential access to the EU market. None of the member states intervened.

Agriculture, Environment and Biotechnology Commission

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Agriculture, Environment and Biotechnology Commission will be disbanded; and what regulatory and other powers will be moved to which other organisations. [211046]

Mr. Morley: The recommendations made in the report on the Organisational and Performance Review of the Agriculture and Environment Biotechnology Commission (AEBC) are currently being considered by Defra, the Office of Science and Technology, the Scottish Executive, the National Assembly for Wales and, in Northern Ireland, the Department of Environment and the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development. No final decisions have yet been made, although the Commission has agreed to complete its current work programme in April 2005.

The AEBC has no regulatory or other powers. Its remit has been to provide the UK Government and Devolved Administrations with independent strategic advice on developments in biotechnology and their implications for agriculture and the environment.

Apiculture

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has given consideration to banning imports of bees to the UK (a) generally and (b) from countries with an identified problem with small hive beetle; and if she will make a statement. [210627]

Alun Michael: A total ban on imports of bees would be inconsistent with our obligations under the WTO Agreement on the Application of Sanitary and Phytosanitary Measures. Imports of bees into the European Union are not permitted unless the exporting country's authorities can certify that their bee health controls are equivalent to those of the EU and that the consignment has been checked for pests and diseases including small hive beetle.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the beekeepers' associations regarding the threat posed to native bee colonies by the small hive beetle. [210628]

Alun Michael: Defra officials met representatives of the national beekeeping associations in the UK on 26 November. The discussions included consideration of the threat posed by the small hive beetle.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she has taken to safeguard UK bee colonies from infestation by the small hive beetle. [210629]

Alun Michael: Defra officials and the National Bee Unit have worked closely with the European Commission to extend EU import controls to cover the small hive beetle. The unit has been providing advice to beekeepers as part of its extension programme and is developing contingency measures to manage any future outbreak.

Arrangements for bee health matters in Scotland are the responsibility of the Scottish Executive.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with other EU members regarding the outbreak of small hive beetle in Portugal. [210630]

Alun Michael: Defra officials have maintained regular contact with the European Commission following the finding last October of small hive beetle larvae in a consignment of bees imported into Portugal. The issue was discussed by the Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health on 11–12 October and 11 November, and at a Commission meeting of bee experts from the UK, Germany and Italy on 9 November in the context of developing a bee disease Chapter about the pest for the World Organisation for Animal Health.

Tsunami

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions has she had with (a) non-governmental organisations and (b) national governments on assistance for animal welfare measures following the recent tsunami. [211725]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not held any discussions with NGOs or national governments on assistance for animal welfare measures following the tsunami.

Bovine TB

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to publish the findings from the Krebs trials; and if she will make a statement. [211169]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) has advised that the Randomised Badger Culling Trial should be complete in the first half of 2006. The ISG will share the initial findings from its analysis of the effect of the proactive treatment with Defra shortly thereafter. A final report will be published once full analysis of the data has been carried out. This is likely to be early in 2007.

Climate Change

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to demonstrate to (a) EU members and (b) G8 members that tackling climate change need not have a detrimental economic impact. [210975]

Mr. Morley: The EU as a whole is currently investigating the economic implications of tackling climate change; the Commission will shortly publish a cost-benefit analysis which member states will use to help formulate our long-term strategy.

Between 1990 and 2003 the UK economy grew by 36 per cent. while emissions of all greenhouse gases fell by around 14 per cent. and as part of our Energy White Paper an analysis was undertaken showing that reductions in carbon dioxide of 60 per cent. by 2050 need not have a major impact on economic growth.

Keeping the cost manageable depends on the steady introduction of measures, starting from now, which is why the UK has a long-term policy. We share this experience with our G8 partners and other member states on a regular basis.

Community Energy

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which (a) organisations and (b) individuals have written to her Department supporting the continuation of the Community Energy programme. [205248]

Mr. Morley: We have received 22 letters supporting continuation of the programme from parliamentarians. A further dozen letters were recorded from other organisations and individuals: Mayor of London; Southwark council; XCO_2; DWP Harvesting and Marketing; Birmingham council; LGA Environment Board; CIBSE's CHP Group; Highland Council; P. North; R. Rippengal; G. V. Gilliam and N. Bolger.

Drinking Water

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the cost of removing (a) pesticides and (b) nitrates from drinking water supplies for each year since 2000. [210266]

Mr. Morley: The cost of removing pesticides and nitrates from drinking water supplies is not available on an annual basis. Water companies reported to Ofwat that they incurred capital expenditure of £18 million for pesticide treatment and £36 million for nitrate treatment in order to meet the respective drinking water quality standards during the period April 2000 to March 2004.

Energy Crops Scheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers participated during the reference period of the Energy Crops Scheme; and what the total payment was. [207309]

Alun Michael: Grants totalling £1.2 million have been paid to date under the Energy Crops Scheme since it was launched in 2000. Funding has been approved for: 56 individual farmers to plant energy crops; and for three producer groups (comprising a total of 53 farmers) to be set up to supply energy crops to end-users. A further 91 applications for planting grants, totalling £1.4 million, are currently being assessed.

Environment Council

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's priorities for the Environment Council will be during the United Kingdom's Presidency of the European Union; and if she will make a statement. [209552]

Mr. Morley: The issues the Environment Council will be working on during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Union are contained in the 2004–06 Multiannual Strategic Programme and the Luxembourg-UK Annual Operating Programme for 2005, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. We will seek to maintain progress on the range of business covered in these plans, in the light of where matters stand at the end of the Luxembourg presidency. However, we expect the following to be included in this business.

The Prime Minister has made it clear that climate change is a priority for both our G8 and EU presidencies, and we will maintain momentum towards establishing mid and longer-term strategies and targets, and seek to ensure that the EU can demonstrate progress towards its Kyoto commitments. We will take forward any Commission proposals to incorporate aviation into the EU Emissions Trading Scheme.

The Government will invest major efforts in progressing the REACH (Registration, Evaluation and Authorisation of Chemicals) Regulation based on an effective balance between economic, social and environmental considerations.

The UK presidency will take forward work on those thematic strategies in the framework of the Sixth Community Environmental Action Programme that have been published by the European Commission in time for the UK presidency.

The Government will take follow-up action to the spring European Council's review of the EU Sustainable Development Strategy, and will provide environmental input to the 2006 review. We will apply the principles of better regulation by proceeding with proposals that have been through proper economic, social and environmental impact assessment, and seek to build on the Cardiff integration process at the level of individual policies.

In 2005 momentum will be maintained on the regulation on a financial instrument for the environment (LIFE+) and on the INSPIRE directive which aims to put in place infrastructures for the prevention and better management of potential environmental risk. Concerning nature and biodiversity, we will take forward work on biodiversity action, depending on the timely submission of proposals from the European Commission, and on the directive on humane trapping standards.

Work will also continue on: the bathing waters directive; the sulphur content of marine fuels; a Pollutant Release and Transfer Register; priority substances and emissions control; protection of ground water; waste shipments; the directive on batteries and accumulators; the management of mining waste; end-use energy efficiency and energy services directive; stricter emissions standards for light duty vehicles; and applying the Aarhus Convention to the EC.

The Government will also seek to make progress on the implementation of the Environmental Technologies Action Plan (ETAP), to ensure that measures are taken to stimulate innovation and market penetration for environmental technologies so that synergies between environmental protection and enhanced economic competitiveness are fully exploited.

The UK and Luxembourg presidencies will also ensure effective preparation and coordination of international meetings throughout the year, including for the UNEP Governing Council, the UN CSD and the UN's high level review of Progress against the Millennium Declaration and the WSSD commitments. The annual meeting of the UN Climate Change Convention will be particularly important because of the expected entry into force of the Kyoto Protocol.

EU Fisheries

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures the European Community institutions are bringing forward covering the fishing fleets of the EU member states that acceded to the EU in 2004. [211355]

Mr. Bradshaw: The regulations which applied to the Community of 15 will apply equally to the new member states.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on levels of fishing by vessels from European Union member states that joined the EU in 2004 within the UK's home waters. [211356]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following quotas which can be fished in UK waters are held by the new member states for 2005:

Tonnes

	Poland	Latvia	Lithuania	Estonia
Mackerel	844	—	—	—
Greenland halibut	10	—	—	10
Roundnose grenadier	676	32	10	—
Deep sea sharks	10	—	10	—
Black scabbardfish	1	32	131	73
Blue ling	1	—	2	5

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by her Department in the last three years. [207829]

Alun Michael: I refer my hon. Friend to the Answer given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Leslie) on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W.

Ghost Ships

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the latest position in respect of the ghost ships at Hartlepool, indicating what action she plans to take. [210977]

Mr. Morley: The future of the four US ships on Teesside is primarily a matter for the US Marine Administration, as owners of the vessels, and Able UK, who are intending to seek the necessary permissions for dismantling the vessels at their Teesside facility.

The four US ships are currently docked in Able UK's Graythorp dock on Teesside. Able UK submitted applications for planning permission on 18 January 2005. These applications, which include proposals for the construction and refurbishment of quays, the construction of a cofferdam and new dock gates, will be determined by the relevant planning authority, Hartlepool borough council. An application for a waste management licence is expected in the next few weeks. Any such application would be determined by the Environment Agency.

In the meantime dismantling work is prevented by a waste management licence condition. The dock facility itself is subject, as necessary, to regular inspection by the Environment Agency in liaison with the Health and Safety Executive.

Goldfish

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the plan to make illegal the awarding of goldfish as prizes at fairgrounds has been dropped; and what discussions her Department held with the (a) Prime Minister and (b) Chancellor of the Exchequer on this matter. [210264]

Mr. Bradshaw: The draft Animal Welfare Bill which contained a provision relating to the giving of pets as prizes was published in July. The inclusion of the Bill in the Government's legislative programme was announced in the Queen's Speech. It would not be appropriate to speculate on any changes that may have been made to the published draft before the Bill is introduced in Parliament. As is usual with all Government legislation, there has been consultation across Government about its content.

Green Waste

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on the collection of green waste via kerbside collections, with particular reference to 240-litre bio-bins. [210974]

Mr. Morley: The Government supports the collection of green waste for composting via kerbside collections as part of a local authority's strategy for the diversion of biodegradable municipal waste from landfill in line with our commitment to meet the EU Landfill Directive targets. The Government encourages home composting as part of that strategy where appropriate in local circumstances. Local authorities may charge for the collection of green waste and this can influence the choice householders make in deciding how to deal with their green waste.

The choice of receptacle used for the collection of green waste is the responsibility of the local authority.

New Rural Agency

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what decisions have been made on funding the new integrated agency for rural delivery; and for what purposes the funding rolled over from the Environmental Action Fund was to be put. [211397]

Mr. Morley: The first full financial year of the new integrated agency is expected to be 2007–08. The rolled over funding of £1.95 million for 2005–06 under the Environmental Action Fund will go to existing recipients undertaking biodiversity projects. Arrangements for supporting biodiversity and natural resource protection in 2006–07 are being considered and will be announced in the summer.

Oil Contamination

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research she has commissioned on the duration of damage to (a) soil and (b) ground water resulting from oil spills and leakages. [210632]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency has undertaken a number of research projects that have considered the impact and attenuation of oil spills on soil and groundwater. In particular:

The Natural Attenuation of Petroleum Hydrocarbons and Chlorinated Solvents in Groundwater, report P 305 dated 1999

Guidance on the assessment and monitoring of natural attenuation of contaminants in groundwater, report number 95, dated 2000

These reports are available from the Environment Agency via the attached internet links:

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the responses to the consultation, "Soil: the hidden resource", with particular reference to the risk of leakage from domestic oil tanks. [210926]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency has recently finished assessing the responses to its consultation: 'Soil: the hidden resource' and will be issuing its response to the main points raised shortly. There was one specific query on the risks of leakage from domestic oil storage and the agency recognises the concerns raised. It has produced guidance on domestic oil storage in collaboration with the Federation of Petroleum Suppliers and OFTEC and strongly recommends that these guidelines are followed at all times, and that domestic oil storage facilities are installed and maintained by qualified technicians to ensure compliance with relevant British Standards.

Research and Development

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what percentage of opportunities for research or consulting disseminated by the Department resulted in (a) research reports and (b) physical deliverables in each year since 2001–02. [207007]

Alun Michael: All research projects funded by Defra are required to produce final reports, which are then published on Defra's website. In addition, Defra encourages research contractors to publish the findings of Defra-funded research in science journals and in the science press wherever possible. We can identify 1,198 Defra published reports since 2001–02.

We would not expect to receive any other physical deliverables. Government and Defra policy following on from the Baker Report[1] is to leave ownership of intellectual property with the contractor. Thus any product of a material nature that is patent-worthy or has commercial potential is left with the contractor to develop further.

Veterinary Profession

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the Department for Education and

---

[1] "Creating knowledge creating wealth: Realising the economic potential of public sector research establishments", a report by John Baker to the Minister for Science and the Financial Secretary to the Treasury, August 1999.

Skills on maintaining recruitment into the veterinary profession, with particular reference to the State Veterinary Service. [211724]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Secretary of State has not had any direct discussions with the Department for Education and Skills. However, Sir Alan Langlands, vice-chancellor of Dundee University, has been commissioned by the Department for Education and Skills to examine the gateways into the professions, which include veterinary science, and to produce a report. In particular, he will consider how the public sector and professions can sustain and improve the recruitment opportunities for graduates.

My officials recently attended a consultation event presented by the Department for Education and Skills and my Department will make a full contribution to this initiative.

Waste Recycling

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the proportion of household waste recycled in Hartlepool was in each year since 1997. [210648]

Mr. Morley: The proportion of household waste sent for recycling or composting in Hartlepool since 1997 is presented in the table.

	Percentage of household waste sent for recycling or composting in Hartlepool
1997–98	4
1998–99	4
1999–2000	6
2000–01	5
2001–02	9
2002–03	11

Source:

Defra's Municipal Waste Management Survey (MWMS)

MWMS Data for 2003–04 have not been released yet. Best Value Performance Indicator data (for the percentage of household waste sent for recycling or composting) are usually a good indicator for Defra's MWMS. The 2003–04 BVPI figure for the percentage of household waste sent for recycling or composting in Hartlepool is 13 per cent.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding Dudley council received from her Department for waste reduction, minimisation and recycling in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [210922]

Mr. Morley: The main source of funding for Dudley council is through the Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services (EPCS) block of annual Government grant. It is for the local authority to decide what proportion of the block is invested in waste management services including recycling. It is therefore not possible to say how much funding Dudley received for waste reduction, minimisation and recycling in each of the last four years.

Dudley also received funding from the National Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund; £665,000 in 2003–04 and £1,055, 695 in 2004–05.

To relieve spending pressures in the waste area Dudley received £81,745 in 2004–05.

The Waste and Resources Action Programme has allocated £20,000 to Dudley in 2004–05 to fund an awareness campaign related to kerbside collection.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of (a) domestic, (b) commercial and (c) industrial refuse has been recycled within the Greater London area in each of the last three years. [211047]

Mr. Morley: Results from the Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey show the following household waste recycling and composting rates in the Greater London area:

	Percentage
2000–01	9.0
2001–02	9.4
2002–03	10.9

Corresponding data for commercial and industrial waste are not available.

"Making Space for Water"

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the responses to the consultation, "Making space for water", with particular reference to the risk of damage to domestic oil tanks from flooding. [210925]

Mr. Morley: Some 270 responses have been received to the "Making space for water" consultation exercise, which sought views on proposals for a new Government strategy for flood and coastal erosion risk management in England.

One response, from a major supplier of alternative fuel, made reference to the risk of damage to commercial and domestic oil tanks from flooding and the resulting environmental impact.

The Government is currently considering all the responses made to the consultation exercise with a view to publishing a Government response in spring 2005.

PRIME MINISTER

Cabinet Secretary

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to appoint the next Cabinet Secretary. [212197]

The Prime Minister: The serving Cabinet Secretary, Sir Andrew Turnbull, is due to retire from the Civil Service later this year.

Drinks Industry (Meetings)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the meetings he has had with representatives of the drinks, licensing and public house industries in the last 12 months broken down by (a) date and (b) attendees; whether civil servants were present at each meeting to record what occurred; and what separate meetings his officials have had with the drinks industry. [209543]

The Prime Minister: During the consultation process on the Licensing Act and the Alcohol Strategy, Ministers and officials across Government met a wide range of companies, local authorities, trade unions, the police, and many public bodies and individuals, as part of the usual policy-making process. All meetings were undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and the civil service code.

In May 2004 I attended the Responsible Drinking Forum, accompanied by my officials, where I gave a speech on alcohol abuse. A copy of this is available on the Number 10 website. My officials met the organisers of the Responsible Drinking Forum in preparation for this event.

European Constitution

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list occasions when his office has organised briefing meetings on the European Constitution for those outside Government. [211387]

The Prime Minister: My officials and I regularly discuss the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe with outside stakeholders.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he will set a date for the referendum on the European Constitution. [212196]

The Prime Minister: Clause 6 (1) of the European Union Bill provides for the date of the referendum to be set by order, after the Bill has been approved by Parliament. No decision has yet been taken on the date.

Gulf Co-operation Council

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to meet the Chairman of the Gulf Co-operation Council during the British Presidency of the EU. [212195]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to meet the Chairman of the Gulf Co-operation Council during the UK Presidency of the EU. Detailed planning for meetings during the UK Presidency is still under way. However, I have frequent contacts with the leaders of the GCC countries and intend to continue this.

Homelessness (Thames Gateway)

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral answer to the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) on 26 January 2005, Official Report, column 300, on homelessness and the Thames Gateway development, to which hon. Member he was referring; and what the evidential basis was for his statement that the opposition planned to cancel the project. [211868]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. and learned Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), at Prime Minister's Questions on 26 January 2005, Official Report, column 300. A copy of the article that contains the pledge by the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) to which I referred has been placed in the Library of the House.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004 when special advisers attended meetings with external representatives at which Ministers were not present. [210537]

The Prime Minister: No central records are held and to obtain such records would incur disproportionate costs. Special advisers hold meetings with a wide range of external representatives in their official capacity. All such meetings are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the speeches his special advisers made in an official capacity between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004, broken down by date. [210568]

The Prime Minister: No central records are held and to obtain such records would incur disproportionate costs. Any speeches made by special advisers in an official capacity are conducted in accordance with the Code of Conduct for Special Advisers.

TRANSPORT

Departmental Policies (Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out, including statistical information relating as directly as possible to the constituency, the effect on Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency of his Department's policies since 8 June 2001. [206835]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department has put in place a considerable programme of improvements across a wide range of transport policy areas since 1997. I am confident that the Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East constituency will have benefited from these. For example, the injury totals for all road causalities in Great Britain fell from 327,803 in 1997 to 290,607 in 2003, and the numbers of children aged under 16 years killed or seriously injured on our roads fell from 6,452 in 1997 to 4,100 in 2003. On our railways, passenger kilometres have increased from 32.1 billion in 1996–97 to 40.9 billion in 2003–04, a rise of 27 per cent. In terms of improvements to air quality, emissions of the UK's two main pollutants—nitrous oxides and particles—fell by 31 per cent. and 27 per cent. respectively between 1997 and 2002.

The funding provided directly to Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East since 2001 is shown in the following table. It has been for Middlesbrough and Redcar and Cleveland councils to determine how that allocation has spent, in line with their local transport plan and their priorities.

Departmental Policies (Hull)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Kingston upon Hull North constituency, the effects on Kingston upon Hull North of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [211801]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department has put in place a considerable programme of improvements across a wide range of transport policy areas since 1997. I am confident that the Kingston Upon Hull constituency will have benefited from these. For example, the injury totals for all road causalities in Great Britain fell from 327,803 in 1997 to 290,607 in 2003, and the numbers of children aged under 16 years killed or seriously injured on our roads fell from 6,452 in 1997 to 4,100 in 2003. Airline Traffic Rights

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in granting Syrian Air intermediate fifth freedom traffic rights between Manchester and Beirut. [211537]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department has already granted Syrian Air intermediate fifth freedom traffic rights between Manchester and Beirut on a temporary basis following a request from the Syrian authorities. We hope to formalise this arrangement during discussions early this year.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in granting Pakistan International Airlines additional traffic rights between Manchester and North America. [211538]

Charlotte Atkins: The Department is in discussion with the Pakistani aeronautical authorities to arrange air services negotiations on a range of matters relating to UK-Pakistan aviation relations, including traffic rights between Manchester and North America.

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in granting Afriqiyah Airline landing rights at Manchester Airport. [211539]

Charlotte Atkins: Afriqiyah Airways of Libya already has the right to fly to Manchester Airport.

EC Legislation

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on European Communities planned actions in the field of social legislation relating to road transport, with particular reference to projects arising from COM (2004) 360. [211385]

Mr. Jamieson: The two main action points arising from the report in question are being taken forward. The European Commission has made a legislative proposal to replace Council Regulation (EEC) No. 3820/85 on drivers' hours; this proposal is intended to clarify and simplify the legislation, make it easier to enforce, and update and remove outdated exemptions. Linked to this is a proposal to amend Directive 88/599/EEC on drivers' hours enforcement, which is intended to increase the quantity and quality of checks and harmonise enforcement practices.

The Transport Council adopted its common position on both these proposals in December 2004, and the European Parliament will consider the common positions shortly.

House Building (Transport Demand)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with (a) the Deputy Prime Minister and (b) the West Midlands Regional Assembly about the impact of new housing in Worcestershire on the demand for travel to Birmingham. [212075]

Mr. McNulty: The Secretary of State and other Ministers in the Department for Transport have not had any discussions with either the Deputy Prime Minister or the West Midlands Regional Assembly about the impact of new housing in Worcestershire on the demand for travel to Birmingham.

Officials in both the Department for Transport and the Government Office for the West Midlands have, however, discussed the impact of new housing development across the West Midlands, including in Worcestershire, on the demand for travel in the West Midlands conurbation. Such discussions have been in the context of the Regional Spatial Strategy and the preparation of Local Transport Plans in Worcestershire and the conurbation. Working with ODPM the shared objective has been to ensure that regional and local strategies properly integrate transport with spatial planning to ensure sustainable strategies for economic growth.

Nottingham Express Transit

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the cost of the Nottingham Express Transit will be borne by the local authority. [211834]

Charlotte Atkins: As with all proposed light rail projects in England (outside London), the promoting authorities are expected to contribute at least 25 per cent. from local sources towards the net capital costs of the proposed extensions.

Number Plate Cloning

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his current assessment is of the extent of car number plate cloning; what action is taken against users of vehicles with cloned plates; what assessment he has made of the ease of making and using such plates; what plans he has for new (a) legislation and (b) sanctions to deal with those making or using cloned plates; if he will introduce measures to ensure that car owners whose number plates have been cloned or used without their knowledge are not penalised; and if he will make a statement. [211083]

Mr. Jamieson: Evidence from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) systems and the police suggests that cloning is being used by a small minority of motorists to avoid fines and charges. The police and DVLA are working closely to detect cloned vehicles.

In order to combat the problem of cloning and preventing people from obtaining number plates to which they are not entitled, the Government have introduced measures to tighten up the supply of plates. Since 1 January 2003 all suppliers of number plates have been required to register with DVLA and to keep records of sales. Purchasers of plates are required to produce evidence of their identity as well as the vehicle registration document. Number plate suppliers who fail to comply with these requirements can be fined up to £5,000 and suspended from the register for up to five years. The Road Safety Bill currently before Parliament will extend the register of number plate suppliers to Scotland and Northern Ireland.

It is already an offence to fail to display the correct registration mark on a vehicle and the maximum penalty is £1,000.

We are currently reviewing the issue of the physical security of number plates, including manufacture and methods of fixing to the vehicle. The aim is to prevent plates being stolen for reissue.

Potters Bar

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce a decision regarding a public inquiry into the Potters Bar derailment. [208504]

Mr. McNulty: The Secretary of State expects to be in a position to take a decision on whether to hold a public inquiry into the Potters Bar derailment once the Crown Prosecution Service has decided whether to bring prosecutions. However, this position is subject to periodic review.

Rail Freight

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken by his Department to ensure that in-house rail freight expertise is (a) transferred to and (b) can be called upon by the new Department for Transport rail organisation. [211086]

Mr. McNulty: The rail freight activities of the SRA are transferring to the Department for Transport, and will be divided between the new Rail Group, and the Department's Logistics Policy Division. Detailed design and staffing of the new Rail Group, to enable the Department's rail responsibilities to be carried out effectively, is continuing. The Department is working closely with the SRA to ensure that it has the relevant capabilities for the new Rail Group. The Department is also in close contact with the rail freight industry.

Railways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new miles of railway track have been brought into use since 1997; and if he will list the new lengths of track. [210425]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 25 January 2005]: The Strategic Rail Authority advises that there have been 63.5 miles of new railway track brought into use since 1997. These comprise 12 miles from Worksop to Mansfield, four miles related to the Heathrow Express services and one and a half miles from Millerhill to Newcraighall. The Channel Tunnel Rail Link Section 1 from the Channel Tunnel to Fawkham Junction comprising 46 miles of new track was opened on 28 September 2003. In addition, three miles between Hamilton and Larkhill are due to be opened in early 2005.

Double tracking of the lines between Kidsgrove and Crewe (nine miles) and between Burngallow and Probus (seven miles) have added a further 16 miles of new track.

Regional Transport Boards

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with (a) Passenger Transport Authorities, (b) the Passenger Transport Executive, (c) Regional Chambers, (d) Regional Development Agencies and (e) the Local Government Association on proposals for regional transport boards; and if he will make a statement. [211588]

Charlotte Atkins: Ministers have recently met the English Regions Network representing the eight English regional chambers outside London to discuss the proposals in the consultation document "Devolving decision making: A consultation on regional funding allocations".

The Government have indicated in the consultation paper that they do not intend to prescribe institutional arrangements for how regions should coordinate and prepare advice on regional priorities. It will be for regions themselves to decide if they wish to establish regional transport boards or other arrangements.

We look forward to receiving the views of Passenger Transport Authorities and Executives, Regional Chambers, Regional Development Agencies, the Local Government Association, and other bodies on the proposals in the consultation document.

Speed Cameras

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much revenue has been paid to the Exchequer from speed camera operations in England in each year since 2001. [211146]

Mr. Jamieson: The revenue figures for the National Safety Camera Programme in England and Wales since 2001 are as follows. The table indicates the number of safety camera partnerships participating in the programme at each stage:

	Number of partnerships participating in programme	Receipts from fixed penalties	Expenditure	Balance, accruing to the Consolidated Fund
2000–01	7 partnerships	10,362,440	8,985,247	1,367,193
2001–02	7 partnerships, 14 from October 2001	19,660,780	16,106,559	3,554,221
2002–03	23 partnerships, 25 from July 2002, 29 from October 2002	68,872,320	54,256,502	14,615,818
2003–04	Provisional (35 partnerships)	112.2 million	91.8 million	20.4 million

Details of programme funding for 2002–01 to 2002–03 are given in "The national safety camera programme Three-year evaluation report", copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House, and are available from the Department's website. Except where special provisions apply, such as have been made for supporting the operation of approved safety cameras, the whole of offenders' fines normally accrue to the Consolidated Fund.

St. Pancras

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct Network Rail to complete the necessary track and signalling work at King's Cross/St. Pancras to enable Great Northern services to be integrated with those of Thameslink prior to the opening of St. Pancras International Station in mid 2007. [209918]

Mr. McNulty: Track and signalling work at King's Cross/St. Pancras forms part of the Thameslink 2000 project and would not enable existing Great Northern trains to run south of St. Pancras without the main Thameslink 2000 works. These require Transport and Works Act and other consents. Network Rail's applications are to be considered at a re-opened public inquiry which will determine whether this can proceed.

TREASURY

Business Rates

Brian Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many non-domestic hereditaments in England are businesses with a rateable value of (a) £10,000 or less, (b) £25,000 or less and (c) £25,001 or more. [211589]

Mr. Timms: The number of non-domestic hereditaments, in England, with a rateable value of (a) £10,000 or less is 1,094,192, (b) £25,000 or less is 1,395,505 and (c) £25,001 or more is 257,679.

Carers

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the number of carers who are over the age of 65 years. [211248]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Mark Oaten, dated 31 January 2005:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what recent estimates have been made of the number of carers who are over the age of 65 years. (211248)

Figures from the Census 2001 National Report for England and Wales indicate that on Census day (29 April 2001) there were 944,650 people aged 65 and over in England and Wales providing unpaid care.

The information below has been extracted from the CD supplement to the 2001 Census National Report for England and Wales, which is available in the House of Commons Library. The table shows the distribution of these carers according to the number of hours of care provided per week.

Number of people aged 65 and over providing unpaid care in England and Wales, 2001

Hours of care provided per week	Number
1 to 19	501,318
20 to 49	102,182

Child Trust Fund

Mr. Berry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children in Kingswood have benefited from the Child Trust Fund. [211872]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Martin Linton) on 30 November 2004, Official Report, columns 87–88W. All children born and living in the UK since 1 September 2002 whose families receive child benefit will be eligible for the Child Trust Fund.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what estimate he has made of the number of children in Northampton, North who have received the Child Trust Fund. [211704]

Mr. Timms: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Martin Linton) on 30 November 2004, Official Report, columns 87–88W. All children born and living in the UK since 1 September 2002 whose families receive child benefit will be eligible for the Child Trust Fund.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many contracts in his Department have been granted to (a) EDS, (b) Fujitsu and (c) jointly in each of the last two years; whether they were open to competition; for what they were granted; for how much; over what period of time; and if he will make a statement. [211607]

Mr. Timms: In the last two years the Department has granted no contracts to either EDS or Fujitsu.

The Inland Revenue has a contractual relationship with Capgemini through the ASPIRE contract that was signed on 5 January 2004. Fujitsu are one of three material sub-contractors to Capgemini but have no direct contractual relationship with the Revenue.

HM Customs and Excise has a contractual relationship with Fujitsu through the Infrastructure Services Agreement which started in April 1999.

The Department awards contracts in open competition according to the EU Procurement Regulations, based on best value for money.

Departmental Policies

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to Edinburgh, North and Leith constituency, the effects on Edinburgh, North and Leith of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [211573]

Mr. Timms: Since our election in 1997 the Government have put in place a radical programme of both macro-economic and micro-economic reform to improve the economic performance of all parts of the UK. There is significant evidence that these policies have already yielded considerable benefits for the Edinburgh, North and Leith constituency. For example, since May 1997, claimant unemployment has fallen by 53 per cent., long-term unemployment by 86 per cent. and long-term youth unemployment has almost been eradicated, with a reduction of 90 per cent.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Kingston upon Hull North constituency, the effects on Kingston upon Hull, North of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [211805]

Mr. Timms: Since our election in 1997 the Government have put in place a radical programme of both macroeconomic and microeconomic reform to improve the economic performance of all parts of the UK. There is significant evidence that these policies have already yielded considerable benefits for the Kingston upon Hull, North constituency. For example, since May 1997, claimant unemployment has fallen by 45 per cent., long-term unemployment by 69 per cent. and long-term youth unemployment has almost been eradicated with a reduction of 97 per cent.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./

Drug Misuse Deaths

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many deaths misuse of (a) heroin, (b) cocaine, (c) crack and (d) magic mushrooms was a contributory factor in each of the last 10 years. [211231]

Mr. Timms: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Paul Flynn, dated 31 January 2005:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking in how many deaths misuse of (a) heroin, (b) cocaine, (c) crack and (d) magic mushrooms was a contributory factor in each of the last 10 years. (211231)

Available figures relate to deaths where the underlying cause was drug poisoning, not the total number where misuse of drugs was a contributory factor. The most recently available information is for deaths in 2002. Figures are shown in the attached table for the calendar years 1993 to 2002.

Number of deaths from drug-related poisoning[1], involving selected drugs[2]: England and Wales, 1993 to 2002[3]

Number of deaths

	(a) heroin/ morphine	(b) cocaine (including crack cocaine)[4]	(d) psilocybin (magic mushrooms)
1993	187	12	1
1994	277	24	0
1995	357	19	0
1996	466	19	0
1997	445	39	0
1998	646	66	0
1999	754	88	0
2000	926	80	0
2002	790	139	0

[1] Cause of death was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes 292, 304, 305.2–305.9, E850-E858, E950.0-E950.5, E962.0 and E980.0-E980.5 for 1993 to 2000, and the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes F11-F16, F18-F19, X40-X44, X60-X64, X85 and Y10-Y14 from 2001 onwards.

[2] Drugs mentioned on the death certificate of a death where the underlying cause was drug poisoning.

[3] Data are for deaths occurring in each calendar year.

[4] It is not possible to provide separate figures on deaths related to crack cocaine and cocaine from routine mortality data, as these substances are not generally separately identified on death certificates. ONS routinely publishes a combined figure for deaths mentioning cocaine on the death certificate. It is not possible, in cases where more than one substance is mentioned on the death certificate, to state which was primarily responsible for the death.

EU Accounting Requirements

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those accounting requirements set out in Commission Regulation (EC) 2238/2004, OJ L394 volume 47 of 31 December 2004 that will apply to and within member states but not to European Community institutions; and if he will make a statement. [211358]

Mr. Timms: Commission Regulation (EC) 2238/2004 amended Regulation 1725/2003, which itself amended Regulation 1606/2002, the Regulation which set out the requirements for the adoption and use of international accounting standards by member states and the Commission. The Regulation was amended to incorporate the updated international accounting standards—some have been revised and one has been withdrawn. Applicability to member states and the Commission has not changed.

European Communities Pensions

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of European Communities pensions was in the last year for which figures are available; and what the forecast cost is for (a) 2014, (b) 2024, (c) 2034 and (d) 2044. [211360]

Mr. Timms: The total amount allocated for pensions in the 2004 budget was €817.6 million. No specific Commission forecasts are available for the years requested, but for historical and demographic reasons, pension costs will take an increasing share of the €6 billion administration budget. Forecasts from 2002 suggested that costs would reach around €1.5 billion by 2015 but then stabilise in real terms. The Commission reforms of 2003 helped to reduce this future burden by increasing the retirement age to 63, abolishing correction co-efficients and increasing contributions from EU officials.

Mr. Hayes: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the ongoing pensions liabilities of the European Coal and Steel Community; and to where pension funds were transferred from closed budget lines and accounts. [211386]

Mr. Timms: We understand that the pension budget of the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC) was transferred to the European Community's budget when the ECSC was wound up in 2002.

EU Court of Auditors

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what liabilities arise for the European Commission where budget discharge has not been granted by the Court of Auditors under Article 276 of the EC Treaty and Article 143 of the Financial Regulation. [211377]

Mr. Timms: The European Court of Auditors publishes an annual report on the Commission's management of the Community budget. When the report is published it includes the responses and comments of the European Commission on the Auditors' findings, as required by Article 143 of the Financial Regulation. The Council considers the report and makes a recommendation on discharge to the European Parliament. The European Parliament considers the Council's recommendation, as required under Article 276 of the EGA Treaty, and votes on a resolution on discharge. The Commission is required, also under Article 276, to take all appropriate steps to act on the observations made by the Court of Auditors, the Council and the European Parliament—including observations relevant to those sectors of the budget to which the Court of Auditors did not give a positive Statement of Assurance—and it produces an annual report on the actions it has taken.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the assessed sum level of fraud within those areas of the European Communities budgets that have not been signed off by the European Court of Auditors. [211376]

Mr. Timms: The Government takes the issue of fraud or financial malpractice in the European Community's budgets very seriously and has pressed and continues to press for effective action to be taken, including the setting up of an independent and powerful European Anti-Fraud Office and an effective reform of the financial rules which ensures greater accountability and effectiveness of spending.

The European Commission's annual "Fight Against Fraud" report publishes the amounts of irregularities reported each year by member states. The most recent report covered 2003. The figures published were:

Own Resources total irregularities declined from €342 million in 2002 to €270 million in 2003—down 21 per cent.;

EAGGF Guarantee declined from €198 million to €169 million—down 15 per cent.;

Structural Funds went down from €614 million to €482 million—down 22 per cent.

When added together, the total irregularities reported in 2003 were €921 million—a reduction of 20 per cent. from the €1,154 million reported in 2002.

The Commission's report deliberately does not provide a breakdown between cases of irregularity and fraud; fraud is defined and treated differently in each member state. Past estimates made by OLAF (the EU Anti-Fraud office) have suggested that around 20 per cent. of reported irregularities may turn out to be fraud. Applying this to the 2003 figure would suggest that the amount of fraud could be around €185 million. This would represent around 0.2 per cent. of total EC Budget expenditure in 2003.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which organisations received funding contrary to finding 6.25 of the European Court of Auditors' report for 2003; and if he will make a statement. [211410]

Mr. Timms: The Government takes the issue of fraud or financial malpractice in the European Community's budgets very seriously and has pressed and continues to press for effective action to be taken, including the setting up of an independent and powerful European Anti-Fraud Office and an effective reform of the financial rules which ensures greater accountability and effectiveness of spending.

In order to protect the professional relationship between auditor and auditee, the European Court of Auditors (ECA) cannot provide a greater level of specific information to the outside world than is provided in its adopted reports. In this particular case it is encouraging that the Commission has already taken action to remind member states of the appropriate provisions.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will identify the ineligible expenditure referred to in paragraph 7.39 of the European Court of Auditors annual report for 2003. [211412]

Mr. Timms: In order to protect the professional relationship between auditor and auditee, the European Court of Auditors (ECA) cannot provide a greater level of specific information to the outside world than is provided in its adopted reports. In this particular case it is encouraging that the Commission has already taken action to improve controls and to rectify the specific irregularities indicated by the ECA.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will identify the cases referred to in paragraph 9.45 of the European Court of Auditors annual report for 2003. [211413]

Mr. Timms: In order to protect the professional relationship between auditor and auditee, the European Court of Auditors (ECA) cannot provide a greater level of specific information to the outside world than is provided in its adopted reports. However in this particular case it is encouraging that the Economic and Social Committee has taken corrective action to prevent similar errors recurring in future.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the cases of fraud identified in paragraph 31 of page 332 of the European Court of Auditors annual report for 2003. [211414]

Mr. Timms: In order to protect the professional relationship between auditor and auditee, the European Court of Auditors (ECA) cannot provide a greater level of specific information to the outside world than is provided in its adopted reports. In addition, since these cases have now been referred to OLAF it would not be appropriate to comment until OLAF's investigation has been completed.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on each of the cases of irregularity identified in (a) paragraph 43 of page 335 and (b) paragraph 65 of page 345 of the European Court of Auditors annual report for 2003. [211415]

Mr. Timms: In order to protect the professional relationship between auditor and auditee, the European Court of Auditors (ECA) cannot provide a greater level of specific information to the outside world than is provided in its adopted reports. However it is encouraging to note that the Commission has taken action in response to the ECA's findings, by issuing new guidelines, initiating its own audit, and launching a comprehensive inventory in order to carry out a complete survey of these funds.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the latest Commission Report on the Beneficiaries of Grants Made Under Chapter A-30; and which (a) internal audit and (b) Court of Auditors report related to these grants. [211417]

Mr. Timms: The European Commission produced its latest report on Chapter A-30 on 31 May 2004 in respect of EC Budget year 2003. I am arranging for a copy of this Report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The Government has no information about specific internal audit reports.

The European Court of Auditors has not produced a specific report on A-30 funded projects. Its audit of the 2003 EC Budget may have included sample checks on A-30 projects covered by the European Commission's Report.

European Union

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 15 December 2004, Official Report, column 1084W, on the European Union, what his Department's policy is on (a) analysing the cost-effectiveness of EU information campaigns and (b) applying for Communities funds to assist such campaigns. [207108]

Mr. Timms: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office take the lead in communicating EU matters on behalf of the UK Government. Three-year budgets are agreed at each spending review; within that framework Departments are accountable for their spending and for ensuring value for money.

Propriety in spending on information campaigns, as in all Government spending, is ensured by the requirement that spending only occurs where the Government has the appropriate vires to do so. This applies whether funding comes from the EU budget or from the consolidated fund.

Film Industry

Mr. Swire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when his Department expects to complete the review of the section 42 film tax incentive; which film industry organisations and representatives were involved; and when the findings of the review will be published. [211691]

Mr. Timms: As announced in the 2004 pre-Budget report, the Government are in the process of consulting with the UK Film Council and industry stakeholders on an early review, to the end of January 2005, of the tax relief that is used by large-budget British films. The outcome of the review will be announced in due course.

Identity Cards

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish (a) the Office of Government Commerce's (OGC's) Gateway Zero review into the identity cards scheme and (b) all other OGC reviews of the scheme. [208284]

Mr. Boateng: I am currently reviewing whether there is any Gateway Review or other OGC review which should be published regarding the identity cards scheme and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as these considerations are complete.

Income Tax

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many 16 and 17-year-olds are liable for income tax. [211144]

Dawn Primarolo: The specific information requested is not available. For all income tax payers under 20 I refer the hon. Member to table 3.2 'Distribution of median and mean income by age range and sex' on the Inland Revenue website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/income_distribution/menu-by-year.htm#32.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the monthly cost of operations in Iraq; what the average monthly cost of operations since the war ended is; what the cost of operations during the war were; what the monthly costs incurred in relation to Iraq in addition to the costs of operations are; what the UK's financial commitment is to Iraq; what the (a) gross and (b) net sums are in each case where the former includes sums transferred from existing budgets; and if he will make a statement. [211179]

Mr. Boateng: The Treasury does not estimate costs for Iraq in the manner requested. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Old Bexley and Sidcup (Derek Conway) on 26 January 2005, Official Report, columns 404–05W.

The cost of operations such as Iraq is normally charged to the Reserve rather than transferred from existing budgets. The Reserve is a provision prudently set aside in Spending Reviews to provide for these events and for other emergencies such as the foot and mouth epidemic.

ISAs

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of restoring the 10 per cent. tax credit on dividends payable on shares held in equity ISAs. [211738]

Mr. Timms: No estimates are held for restoring the 10 per cent. tax credit. However, estimates of the cost of the 10 per cent. tax credit on dividend payments made on shares held in ISAs for the years 1999–2000 to 2003–04 are available and are supplied.

	Cost (£ million)
1999–2000	10
2000–01	30
2001–02	60
2002–03	60
2003–04	80

Sporting Bodies (Tax Payments)

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of tax paid by sporting bodies in the UK in the last year for which figures are available. [211905]

Mr. Timms: No separate information is available on tax paid by sporting bodies.

Stamp Duty

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the revenue effect would be of restructuring residential stamp duty (a) by increasing the zero rate threshold to £80,000 and leaving all other thresholds unchanged, (b) by increasing the zero rate threshold to £100,000 and leaving all other thresholds unchanged, (c) by increasing the zero rate threshold to £120,000 and leaving all other thresholds unchanged, (d) by increasing the zero rate threshold to £80,000 and raising all other thresholds by £20,000, (e) by increasing the zero rate threshold to £100,000 and raising all other thresholds by £40,000 and (f) by increasing the zero rate threshold to £120,000 and raising all other thresholds by £60,000. [213285]

Mr. Timms: The estimated revenue cost, in 2005–06, of restructuring stamp duty on residential property sales according to the six schemes described in the question is given in the following tables.

Rate	Tax regime 1 thresholds	Tax regime 2 thresholds	Tax regime 3 thresholds
0 per cent.	£0–80,000	£0–100,000	£0–120,000
1 per cent.	£80,001–250,000	£100,001–250,000	£120,001–250,000
3 per cent.	£250,001–500,000	£250,001–500,000	£250,001–500,000
4 per cent.	£500,001 and above	£500,001 and above	£500,001 and above
Revenue cost (£ million)	70	170	300

Rate	Tax regime 4 thresholds	Tax regime 5 thresholds	Tax regime 6 thresholds
0 per cent.	£0–80,000	£0–100,000	£0–120,000
1 per cent.	£80,001–270,000	£100,001–290,000	£120,001–310,000
3 per cent.	£270,001–520,000	£290,001–540,000	£310,001–560,000
4 per cent.	£520,001 and above	£540,001 and above	£560,001 and above
Revenue cost (£ million)	290	620	1,050

This does not include any allowance for behavioural changes.

Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Inland Revenue will make its decision on the request of Mrs. Fury, a constituent of the right hon. Member for Birkenhead, that it reconsider its decision to claim back an overpayment in tax credits, made on 7 December 2004. [212055]

Mr. Timms: The Inland Revenue wrote to my right hon. Friend about his constituent on 28 January 2005.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit claimants were paid compensation by the Inland Revenue between April 2004 and the end of December 2004. [212067]

Mr. Timms: Around 14,400 compensation payments for tax credits were made between 1 April 2004 and 31 December 2004.

The circumstances in which the Inland Revenue will make compensation payments to its customers are explained in the Department's Code of Practice 1 "Putting things right" which is available at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk. The Department will pay compensation for reasonable costs incurred as a direct result of its mistakes or delays and to recognise worry and distress caused by those mistakes or delays.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Access to Work

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to adopt changes to the Access to Work scheme similar to those recently introduced in Northern Ireland. [208508]

Maria Eagle: There are no plans to adopt changes to the Access to Work programme similar to those introduced in Northern Ireland.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he has taken to promote the Access to Work programme; and if he will make a statement. [209715]

Maria Eagle: Jobcentre Plus invests around £300,000 a year marketing and publicising its disability services and programmes, including Access to Work.

Leaflets and information about Access to Work are freely available in Jobcentres and Jobcentre Plus offices. Disability Employment Advisers regularly meet local employers to promote the full range of disability services, including Access to Work.

Information on all disability services, including Access to Work, is available on the Jobcentre Plus website. The web address www.jobcentreplus.gov.uk is included on Jobcentre Plus publicity material and can be accessed through most internet search engines.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the letter of the Secretary of State to the right hon. Member for Birkenhead dated 16 December 2004, what the results have been of the discussions with EDS for delivering a working IT scheme for the Child Support Agency; and on what date he expects such a scheme to come into operation. [212068]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Frank Field, dated 31 January 2005:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the letter of the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Birkenhead dated 16th December 2004 what the results have been of the discussions with EDS for delivering a working IT scheme for the Child Support Agency; and on what date he expects such a scheme to come into operation.

Discussions with EDS are still continuing and a meeting with senior executives is scheduled for early February. They remain on track for delivering the software and telephony upgrade needed to remedy the most serious defects with the system. Beyond that we are working with them on a longer term plan intended to support the recovery of the Agency's work position. Ministers have been clear that they will not decide on when to extend the arrangements to existing clients until they are satisfied that is working well for new clients.

Citizens Pensions

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what cost-benefit analysis his Department has undertaken in the last five months of the introduction of citizens pensions; [212006]

(2) what cross-departmental meetings involving his Department have been held in the last five months in the introduction of citizens pensions. [212007]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department is examining a range of pensions proposals, including options for broader-based State provision. We keep policy proposals under constant review and are engaged in discussions across Government on such matters on a continual basis.

Departmental Policies (Clwyd, South)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Clwyd, South constituency, the effects on Clwyd, South of his Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [210330]

Jane Kennedy: We have undertaken a fundamental overhaul of the welfare system, transforming it to an active system that fights poverty, creates opportunity and helps people become self-sufficient and independent.

Since 1997 the Government have significantly extended and improved civil rights for disabled people in areas such as employment, education, access to goods and services and transport. Disabled people in Clwyd South will have benefited from these improvements in disability rights. Similarly families with severely disabled 3 and 4-year-old children who are unable, or virtually unable, to walk will have benefited from the Government's decision to lower the minimum age entitlement to the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance from April 2001, while older and less well-off carers have gained extra help through the provisions within the National Carers Strategy.

In 2002–03 we estimate there were around 10 million adults (22 per cent.) and 0.7 million children (5 per cent.) in Great Britain likely to be covered by the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA).

The figures can be broken down to regional level which shows that 31 per cent. of adults and 7 per cent. of children in Wales are likely to be covered by the provisions of the DDA.

Information on the numbers of customers in Clwyd, South who are in receipt of disability living allowance (DLA) and attendance allowance (AA) is in the table.

Clwyd, South parliamentary constituency

Operational year	DLA/AA recipients
2001	6,300
2002	6,800
2003	6,800
2004	7,100

Source:

DWP Information Centre. Figures are from a 5 per cent. sample at 31 August each year.

Through Jobcentre Plus, we are promoting work as the best form of welfare for people of working age. The number of people in work is at historically high levels of over 28.5 million; in Clwyd, South, the proportion in employment has risen to 74 per cent.

Our new deals have helped lone parents, the young unemployed, the long-term unemployed, disabled people, the over 50s and partners of unemployed people to move from benefit into work. Nationally over 1.2 million people have been helped into work by the New Deals, with over 1,400 in Clwyd, South alone.

Significant progress has been made in eradicating child poverty and the latest figures for 2002–03 show that, in the UK, there were over half a million fewer children in relative low income than there were in 1996–97. Since 2001–02 incomes for lone parents in receipt of benefit have risen by more than prices or the cost of living. In April 2005 the child allowance rate in income support for a child up to 18 years old will have been increased by 40 per cent. since 2001–02. Child rates in income support and jobseeker's allowance are also being increased above inflation in April 2005 in line with child tax credit upratings. All of this has benefited 1,200 families in Clwyd, South.

We want all pensioners to have a decent and secure income in retirement and to share fairly in the rising prosperity of the country, and our first priority has been to help the poorest pensioners. The Government will be spending nearly £10 billion more in 2004–05 (in 2004–05 prices) on pensioners as a result of measures introduced since 1997, with around half going to the poorest third.

Our reforms include the State Second Pension, which helps more future pensioners build up better pensions, especially carers. Pension credit, introduced from October 2003, provides a contribution to a guaranteed minimum income for those aged 60 and over and, for the first time, those over aged 65 and over may be rewarded for savings and income. Around 3,860 pensioners in Clwyd, South are receiving pension credit, with an average award of £41.20 per week.

We know that older people are disproportionately affected by fuel poverty. This winter (2004–02) we have again made available a winter fuel payment of £200 for each eligible household with someone aged 60 or over and £300 to those with someone aged 80 or over, to help with their fuel bills. Additionally for this year eligible households with someone aged 70 or over will receive the One-off 70+ Payment of £100 to help with living expenses including council tax bills. It is paid with the winter fuel payment.

The constituency data on winter fuel payments are available in the Library.

Since 1997 single pensioners and pensioner couples have seen a real terms increase in their Basic State Pension of 7 per cent. and 8 per cent., respectively. Some 12,900 pensioners in Clwyd, South have benefited from this increase.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the company pension funds identified in government-funded research as potentially eligible for the financial assistance scheme, broken down by estimated number of relevant scheme members. [210996]

Malcolm Wicks: We are currently analysing information on pension schemes obtained from our recent data collection exercise. Once we have done so we hope, as indicated in the written ministerial statement I gave on 2 December 2004, Official Report, columns 64–66WS, to be able to issue an indicative list of schemes likely to be eligible for assistance if they are subsequently shown to comply with the financial assistance scheme rules.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when his Department first publicly described the financial assistance scheme as an emergency package. [211993]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's announcement of the financial assistance scheme (FAS) on 14 May 2004 made clear that the FAS is intended to deal with the considerable hardship caused by pension schemes winding up underfunded before the introduction of the Pension Protection Fund, which will cover such cases in the future. That objective is reflected in my oral answer on FAS as an emergency package on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 18.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) when he expects the financial assistance scheme to commence; [212004]

(2) what cross-departmental meetings have been held in the last 10 weeks on the timing of the commencement of the operation of the financial assistance scheme. [212005]

Malcolm Wicks: On the expected start date for the financial assistance scheme, I refer to the written statement I gave on 2 December 2004, Official Report, column 66WS. As usual when a new policy is introduced, we have held and continue to hold a number of meetings on operational issues both within DWP and with other relevant Government Departments.

Income Support (Disabled Claimants)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what framework his Department has put in place to enable a disabled claimant whose income support has been withdrawn under the cohabitation rule to have benefit restored if it can be demonstrated that he is not living with his carer as husband and wife; and if he will examine the case of Mr. Woodward, a constituent. [205705]

Malcolm Wicks: Where there is a dispute as to whether unmarried persons who share accommodation can be treated as living as husband and wife for income support purposes, a decision will be made by a decision maker. This decision is based on a careful consideration of all the relevant circumstances. No unmarried persons would be assessed as living together as husband and wife merely because they shared accommodation.

The decision maker will refer to a number of key criteria in deciding whether or not two people are treated as a single unit for income support purposes, but the decision is made on the relationship as a whole. When the decision letter is sent to the customer advising that their income support is no longer payable, they are advised what they can do if they disagree with the decision, including details of the appeals process.

For reasons of confidentiality, I will write to my hon. Friend about his constituent.

Jobcentre Plus

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what standards are set in Jobcentre Plus offices for (a) response times within which telephone numbers which are advertised to the public are answered and (b) the percentage of time in a working day when lines are not engaged; and what the most recent figures are for performance against these standards. [208512]

Jane Kennedy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Dr. Vincent Cable, dated 31 January 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the response times on telephone calls. You asked specifically about the response times before telephone numbers which are advertised to the public are answered, the percentage of time in a working day when lines are not engaged and what the most recent figures are for the performance against these standards. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus has a Customers' Charter which sets out the level of service that customers can expect when dealing with us, including the standards we aim for when answering telephone calls. The current standard states "when you phone us or use a textphone we aim to answer your call within 30 seconds". The Charter is available from our local offices or can be printed from the internet through the Jobcentre Plus website. I have placed a copy of the latest version of the Charter in the Library.

This standard has been in place since the introduction of Jobcentre Plus and applies equally to all areas of the business—whether delivered through our local offices or through the network of modern contact centres that we are putting in place.

In the Jobcentre Plus National Customer Satisfaction Survey 2003, a copy of which is available in the Library, we asked our customers if this standard still met their expectations. Of those respondents who normally contacted us by telephone 69 per cent. felt that it was reasonable to wait at least 30 seconds and nearly two thirds of those people considered it reasonable to wait over a minute.

However, although the length of time taken is considered reasonable by many of our customers we endeavour to answer all incoming calls as quickly as possible for the people who need our services.

You asked for our most recent figures for performance in two separate areas. The performance of the 30 second response time is measured in two ways: through a Mystery Shopping Programme which measures performance against a range of service standards as defined in our Customer Service Target; and by Management Information from our contact centre network. I have provided that information. However, our telephony systems do not measure the percentage of time in a working day when lines are not engaged and I am therefore unable to respond to that part of your question.

Mystery Shopping Programme

We are moving towards an organisational structure in which many of our services will be delivered by telephone—but at the moment nearly 50 per cent. of the local office network has still to be converted to the integrated Jobcentre Plus service delivery model. Many of those offices do not have centralised switchboard systems, nor dedicated telephony teams. We therefore use the Mystery Shopping programme to undertake telephone calls on a sampled basis at a level that will provide us with robust information for the network as a whole.

The programme is undertaken by an external contractor (NOP Mystery Shopping). It includes three telephone calls to each office per quarter. The information for the first three quarters of this year (April—December) show:

Time taken to answer	Percentage
0 to 30 seconds	79.3
31 to50 seconds	5.6
51 to 60 seconds	2.5
Total calls made	10,105

Of the remaining calls, they were either not completed as we instruct NOP to abandon calls not answered within one minute or a message/answer phone service cut in.

Contact Centres

Our network of contact centres deliver services by telephone to those customers making new/repeat claims to benefit or those wanting to find jobs. For each type of service the contact centres have a more demanding internal standard of answering 80 per cent. of all calls within 20 seconds from the time that a call is routed to an agent. There is also a target to answer 95 per cent. of calls.

The contact centres handling new/repeat claims answered on average 80 per cent. of calls within 20 seconds, with 91.1 per cent. of calls being answered.

The contact centres helping customers to find jobs answered 91 per cent. of calls within 20 seconds, with 97.5 per cent. of all calls being answered.

I hope this information is helpful.

New Deal

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what research his Department has conducted into the average cost per additional job created (a) under the new deal programmes and (b) in employment zones; whether the research produced figures broken down by region; and whether research investigated (i) the number who would have found employment notwithstanding the new deal and (ii) the effect on (A) tax receipts and (B) unemployment benefits from the jobs created. [210947]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 25 January 2005]: Research has been conducted on the macro-economic effect of the new deal for young people (NDYP) and the new deal for lone parents (NDLP). Information is not available on costs per additional job by region. A full cost-benefit analysis, including the effect on tax benefits and unemployment benefits, is not available.

New Deal for Young People

The National Institute for Economic and Social Research (NIESR) undertook a detailed macro-economic analysis of NDYP until March 2000[1]. NIESR calculated the net budgetary cost per job was £7,000 per annum (excluding the Environmental Task Force and Voluntary Sector options) or £4,000 per annum when these two options are included. The National Audit Office report[2] suggested that the average annual cost per additional person of any age in employment through the new deal for young people is within the range of £5,000-£8,000.

NIESR calculated that by March 2000, NDYP had reduced unemployment among all age groups by 35,000. They also estimated that NDYP raised youth employment by 15,000 (excluding those on the Environmental Task Force and Voluntary Sector options). Adding these two options raised this to 30,000 more young people in work due to NDYP.

New Deal for Lone Parents

Evidence on the cost-effectiveness of the new deal for lone parents (NDLP) comes from the provisional cost-benefit analysis of NDLP carried out by departmental economists. The findings were published in the NDLP Evaluation Synthesis Report in June 2003[3]. The unit costs of NDLP in 2000–01 were £400 per participant. The gross cost per job was around £860.

A calculation of cost-effectiveness takes into account the additional earnings from movements into work and the costs of running the programme in 2000–01. NDLP provided a significant net economic gain to society, with a net benefit of over £4,400 from each additional job, and a total net gain of £115 million.

The net impact on public finance was also calculated. This included the cost of in-work credits and benefits such as the working families' tax credit. NDLP in 2001–02 resulted in a net exchequer saving of £1,600 for each additional job entry—a total saving of £41.5 million.

Employment Zones

The gross cost per job of Employment Zones has been estimated by the Department to be £3,115 per job without benefit payments and £6,027 per job with benefit payments.

There has been no macro-economic analysis undertaken of the net impact of Employment Zones on the 25 plus client group. Research undertaken by the National Centre for Social Research[4] estimated the comparative outcomes of Employment Zones and new deal 25 plus.

Other New Deals

Information is not available on new deal 25 Plus, new deal for disabled or new deal for partners. Information is not available on those who would have found employment without the new deal.

Occupational Pension Schemes

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether employers who run defined benefit occupational pension schemes are entitled to make unilateral changes to accrual rates in respect of future service; and what rights scheme members have to object in such circumstances. [212018]

Malcolm Wicks: Employers running occupational pension schemes are subject to their individual scheme rules. Schemes can make unilateral changes to future accrual rates if their scheme rules do not prohibit such changes and the accrual rates continue to meet the minimum requirements set out in the Reference Scheme Test. Unless there are provisions in the scheme rules giving scheme members the right to object, they currently have no right to object.

The Pensions Act 2004 will place a statutory obligation on employers to consult scheme members before making major changes to future pension arrangements. The consultation on draft regulations will start later this year and we aim to implement this requirement from April 2006.

Poverty (Stoke-on-Trent)

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households in poverty there were in Stoke-on-Trent in each year since 1997. [209898]

Malcolm Wicks: Poverty is about more than low income; it also impacts on the way people live—their health, housing and the quality of their environment. The sixth annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6239), published in September 2004, sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and presents information on the indicators used to measure progress against this strategy.

Specific information regarding low income for the United Kingdom is available in 'Households Below Average Income 1994–95 to 2002–03'. Data are not available below the regional level and are available only as proportions at the regional level. It should be noted that the reporting of year-on-year changes in the regional low-income rates are not reliable.

Return to Work

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to help disabled people within the Greater London area return to work; and if he will make a statement. [206190]

Maria Eagle: Although there is nothing specific to London, there are a number of programmes designed to help disabled people return to work which are available to disabled people within the Greater London area.

Since 1 October 2004 the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA) have applied to all employers, with the exception of the armed forces.

The ending of the exclusion from the employment provisions of employers with fewer than 15 staff brings into coverage a further one million small employers with seven million further jobs in which 600,000 disabled people already work.

During 2004 the Department undertook a major campaign to raise awareness of the DDA particularly among small and medium-sized businesses. Around a million businesses were directly mailed information; this was supported by radio advertising, press articles in specialist and trade press and website fact sheets. A free information pack with video is also available and the second presentation of the 'Access All Areas' awards, which congratulates small service providers who have made services more accessible, took place in November 2004.

Initiatives which seek to enhance the employability of disabled people include the use of Jobcentre Plus Disability Employment Advisers who visit employers and advise them on the support and help available in the employment of disabled people and the Job Introduction Scheme (JIS) which aims to increase employment opportunities for people with disabilities by offering a weekly grant, currently £75 per week, to employers during the first six weeks of their employment.

New Deal for Disabled People (NDDP) is designed to support people in receipt of disability or health-related benefits in finding and sustaining paid employment. It is delivered through a network of Job Brokers across England, Scotland and Wales who agree with each customer what is the most appropriate route into employment for them and work closely with providers of training and other provision where the customer needs additional help. NDDP Job Brokers were introduced in July 2001 and to September 2004 the programme showed 115,930 registrations with Job Brokers and over 54,000 job entries.

In addition there are a number of other programmes designed to help disabled people return to work which are available to disabled people within the Greater London area.

Access to Work is a specialist disability programme which provides practical advice and support to help disabled people enter or stay in paid employment. The support is aimed at overcoming work related obstacles resulting from disability. It does this through a system of grants towards the cost of providing support. Access to Work is open to those who are employed as well as people moving out of unemployment and is a highly effective job retention measure.

Work Preparation is a highly flexible programme open to benefit recipients (incapacity or unemployment-related benefits) and non-benefit recipients. It is an individually tailored, work-focused programme that enables disabled people to address barriers associated with their disability and prepare for work with the confidence necessary to achieve and sustain their job goals. The vast majority of Work Preparation programmes take the form of short unpaid work placements.

WORKSTEP was introduced in April 2001 to modernise the former Supported Employment Programme. It provides job support to over 30,000 people in employment and in this financial year up to October 2004 just under 900 clients had progressed into open unsupported work. In 2003–04 it held a budget of £163 million, and it is delivered by over 200 providers, including Remploy, in England, Scotland and Wales. WORKSTEP is managed by Jobcentre Plus and involves a three-way partnership between the employer, the WORKSTEP provider and a disabled person.

People receiving incapacity benefit can do permitted work and keep benefit in some circumstances. The pre-Budget report announced new national measures for improving permitted work provision including an extension of the initial period of permitted work from 26 weeks to 52 weeks in all cases and an expansion of permitted work provisions to people facing the greatest barriers to full-time employment.

People with the most limiting conditions such as advanced progressive conditions will be covered by a widened version of the permitted work provisions and be able to work for a longer period of time while maintaining their entitlement to benefit. The new measures will improve take-up and provide better support on entry to permitted work through face-to-face meetings with personal advisers including a requirement for clients to consider the prospects of a move into full-time employment, but only where they are able to do so.

Social Fund

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of (a) Community Care Grants, (b) Crisis Loans and (c) Budgeting Loans in helping homeless people move from temporary to permanent accommodation. [209642]

Malcolm Wicks: There has been no specific study on the effectiveness of the social fund on helping homeless people move from temporary to permanent accommodation. However, we know from more general research that the discretionary social fund is used by people in these circumstances.

DWP research report 139 "The use of the social fund by families with children" contains secondary analysis of the Families and Children study and the Family Resources Survey. This study found that moving home is one of the three main trigger events for social fund loan applications and the main trigger event for lone parents. We can guarantee a Budgeting Loan payment to help people in these circumstances, provided the applicant satisfies the eligibility criteria.

Community Care Grants (CCGs) are also available to help people with the cost of setting up home. In particular it is available to people leaving institutional care, families under exceptional pressure, and people taking part in a planned programme of resettlement. These can include former rough sleepers, families fleeing domestic violence and ex-prisoners. However, as the CCG scheme is discretionary and cash-limited, there can be no guarantee of payment.

We believe that the social fund provides valuable support to the poorest and most vulnerable people in society, including those in temporary accommodation, which is why an additional £90 million has been made available to the discretionary fund over the three years 2003–04 to 2005–06. This has allowed the Community Care Grant budget to be increased from £108 million in 2002–03 to £128 million for 2004–05.

We have recently announced that we intend to abolish the Budgeting Loan 'double debt' rule and reduce the standard repayment rate of 15 per cent. of a customer's benefit to 12 per cent. from April 2006. These changes will make budgeting loans more consistent and easier to understand and access, and will improve the help available to those who are setting up home, in particular many of those who have outstanding social fund debt.

To support these changes the Social Fund loans budget will be increased by £210 million over the three years 2006–07 to 2008–09.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his review of the Social Fund; and when he expects it to be completed. [209641]

Malcolm Wicks: The Social Fund plays an important role in the Government's commitment to tackling poverty and social exclusion. It provides support to millions of people on low incomes, including some of the most vulnerable people in our society.

The Social Fund is continually under review and we have announced a number of improvements. For example, £90 million is being added to the Discretionary Social Fund budget over the three years to 2005–06.

We have recently announced that we intend to abolish the Budgeting Loan 'double debt' rule and reduce the standard repayment rate of 15 per cent. of a customers benefit to 12 per cent., from April 2006. These changes will make Budgeting Loans more consistent and easier to understand and the Social Fund more effective in assisting those families most likely to experience overindebtedness. To support these changes the Social Fund loans budget will be increased by £210 million over the three years 2006–07 to 2008–09.

The Government are also looking at ways in which more affordable loans can be made available to people on low incomes, and is seeking to work in partnership with the private and voluntary sectors to find ways of delivering these, while ensuring that the loans enhance the ability of people to manage their finances responsibly.

We will continue to look at ways in which the Social Fund can be made more effective and contribute to our vision of greater financial inclusion.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Social Fund (a) Community Care Grant, (b) Crisis Loans and (c) Budgeting Loan applications were received in Tower Hamlets in each of the last five years; how many were successful in each case; and what the total expenditure was in each case. [209645]

Malcolm Wicks: Social Fund data are held by Social Fund District or Jobcentre Plus District, so data are unavailable at borough level.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Social Fund (a) Community Care Grant, (b) Crisis Loan and (c) Budgeting Loan applications were received in each Government office region in 2003–04; how many were successful in each case; and what the total expenditure was in each case. [209646]

Malcolm Wicks: Social Fund data were formerly held at Social Fund District level and are now held at Jobcentre Plus District level. These changes occurred gradually over two years and resulted from a number of boundary changes. Parts of some districts formed parts of one or more Government office regions (GOR) at different times. As such data are not available by GOR.

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) when the regional review of the social fund telephone system will be published; [210097]

(2) what the average time taken by members of the Milton Keynes social fund team to respond to enquiries in relation to (a) new applications to the social fund and (b) old cases was in the last period for which figures are available; [210098]

(3) how many staff are employed by the Milton Keynes social fund team; [210099]

(4) what the performance of the Milton Keynes social fund team against targets set for processing new social fund claims has been in each year since 2001. [210101]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 24 January 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Paul Goodman, dated 31 January 2005:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions concerning the regional review of the Social Fund telephone system for the South East region, the average response times to enquiries made in relation to applications to the Social Fund at Milton Keynes, how many staff there are on the team and their performance against targets for processing new claims since 2001. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

It is not our intention to publish details of the review of the Social Fund telephone system as this is an internal review. However, we would be prepared to share local findings with you once they have been finalised and I have asked the District Manager for the Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire district to provide them to you.

The number of people employed to deliver the Milton Keynes Social Fund service is 39.

The following tables show performance against Average Actual Clearance Times (AACT) and accuracy targets for the period for which figures are available.

[1] Nationally set Key Management Indicator.

There is no information available on the average time taken to respond to enquiries made on either new applications to the Social Fund or old cases.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the (a) sickness and absence and (b) turnover rates for Social Fund staff were in the latest period for which figures are available. [212056]

Maria Eagle: The information is not available specifically for Social Fund staff.

State Pension

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the merits of a specific old-age pensioner cost of living index for generating annual increases in state retirement pension. [211178]

Malcolm Wicks: Pensioner Indices, covering pensioners who receive over three-quarters of their income from state pensions and benefits, are produced as part of the Consumer Price Indices in the Retail Prices Index.

Over the period 1997 to 2004, the Pensioners Indices for a single pensioner have increased by 10.6 per cent., whereas the Retail Prices Index has increased by 18.5 per cent. and the Retail Prices Index excluding housing costs by 17.6 per cent. over the same period.

Pensioner Indices are not used to calculate State Pension increases because the Retail Prices Index is a clearer and understandable index that is well trusted and an accepted measure of price increases.

However, in the recent past this Government has increased the basic State Pension by more than the Retail Prices Index.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many pensioners do not receive the full basic state pension because of their contribution records; and by what aggregate amount their pensions fall short of the basic level; [211828]

(2) how many pensioners receive some form of a state pension. [211829]

Malcolm Wicks: As at 31 March 2004 there were 10.35 million pensioners in receipt of a basic State Pension of whom 6.65 million received a full rate basic State Pension with 3.7 million receiving less than the full amount.

The aggregated difference for this group is estimated to be £5.3 billion for 2003–04.

There are some 10.42 million pensioners who receive some form of state pension.

Notes:

1. Full rate means the standard rate of a Category A or B basic state pension based on a person's own or late spouse's national insurance contributions—£77.45 for a Category A pension in 2003–04.

2. State pension means Category A, B, C or D state pension or graduated retirement benefit.

3. The estimated aggregated difference figure is a cash estimate for 2003–04.

4. Numbers of state pensioners are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.

5. Numbers of state pensioners, which are for GB only, are rounded to the nearest 10 thousand, while the estimated aggregated difference is rounded to the nearest 100 million.

IAD Information Centre 5 per cent. sample

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost in each of the 10 financial years from 2006–07, net of savings in means-tested benefits and additional income tax revenues, of paying from April 2006 a basic state pension to all single people aged 75 years or above at the rate of the guarantee credit for single people regardless of contribution record, and a basic state pension to all couples where one or both partners is aged 75 years or above at the rate of the guarantee credit for couples, with that pension being indexed to earnings in subsequent years, and assuming that the savings credit is abolished for those aged 75 years or above, on the basis of the assumption that additional payments will be made to any groups who would otherwise lose out in order to ensure that there are no cash losers; and if he will make a statement. [212019]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available in the form requested.

For the main part of the costs I refer the hon. Member for Northavon to the reply I gave to him on 22 June 2004, Official Report, column 1310W.

It is estimated that in 2006–07 some 300,000 single people or couples may lose net income of around £10 per week.

1. Figures are in 2004–05 prices and have been estimated using the department's Policy Simulation Model for 2006–07. Caseload figures are rounded to the nearest 100,000.

2. Estimates are based on an assessment of changes in entitlement to benefits, and they do not make any allowance for take-up of Income-Related Benefits. The estimate of costs given in the response of 22 June 2004 does allow for differences in take-up.

Tax Credits

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate the Department has made of the number of people in (a) the UK, (b) Scotland and (c) the Moray local authority area seeking (i) financial and (ii) other assistance in JobCentre Plus outlets as a result of Inland Revenue tax credit overpayment recovery procedures since April 2004; and if he will make a statement. [209876]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is not available.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. John Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will amend qualifying arrangements for winter fuel payments so that those whose 60th birthday falls shortly after the qualifying week but before the onset of winter qualify for the payment. [211644]

Malcolm Wicks: We have no current plans to amend the qualifying arrangements for winter fuel payments.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed winter fuel allowance in each of the past seven years. [211714]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of winter fuel payments made in each year for which figures are available is in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Carbon Monoxide

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in implementing the Health and Safety Commission and Executive's recommendations of 2000 relating to carbon monoxide and the gas supply industry; and if she will make a statement. [211695]

Jane Kennedy: I have been asked to reply.

The HSC's fundamental review of the gas safety regime 1999–2000 addressed a wide range of issues, including carbon monoxide poisoning. Of the 49 recommendations made, almost half have been implemented. Action has been taken on the remainder, with the exception of four that are either not yet due or rely on other work being completed. Some of the recommendations were drafted with a continuing obligation and so cannot be deemed as completed.

In the light of HSC's subsequent strategy "Workplace Health and Safety in Great Britain to 2010 and Beyond", published in February 2004 and endorsed by the Government, HSE is seeking to develop new ways of partnering with the relevant stakeholders to secure continuing consumer gas safety through a sensible approach to risk. The Government have decided that HSE should retain its responsibilities for the regulatory regime.

Carbon Sequestration

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the potential for oil-related infrastructure in the North Sea to be used for carbon sequestration purposes; what steps she is taking to encourage such use; and if she will make a statement. [210851]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 25 January 2005]: A DTI study, completed in May 2004, looked at the feasibility of CO_2 enhanced oil recovery in the North Sea and published its findings in "Implementing a Demonstration of Enhanced Oil Recovery using Carbon Dioxide" (DTI Pub URN 04/1028). This study evaluated the potential for CO_2 injection into our North Sea oil fields for the purposes of carbon sequestration together with Enhanced Oil Recovery (EOR). Our studies show that there are several operating fields where this can be technically feasible. However the cost of CO_2 captured and delivered to these sites and the capital costs involved are high, and none of these schemes have been shown to be commercially feasible under the current economic conditions.

We plan to publish a Carbon Abatement Technology Strategy to address the future requirements for reducing carbon dioxide emissions from large-scale sources in the UK and storage in geological structures such as those in the North Sea. This strategy will reconsider the potential for using CO_2 for EOR and eventual sequestration in the North Sea. The strategy is due to be published within the next few weeks.

Companies Entering Administration

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations her Department has received about companies and directors that intentionally make their companies go into administration and start trading again under a similar name. [211593]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The changes to administration introduced by the Enterprise Act 2002 have been generally welcomed. The primary objectives of an administration are to seek to rescue the company as a going concern, or to achieve a better result for the creditors as a whole than would be likely if the company were wound up.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are in place to prevent companies and directors running a company in such a way that it is forced to go into administration. [211702]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Administration is not necessarily a bad thing; it can result in the survival of a company when it gets into financial difficulty. An administrator is under a duty to report to the Secretary of State on the conduct of directors of companies which enter administration. A director can be disqualified from acting in the management of a company for between two and 15 years if there is evidence to prove that they are unfit to run a company.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department takes to ensure that consumers are aware that a company they are dealing with has recently gone into administration. [211703]

Mr. Sutcliffe: When a company enters administration the administrator has to advertise his appointment in the Gazette and once in a newspaper that he thinks is most appropriate for ensuring that the appointment comes to the notice of the company's creditors. Details of the appointment are also placed on the company's file at Companies House, which is publicly available information.

Every invoice, order for goods or services and business letters issued by or on behalf of the company or the administrator must state the name of the administrator and that the affairs, business and property of the company are being managed by him.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been spent on entertainment by her Department in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [204344]

Ms Hewitt: Information on entertainment expenditure broken down as requested is not available. However, the table shows the total expenditure on entertainment by the Department of Trade and Industry in each year between 1998–99 and 2003–04. Information on spend for 1997–98 would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Most of the Department's entertainment expenditure represents the hosting of stakeholder events both in the UK and overseas. This includes refreshments at meetings, working breakfasts and lunches and official events.

All expenditure of official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government accounting.

Total expenditure on entertainment

	£000
1999–2000	887
2001–01	1,089
2001–02	1,165
2002–03	1,311
2003–04	1,110

Digital Conversion

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support the Government have given to development of the digital tick kitemark indicating digitally compatible products and services amongst manufacturers and retailers. [211435]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The digital switchover logo, which brands reliable sources of information about digital switchover, and identifies products and services that meet agreed criteria related to switchover, was created by the Digital Television Project, a partnership between Government, broadcasters, industry, consumer groups and other stakeholders. The development of the logo was the responsibility of the Market Preparation Group, under the Digital Television Action Plan.

The logo is owned by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The DTI licenses its use by trained retailers in conjunction with a point-of-sale consumer information leaflet. The DTI also licenses manufacturers of digital receivers, recorders, and aerials in accordance with agreed specifications. The DTI owns the licensing scheme, and is providing seedcorn funding to it. We are working with the aerial installation industries to establish a link between licensed use of the switchover logo, and the holding of a new vocational qualification, by means of a registered digital installer scheme.

The DTI has applied for certification mark status for the logo, to ensure the appropriate legal protection for the logo and its users. The licensing scheme will be supported by compliance monitoring, in line with requirements for having the logo confirmed as a certification mark. The DTI has also informed Trading Standards organisations about the logo and the requirements of the scheme.

Domestic Fuel Oil

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many oil installers and servicers in the UK are registered with Oftec. [211044]

Keith Hill: I have been asked to reply.

5,200 firms are registered.

Business Link

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her Department's total spending on rebranding the Business Link service was; and how much of the total spending was on external consultants. [210281]

Ms Hewitt: This rebranding work was carried out as part of a wider programme of development of the Business Link service. This work cost £67,000 and this amount has been spent with an external specialist branding consultant.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people she estimates are fuel poor in (a) England and (b) Stoke-on-Trent. [211709]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: For the most recently available fuel poverty figures for England, I would refer my hon. Friend to the response which I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Malcolm Bruce) on 30 November 2004, Official Report, column 78W. This sets out how the fuel poverty figures for England are produced, and gives figures for each Government office region.

We are unable to provide a breakdown of the number of households in fuel poverty by individual towns

Hydrogen Economy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the US Administration with regard to movement towards a hydrogen-based economy; and what joint research with the hydrogen economy is being undertaken. [210927]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK, like the US, participates in various multi-lateral fora dealing with hydrogen energy. These include the US-led International Partnership for the Hydrogen Economy (IPHE), the International Energy Agency (IEA) Hydrogen Coordination Group and the IEA Hydrogen Implementing Agreement. These provide mechanisms for international collaborative research and development to support the transition to a hydrogen economy.

Technology has been one of the key themes of the on-going energy dialogue between the US and the UK. There has been a particular focus on hydrogen, leading to a major conference held in London in November last year. At that conference, I announced the opening of a hydrogen scholarship scheme under which up to five British researchers per year will be able to spend time engaged in hydrogen research with US scientists at the Sandia National Laboratory in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research the Government (a) are undertaking and (b) have commissioned on the conversion of (i) oil and (ii) nuclear energy to a hydrogen-based economy. [211605]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Last year the DTI commissioned a study to develop a strategic framework for hydrogen energy activities in the UK. This was undertaken by E4tech, Element Energy and Eoin Lees Energy and was completed in December. A report of their analysis has been placed on the DTI's Sustainable Energy Policy Network website. We will be considering the specific recommendations carefully, and will publish these, together with our response, by the end of February 2005.

The analysis has found that for the UK six hydrogen energy chains could provide cost competitive carbon abatement together with enhanced upstream energy security by 2030. All six chains are for transport applications using fuel cell powered vehicles. The six chains are:

Biomass to hydrogen

Renewable electricity to hydrogen

Nuclear electricity to hydrogen

Natural gas to hydrogen with carbon capture and storage

Coal to hydrogen with carbon capture and storage

Novel hydrogen production routes.

Online Shopping Fraud

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if the Government will investigate the effectiveness of measures to prevent fraud in online shopping transactions; [205549]

(2) what powers there are to protect online shoppers from fraud; [205550]

(3) what steps the Government plans to take to make internet shopping more secure. [210010]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government work with the police and industry to tackle fraud and other online crime through a number of initiatives. A key factor in dealing with online fraud is prevention and education and the Government take an active role in educating computer users about the risks of fraud committed through the internet. The Home Office website provides advice on avoiding internet fraud and the Home Office has also created, and maintains the 'e-tailing mini site', which forms part of the crime reduction website. The mini site provides information to help both businesses and consumers protect themselves specifically when using the internet.

The Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 protect consumers against payment card fraud including credit cards. The Regulations apply to contracts made at a distance including online ones. The card issuer is required to reimburse consumers the full amount in the event of fraudulent use of the consumer's card.

In addition, the Consumer Credit Act 1974 also allows consumers to recover the cost of a purchase made by credit card from either the supplier or the credit card provider. This provides additional protection should a consumer be unable to trace the company they were dealing with over the internet. The Banking Code stipulates that consumers' liability for misuse of a card will be limited unless there is evidence that they have acted fraudulently or without reasonable care.

Through the Department of Trade and Industry's Safe Internet Shopping initiative consumers have access to information on how to shop online safely. Consumers need to be aware of security features on websites and to look for a closed padlock sign when they are asked for personal details. The Consumer Direct website at www.consumerdirect.gov.uk also offers advice on internet auctions, online scams and information on a range of consumer-related issues.

The Consumer Protection (Distance Selling) Regulations 2000 are included in a list of EC Directives, which is part of the Injunctions Directive. The Injunctions Directive requires all member states to have in place arrangements, which will allow certain unlawful actions harmful to consumers to be stopped in good time. The Injunctions Directive allows consumer protection bodies designated by the member states to apply to the courts or competent administrative authorities for orders to require traders to cease conduct that constitutes a breach of any of the consumer protection directives specified. Part 8 of the Enterprise Act 2002 implements the Injunctions Directive in the UK.

Co-operation arrangements exist to ensure we can tackle scams that cross borders. In Europe member states have just agreed a Regulation (Consumer Protection Co-operation) to ensure that all consumer protection enforcement agencies are working closely together to combat cross border scams, and 30 OECD countries have all signed up to a co-operation agreement to tackle cross border fraud that affects consumers. The International Consumer Protection Enforcement Network (ICPEN) is a network of consumer protection enforcement agencies in over 30 countries that exists to facilitate cross border co-operation on cross border scams and consumer fraud.

The Home Office has published, jointly with the Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) a leaflet on card safety, which includes a section on using cards safely over the internet. The leaflet has been sent to all police forces in England and Wales, and to Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships. It is also available on the Home Office website and the e-tailing mini site, and APACS members (banks) will be sending a version of the leaflet to their cardholders.

The Home Office is represented on an industry-led Steering Group, which aims to tackle 'Card Not Present' (CNP) fraud (which includes fraud over the internet). We support practical measures being introduced by the industry to increase levels of security for internet transactions. These include Address Verification Services (AVS) and Card Security Code (CSC), along with Mastercard Secure Code and Verified by Visa which require password verification for internet transactions. These initiatives are already making a significant impact on CNP Fraud. The work of the CNP Steering Group has also led to the production of a manual (Spot and Stop Card Fraud Retailer Pack), which aims to educate merchants on the dangers of CNP fraud and the steps which can be taken to prevent it.

Government are also involved in the development of Project Endurance, an initiative that will launch an internet security public awareness campaign in spring this year. The project is an alliance of public and private sector, which brings together a number of UK Government Departments and law enforcement organisations with a number of high-profile private sector companies. This campaign is to be targeted at micro businesses and consumers, primarily aimed at helping these users gain confidence in using the internet.

We will continue to monitor and review the effectiveness of these many different initiatives.

Post Office

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the size of the rural network of post offices; and what steps her Department is taking to support the rural post office network. [211467]

Mr. Sutcliffe: According to the latest figures held by Post Office Ltd., there are currently 8,102 rural post offices in its network.

The Government have placed on Post Office Ltd. a formal obligation to maintain the rural post office network and to prevent avoidable closures of rural post offices. The direction remains in force at least until April 2006. The Government have made a major investment to support the rural network. It initially made available £450 million (£150 million a year) for the 3 years 2003–04 to 2005–06 to help the Post Office to maintain the parts of the rural post office network that could not be sustained on a commercial basis. Subject to state aid clearance it will make available a further £300 million to extend this financial support for the rural network until April 2008.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will take steps to amend the requirement to prevent avoidable closures placed on Post Office Ltd. to one that allows greater flexibility and innovation. [211468]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I am satisfied that Post Office Ltd. (POL) already has sufficient scope to allow for flexibility and innovation.

As part of our ongoing commitment to maintaining the rural post office network, £25 million has already been allocated to POL to run a wide range of innovative pilots. Because this activity is geared towards replacing traditional outlets with some alternative means of access rather than simply closing them, it is permitted within the scope we have set for the company to run the pilots. I have asked POL for a full report on pilot activity by the end of this year. The lessons that will emerge from these trials over the next 12 months will be crucial in informing longer-term decisions about the future shape of the rural post office network.

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of Triangle and HI Europe's research findings in 2002 on 'The Impact of Post Office Closures in the Rural Community'. [211469]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None. This research carried out by Triangle and HI Europe in 2002 was commissioned by Postwatch.

As made clear in the statement of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to this House on 16 September 2004, Official Report, columns 166–68WS, the Government are making available to Post Office Ltd. (POL), subject to State Aid provisions, a further £300 million between 2006 and 2008 in order to enable well informed decisions to be taken to ensure that post office services to rural communities can be maintained on a more sustainable basis. This additional transitional funding is intended to sustain the rural post office network while work is undertaken on alternative, innovative ways of providing access to postal services.

POL currently has under way a wide ranging programme of pilot projects to examine novel, effective and efficient ways of delivering postal services. I intend to ask the company for a report on this activity by the end of the year. This report and other relevant information will inform decisions concerning long-term sustainable service delivery to rural communities.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2004, Official Report, column 81W, on post office closures, when she expects Post Office Ltd. to reply to the hon. Member for Gordon; and if she will make a statement on the average time taken by Post Office Ltd. to respond to such parliamentary questions. [211692]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Royal Mail and Post Office Ltd. make every effort to issue replies to hon. Members within five working days of receiving our request for information.

It would appear that due to an administrative error the hon. Member's inquiries of 30 November 2004 were not passed on to David Mills' office at Post Office Ltd. for a direct reply. This has now been done and a response will be sent direct to the hon. Member within the next few days.

Public Information Expenditure

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much her Department spent on providing (a) printed public information and (b) other public information in the last year for which figures are available; and what public information her Department provides, broken down by type of medium in which it is provided. [209721]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested is not held centrally in the form required and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Regulation

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her plans to reduce regulation. [209935]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI's plans to reduce regulatory burdens have been set out in the five-year programme, which I launched on 17 November 2004.

Royal Mail

Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment she has made of Royal Mail's performance against its licence targets for the first quarter of 2004–05; and if she will make a statement; [211465]

(2) what assessment she has made of the (a) quality of service and (b) recorded performance of Royal Mail in the CH postcode area. [211466]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Royal Mail's quality of service both nationally and in the CH postcode area was below the targets in the first quarter of 2004–05, when performance was affected by the massive restructuring taking place at Royal Mail. Improving the quality of postal services throughout the country is an operational matter for the Royal Mail Board. I have been assured by Allan Leighton that this is the Board's top priority and Adam Crozier, Chief Executive of Royal Mail, has taken personal responsibility for this improvement.

I am very pleased that Royal Mail has improved its performance both nationally and in the CH postcode area since the first quarter of 2004–05. In quarter 2, 92.1 per cent. of 1st class mail was delivered nationally the next day, just below the target of 92.5 per cent. and up from 88.6 per cent. in April. In the CH postcode area, 92.1 per cent. of 1st class mail was also delivered the next day in quarter 2, up from 87.3 per cent. in April.

SME Support

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support is being provided to small and medium-sized enterprises for trade and investment abroad in 2004–05; and how much was provided in 2003–04. [210656]

Nigel Griffiths: UK Trade and Investment programme budget for trade development and outward investment activities is £78.6 million. In 2003–04 expenditure under the same heading was £75.9 million. Much of this is directed at the SME sector but precise figures are not available.

Telephone Line Repairs

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions (a) she and (b) her Department has had with (i) the regulator and (ii) British Telecom concerning the time taken to restore faulty telephone lines to vulnerable people. [211184]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department discussed the provision of priority fault repair services to end-users with a disability with the then regulator the Office of Telecommunications (Oftel) when the framework for Universal Service was drawn up. The provision of priority fault repair services to end-users with a disability is mandatory for all telecoms providers in the UK. The Department consulted BT on the framing of the order and considered the company's comments.

Welsh Language Scheme

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her Department's Welsh Language Scheme was approved by the Welsh Language Board; and on what date the scheme was implemented. [211339]

Ms Hewitt: My Department's Welsh Language Scheme was approved by the Welsh Language Board on 30 August 2000. Some elements came into operation immediately and the remainder were implemented progressively over the next 12 months.

Wind Farms

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) examined on the impact of wind farms on property values. [210476]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 27 January 2005]: Although the Department has not commissioned research into the impact of wind farms on property value, the Department is aware of the survey on the housing market and the impact of wind farms conducted by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors (RICS—2004).

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Alcohol Advertising

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will introduce legislation to ban the screening of television advertisements for alcoholic beverages before 9 pm. [211721]

Estelle Morris: No. The Government take the issue of binge drinking and alcohol misuse, particularly among young people, very seriously and accepted all the conclusions of the Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy for England. These included asking Ofcom, which has statutory responsibility for the regulation of broadcast advertising, to oversee a review of the rules on alcohol advertising. Ofcom's Code amendments were published on 1 November 2004 and came into effect from 1 January this year. These changes significantly strengthen the rules on broadcast alcohol advertising in many areas, particularly to protect the under-18s.

Civil Servants

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost of the enhanced early retirement scheme for civil servants in her Department and its agencies was in each year from 1997–98 to 2003–04 and what the estimated cost will be in each year from 2004–05 to 2007–08; and if she will make a statement. [211646]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has had no early retirement "scheme" as such for many years; and has no current plans to institute one. Instead individual cases are considered on their merits under the terms of the Civil Service Pension Scheme.

The table shows the overall early retirement costs for DCMS and The Royal Parks Agency from 1997–98 to 2007–08. The costs cover payments where employees have been granted enhanced early retirement, approved early retirement, or one-off compensation payments.

	DCMS	RPA
1997–98	155,272	72,919
1998–99	72,269	62,032
1999–2000	145,060	46,235
2000–01	42,000	34,494
2001–02	79,608	28,576
2002–03	58,362	20,632
2003–04	92,972	4,419
2004–05	88,000	3,436
2005–06	81,681	72,000
2006–07	49,042	25,000
2007–08	36,776	14,000

Copyright

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the (a) Football Association, (b) the Premier League and (c) the Football League on the effects of the recent European Court of Justice ruling on copyright. [211904]

Mr. Caborn: None.

However, my officials are aware of the European Court of Justice's ruling and are currently exploring the issue with the Football Association, the FA Premier League and Football League to identify any implications it may have on football clubs in England.

Discussions have also been held with officials at the Scottish Executive and the Department for Trade and Industry who have responsibility for copyright legislation.

Country Shows

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the estimated tax payable under the Licensing Act 2003 is by organisers of country shows which attract attendance of up to (a) 5,000, (b) 10,000 and (c) 15,000; and if she will make a statement. [211591]

Mr. Caborn: There is no tax payable under the Licensing Act 2003. No provisions of the 2003 Act give rise to additional tax liability for organisers of country shows. Fee levels under the 2003 Act were announced on 21 January. They have been set centrally at a level that we believe will allow the full recovery of the costs of administration, inspection and enforcement associated with the new system. There is an additional fee for premises licence applications for exceptionally large scale events (over 5,000 people) unless certain conditions apply. We met with organisers of agricultural and country shows and, on the basis of those discussions, believe from what we have been told that such events can be organised in such a way as to be unlikely to be affected by the additional fee for large scale events.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the impact on rural shows of the increased licence fees for special events. [210480]

Mr. Caborn: We have had useful discussions with organisers of agricultural and country shows and believe from what we have been told that they can be organised in a way so that they are unlikely to be affected by the additional fee for large events. The same should be true for outdoor sports events, flower shows and other popular events that are not in themselves licensable. Where events include licensable activities, we are confident that the events may be organised so that those activities can, in the main, be licensed separately and not therefore trigger the additional fee.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) organisers of rural shows and (b) rural local authorities on the increased licence fees for special events. [210481]

Mr. Caborn: The draft fee levels payable under the Licensing Act 2003 were subject to a public consultation which ended on 23 December 2004. Views from parties with an interest in fee levels have been considered, including from organisers of rural shows and rural local authorities. In addition we met the Country Land and Business Association and the Association of Show and Agricultural Organisations and concluded, on the basis of those discussions, that they are unlikely to be affected by the additional fees for large-scale events.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts in her Department have been granted to (a) EDS, (b) Fujitsu and (c) EDS and Fujitsu jointly in each of the last two years; whether they were open to competition; for what they were granted; for how much, and over what period of time; and if she will make a statement. [211610]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has let no contracts to either EDS or Fujitsu in the last two years.

Departmental Policies (Preseli Pembrokeshire)

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to Preseli, Pembrokeshire constituency, the effects on Preseli, Pembrokeshire of her Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [211323]

Mr. Caborn: Most of the matters for which the Department is responsible in England have been devolved in Wales to the National Assembly for Wales. However, there are some reserved areas in which the Government has introduced initiatives which affect Preseli Pembrokeshire.

Through our commitment to public service broadcasting we have helped to foster an environment in which a creative, commercially successful broadcasting industry provides a wide range of UK-made, high quality and original programmes catering for all viewers and listeners. We have ensured a secure funding base for the BBC and S4C, while giving them the freedom to develop commercial operations which complement and support their public service remit. The Communications Act 2003 includes provisions to ensure that public service broadcasting will continue to have a key role to play in the digital future.

In November 2000 we introduced free television licenses for people aged 75 or over. Information on the number of beneficiaries by constituency is not available. However, according to Department for Work and Pensions records, the number of households in Preseli Pembrokeshire with at least one person aged 75 or over claiming the winter fuel payment in 2003–04 was 4,835.

We have changed the licensing laws to allow people to hold and attend commercial dances on Sunday, to make it easier for restaurants to open an hour later, and to relax the alcohol licensing hours from 11 pm on New Year's Eve to 11 am on New Year's Day in all future years; and we have given the police greater powers to take action against under-age drinking and disorderly and noisy licensed premises. The Licensing Act 2003, when fully implemented, will introduce a streamlined, consistent and fair licensing regime for the provision of alcohol, public entertainment and late night refreshment It will provide greater choice for consumers, bring regeneration and increased employment opportunities and protect local residents whose lives have been blighted by disturbance and antisocial behaviour.

The Licensing Act 2003 (Commencement) Order 2003 repealed those parts of the Licensing Act 1964 which allowed the local government electorate in the counties and county boroughs of Wales to requisition polls to decide whether licensed premises should be allowed to open on Sundays. This has removed the uncertainty which businesses in Wales, including those in Preseli Pembrokeshire, faced, allowing them to exercise long-term planning. It also removes a costly administrative burden on local authorities and an artificial difference in licensing controls between Wales and England, which prevented businesses and customers exercising freedom of choice.

The Gambling Bill will, when implemented, transfer responsibility for licensing gambling premises to local authorities. Local people and businesses will be able to make representations about applications for licences and local authorities will be able to decide not to issue licences for casino premises. These changes will give local communities, including those in Preseli Pembrokeshire, a greater say in the regulation of gambling in their area.

No statistics are available for international visits or expenditure by constituency. However, VisitBritain's successful marketing activities in promoting Britain abroad as an attractive tourist destination benefit all parts of the country, including Preseli Pembrokeshire.

Information from the National Lottery distributors indicates that since 2 May 1997 Preseli Pembrokeshire has benefited from over 430 awards totalling over £17.8 million. Of these, 63 awards worth over £3.7 million were made by the New Opportunities Fund which was established by the Government in 1999. The New Opportunities Fund merged with the Community Fund in June 2004 to form the Big Lottery Fund.

Digital Conversion

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the statement in the recent report by the Ofcom Consumer Panel that, though financial barriers to digital conversion exist, they are of secondary importance, represents Government policy. [211367]

Estelle Morris: The independent Ofcom Consumer Panel report published in November gave views on what help may be necessary to ensure the interests of the most vulnerable consumers are protected. We are considering the recommendations in the Panel's report and will be responding in due course.

European Audiovisual Observatory

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her Department's policy towards European Community participation in the European Audiovisual Observatory; what activities the Observatory undertakes; and at what cost. [211362]

Mr. Caborn: The Department welcomes and supports European Community participation in the European Audiovisual Observatory. The aim of the Observatory is to improve the transfer, and promote transparency of information in the audiovisual industry in Europe. The Observatory analyses and distributes a wide range of statistics, as well as data on economic, legal and financial matters concerning the film, TV, DVD/video and new media industries in the organisation's member countries. The European Audiovisual Observatory Budget for 2005 totals EUR 2,311,000.

Football Stadiums

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will meet representatives of the Stand Up Sit Down campaign to discuss standing at football matches; and if she will make a statement. [210986]

Mr. Caborn: The Government have always made their position on standing at football matches very clear—specifically that the grounds of the clubs in the top two divisions of football should remain all-seated.

While the Department has no plans at present to meet representatives from the Stand Up Sit Down campaign, the Football Licensing Authority (FLA), our advisers on safety at football grounds, met them on 20 January 2005 to discuss their proposals.

Free Television Licences

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many households in Warrington, South are in receipt of free television licences. [211404]

Estelle Morris: TV Licensing, which administers free television licences for people aged 75 or over as agents for the BBC, are not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, the number of households with at least one person aged 75 or over claiming the winter fuel payment in the Warrington, South constituency in 2003–04 was 4,850, according to Department for Work and Pensions records.

Historic Sites (Babylon)

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what reports the Government have received on damage done to historic sites in Babylon; and if she will make a statement. [210094]

Tessa Jowell: I have studied the report prepared by John Curtis of the British Museum on the damage caused to the site of Babylon. In addition to that report, my officials have kept closely in touch with Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials on matters relating to the protection of Iraq's heritage.

I have also offered to help meet the cost of three interns coming to the UK from the Iraqi Ministry of Culture to learn the skills that will be necessary for the future management of the Babylon site and have confirmed this in my recent discussion with Mr. Muffeed Al Jazairi, the Iraqi Minister of Culture. The UK also remains committed to the terms of the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1546, which stressed that all parties need to respect and protect Iraq's archaeological, historical, cultural and religious heritage.

Liquor Licensing

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the net costs to local authorities of administering liquor licensing under the Licensing Act 2003. [209889]

Mr. Caborn: Fee levels under the Licensing Act 2003 were announced on Friday 21 January. They will be set centrally at a level that we believe will allow the full recovery of the costs of administration, inspection and enforcement associated with the new system. Therefore, we anticipate that there will be no net costs for local authorities. However, we will monitor the situation and establish an independent review of the fees and costs once the new system is in operation.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) local authorities and (b) the alcohol industry regarding the proposed annual fees for liquor licensing. [209734]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 24 January 2005]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, and I have met the Local Government Association, Association of London Government, Local Authorities Co-ordinators of Regulatory Services and individual local authorities to discuss the fee levels to be made under the Licensing Act 2003. We have had no formal discussions with the alcohol industry about the fee levels. The proposed fees were subject to a public consultation between 4 November and 23 December 2004 to which we received 124 responses from industry and their representatives. These responses were fully considered before decisions on the fees were made. The fee levels were announced by the Secretary of State on 21 January and the relevant regulations were laid before Parliament on 20 January.

London Olympic Bid

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many times since May 2003 (a) she and (b) Ministers from her Department have visited (i) Newham, (ii) Tower Hamlets, (iii) Hackney and (iv) Waltham Forest in connection with the 2012 Olympic bid. [210483]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have visited Newham, Tower Hamlets, Hackney and Waltham Forest on five separate occasions since May 2003 in relation to London's 2012 Olympic bid. The Department and London 2012 are in regular contact with the representatives of all London boroughs—in particular the Olympic boroughs of Newham, Tower Hamlets, Hackney, Waltham Forest and Greenwich.

National Lottery

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidelines she gives to the National Lottery board about the criteria for making grants; and if she will make a statement. [211535]

Estelle Morris: Lottery distributors are, and are intended to be, independent of Government, but they are obliged to take account of policy and financial directions issued to them by the Secretary of State, when making funding decisions. These directions set out the framework for the wider aims of lottery funding. Copies of the policy directions have been deposited in the Library of the House.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004 departmental special advisers travelled (a) domestically and (b) abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [202262]

Mr. Caborn: Between 31 March 2003 and 31 March 2004, total domestic travel and subsistence claims by DCMS special advisers came to £1,156.93. No foreign travel was undertaken during this period. The number of occasions and places visited are not held in an accessible form. All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the guidelines set out in the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions between 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003 her special advisers travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [207173]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 566.

Sports and Community Clubs

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received from the Central Council of Physical Recreation and other bodies about the proposed levels of licensing fees for sports and community clubs. [211741]

Mr. Caborn: The Department received representations from a number of sports bodies, including the Central Council of Physical Recreation, in response to its consultation on draft fees for the new licensing regime. Their views were considered along with representations we received from local authorities and other bodies, as well as individuals. The fees were laid in Parliament on 20 January and copies are in the House Libraries. Further correspondence was received from sports-related bodies when the consultation period ended.

Sports Funding

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much central Government funding has been allocated to sport in each year since 1994. [211903]

Mr. Caborn: Figures for central Government funding for sport are shown in the tables.

Figures shown are outturn, except those for 2004–05, which are plans.

Sports Participation

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made by Sport England of the levels of participation in sport by children outside school age. [211743]

Mr. Caborn: Sport England has not carried out or commissioned any formal research on this age group, however, the following data taken from the Health Survey for England (HSE) 2002 shows the percentage of two to five-year-olds, by age and sex, who participated in a sport and exercise activity on at least one day in the seven days before interview. The survey does not measure activities within school.

Figures taken from the General Household Survey (GHS) for 2002 show that 72 per cent. of 16 to 19-year-olds participated in at least one sport, game or physical activity, excluding walking, in the four weeks before interview. However, the survey does not distinguish between those in this age group who are in full-time education and those that are not.

DCMS, in partnership with its NDPBs including Sport England, will shortly be commissioning a new survey to gather information on participation and attendance from individuals, including older children, in private households in England.

Tourism

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on Government support for the tourism industry in the last financial year. [210900]

Mr. Caborn: Grant in aid from the Department to VisitBritain totalled £45.9 million in 2003–04, of which £35.5 million was allocated to promoting Britain overseas, and £10.4 million to promoting England within Britain.

In addition, the Greater London Authority received grant in aid of £1.9 million from my Department for the promotion of tourism in 2003–04.

Regional support for tourism is the responsibility of the nine English Regional Development Agencies, which together allocated a total of £58.9 million for that purpose in 2003–04 from their central Government funding.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people are employed in the tourism sector. [211553]

Mr. Caborn: As at June 2003 there were 2.2 million people working in the tourism-related industries in Great Britain. Tourism employment estimates are regularly published in the National Statistics series 'Labour Market Trends'.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of gross domestic product was accounted for by the tourism industry in the last year for which figures are available; and what the change in percentage of gross domestic product has been in each of the last 10 years. [211554]

Mr. Caborn: The available data for tourism's contribution to total United Kingdom gross value added (GVA) are shown in the table.

	Tourism GVA as a percentage of UK GVA
2000	3.8
2001	3.6
2002	3.5
2003	3.4

Industry-specific data are available only for GVA, not GDP. GDP differs from GVA in that subsidies on products are subtracted and taxes are added to yield estimates of GDP, but these flows are estimated at the whole economy level only.

These figures are sourced from the 'UK Tourism Satellite Account—First Steps Project' publication, which was completed in September 2004. The project assessed the size of the tourism industry as at 2000 and produced forward estimates of key headline indicators, based on the available data, up to 2003.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the rate of productivity in the tourism industry was in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [211556]

Mr. Caborn: The rates of productivity for the tourism industry in 2001 and 2002 are shown in the table.

	Output per worker (Percentage change on previous year)
2001	2.2

Data is sourced from the Annual Business Inquiry, which uses calendar, rather than financial, years. Provisional data for 2003 was released on 16 December 2004 and will be used to update the tourism productivity figures in February.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) overseas tourists and (b) domestic tourists visited London in (i) 2003 and (ii) 2004. [211557]

Mr. Caborn: The number of visits by (a) overseas tourists and (b) domestic tourists in 2002 and 2003 are shown in the table. Figures for 2004 will be published on 8 April for overseas visitors and in May for domestic visitors.

TV Licences

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many households in Northern Ireland are estimated to have a television set for which there is no television licence. [210604]

Estelle Morris: The BBC have indicated that the data required to produce accurate estimates is not available for the nations and regions. However, as the hon. Member may be aware, the National Audit Office's 2002 report 'The BBC: Collecting the Television Licence Fee' indicated that the estimated evasion rate for Northern Ireland at the end of March 2001 was 17.6 per cent.

Working at Height

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the (a) Royal Yachting Association and (b) Bristol Mountaineering Council about regulations involving working at heights. [211740]

Mr. Caborn: The Working at Height regulations are the responsibility of the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), so neither I nor the Secretary of State have conducted any discussions with either the Royal Yachting Association or the British Mountaineering Council. However, I understand that the HSE is exploring the issue and its impact upon the adventure activities sector.

CABINET OFFICE

E-government

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) how much was spent on e-government in each year from 2001 to 2004 (a) in total and (b) broken down by Government Department; [208648]

(2) what estimate he has made of the savings made by each Government Department in each year from 2001 to 2004 arising from the introduction of e-government services. [208519]

Mr. Miliband: The Cabinet Office does not collect information on individual Departments' spend on e-government. However, in the 2002 Spending Review, the Government committed £6 billion to the development of electronic government over a three year period.

The Spending Review 2004 (SR04) reported that significant investment in ICT in both central and local government is streamlining the delivery of services to the public, cutting transaction costs and reducing paperwork. Examples of efficiency gains can be found in the Spending Review, copies of which are available in the Library and at:

http://www.hm-Treasury.gov.uk/spending_review/spend_sr04/report/spend__sr04_repindex.cfm.

SR04 also indicated that the e-Government Unit will play a key role in accelerating and underpinning the changes necessary for the achievement of departmental efficiency gains through transactional services. The required outcome of this is efficient delivery of high quality public services resulting in a total of £1.3 billion in departmental efficiency gains over a three year period.

Freedom of Information

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what categories of information are available under Freedom of Information legislation that have not been provided in written parliamentary answers by his office in the last three years. [207823]

Mr. Milburn: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 24 January 2005, Official Report, column 140W, by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (Mr. Leslie).

Ministerial Cars

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the average cost of providing a car and driver to enable a Government Minister to carry out official duties was in the last year for which figures are available; and what the average cost was in that year for (a) a Cabinet Minister and (b) a Minister outside the Cabinet. [208193]

Mr. Miliband: The responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its chief executive Mr. Nick Matheson to write to the hon. Member. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Building Regulations

Mr. Stringer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what response he has received from (a) the Better Regulation Task Force and (b) the Small Business Service to (i) his proposed revision of part L of the building regulations and (ii) the proposed revised standard assessment procedure. [211586]

Phil Hope: The Government's proposals for revising the Building Regulations Part L were published for consultation last July. The consultation document which included a draft regulatory impact assessment was not referred to the Better Regulation Task Force. It was referred to the Small Business Service, which pointed to the need for the Small Firms Impact Test to be undertaken.

The Government's Standard Assessment Procedure for the Energy Rating of Dwellings is a method of calculation which is promulgated by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and it is currently under review. It is not a regulatory instrument and has not been referred to the Task Force or the Small Business Service.

Business Rates

Brian Cotter: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how his Department reached the assessment in the final regulatory impact assessment on the Local Government Act 2003—Small Business Rate Relief that over 400,000 businesses would benefit from small business rate relief; [212032]

(2) how many of the hereditaments in England with a rateable value of less than £25,000 are defined as small businesses. [212033]

Mr. Raynsford: Small Business Rate Relief is applied to qualifying properties with a rateable value under £10,000 while qualifying properties under the thresholds (£15,000 outside Greater London and £21,500 inside Greater London) pay the lower small business rate multiplier.

The scheme is aimed at businesses occupying a single small property and so is not available to larger businesses with several small hereditaments (e.g. a chain of small shops, a company with many advertising rights).

About 1,017,000 hereditaments outside London have a rateable value (RV) less than £15,000 and 196,000 hereditaments within Greater London are under £21,500 RV. Because the rating list does not distinguish between those occupied by large companies with many small hereditaments from those occupied by businesses occupying a single hereditament, the Government conducted research in early 2004 on the likely eligibility for the relief. This research indicated that around 350,000 businesses would benefit. A summary of this research is on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website.

This figure was based on a proposed threshold of £8,000 and was revised when the threshold was set at £10,000. The new estimates indicated that about 430,000 would be eligible for the relief and this was reflected in the consultation paper and RIA as "over 400,000".

As a result of the feedback from the consultation, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister further extended the eligibility for the relief by allowing applicants to discount additional properties with a rateable value below £2,200. We estimate that this will further increase the eligibility for the relief.

Cantaxx

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the occasions on which (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have communicated with Canatxx Gas Storage Ltd., Canatxx Energy Ventures Ltd. or a company associated with Canatxx (i) by letter, (ii) by e-mail, (iii) by telephone and (iv) in person; and if he will publish the content of such communication on the departmental website. [209828]

Yvette Cooper: As of 31 January 2005, we are not aware of any occasions on which Ministers or officials in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have communicated with Canatxx Gas Storage Ltd., Canatxx Energy Ventures Ltd. or any company known to be associated with Canatxx.

Casinos

Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether casinos will remain within the D2 planning category; and if he will make a statement. [211464]

Keith Hill: After the second report of the Joint Scrutiny Committee on the Gambling Bill my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister undertook to review the possibility of a new 'use class' for casinos.

On 1 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport announced that the Government had agreed in principle to require a change of use to a casino to be subject to planning control. Therefore, the Government are minded to change the use classes order but this is subject to further detailed consideration of the outcome of the review and the usual consultation.

Council Housing (Right to Buy)

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 216W, on council house sales, how much of the £3.0248 billion capital receipts generated from right-to-buy sales in 2003–04 was (a) set aside by local authorities and (b) centrally pooled for investment in new social housing. [209700]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information on the value of the proportion of housing capital receipts set aside in 2003–04, and could provide it only at disproportionate cost. Under the set-aside regime, which was in force during the year in question, with-debt authorities were obliged to set aside 75 per cent. of the capital receipt arising from the disposal of a Housing Revenue Account dwelling through Right To Buy against debt. Debt-free authorities did not have to set aside any portion of the receipt. Central pooling of housing capital receipts was not introduced until 1 April 2004.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps the Government has taken to alert council tenants to changes in the Right to Buy regulations. [211189]

Keith Hill: Since 1980, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and its predecessors has published information for tenants on the terms of the Right to Buy scheme, in the form of a booklet. This booklet, entitled "Your right to buy your home", has been updated regularly to reflect changes to the scheme introduced by successive Governments. It was revised to include the reductions in maximum discounts introduced in March 2003 and reissued at that time, and has since been revised again to reflect the changes to the scheme introduced by the Housing Act 2004. A copy of that latest revision was sent to all local authorities and housing associations in England in advance of 18 January 2005, when most of these changes came into effect. The covering letter encouraged social landlords to distribute the booklet to their secure tenants. It also set out the changes to the Right to Buy rules, and stated that further copies of the new booklet are available from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Free Literature supplier at Wetherby in Yorkshire.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost of travel within the UK for the Department was in each year since 1997; and how much of this was spent on (a) hire cars, (b) helicopter hire, (c) hotel accommodation and (d) subsistence. [206465]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created following the machinery of Government changes on 29 May 2002. The information held centrally shows that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister central total spend on UK travel is as follows:

	£ million
2002–03	3.51
2003–04	3.88

Within this amount nothing was spent on helicopter costs and the following table shows what was spent for car hire charges:

Car hire	£ million
2002–03	0.394
2003–04	0.547

Details of hotel accommodation and subsistence costs could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

All staff travel complied with the requirements of the Civil Service Management Code, and all ministerial travel is conducted in line with the requirements of the Ministerial Code.

Departmental Policies (Clwyd, South)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Clwyd, South constituency, the effects on Clwyd, South of his Office's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. [210335]

Yvette Cooper: Along with other Government Departments, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is committed to improving the lives of people across the whole of the United Kingdom, including North Wales.

However, the services for which the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is directly responsible in England are mostly devolved, and therefore a matter for the Welsh Assembly Government.

The Neighbourhood Statistics Service provides a wide range of statistical information at parliamentary constituency level, taken from the 2001 Census and other sources. This service is available on the National Statistics website at http://neighbourhood.statistics.gov.uk./.

Disabled Facilities Grant

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister for what reasons he is consulting on the future of the disabled facilities grant; and if he will make a statement. [210982]

Keith Hill: In response to a Parliamentary Question in the Other Place on 5 January 2004, Official Report, House of Lords, column 1, my right hon. Friend the Noble Lord Rooker announced a review of the Disabled Facilities Grant Programme.

This review is now under way. Its terms of reference are to review the operation and outcomes of the Disabled Facilities Grant Programme and to make proposals to improve its efficiency and fairness. This will include a review of the DFG means test.

The Review Group will report to Ministers in May 2005.

Domestic Fuel Tanks

Mr. Swire: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will require up-to-date information on the condition of fuel tanks to be included in the home condition inspection process. [211041]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's proposals for home information packs, will usually include a home condition report prepared by a qualified home inspector. We intend that home inspectors should be required to make a visual inspection of fuel tanks and to report on any damage that is observed.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what planning requirements he places upon householders for bunding for domestic oil tanks. [211043]

Phil Hope: There are no planning requirements for bunding of domestic oil tanks. However, since 1 April 2002 pollution risks from domestic oil tanks have been addressed in the Building Regulations.

Freedom of Information

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many departmental files have been destroyed in each of the past five years. [203387]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created in May 2002. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister also provides a records management service to the Department for Transport. Actual numbers of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's files destroyed each year prior to 2004 could be provided only at disproportionate cost but an informed estimate for the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and Department for Transport combined is as follows.

2002—23,500; 2003—20,800; 2004 (to 6 December) 53,252. A further 23,400 files are awaiting destruction.

Files continue to be destroyed in accordance with well established procedures. Files which are not viewed as having permanent historical value are marked out for destruction after a specified period. At the end of this period files are destroyed by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's contractors, once confirmation has been received that there is no business reason for, or historical value in, retaining them. In 2002 and 2003 a backlog of files awaiting destruction developed due to machinery of Government changes and the closure of the Hayes Records Repository. The higher figure for files destroyed in 2004 reflects work to clear that backlog, although this still stands at 23,400 files.

Fuel Prices

Roger Casale: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how he intends that the standard assessment procedure rating system shall adapt to changes in the relative prices of different fuels. [211422]

Phil Hope: The fuel prices used in the Standard Assessment Procedure are reviewed at intervals of between three and five years. When a review is made the price of each fuel is averaged over the preceding three-year period in order to smooth out short-term fluctuations. The intention is for Standard Assessment Procedure ratings to reflect trends in the relative prices of different fuels, rather than day-day variations, so as to provide a stable system.

Government Office for London

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the running costs of the Government Office for London have been in each year since 1999–2000; and what the forecast is for 2005. [210132]

Yvette Cooper: The running costs of the Government Office for London since 1999–2000 are as follows:

	£ million
1999–2000	[1]16.0
2000–01	[1]13.2
2001–02	[1]13.2
2002–03	[1]14.1
2003–04	[1]16.7
2004–05	[2]18.7
2005–06	[3]17.3

[1] These are unadjusted actual expenditure figures.

[2] Projected forecast for the year as at January 2005.

[3] Notified budget.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff were employed by the Government Office for London in each year since 1999–2000; and how many are forecast to be employed at the end of 2004–05. [210133]

Yvette Cooper: The Government Office for London staffing figures[1] from 1999–2000 are in the table.

As at April:	Number
2001	240
2002	260
2003	288
2004	325
2005	[2]325

The Government Office for London carries out work on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

[1] GOL staffing figures are calculated as those staff (in staff units, not FTEs) working in GOL on GOL business; figures do not include those seconded into GOL who are paid for by their own employer.

[2] This is an estimate. GOL staffing may change in 2005, but it is difficult to predict accurately as decisions on future workstreams for Government Offices have yet to be made by central Departments.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much Government money was distributed by the Government Office for London in each year since 1999–2000; and what the forecast sum to be distributed in 2004–05 is. [210134]

Yvette Cooper: The Government Office for London (GOL) Programme Expenditure is tabled as follows[1]:

[1] GOL manages over 40 programmes on behalf of nine Whitehall Departments.

	£ million
1999–2000	2,202
2000–01	1,605
2001–02	2,094
2002–03	2,530
2003–04	2,724
2004–05	[1]3,283

[1] Current allocation.

High Hedges

Mr. Pope: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to bring forward regulations to bring into force sections of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 dealing with high hedges. [211542]

Mr. Maples: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to (a) publish and (b) implement regulations under the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 to allow authorities to deal with complaints about high hedges. [211527]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to issue guidance for local authorities at the same time as the regulations to bring part 8 of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 into force are laid before Parliament. We expect the complaints system to be fully operational early this year.

Housing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans his Department has to build affordable homes for key workers in Coventry, South constituency. [211206]

Keith Hill: The Key Worker Living programme is focused on helping key workers in London, the East and the South East of England regions with funding coming from those regions allocations. In 2003, the West Midlands Regional Housing Board did not identify the provision of affordable homes for key workers as a sufficient priority to specifically allocate resources to key worker schemes in 2004–05 or 2005–06. It is however open to them to make recommendations for helping key workers in their region through the ADP in 2006–07 and 2007–08.

With regard to the new First Time Buyer Initiative announced by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister as part of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's five year plan, there are no sites currently identified to build homes under the scheme in Coventry. English Partnerships (EP) is leading on the delivery of 15,000 homes, which at the moment are focussed on the areas of greatest need, London and the South East, where its portfolio is concentrated. However we expect Regional Housing Boards to work closely with EP to identify future housing priorities and we encourage other landowners, such as local authorities, to use this model to address issues of housing affordability in their area.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made with each of the Pathfinder private finance initiative housing schemes. [211914]

Keith Hill: The London borough of Islington and Manchester city council signed contracts for Pathfinder Housing Private Finance Initiative (PFI) schemes in March 2003. Reading borough council signed a contract for its housing PFI scheme in March 2004. Refurbishment work has started on all three schemes with work on the first homes being completed.

Leeds city council, the London borough of Newham, North East Derbyshire district council and Sandwell metropolitan borough council have appointed Preferred Bidders. These four and the London borough of Camden are in final negotiations with bidders and are expected to sign shortly.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average (a) house price and (b) first-time buyer property purchase price was in each local billing authority in England in each year for which figures are available. [211939]

Keith Hill: Estimates of average house prices at local authority level are only available back to 1996 and are based on Land Registry data. The figures for 1996 to 2003 are available from the Housing Statistics section on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's internet site.

The web link for the information is: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/stellent/groups/odpm_housing/documents/page/odpm_house_609380.xls [Housing-Housing Statistics-Live Tables-Housing Market-Table no 582].

Comparable data for first-time buyers is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Identity Cards

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he has conducted a study into the impact of the introduction of identity cards on his Department's business. [209622]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has been working closely with the Home Office to identify where the ID cards scheme will provide benefits to our business areas. This work is ongoing.

Living Spaces Programme (West Derbyshire)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which projects in the West Derbyshire constituency have (a) applied for funds, (b) been supported with funds and (c) been refused funds from the Living Spaces programme; and how many applications are pending that were submitted before the 21 July 2004 deadline. [211937]

Phil Hope: Four projects in the West Derbyshire constituency have applied for funding from the Living Spaces programme. Three projects have been approved and awarded funding. They are:

Playground Development project in Sheldon, Bakewell which has been awarded a grant of £8,000.

Pilsey Jubilee Gardens project which has been awarded a grant of £9,168.55

The Matlock Rampage project which has been awarded a grant of £20,000.

The fourth group has had its initial application approved and has since worked up its plans with the help of a trained Living Spaces enabler. Once Living Spaces receives a final recommendation from the enabler a decision on funding will be taken. This project is:

Cromford Playground Improvements project which has applied for a grant of £16,118.00.

To date, no applications from groups in the West Derbyshire constituency have been refused funds from the Living Spaces programme.

Local Authority Plans

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what local authority plans each tier of local authority in England is required to produce in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; and which plans are not compulsory for good or excellent authorities. [207927]

Phil Hope: The table explains the plans required from the various tiers of English local authority in 2004–05 and 2005–06. Some plans are required upon cycles agreed with Government Offices or outlined in legislation, so will not be required each year. Some plans are required only in certain areas, depending on local circumstances or service specific performance. By the beginning of 2006–07 there will have been a 75 per cent. reduction in the number of separate plans required from local authorities compared to when research identified 66 plans in 2001.

Plan	2004–05	2005–06
Air Quality Action Plan (Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs)	Districts, Unitaries, Metropolitans, London Boroughs (Depending on local air quality standards)	Districts, Unitaries, Metropolitans, London Boroughs (Depending on local air quality standards)

Local Development Scheme (Office of the Deputy Prime Minister)	Districts, Counties, Unitaries, Metropolitans, London Boroughs	Districts, Counties, Unitaries, Metropolitans, London Boroughs
Local Transport Plan and Bus Strategy (Department for Transport)	Not required this year (5-yearly cycle)	Counties, Unitaries, Metropolitan Districts (in Passenger Transport Authority areas)

Youth Justice Plan (Youth Justice Board)	Not required this year by Youth Justice Board	Districts, Counties, Unitaries, Metropolitans, London Boroughs
Youth Service Plan	Counties, Unitaries, Metropolitans, London Boroughs	Counties, Unitaries, Metropolitans, London Boroughs

Good authorities will still be required to produce these plans as appropriate. Subject to the successful completion of the parliamentary procedure for the Local Authorities Plans and Strategies (Disapplication) (England) 2005 Order, excellent authorities will only be required to produce streamlined Best Value Performance Plans (in both years), Civil Contingencies Plans (in 2005–06), Crime and Disorder Reduction Strategies (in 2005–06), Youth Service Plans (2004–05) and Local Development Schemes (in 2004–05). All local planning authorities (districts and unitaries) either have to complete old development plans or prepare new development plan documents over the next three years (districts and counties, and for waste and minerals only, counties). The aforementioned Order will remove the requirement for excellent authorities to publish, produce or prepare (as the case may be) Homelessness Strategies, Home Energy Conservation Reports, Youth Justice Plans, Rights of Way Improvement Plans, Local Transport Plans and Bus Strategies and Air Quality Action Plans.

Local Government Finance

Harry Cohen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister from which grants, including special grants, the London boroughs of (a) Redbridge and (b) Waltham Forest will receive a funding allocation for 2005–06; what the allocation will be in each case; and if he will make a statement. [211256]

Mr. Raynsford: The following table lists formula grant, plus specific revenue grants allocated thus far, to the London boroughs of Redbridge and Waltham Forest in 2005–06. The grants listed are all within Aggregate External Finance (AEF).

AEF is the total level of support the Government provide to local authorities. This support is normally made up of Revenue Support Grant, police grant, specific grants and the amount distributed from business rates. AEF does not include finance for capital, housing and for other programmes such as the Learning and Skills Council grant for sixth forms.

Keith Hill: Secure tenants of local authorities or of registered social landlords who qualify for the Right to Buy scheme also qualify for the Rent to Mortgage scheme. This includes tenants who have spent at least two years as public sector tenants (five years for tenancies commencing on or after 18 January 2005). It does not include assured tenants of registered social landlords who retain the preserved Right to Buy after stock transfer. There are 2.5 million eligible tenants.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what helpline services the Government provide to travellers; and how much was spent on such services in the last period for which figures are available. [211924]

Yvette Cooper: The Government do not provide any helplines specific to gypsies and travellers.

Trees

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many trees have been planted in London since 1975; [211487]

(2) how many trees there were in Greater London in (a) 1975, (b) 1980, (c) 1990, (d) 2000 and (e) the latest year for which figures are available. [211488]

Phil Hope: Accurate data is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All local authorities maintain their own records of privately owned trees that are protected by tree preservation orders and many have inventories of trees for which they are responsible. The last survey of trees in London (Action for London's Trees, 1993) estimated that there were nearly 6,000,000 individual trees and hedges and more than 65,000 woodlands and stands of trees. A survey is currently being carried out to assess the composition of trees in towns and cities in England, including London. The results will be available in summer 2005.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoptions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many adoption cases have been completed in each local authority in each of the last five years. [210362]

Margaret Hodge: The information has been placed in the Libraries.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) young apprenticeships and (b) apprenticeships for adults aged 25 years and over are available, broken down by (i) geographic areas and (ii) sectors; and what plans she has to extend them to (A) Stafford and (B) other parts of England. [211223]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Member with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Library.

Building Schools for the Future

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whether (a) head teachers and (b) other staff will be able to participate in the design of schools being rebuilt as part of Building Schools for the Future; [211347]

(2) what support is available to head teachers and other staff participating in the design of schools being rebuilt as part of the Building Schools for the Future scheme. [211528]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 27 January 2005:] It is essential to the success of any school building project, including Building Schools for the Future, that those who will use the buildings are involved in the design and building from start to finish. This includes head teachers, other staff, pupils and the local community. The process of design and building is also an excellent educational opportunity for pupils.

To this end, the Department develops and spreads good practice through projects with expert bodies such as CABE, School Works, Learning through Landscapes and "joinedupdesignforschools", guidance such as the exemplar designs, and materials such as the School Works Toolkit and post-occupancy evaluations. For Building Schools for the Future, our delivery body Partnerships for Schools is charged with supporting local government so that all projects are models of good practice.

Child Care

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on what services the funds for the supply side of child care services as set out in the Government's 10-year child care strategy will be spent; and how much will be spent on each. [209775]

Margaret Hodge: The baseline for the Sure Start Unit is £866 million in 2004–05, £1,144 million in 2005–06, £1,671 million in 2006–07 and £1,884 million in 2007–08.

For 2004–06 almost £900 million supply side funding within the General Sure Start Grant has been allocated to local authorities to create, sustain and support child care services. In addition to this, £1,025 million has been allocated to Sure Start Local Programmes and over £34 million to Early Excellence Centres, with all funding supporting the 10-year child care strategy. The details of precise allocations for 2006–07 and 2007–08 are still being finalised.

In addition, from April 2003 all financial support for the delivery of free nursery education was consolidated with the under fives sub-block of each local authority's Education Formula Spending Share (EFSS)—the main source of education funding. Support for free nursery education in 2003–04 was £2.6 billion.

Child Protection

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how she plans to ensure that the information-sharing database in children's services flags cases of domestic violence or child abuse to ensure that domestic violence perpetrators cannot use their rights under the Data Protection Act 1998 to track down their children or ex-partner. [212089]

Margaret Hodge: We recognise the importance of ensuring that children and families are protected from the perpetrators of domestic violence or child abuse. The details of how the information sharing databases or indexes will work will be set out in regulations and guidance. In framing the regulations and guidance we will take care to address the issue of protection from the perpetrators of domestic violence or abuse. This will include the facility for certain details, such as an address, to be blocked out or not to appear on the index at all where a parent has good cause to believe that the inclusion of such information may lead to a crime being committed.

Where information on a child is held on the index, and a parent makes a request to access that information, their rights to access that information are balanced by the rights of the child. For children of sufficient maturity (which for the vast majority of children is taken to mean aged 12 or over), the right under the Data Protection Act to access data held about the child on the index will belong to the child rather than to the parent. So there will be no obligation on the person with responsibility for managing and operating the index (the data controller) to disclose information to a parent in such cases.

For other children, where rights to access information held on a child may be exercised by a parent with parental responsibility, the data controller is under no obligation to disclose information if that would lead to harm. We will ensure that guidance to data controllers on handling such requests includes guidance on identifying cases of potential harm and procedures to avoid this, such as asking the other parent if they have any objection to the request or deciding that the other parent is the best person to exercise access right on behalf of the child.

Children's Centres

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recommendations she has made to local authorities regarding parental involvement in children's centres. [210128]

Margaret Hodge: One of the Sure Start principles is that parents and children have access to services that are tailored flexibly according to their needs and circumstances. We issued children's centre start up guidance to local authorities in February 2003. This said that children's centres must not only consult parents and carers, including fathers, on what services to offer, but must also actively involve them by setting up systems to get their feedback on services and having on-going arrangements to ensure parents have a voice. There must also be mechanisms in place to enable parents to self-refer to services. Children's centres should implement specific strategies to include fathers. Family support and health advice must be available at times suitable for working parents. There should also be opportunities for family learning to take place at the centre or in settings linked to the centre such as FE colleges.

Class Sizes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) five, (b) six and (c) seven-year-old children in Nottingham, North were taught in class sizes of 30 or more in (i) 1997 and (ii) the latest period for which figures are available. [211019]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The age of individual pupils in classes is not collected centrally. The available information is shown in the table.

Maintained primary schools[1]: Number of pupils in Key Stage 1 classes of 31 or more pupils taught by one teacher—1997 and 2004—position in January each year—Nottingham, North parliamentary constituency

College Lecturers (Pay)

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many college lecturers are employed by outside organisations; what the average differential in the pay rates between college lecturers employed directly by colleges and those employed indirectly is; and whether her Department monitors the pay rates set by (a) Protocol Professional and (b) other consultancies who hire lecturers using public funds. [211366]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Data from the Learning and Schools Council (LSC) indicate that some 11,900 (9 per cent.) of teaching staff in colleges in the academic year 2002–03 were not employed directly by colleges.

The rates of pay set by Protocol Professionals or any other agencies are not monitored by the LSC or the Department.

Further education colleges are run by independent corporations established under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992. They determine their own recruitment and pay policies. Pay levels will therefore vary from institution to institution.

The following table shows the average salaries of full-time lecturers in further education paying into the Teachers Pension Scheme (TPS) as at 31 March 2002.

There is no barrier to agency staff joining the TPS but the differing rates of pay between agency and non-agency staff cannot be determined. There are no indications on the proportion of staff joining the TPS.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will set out, with statistical information relating as directly as possible to the Kingston upon Hull, North constituency, the effects on Kingston upon Hull, North of her Department's policies and actions since 2 May 1997. Further information by constituency, is provided within the Department's 'In Your Area' website available at http://www.dfes.gov.uk/inyourarea. Where information is not available at the constituency level it has been provided at local education authority level.

This website allows users to access key facts and local information about education and skills based on postcodes. The data available within the site offers comparisons between 1997 and the latest available year and covers five geographies. These are Parliamentary constituency, Ward, Local Authority District, Local Education Authority, Government Office Region. England figures are also provided.

The information available within the website is grouped in a number of broad categories including Literacy and Numeracy at age 11, Literacy and Numeracy at age 14, GCSE / GNVQ results, Pupils with Special Educational Needs, School Initiatives, School Workforce, School Funding and Resources, Children's Social Services, Early Years, Class Sizes, Post 16, Higher Education and Adult Education.

Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, my Department is investigating ways in which we can disseminate more information about the effects of our policies at a local level. The 'In Your Area' website will be further developed over the coming months to include additional information about Adult Education, School Funding, School Initiatives, School Performance, School Workforce and Post 16.

Education Funding

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much central Government funding was received by each local education authority in England (a) per primary pupil and (b) per secondary pupil in 2004–05; if she will estimate the figures for 2005–06 based on the provisional local government settlement; and if she will provide in each case estimates for England as whole. [212020]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The table gives, for local education authorities in England in 2004–05, the total funding per pupil in cash terms. These funding figures include funding via Education Formula Spending/Standard Spending Assessment and grants allocated at an LEA level, it also includes the pensions transfer to EPS and the Learning and Skills Council.

Unfortunately, estimated funding figures for 2005–06 are not available as not all grant figures for 2005–06 are yet to hand.

Notes:

1. Price base: Cash.

2. Figures reflect relevant sub-blocks of education EPS settlements and include the pensions transfer to EPS and LSC. EPS is paid to authorities as a combination of central Government grant and council tax raised locally.

3. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES Departmental Expenditure Limits relevant to pupils aged 3–10 and excludes EMAs and grants not allocated at LEA level. For those LEAs in receipt of advance of grant under the transitional support arrangements for 2004–05, advance grant funding is included in the year of payment (2004–05). There will be a consequential reduction in DfES grant for these LEAs in future years (either 2006–07 and 2007–08 or 2006–07 to 2008–09) depending on the terms which the advance was given to the LEA.

4. The pupil numbers used to convert £m figures to £ per pupil are those underlying the EPS settlement calculations.

5. Rounding: Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

6. Status: 2004–05 figures are provisional as some grants have not yet been finalised/audited.

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) percentage and (b) cash change in education funding for Leicestershire County Council has been in each year since 2001–02; how many teachers have been employed in Leicestershire local education authority area in each year since 2001–02 in real terms; and how much funding has changed per (i) primary and (ii) secondary school pupil in Leicestershire since 2001–02. [212122]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The information requested is in the tables. Total funding includes funding via Education Formula Spending/Standard Spending Assessment and grants allocated at the LEA level. It excludes the pensions transfer to EFS and the Learning and Skills Council, and is in real terms.

Annual School Census

Extended School Programmes

Mr. Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list known sources of funding for extended school programmes; and if she will make a statement. [208783]

Margaret Hodge: The Government are committed to supporting the development of extended schools, to offer enrichment activities and child care to parents and children. By 2010 all parents with children aged 5–11 will be offered the guarantee of affordable child care between the hours of 8 am to 6 pm, all year round. Provision could be available in a local school, in a neighbouring school or on a different site, provided by the school or in partnership with voluntary and private sector providers, including local childminders. Half of all parents will be able to enjoy this service by 2008. For secondary school aged children, all secondary schools will, by 2010, be open 8 am to 6 pm all year round offering a range of interesting activities. By 2008 we want at least a third of all secondary schools making this offer.

We have already committed around £50 million over the period 2003–04 to 2004–05 to support the roll out of extended schools. This has comprised just under £44 million paid via the Standards Fund (including £2.8 million made available by the Neighbourhood Renewal Unit and £1.8 million from the Home Office) and £6.8 million paid through the Sure Start General Grant. In addition to this £14 million from the Young People's Fund element of the Big Lottery Fund has been made available to 78 local authorities over three years from 2004–05 to support the development of extended schools across their areas

Funding should also be available from the agencies which deliver services provided on school premises such as health and social care. Schools can also charge for some services such as community use of the schools premises and child care. In the case of school based child care, parents, who are eligible, can claim part of the cost through the child care element of the working tax credit.

In the financial year 2005–06 my Department will be making available just over £107 million to support the development of extended schools. In later years we will provide further sums including funding to support the development of school based child care. An announcement will be made in due course. The funding for extended schools is to kick start the delivery of services with the intention that the facilities should be self-sustaining over time.

Foster Carers

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the availability of foster carers. [210205]

Margaret Hodge: At 31 March 2004 approximately 61,100 children were looked after, of whom 68 per cent. were in foster placements in England. The Department itself does not collect information centrally about the number of foster carers. However, a recent survey of local authorities, carried out by the Fostering Network, indicated a shortage of around 8,200 foster carers in England.

Supporting local authorities to act effectively to recruit and retain foster carers is therefore a priority for my Department and we have recently produced a Fostering Publicity Pack designed to help local authorities to run targeted local campaigns to recruit new foster carers for looked after children. We have also awarded a 3 year grant of £180,000 to the Fostering Network to support Foster Care Fortnight, which has a particular focus on recruitment.

In addition, the Choice Protects grant, which provides funding of £113 million over three years, has a specific emphasis on fostering services. We are currently developing a number of new initiatives to improve the status, support and training of foster carers. These include the development of a national award ceremony, a national advice line, measures to improve the support given to foster carers who are subject to allegations and new training resources for foster carers. We will also shortly be commencing detailed work on payments to foster carers in the context of the Children Act 2004.

GCSEs

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average GCSE point scores were for each category of school in England in 2003/04. [211638]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The following table shows the average GCSE and equivalents point score by school type by the end of 2003/04.

School type (admissions basis)	Average GCSE and equivalents point score
Comprehensive schools[1]	337.5
Selective schools	499.2
Modern schools	308.3
Other maintained schools[2]	44.3
All maintained schools	335.1
Independent schools[3]	406.2
All schools	340.3

[1] Including City Technology Colleges and Academies.

[2] Including community and foundation special schools, hospital schools and pupil referral units.

[3] Including non-maintained special schools.

Looked-after Children

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many looked-after children have been placed in private boarding schools in each of the last four years for which figures are available, broken down by local authority. [211955]

Mr. Twigg: This information has not been collected in 2004 and earlier years. It will be collected for the first time through the 2005 annual schools census.

Natural Auralism

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of natural auralism on teaching children with hearing impairment. [207540]

Margaret Hodge: In 2003 the DfES commissioned Cambridge and Manchester Universities to carry out a joint study of teaching approaches for different types of special educational needs (SEN). The study found that there was a large degree of overlap between different effective approaches—in essence, good teaching skills are much the same for all pupils, regardless of whether or not they have SEN, or the type of SEN.

The 2003 research did not include an assessment of the effectiveness of the different specialised approaches used in teaching children with hearing impairment—oral/aural, total communication and sign bilingualism. We are considering what further work might be taken forward in this area.

Parents of deaf or hearing impaired pupils who have statements of special educational needs, are able to express a preference for the maintained school they would like their child to attend, and can also make representations for a place at an independent or non-maintained special school. Before expressing a preference they are able to consider teaching approaches offered by different schools. Local authorities decide which school should be named in a child's statement taking account of parental preference and the individual needs of the child.

New Deal

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which schools in Stoke-on-Trent have received money under the New Deal for Schools. [211715]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The schools that were allocated money under New Deal for Schools during the period 1997 to 2002 were: Sandon High School, The Mitchell High School, Sneyd Green Primary School, St. Margaret Ward RC High School, Florence Primary School, and Dresden Primary School. This information was recorded centrally and local authorities' allocation of resources may differ from this.

Ofsted

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the expenditure of Ofsted was in each year since its establishment; and what the estimated budget for the next financial year is. [211941]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: That is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, David Bell, will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of his letter in the House Library.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Ofsted inspectors were employed in each year between 2001–02 and 2003–04; how many are planned to be employed in each year between 2004–05 and 2007–08; and if she will make a statement. [211526]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: That is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, David Bell, will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Physical Education

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of primary schools in the UK have a fully qualified physical education teacher. [211835]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: In England, primary school teachers are trained to deliver all subjects in the national curriculum including PE. In the other UK countries this is a matter for the devolved administrations.

In January 2004, there were 196,640 full-time equivalent regular teachers in service in maintained nursery and primary schools in England.

Pre-school Education

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pre-school aged children there are in the Islington, North constituency; how many have places in nurseries or other approved pre-school provision; and how many such places (a) are available at present and (b) are planned. [210712]

Margaret Hodge: The Ofsted stock number of registered child care places (consisting of full day care, childminder and out of school places) available in Islington at March 2004 was 4,567 and increased to 4,878 in December 2004. We are unable to provide statistics for Islington North constituency from Ofsted statistics.

In the period March 2004 to December 2004 Islington local authority (LA) created 733 gross new places. Taking into account turnover (places closing) this added 311 new places to the existing stock. The December registered stock data consists of 987 childminder places, 2,754 full day care places and 1,227 out of school places.

Islington has a target to create 1,300 gross new child care places for the period 2004–06. This includes the 733 places created since March 2004, leaving a further 567 places to be created by March 2006. These places will be created by Islington LA, Early Years Development and Childcare Partnership to meet parental demand.

In addition, all four-year-olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since September 1998. All three year olds in England have been entitled to a free part-time early education place since April 2004.

The available information on the numbers of free part-time early education places taken up by three and four-year-olds in Islington North parliamentary constituency and Islington local education authority area is shown in the tables. Information for private and voluntary providers is available for Islington but not for Islington North constituency.

Final figures for 2004 on the provision for three and four-year-olds were published in a statistical release 'Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2004' which is available on the Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway.

Private Children's Homes

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to improve the line of accountability for social services Departments who place looked-after children in private children's homes out of area. [210206]

Margaret Hodge: Children's services authorities are in the process of appointing the Directors of Children's Services and Lead Members for Children's Services required under the Children Act 2004. The Director and Lead Member will improve children's services authority accountability for the placement of all looked after children by, respectively, being professionally and politically responsible on behalf of the authority for the safety and welfare of such children.

Although all members of the authority have a shared responsibility for corporate parenting, the Lead Member will take the lead in ensuring that looked after children have their interests protected, their opportunities maximised, their educational achievement enhanced and their care shaped to met their needs. The 2004 Act also introduces a new duty on local authorities to promote the educational achievement of looked after children.

The Department is currently conducting a review of local authority practice in placing looked after children in other local authority areas, with a view to both reducing their dependence on such placements and improving support for children who are placed out of authority. We intend to write to local authorities shortly reminding them of the importance of placing children locally whenever this can meet their needs and better planning and commissioning in adequate supply of such places.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many private children's homes have been registered in each of the last five years. [210207]

Margaret Hodge: Information provided by the Commission for Social Care Inspection on the number of private children's homes registered from 1 April 2002 to 19 January 2005 is shown in the table.

Information is not available prior to 1 April 2002, when the National Care Standards Commission was created.

Relationship Counselling

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what discussions she has had regarding the impact upon charities specialising in (a) marriage counselling and (b) family relationship counselling of the decision to end ring-fencing of Government funds for these services; [209702]

(2) what representations she has received from charities working with young people and families regarding the decision to end ring-fencing of Government funds for relationship counselling; [209712]

(3) what progress has been made in improving (a) marriage counselling and (b) relationship counselling services in (i) North West Leicestershire, (ii) the East Midlands and (iii) England since 1997. [209713]

Margaret Hodge: There has been no decision to end ring-fencing Government funds for marriage counselling and family relationship counselling. Funding for charities specialising in these services was formerly available through the Marriage and Relationship Support (MARS) grant. The Marriage and Relationship Support grant has now been amalgamated with the former Family Support grant to form the Strengthening Families grant, but the same amount of money is available to support the provision of marriage counselling and family relationship counselling. Marriage and Relationship Support will continue as an integral and important element of family support provision by the Department.

In view of the recent merger of the Marriage and Relationship Support and the Family Support grant programmes we are considering evaluation of the current Marriage and Relationship and Family Support provision.

We have had no representations from the sector in this area.

School Toilets

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which schools in England have outside toilets. [211142]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: My Department does not hold information regarding schools which have outside toilets.

In 1998 the then Secretary of State announced that £35 million had been allocated to address the issue of school toilets which could only be accessed from outside. At that time around 450 projects were supported by the Department. The money available was not a limit, but an estimate of the requirement. Most authorities brought forward projects at that time and various means have been employed since that time to identify outstanding cases.

Some schools chose to retain outside toilets to provide a useful facility adjacent to playing fields or temporary accommodation.

Sure Start

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the effects of the Sure Start programme in Eltham. [207216]

Margaret Hodge: The South Greenwich Sure Start local programme was approved in 2000 and supports around 900 young local children and their families living in Eltham and Kidbrooke. The programme delivers a wide range of services to support local families including: a "resourceful friends" scheme in partnership with Home Start Greenwich that provides one-to-one support to families in crisis; a support group for single parents; provision of Physiotherapy, Occupational Therapy, Educational Therapy and Portage services for families and children with special needs; provision of safety equipment which is loaned to families at a subsidised rate; a toy library; a creche; additional home visits by qualified midwife and health visitors; and early assessment and referral for children with development delay.

Since opening, Sure Start South Greenwich has helped improve the quality of life for local families. For example: the percentage of women smoking during pregnancy has fallen from 45 per cent. to 39 per cent.; the percentage of children identified with speech and language development delay has fallen from 33 per cent. to 9.73 per cent. Local health visitors report back to the local programme on all women identified with post natal depression including specific referral to the Sure Start programme to provide support. Recent Sure Start Unit monitoring reports show that the programme is seeing 858 of their 909 children (a 94 per cent. increase since the programme opened).

The programme has strong parental participation both in the management board which has 10 parent representatives (up from three since 2000)—and in activities where parents act as volunteers.

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding has been allocated to the Harwich constituency under the Sure Start Scheme. [210684]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 24 January 2005]: Harwich constituency has one Mini Sure Start local programme (SSLP) and one Neighbourhood Nursery project. A total of £1,040,138 has been allocated to the constituency. This is made up of £415,000 capital and £625,138 revenue, representing £550,000 for the Mini SSLP, £420,000 for the Neighbourhood Nursery. Essex county council plan to use Harwich's Children's Centre funding allocation to further develop the SSLP and the neighbourhood nursery as one of the council's Children's Centres and £55,138 revenue and £15,000 capital have been set aside for this purpose.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total expenditure on the Sure Start scheme has been in Coventry, South in each year since the scheme has been in operation. [211204]

Margaret Hodge: There are two Sure Start local programmes operating within the constituency of Coventry South, these are Sure Start Coventry South East and Sure Start Coventry West. To date each programme has had access to the following funding.

Veterinary Students

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on plans to provide assistance with variable fees for veterinary students. [211641]

Dr. Howells: The Secretary of State has not had any direct discussions with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. However, as announced in the House on 12 February 2004, Sir Alan Langlands has been commissioned to produce a report on the gateways to the professions, which will examine how the public sector and the professions can sustain and improve recruitment opportunities for graduates, especially those who do not qualify for the full £3,000 support. One of the areas which he has been looking at is veterinary science. In addition my officials are in touch with officials in Defra. We expect that Sir Alan will make recommendations on entry to the professions, which will include veterinary science, when he reports in the summer.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration and Asylum

16. Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has further to amend the immigration and asylum system. [211508]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government reviews the immigration and asylum systems continually and makes changes where considered appropriate and effective. We will shortly be publishing our plans to make significant changes to the way we manage immigration and asylum.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for indefinite leave to remain were received from April 2003 to April 2004 in (a) the Greater London Area and (b) the United Kingdom. [202846]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There were 114,305 applications made for indefinite leave to remain between 1 April 2003 and 31 March 2004. All applications in the UK come through a central point so it is not possible to break down applications received in Greater London or elsewhere in the UK.

These figures are based on unvalidated information drawn from internal management systems, and there may be data quality variations.

Figures have been rounded to the nearest five.

Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for indefinite leave to remain were granted within 19 days during the period April 2003 to April 2004. [202881]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There were 36,185 indefinite leave to remain applications granted in 19 days or less between 1 April 2003 and 31 March 2004.

These figures are based on invalidated information drawn from internal management systems, and there may be some data quality variations.

Figures have been rounded to the nearest five.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for leave to remain were processed within 20 days, and what percentage of the total number of applications this represented, in each year since 1997, broken down by the type of application. [203222]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested is set out in the following table.

Type of Application—Number and percentage of applications processed in 20 days or less.

Comparable data is not available prior to 2002 due to changes in data recording between old and existing databases. The information for 2004 is for the period between 1 January 2004 and 6 December 2004.

The processing time is taken as the date that the application was received until the dispatch date.

These figures are based on unvalidated information drawn from internal management systems, and there may be data quality variations.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to enable Mr. Patrick Duncan Erasmus (Home Office Reference No. E1008322) to have his passport returned to him for the period 5 to 21 February, and then be allowed back into the UK to continue his appeal against refusal to allow him the right to remain in this country on the basis of his marriage. [209007]

Mr. Browne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to Mr. Erasmus on 25 January, informing him of the outcome of his marriage application and Mr. Erasmus's passport was returned to him on the same date.

If Mr. Erasmus leaves the United Kingdom before his appeal is determined, it will be taken that he has withdrawn his appeal. If he then wished to return to the United Kingdom he would have to apply for entry clearance in accordance with the Immigration Rules.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will break down the numbers of migrants to the UK in each of the last three years by (a) those seeking asylum, (b) those applying for a work permit and (c) EU citizens. [211258]

Mr. Browne: The latest published statistics on the numbers of people granted settlement in the UK, in the categories requested, are given in the tables.

EEA nationals are not obliged to seek settlement; the figures given relate to those who chose to do so and do not represent the total number of EEA nationals remaining indefinitely in the UK.

Detailed immigration statistics are published annually in the Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom" available from the Library of the House or via the Home Office website at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision will be made for children aged under five years at asylum accommodation centres. [211207]

Mr. Browne: The education provider is required to provide nursery education which delivers the Foundation Stage curriculum and covers early learning goals. This provision must be delivered to the same quality as mainstream provision and must be registered with Ofsted, in accordance with The Children Act 1989.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what formal links with schools and education facilities asylum accommodation centres will have. [211208]

Mr. Browne: The education provider is required, through the contract, to establish links with the local community, including local schools. There are a number of ways in which links could be made, for example, through reciprocal visits by pupils or sporting links.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of providing education facilities at asylum accommodation centres; and who will be responsible for the costs. [211209]

Mr. Browne: We have made no discrete estimate of education facility costs as these will be procured and paid for by the prime contractor as part of their overall response to the Home Department's output specification for accommodation centres. The costs will be incorporated in the contractual capital expense and monthly operating fees that the contractor will receive from the Department as reimbursement for its services.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what facilities will be provided for children with special educational needs at asylum accommodation centres. [211210]

Mr. Browne: Education provided within accommodation centres will have the same broad range and be of equivalent quality to that provided in mainstream schools. Most children with special educational needs (SEN) will have their needs met at the accommodation centre in the same way as the majority of SEN pupils are educated in mainstream schools. We will ensure that provision in the centres reflects that usually provided in schools through School Action and School Action Plus under the SEN Code of Practice.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps the Government will take to ensure that contractors provide effective education at asylum accommodation centres; [211212]

(2) whether education facilities at asylum accommodation centres will be inspected. [211213]

Mr. Browne: Ofsted will have a power to inspect and, if requested by the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, a duty to do so. The centres will be inspected within their first year of operation. Timing and frequency of subsequent visits will be dependent on the findings of the initial inspection. A copy of the inspection report will be sent to the education provider. If the findings are that special measures need to be taken to raise standards, the provider will be required to prepare an action plan in the same way as schools are required to do at present.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from where teachers at asylum accommodation centres will be recruited; and what qualifications they will be required to have. [211214]

Mr. Browne: Teacher recruitment is a matter for the contractors. Only those who are qualified to teach children in schools will be able to teach children in accommodation centres. The staffing mix in accommodation centres will mirror, as closely as possible, that of a typical maintained school. So, the majority of teachers will be required to have Qualified

Teacher Status (QTS), and for teaching secondary school aged children, an appropriate qualification in the subject area taught.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment will be made of children's educational needs when they arrive at asylum accommodation centres. [211216]

Mr. Browne: On arrival at the accommodation centre, every child will receive an initial assessment by the education provider. This will cover previous educational experience and attainment, knowledge of English and any Special Educational Needs (SEN) requirements. Progress will be monitored by teacher assessment during the stay and, on leaving the centre, a final assessment will be made and information recorded in a Progress File which will be available to the receiving school if the child is to remain in the UK.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what role will be played by local education authorities in relation to asylum accommodation centres. [211217]

Mr. Browne: The education of children in accommodation centres will be provided on site. However, the LEA will have a duty to carry out a statutory assessment to determine the Special Educational Needs of a child for whom the education provider feels unable to make appropriate Special Education provision.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what subjects will be taught within education provision in asylum accommodation centres. [211218]

Mr. Browne: All the National Curriculum subjects will be taught in accommodation centres. The Curriculum will be tailored to meet the children's needs. For example, references to the children's particular cultures and background can be included and there will be intensive support to help them learn English. All of the subject areas will be taught in English as they would be in schools.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many refused asylum seekers were removed from the UK in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001; what the statistical basis was for the prediction by the Home Office that 30,000 refused asylum seekers would be removed in 2001–02; and how many refused asylum seekers were removed in 2002. [206166]

Mr. Browne: Information on the number of asylum applicants removed from the United Kingdom between 1999 and 2002, inclusive, is shown in the table. The 30,000 removals target was set to drive up performance and to achieve a real step change in the number of failed asylum seekers being removed. We have since accepted that it was not achievable.

Removals and voluntary departures[1] of asylum applicants, excluding dependants, 1999 to 2002[2] n/a—not available.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many pre-2000 asylum cases applied for special consideration by 31 December 2004. [210703]

Mr. Browne: An announcement detailing the results of the exercise including the available statistical information will be made when the exercise is completed.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of initial asylum applications received from 1 August 2003 were dealt with in the target time of 13 weeks from receipt of application. [211241]

Mr. Browne: 88 per cent. of applications (excluding withdrawals and third country cases[1]) received in August 2003 to June 2004 had initial decisions reached and served within 13 weeks.

The latest published information on the Home Office Public Service Agreement for 2003–04, ensuring that 75 per cent. of substantive asylum applications are decided within two months show that: 82 per cent. of applications (excluding withdrawals and third country cases[1]) received in 2003–04 (April 2003 to March 2004) had initial decisions reached and served within two months, 90 per cent. within four months and 94 per cent. within six months (compared with 75 per cent., 85 per cent. and 88 per cent. respectively for 2002–03).

84 per cent. of applications received in Q2 (April to June) 2004 had initial decisions reached and served within two months, compared with 83 per cent. for Q1 (January to March) 2004.

Information on the timeliness of initial decisions is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

[1] Cases which may be the responsibility of other EU member states under the Dublin Convention.

Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the current time taken for a decision on an asylum application that was made before 1 August 2003 is, where the initial application was considered to be valid. [211242]

Mr. Browne: The latest information on the average time between application and initial decisions made in 2003 is shown in the table.

Average time between application[1] and initial decision, for cases decided in 2003

	Average time in months[2]	Number of cases[3]

Of which:
Pre-1997	102	700
1997	72	400
1998	59	1,100
1999	47	2,500
2000	36	2,900
2001	23	1,900
2002	6	17,600
2003	2	37,800

[1] Excluding dependants.

[2] The average length of time (in months) is calculated from date application lodged to the date of initial decision, and relates to the year in which the applications were made.

[3] Provisional figures rounded to the nearest 100.

The latest published statistics show that the speed of processing asylum applications continues to improve. 82 per cent. of applications (excluding withdrawals and third country cases[1]) received in the period April 2003 to March 2004 had initial decisions reached and served within two months, compared with 75 per cent. of applications in 2002–03. This exceeded the Government's targets of 75 per cent. for 2003–04 and 65 per cent. for 2002–03.

Information on the timeliness of initial decisions is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

[1] Cases which may be the responsibility of other EU member states under the Dublin Convention.

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the criteria for assessing and substantiating accounts of torture and political persecution given by Zimbabwean asylum seekers differentiate between claims from genuine and non-genuine Zimbabwean refugees. [211393]

Mr. Browne: Asylum caseworkers consider the applicant's written and oral evidence in the light of the available sources of information about the country situation and particular incidents, taking account also of any medical evidence of torture, before deciding whether the individual has a well-founded fear of persecution and should be recognised as a refugee under the terms of the 1951 Convention.

Crime Statistics

18. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of (a) the number of recorded crimes in (i) England and Wales and (ii) Greater London in 2010 and (b) the percentage of each that will be cleared up in that year. [211511]

Ms Blears: Recorded crime is not forecast beyond 2008; nor are estimates of the percentage cleared up made.

However, crime forecasts were produced for the period 2003–04 to 2007–08 and included in the modelling work for the Home Office Strategic Plan.

19. John Mann To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make an assessment of trends in the level of acquisitive crimes in west Bassetlaw. [211512]

Caroline Flint: The available information relates to the Bassetlaw Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership and shows that between 2002–03 and 2003–04 there was a fall in all acquisitive crime of 244 offences or 4 per cent.

Race Equality/Community Cohesion

20. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's strategy for race equality and community cohesion. [211513]

Mr. Clarke: I published "Improving Opportunity, Strengthening Society", our race equality and community cohesion strategy, on 19 January. The aim of the strategy is to deliver a cohesive society built on opportunities for all, establishing mutual expectations of all citizens and tackling hatred and discrimination.

This is not about putting all people from minority ethnic communities in one category and those from the majority in another. Rather, it is about identifying and responding to the specific needs of different communities.

The strategy is not rhetoric. It is focused on practical action and measurement, with a comprehensive cross-Government Public Service Agreement target to monitor and reduce race inequalities between 2005 and 2008.

Traffic Police

21. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) responsibilities he has allocated and (b) directives he has issued to traffic police. [211514]

Ms Blears: All police officers, including those dedicated to traffic duties have the same powers. Their deployment and operational practice is a matter for individual chief officers. The first three National Policing Plans make it clear that we expect the police to give roads policing appropriate attention and we have built on this by the Roads Policing Strategy statement issued jointly earlier this month by the Home Office, the Department for Transport and the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Anti-terrorism Legislation

22. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions his Department has had with Muslim leaders in the UK regarding anti-terrorism legislation. [211515]

Mr. Clarke: I and other Ministers have met representatives of the Muslim communities, including the Muslim Council of Great Britain, on several occasions to discuss their concerns. They have also met with officials in the Home Office and relevant officers in the police service.

Representatives of the Muslim communities have also played an active part in "Counter Terrorism Powers: Reconciling Security and Liberty in an Open Society"—the consultation process on the Government's counter-terrorism powers, both by submitting written responses and in attending public consultation events.

Driving (Mobile Telephones)

23. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with chief constables regarding the deployment of officers to enforce the law relating to driving while using hand-held mobile telephones. [211517]

Caroline Flint: It is for chief officers to decide how most effectively to deploy their resources in accordance with local and strategic plans and the National Policing Plan. We have not specifically discussed this issue with them. The Association of Chief Police Officers has welcomed the new specific offence as a straightforward method of dealing with this dangerous behaviour and the police will enforce the offence as operationally appropriate.

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted for driving while using a hand-held mobile phone since the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) (Amendment) (No. 4) Regulations 2003 came into force; what the Government are doing to enforce legislation in this area; and if he will make a statement. [210928]

Ms Blears: Data for 2003 on police actions (written warnings, fixed penalty notices and court proceedings) related to the new offence of driving while using a hand held mobile telephone will not be available until late March 2005.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to encourage liaison between the different authorities and bodies with a role in reducing antisocial behaviour. [210759]

Ms Blears: The Government recognises that partnership working at a local level is the key to tackling crime and antisocial behaviour effectively. We are supporting agencies to identify and deliver local solutions to local problems by working together within the Crime and Disorder Partnership framework.

Our TOGETHER campaign, which targets a wide range of practitioners, actively promotes partnership working and offers practical assistance that can help local agencies to work together in delivering effective interventions.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the antisocial behaviour help line and report line. [210730]

Ms Blears: 'It's Your Call' is part of the next step of the TOGETHER campaign. This initiative is part of the commitment made by Action Areas to raise levels of action and to make services more accessible to the public. Newcastle, Gateshead, South Tyneside and Sunderland are the first areas in the country to go live with the new 'It's Your Call' phone line. The service will be launched in 21 additional TOGETHER Action Areas and Trailblazers in a phased approach over the next six weeks.

A new single number 0845 605 222, encouraging people to report antisocial behaviour, will be promoted on poster sites and on phone boxes in participating areas. Running in parallel, two million door-drops highlighting the new service will be distributed, and postcards giving feedback when action has been taken will also be utilised by the participating areas.

The TOGETHER ActionLine is a separate service which provides help and advice to practitioners to improve their response to antisocial behaviour. The ActionLine, complimented by the TOGETHER website helps practitioners to become confident in using the powers available to them and gives them access to innovative and creative solutions and enable them to network and share knowledge and successes.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the use of antisocial behaviour orders. [211510]

Ms Blears: We constantly review issues relating to the use of antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) through our contact with local practitioners.

We produce a range of quarterly statistics that allow us to assess the use of ASBOs, and data on breach of ASBOs are produced annually.

A major research project is under way to evaluate the impact of ASBOs on communities.

Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in the Tees Valley, broken down by constituency. [210614]

Ms Blears: Available information, up to 30 June 2004, by local authority area only is given in the table.

Data up to 30 September 2004 will be available shortly.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what personal details of the recipients of antisocial behaviour orders are recorded. [210733]

Ms Blears: The following personal details of recipients of Antisocial Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) are recorded on the Home Office ASBO Database: full name, age/date of birth and sex.

Blasphemy Law

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons he has decided not to bring forward legislative proposals to repeal the law on blasphemy; and if he will make a statement. [207701]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government have no immediate plans to amend the laws on blasphemy. We acknowledge that there are a wide variety of views on whether the blasphemy laws should be retained, repealed or extended, but we have not sought to amend the current law on blasphemy in the absence of a consensus on how to proceed. For example in a recent ICM poll for The Guardian although 46 per cent. of the public believe that the blasphemy laws should be repealed, 38 per cent. believe it should be kept on the statute book. We will however, keep the issue under review, particularly as the benefits of the new provision against incitement to religious hatred are realised.

Carers (Police Checks)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the recommended maximum time is for police checks on carers working with (a) vulnerable adults and (b) children. [208073]

Ms Blears: There is no recommended maximum time for police checks on carers working with vulnerable adults and children. The Criminal Records Bureau aims to complete disclosure applications across all sectors within the shortest time possible.

The Criminal Records Bureau has published service standards, which are to issue 90 per cent. of standard disclosures within two weeks and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within four weeks for all employment sectors. The bureau has achieved this service standard on an annualised basis since November 2003.

CCTV

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what grant schemes are available to fund the capital costs of CCTV; what criteria are used to assess applications; what recent applications have been received; and what future grant funding will be available. [210613]

Ms Blears [holding answer 24 January 2004]: Under the Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) CCTV Initiative, £170 million was provided to local Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships (CDRPs) to set up 684 public space CCTV schemes across England and Wales, to tackle crime and disorder and the fear of crime.

The CRP CCTV Initiative ended in 2002, but funding opportunities remain available under the Building Safer Communities Fund (BSCF) and the BCU Fund. £72.3 million and £74 million was made available in 2003–04 and 2004–05 respectively from the BSCF and was allocated directly to CDRPs to tackle local crime priorities using a raft of interventions, including CCTV. A further £50 million was allocated to police forces under the BCU Fund in both years. In addition, police forces may include CCTV provision at their discretion from police capital grant to support local capital programmes. The Home Office has allocated a total of £210 million in capital provision for 2005–06, an increase of 13 per cent. over provision for 2004–05.

In the majority of cases, specific applications for CCTV capital funding are not required or made. Any capital spend on CCTV is usually built into CDRPs' plans for the BSCF and BCU Funds.

Alongside police capital grant money, grant funding for future projects is, as in the past, available to CDRPs under BSCF and to police and CDRPs under the BCU Fund.

Child Deaths in Custody

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the deaths of children in custody since 1997. [211509]

Ms Blears: The death of any young person in custody (or elsewhere) is a terrible tragedy. I send my deepest sympathy for the family of Gareth Price, who died on 20 January after being found hanging while on remand at Lancaster Farms Young Offender Institution. The Government take very seriously the issue of self-harm and suicide in the juvenile custodial estate and have taken a range of steps to try to prevent it. We are currently looking at what further measures may be needed.

Class A Drugs

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make (a) Fly Agaric and (b) any of its preparations and derivatives a Class A Drug. [199679]

Caroline Flint: There are no plans to control Fly Agaric or any of its derivatives or preparations as its prevalence in the UK is negligible.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to answer the letter dated 11 December 2004 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. Rahman Mohammed Mustafa. [210838]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 20 January.

Criminal Justice Intervention Panels

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) role, (b) aim and (c) purpose will be of the criminal justice intervention panels; and when they will be fully functional. [202689]

Caroline Flint: The Drug Interventions Programme (formerly Criminal Justice Interventions Programme) is a critical part of the Government's national strategy for tackling drugs. The programme aims to make the most of opportunities provided by the criminal justice system to get drug misusing offenders out of crime and into treatment.

The 'intensive' elements of the Drug Interventions Programme are currently operational in 66 police Basic Command Units (47 drug action teams) with high levels of acquisitive crime. From April 2005–06, we will expand the intensive elements of the programme to a further 32 Basic Command Units covering 23 DATs. These elements include testing for Class A drugs following charge for certain trigger offences.

The programme will be enhanced by measures included in the Drugs Bill, which entered Commons Committee on 27 January 2005.

Between April and November 2004, over 9,000 people entered treatment through the programme.

Early evidence shows that acquisitive crime is falling faster in Drug Interventions Programme areas than non-programme areas.

Custody Officers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the (a) qualifications and (b) skills required by civilian custody officers; and if he will make a statement. [210981]

Ms Blears: The skills and knowledge required for the post of custody officer are identical whether or not the statutory functions required under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE) were to be carried out by a police sergeant, as currently provided for under PACE or, under Clause 111 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Bill, for a staff custody officer.

Currently, there is no formal qualification required before a police officer can take on the role of custody sergeant. CENTREX have developed a national training programme for custody officers. It is a matter for individual force policy on training provided before the appointment of police officers to this role.

National Occupational Standards for the Police Sector developed by Skills for Justice set out the competencies and skills required for authorising and managing police detention and form an Integrated Competency Framework. In terms of the custody officer, the competency framework focuses on the key areas of making detention decisions; managing the detention of individuals; and authorising and reviewing continued detention.

In addition, further work is currently under way with stakeholders and the National Centre for Policing Excellence on developing guidance on how these standards are to be achieved. This will be published later this year. Combined with the competency framework, we will have in place definitive standards for police and police staff employed in the custody suite.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to his Department that have been implemented in each of the last two years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost to public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [200771]

Caroline Flint: The Home Office has implemented eight European Community Directives and/or Regulations in the time specified.

1. Council Regulation (EC) no. 1030/2002 laying down a uniform format for residence permits for third-country nationals. Adopted 27/11/2003

(a) In implementing the Council Decision the UK introduced the UK Residence Permit (UKRP). It is a secure vignette, in an EU-wide format that replaces ink stamps for the purpose of granting leave to enter or remain in the UK for periods in excess of six months.

2. Council Regulation (EC) NO. 333/2002 on a uniform format for forms for affixing the visa issued by member states to persons holding travel documents not recognised by the member states drawing up the form. Adopted 18/02/2002

(a) Where member states do not recognise the country or authority that issued a person's travel document, the appropriate visa is stuck onto a separate form. The purpose of Regulation 333/2002 is to ensure that member states adopt a standard, recognisable format for the forms used in these circumstances. The Regulation also prescribes various security features which will help prevent counterfeiting and falsification.

3. Council Regulation no. 343/2003 establishing the criteria and mechanisms for determining the member state responsible for examining an asylum application lodged in one of the member states by a third country national (Dublin Convention II). Adopted 18/02/2003

4. Commission Regulation (EC) No. 1560/2003 of 2 September 2003 laying down detailed rules for the application of Council Regulation (EC) No. 343/2003 establishing the criteria and mechanisms for determining the member state responsible for examining an asylum application lodged in one of the member states by a third country national.

(a) Provisions of the Dublin II Regulation entered into force on 1 September 2003 and replaced the 1990 Dublin Convention, which was operational since 1997. The Dublin arrangements enable member states to identify whether another member state is responsible for determining an individual's application, and to return them to that responsible State.

5. Council Directive 2002/90/EC defining the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence. Adopted 22/11/02

(a) The purpose of this Directive is to provide a definition of the facilitation of illegal immigration and consequently to render more effective the implementation of the Framework Decision in order to prevent that offence.

6. Council Regulation (EC) 2725/2000 concerning the establishment of 'Eurodac' for the comparison of fingerprints for the effective application of the Dublin Regulation (Eurodac Regulation). Adopted 11/12/00

7. Council Regulation (EC) No. 407/2002 of 28 February 2003 laying down certain rules to implement Regulation (EC) No. 2725/2000 concerning the establishment of "Eurodac" for the comparison of fingerprints for the effective application of the Dublin Convention.

(a) The Central Unit database established by the Eurodac Regulations became operational on 15 January 2003. The Eurodac system provides for the computerised exchange and storage of fingerprint information on asylum claimants and illegal entrants apprehended when attempting to cross the external frontier of the EU. Eurodac evidence underpins the effective operation of the Dublin arrangements, now provided by the Dublin II Regulation (above) to secure returns and rapidly identify multiple asylum applications.

8. Council Directive 2001/51/EC supplementing the provision of Article 26 of the convention implementing the Schengen Agreement of 14 June 1985 (Carriers' Liability Directive). Adopted 28/06/01

(a) The aim of this Directive is to supplement the provisions of Article 26 of the Convention implementing the Schengen Agreement of 14 June 1985, signed at Schengen on 19 June 1990(5) (hereinafter referred to as "the Schengen Convention") and to define certain conditions with respect to their implementation.

Records of the cost of implementation of these measures to public funds are not kept by the Home Department; to endeavour to do so would incur disproportionate cost. This applies to all of the aforementioned.

Records of the cost of each measure to business are monitored through the production of Regulatory Impact Assessments (RIAs). These project the likely costs on businesses, charities or voluntary organisations.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on entertainment by his Department in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [204355]

Fiona Mactaggart: Home Office expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety based on the principles set out in Government Accounting.

The following figures relate to the cost of entertaining non-civil servants (hospitality) and civil servants (management entertainment). Details of such expenditure have only been held centrally since 1997–98 and are not recorded in a way that allows expenditure to be broken down into the categories requested.

The increase in expenditure from 1999–2000 is due to an element of incorrect expenditure coding, resulting in the inclusion of accommodation and subsistence costs. It is not possible, without incurring disproportionate cost, to separate these costs and, consequently, these figures are not directly comparable with those provided in previous years.

	Total expenditure
1997–98	37,747
1998–99	44,415
1999–2000	94,370

2001–02	75,808
2002–03	70,591
2003–04	89,072

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the running costs of the Department were in each year since 1997, broken down by (a) electricity, (b) water, (c) gas, (d) telephones, (e) mobile telephones and (f) televisions. [206680]
